38a 1961 NEW YORK

GOLDBERG ASSAILS PRIVATE-CLUB BIAS

Mentions Washington Group That Bars Negro Envoys —Outlines Wide Plan

By IRVING SPIEGEL

Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg last night outlined a program here to combat discrimination, prejudice and segregation on every level of American society.

At the same time he indicted private clubs that practice discrimination. He singled out a prominent club in the capital, which he condemned for refusing membership to Negro envoys from other countries.

This club, which has been identified as the Metropolitan Club, has among its members high-ranking officials, both Republicans and Democrats.

"It is most unfortunate, "Mr. Goldberg said, "that one of the wealthiest socially prominent clubs, with a membership of persons distinguished in cultural and political life, turns this insulting face to the representatives of people from other lands, let alone to people from our land."

Mr. Goldberg spoke in the Roosevelt Hotel at a dinner of the American Jewish Committee.

The Labor Secretary outlined the following program for equal opportunity for Americans of all creeds:

¶The Government must work to eliminate discrimination. The Administration backs the Supreme Court school desegregation decisions, not only because they are the law but because they are morally right.

¶Business and industry must wipe out bias, not only in regard to blue-collar workers but also in white-collar, professional and executive posts.

¶Unions must end any discrimination still remaining in their ranks.

¶Even without legal requirements, private groups must move to eliminate discrimination. Private clubs are particularly guilty of bias.

¶Personal friendships between people of all races and religions must be built.

Mr. Goldberg said: "We are determined to insure that America will become, more and more, an open society, not a closed society, by tacit agreement or by unconstitutional laws, against millions of Americans."

Kennedy Pledges Help

In a message read by the Secretary, President Kennedy pledged that his Administration "at all levels shall exercise affirmative leadership to discharge both its constitutional obligations and its moral duty to achieve opportunity for all."

The President noted that "in this great undertaking I am glad that I can continue to enjoy the support of the American Jewish Committee and like-minded groups."

Mr. Goldberg cited achievements of the Kennedy Administration in the field of human rights, including appointments on all levels in the Executive Branch, "in which religious or racial attributes have been disregarded." He pointed to "clear and strong executive orders which spell out how discrimination is to be eliminated with respect to work in and for the Government."

He also said the Justice Department would continue its activity against discrimination "as an active participant in litigation."

Mr. Goldberg stressed that "the time is past when it is tolerable for trade unions to restrict membership or to deny anyone the full benefits of union representation because of race, religion or color."

Jewish Clubs Criticized

In denouncing some private clubs as "a miserable source of bigotry and prejudice," he also censured Jewish country clubs, saying that "we should face up to the fact that today we can no longer enjoy the pleasure of comforting prejudice without injury to the community."

The Secretary was also critical of social circles in major cities, including New York City and Chicago, where there are "no Negro writers, composers, artists, academicians with whom one break bread, with whom one can engage in intellectual discourse."

He announced he would issue an order next week in the Labor Department barring discrimination because of age. He said this order had the support of President Kennedy, "and we hope that it is a first step in combating this tragic form of discrimination."

He also said he was meeting next week with private contractors and unions engaged in Government work to enlist their cooperation in the enforcement of the President's executive order against discrimination.

Neibuhr Honored

The committee's American Liberties Medallion was presented to Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, Professor Emeritus of Union Theological Seminary. Dr. Niebuhr was cited for "outstanding advancement of the principles of liberty and equality." The presentation was made by former Senator Herbert H. Lehman.

Herbert B. Ehrmann, president of the committee, scored the Government's foreign policy in the Middle East. He said it had been marked by "national self-humiliation and appeasement of dictators."

Mr. Ehrmann asserted that the United States had "unwittingly created a grave danger" by acquiescing in "boycott and lawless acts" by the United Arab Republic. Mr. Ehrmann declared that President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic "has become the single greatest obstacle to peace in the Middle East."

38a 1961

EN-ROUTE
NEW YORK -JACKSON, MISS.

AUGUST
2 WHITE PRIEST CALL OFF
RACIAL RIDE

Racial Ride By 2 Priests Called Off

An attempt by two Roman Catholic priests to participate in the "freedom rider" movement apparently was called off Monday after they were on their way.

The Rev. Richard Wagner, 29, chaplain at Xavier University in New Orleans and a teacher at St. Augustine's High School there, and the Rev. Philip Berrigan, 37, also a teacher at St. Augustine's, departed from New York en route to Jackson, Miss.

They were to be the first Roman Catholic clergy to join in the segregation testing activities sponsored by the Congress of Racial Equality.

But when they arrived by plane in Atlanta a message awaited them to call the Very Rev. George F. O'Dea, superior general, in Baltimore. The two white priests told the Associated Press they had been called back. They declined to give a reason and O'Dea refused to comment in Baltimore.

Asked if they were disappointed, both said, "We certainly are."

Wagner and Berrigan had planned to test segregation regulations at the airport and bus terminals in Jackson. They were going to wait for the bus to take them home to New Orleans in the Negro waiting room.

BIRTH DOCUMENTS ) RACE ELIMINATED DEATH CERTIFICATES )

Race Problem Solved Forever

Jackson Daily News
Jan 28 1961

An official announcement from up that way boasts that New York City will become the first community in the nation to eliminate racial information from birth documents beginning with this New Year. Later in 1961, reference to race will be eliminated from death certificates.

The health department will continue to gather statistics on race and color because there seems to be some diseases which afflict and is frequently fatal to one race more than another.

If this is what New York City wants, so be it for New York. Meanwhile, there is room for confusion.

In the first place, New York is a place without racial prejudice. New York is where every race is encouraged to be proud of racial characteristics because there are no characteristics peculiar to race.

These questions can be asked: Who can be proud of race when there is no such thing as race? What do you gain if you keep confidential data on race when it doesn't exist?

The health data on non-existent race is kept locked up and stamped hyper-secret, not subject to public inspection or to subpoena, regardless of the race, creed or color—which does not exist—of the person who might desire to analyze the ethereal ethnic information.

However, suppose that a certain person feels the pangs of discrimination because of something which doesn't exist, yet he succeeds in obtaining a writ from a Negro (which doesn't exist) judge in Harlem to prove his race in order to establish proof of discrimination. What organization would he call to help him bring pressure on the Negro (which doesn't exist) judge to obtain said writ?

Why from the National Association for the Advancement of (blank—it doesn't exist) People. Who else?

And suppose something good occurs to a person of a race (which doesn't exist) and the nation is told that a Negro which doesn't exist is offered a job in the President's cabinet for the first time in history and the National Association for the Advancement of (blank) People desires to issue a statement to the press regarding this joyful news, how will the organization which doesn't exist tell the newspapers about something which doesn't exist and suppose the headline writer wanted to tell it anyhow? Newspapermen in other sections of the country do it fairly successfully. They'd write, "Negro Offered Cabinet Post."

But since race doesn't exist in New York, those poor headline writers would confuse their readers when they picked up the paper and read, "Blank Offered Cabinet Post."

And pity those poor New York TV commentators who have been promoting race (oops, it doesn't exist) in the South. When they start giving their home audience "expert" information on a subject that doesn't exist they will have viewers so confused their ratings will drop out of sight and so will they, hurrah.

Congratulations to New York. They are resourceful, imaginative people, fully capable of solving any problem.

When they can abolish something which never existed but still have a little left over, we suppose the next best thing to do with the stuff is to mark it confidential and lock it up.

38a 1961

Court Lifts 4 Ministers From Suit

Negroes Cleared; U.S. Judge Retains 3 Libel Actions

Libel suits totaling $2 million against the New York Times are to be tried in federal court rather than in the local Circuit Court, U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. has decided.

The cases were removed to the federal court last April. In deciding not to remand them to the state court, Johnson held that four Alabama Negro ministers were "fraudulently" joined to the libel suits to keep them out of the federal court.

He found that "there is no legal basis whatsoever for the claim asserted against the resident defendants Abernathy, Shuttlesworth Seay Sr., and Lowery."

The Revs. Ralph Abernathy and Solomon Seay Sr., of Montgomery, Fred Shuttlesworth of Birmingham, and J. E. Lowery of Mobile were named co-defendants with the Times in a series of five libel suits, two of which have already been tried in the state court.

GREW OUT OF AD

All the suits grew out of an advertisement in the New York newspaper which sought funds for the defense of the Rev. Martin Luther King in the perjury trial in which he was subsequently acquitted here.

The charges of libel arose from statements in the ad which described oppressive measures against Negro demonstrators by Montgomery police and state officials.

The three suits which Johnson retained in federal court are by Alabama Gov. John Patterson, for $1 million, City Commissioner Frank Parks and former City Commissioner Clyde Sellers, for $500,000.

Sellers had previously withdrawn his petition to send back his suit to state court.

In denying the petitions of Parks and Patterson, Johnson said that:

"This court. . . has painstakingly studied all the evidence submitted and available, including a transcript of the trial in the Sullivan case.

NONE EXISTED

"From the facts available to this court, no liability on the part of the four resident defendants (the Negro ministers) existed under any recognized theory of law.

"Their joinder in each of these cases was therefore fraudulent as that term is applied in removal cases."

Johnson said that the Times had offered "clear and convincing evidence" that the four individual defendants were fraudulently added to the libel suits.

He pointed to testimony by professional writer John Murray during the trial of the libel suit by City Commissioner L. B. Sullivan. Murray testified that he himself submitted the ad to the Times without the knowledge of the four integration leaders.

The four Negro defendants also denied on the witness stand that they had any knowledge of the contents of the ad or that their names would appear on it as endorsers.

Johnson also rejected the theory that the four defendants could have ratified the ad through their membership in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which is headed by Martin Luther King.

NO RIGID PERIOD

A third contention by attorneys for Parks and Patterson was that the Times had waited too long to transfer the cases to the federal court.

"In such instances of fraudulent joinder, there is no rigid 20-day period which applies," he held.

The Times had only to remove the cases within "a reasonable time" once it had determined that there had been fraudulent joinder, he said. This, he decided, it had done.

The first two in the series of suits were tried before Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones. All-white juries awarded $500,000 verdicts to both City Commissioner L. B. Sullivan and Mayor Earl James.

THE NEW YORK TIMES

Both verdicts are being appealed by the Times.

Prior to issuing his order and opinion, Johnson had a deposition taken from King, in which the Negro leader denied having prior knowledge of the contents of the ad.

King is a defendant in one of the suits, that of Gov. Patterson.

Times Winner In Birmingham Libel Reversal

NEW ORLEANS, June 15 (AP)—The United States 5th Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that the New York Times and one of its writers cannot be sued for libel in Alabama.

The decision stemmed from an article on segregation which appeared in the newspaper in April 1960.

The ruling yesterday concerned seven libel suits at Birmingham, and had no bearing on five other suits filed against the newspaper at Montgomery.

The Times had appealed a ruling by United States District Court Judge R. Hobart Grooms of Birmingham. He had denied a motion by the Times to quash service in the seven suits which had been consolidated for hearing.

Judge Grooms had said the Times could be sued in Alabama.

Opinion Unanimous

In a unanimous opinion written by Chief Justice Elbert P. Tuttle, the appellate court reversed Judge Grooms and remanded the cases to United States District Court with instructions to enter judgment for the Times and Harrison Salisbury, one of its staff members.

Mr. Salisbury pictured Birmingham as a city filled with "emotional dynamite of racism," and he said, "The eavesdropper, the informer, the spy have become a fact of life."

A grand jury at Bessemer, near Birmingham, returned a 42-count indictment of criminal libel against Mr. Salisbury.

But Deputy Circuit Solicitor Howard Sullinger promised to recommend speedy remedial action if the conditions Mr. Salisbury described were found to exist. Mr. Sullinger, however, declined to discuss details of the indictment.

Mr. Salisbury declined to testify before the grand jury.

Asked $500,000 Each

Of the suits involved in the ruling by the appellate court, six were filed by Birmingham Mayor James W. Morgan and Commissioners Eugene Connor and James T. Waggoner and Bessemer City Commissioners Jess Lanier, Raymond Parson and Herman Thompson. They asked $500,000 each.

Anothee suit for $100,000 was filed by Birmingham City Detective Joe Lindsay.

Judge Tuttle quoted an opinion of the Alabama Supreme Court that in an action for libel against a newspaper, the injury occurs where the newspaper is primarily published.

"It is thus clear that whatever else may be in dispute, none of the activities of Salisbury, and therefore of the Times, performed or done in Alabama, ripened into a cause of action in that Stat," the opinion said.

The Times also claimed that if the statute was so applied, it would violate the due process clause of the 14th Amendment in that it would interfere with freedom of the press and thus abridge the privileges and immunities guaranteed under the 1st Amendment.

The appellate court's ruling does not involve litigation against the Times at Montgomery.

Montgomery Mayor Earl James, City Commissioners Frank Parks and L. B. Sullivan and former Commissioner Clyde Sellers sued for $500,000 each against the newspaper and four Negro ministers.

And Gov. John Patterson sued for $1 million.

Mr. James and Mr. Sullivan won $500,000 judgments in State Court and the cases have been appealed to the Alabama Supreme Court.

None of the other cases has come to trial, since the Times has sought to move them to United States District Court.

Ministers Judged Not Part Of Newspaper Suit

Four Negro ministers, who figured as defendents along with the New York Times newspaper in a libel suit filed by Alabama Governor Patterson and other state and Montgomery officials, have been judged non-libelous in three of the five cases filed. A Federal Court ruled they were brought into court as defendents without any valid legal excuse.

Federal Judge Frank M. Johnson ruled that the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy and the Rev. S. S. Seay of Montgomery, along with the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth of Birmingham, and the Rev. J. E. Lowery of Mobile had been brought into court "fraudulently" in the legal sense of the word, and that he saw no liability on the part of them existed under any recognized theory of law, according to the facts available to his court.

The libel suits grew out of an advertisement that appeared in the New York Times March 29, 1960 which appealed for funds in the defense of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., while he was on trial on charges of lying about his Alabama income tax.

The advertisement, among other things, criticized the handling of Negro college students demonstrations in Montgomery by city and state authorities, and was submitted by a Times writer for a committee that was handling the defense of Dr. King Jr. The advertisement carried the names of the four Negro ministers.

APPEAL PENDING

The first two suits, filed in state court by Montgomery Mayor Earl James and Police Commissioner L. B. Sullivan against the four ministers and the newspaper, awarded $500,000 to the plaintiffs. The appeal by the defendants is still pending.

In the remainig three cases the New York Times succeeded in having them heard in Federal instead of state court. The $1,000,000 damage claims of Governor Patterson, and $500,000 claims, each, of City Commissioner Frank Parks, and ex-Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers were pending in state court when the Times succeeded in getting the federal court transfer.

It was during this switch in courts that the Negro ministers were judged not a part of the suit. In his ruling Judge Johnson said it was clear that the ministers did not authorize writer John Murray,, the King defense committee, the New York Times, or anyone else to use their names in the ad.

The judge ruled further that the Negroes did not endorse the advertisement.

Contrary to an argument used by the plaintiffs Judge Johnson also said that the New York Times did act within a reasonable length of time in taking the federal court, after it became apparent that the Negro ministers were being illegally sued.

Court Lifts 4 Ministers From Suit

Negroes Cleared; U.S. Judge Retains 3 Libel Actions

Libel suits totaling $2 million against the New York Times are to be tried in federal court rather than in the local Circuit Court, U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. has decided.

The cases were removed to the federal court last April. In deciding not to remand them to the state court, Johnson held that four Alabama Negro ministers were "fraudulently" joined to the libel suits to keep them out of the federal court.

He found that "there is no legal basis whatsoever for the claim asserted against the resident defendants Abernathy, Shuttlesworth Seay Sr. and Lowery."

The Revs. Ralph Abernathy and Solomon Seay Sr., of Montgomery, Fred Shuttlesworth of Birmingham, and J. E. Lowery of Mobile were named co-defendants with the Times in a series of five libel suits, two of which have already been tried in the state court.

GREW OUT OF AD

All the suits grew out of an advertisement in the New York newspaper which sought funds for the defense of the Rev. Martin Luther King in the perjury trial in which he was subsequently acquitted here.

The charges of libel arose from statements in the ad which described oppressive measures against Negro demonstrators by Montgomery police and state officials.

The three suits which Johnson retained in federal court are by Alabama Gov. John Patterson, for $1 million, City Commissioner Frank Parks and former City Commissioner Clyde Sellers, for $500,000.

Sellers had previously withdrawn his petition to send back his suit to state court.

In denying the petitions of Parks and Patterson, Johnson said that:

"This court. . . has painstakingly studied all the evidence submitted and available, including a transcript of the trial in the Sullivan case.

NONE EXISTED

"From the facts available to this court, no liability on the part of the four resident defendants (the Negro ministers) existed under any recognized theory of law.

"Their joinder in each of these cases was therefore fraudulent as that term is applied in removal cases."

Johnson said that the Times had offered "clear and convincing evidence" that the four individual defendants were fraudulently added to the libel suits.

38a 1961

NEW YORK

LEFKOWITZ CALLS NEGROES CHEATED

He Attacks Wagner Record on Civil Rights as Poor

By IRVING SPIEGEL

Louis J. Lefkowitz, the Republican candidate for Mayor, attacked Mayor Wagner's civil rights record yesterday, terming it "one of inaction and indifference—of pious promises and poor performance."

The State Attorney General accused the Wagner administration of having "short-changed in city services" the majority of Negro residents. He listed such areas as Bedford-Stuyvesant in Brooklyn and Harlem.

"The oldest school buildings, the worst illegal slum conditions, the poorest municipal hospital services are all earmarks of the Wagner record of eight years," Mr. Lefkowitz said.

Mr. Lefkowitz' charges were made in an address to 1,200 persons at a "Second Cup O' Coffee Rally-Meeting," sponsored by the Friends of Lefkowitz for Mayor. Samuel Hausman, chairman of the group, presided at the event, at the Astor Hotel.

Rockefeller Speaks

Governor Rockefeller, who was also on the platform, said: "Eight years of a weak and vacillating Wagner woven into sixteen years of one-party monopoly have brought this great city to a sad state of affairs.

"Our people are afraid to walk the streets at night, our parks are abandoned to hoodlums, even our policemen are being assaulted."

In his address, Mr. Lefkowitz said that the City's Commission on Intergroup Relations "has been saddled with procedures so elaborate and complicated that it takes several pages to list the steps that must be taken before effective action can be taken."

Mr. Lefkowitz charged that local legislation prohibiting city contracts with companies that practiced racial discrimination in employment had never been implemented and that the open-enrollment school program "continues at a lagging pace."

He said that Mayor Wagner had in "every other area of municipal activity" been either unable or unwilling to come to grips with the fundamental problem and to develop programs based on strong actions rather than smooth speeches."

Discusses School Problems

Mr. Lefkowitz pledged, if elected, to increase the number of fully certified teachers in predominantly Negro and Puerto Rican schools by reducing the concentration of substitute teachers.

Further, Mr. Lefkowitz promised to strengthen educational programs to assimilate non-English-speaking students and to improve work to help "new migrant groups in theid adjustment to their life in New York City."

"Most essential," Mr. Lefkowitz said, "is a need to mobilize all the resources of this city in the development of a program of planned progress to attain the ideal of full human dignity."

Departing from his text, Mr. Lefkowitz said that he began his day at 8 or 8:30 A. M. and often worked "around the clock." He then said: "I don't think this man at City Hall ever took any homework home with him."

Speaks on WOR

It was a day of busy campaigning for Mr. Lefkowitz. In a taped address over Radio Station WOR sponsored by the New York City Republican Advisory Council, Mr. Lefkowitz again charged that "crime and delinquency are terrorizing our city."

Before his Astor Hotel address, Mr. Lefkowitz spoke at a breakfast of the New York State Careerists Society at the New Yorker Hotel. Later in the afternoon, he appeared for Grandparents Day at the Hebrew Home for the Aged in the Bronx. Here Mr. Lefkowitz departed from the campaign and spoke on the problems of the aged.

He also attended a nonpartisan luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in honor of Lester B. Granger, retired national executive secretary of the National Urban League.

In the evening Mr. Lefkowitz was scheduled to attend a function of locality mayors at Sammy's Bowery Follies.

The New York Times

AT BREAKFAST RALLY: Governor Rockefeller and Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz, Republican candidate for Mayor, conferring at dais before they addressed a rally sponsored by "Friends of Lefkowitz for Mayor."

38a 1961

NEW YORK

23 Harlem Gang Members Face Judge After March

Montgomery Advertiser 2-20-61

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty-three members of a Harlem gang appeared in court Tuesday after their capture during a march into a racially mixed Bronx neighborhood in search of a revenge fight.

The youths, all Negroes, were among about 60 members of the Harlem Lords gang that invaded the soutwest Bronx Monday night armed with knives, bats, iron pipes and clubs.

They were headed for a housing development looking for a gang that had whipped them in an earlier battle. But police intercepted them on the way, and the gang fight never came off.

Ten of those seized were under 16, and a Bronx children's court judge set hearings for Thursday. The others will also get hearings Thursday in Bronx adolescent court.

Theodore Bowen, 17, was accused of attacking a detective with a knife, and Victor Diaz, 19, of wielding a baling hook. Both were held in $1,000 bail each on charges of felonious assault, unlawful assembly and violation of the Sullivan anti-weapons law.

As the horde advanced into the Bronx it pummeled and shoved pedestrians in the way. Citizens telephoned police and eight squad cars screamed toward the site of the violence.

APPROACHED GANG

First to reach the Lords were Detectives Arthur O'Connor and Ronald Ris. With guns drawn, the policemen approached the gang from either side.

Reis was bowled over as one youth lunged at him, wielding knife. But Reis regained his fee and kept his gun on the gang

The two detectives shoute warnings not to move, but despit this at last 35 youths move away into the dark. Within mir utes, the squad cars pulled u and surrounded the remaining 23

Police said they learned from questioning that the gang hac been chased out of a park by a racially mixed gang Monday morning. The Harlem Lords wer out to avenge that.

Negro in Ball Flips over Falls In Effort to 'Integrate' Niagara

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 15 (AP) — A Negro, strapped inside an eight-foot, rubber-coated steel ball, successfully rode over the 161-foot Horseshoe Falls today and said he did it "for love" and to "integrate" the giant cataract.

Nathan Boya, 30, of New York became the fifth person in history to negotiate the tumbling drop and escape unharmed.

"I did it to integrate the falls," Niagara Park Commission police quoted Boya. "I'm a Negro and proud of it," he said.

The ball, with a two-foot dent in it, was towed to the Canadian side of the Lower Niagara River after the plunge. Boya was seen as he opened the hatch and waved to thousands of stunned spectators.

He was taken into custody by park police and held on a charge of illegal entry.

"I'm happy I did it. It's something I've always wanted to do," Boya told investigators when he was taken to a hospital for a physical check-up. He was reported in good condition, having suffered only a few scratches on his arms.

The ball, dented into pear shape, was equipped with a snorkel breathing device. Boya had braced himself with a safety belt for the ride.

Swimmers in the Upper Niagara River told police that they had seen the ball being towed by a large boat shortly after 10 a.m. EDT today. The unauthorized ride over the falls started at about 10:50 a.m., police said.

Boya told police the ride had been planned several months ago with Jean Lussier, the only other living survivor of a stunt-ride over the Horseshoe. He said Lussier, who went over the falls 32 years ago in a rubber barrel, aided in the design of the sphere.

Boya said the idea stemmed from a now-faded romance with a girl while he was stationed with the Army in France, in 1947.

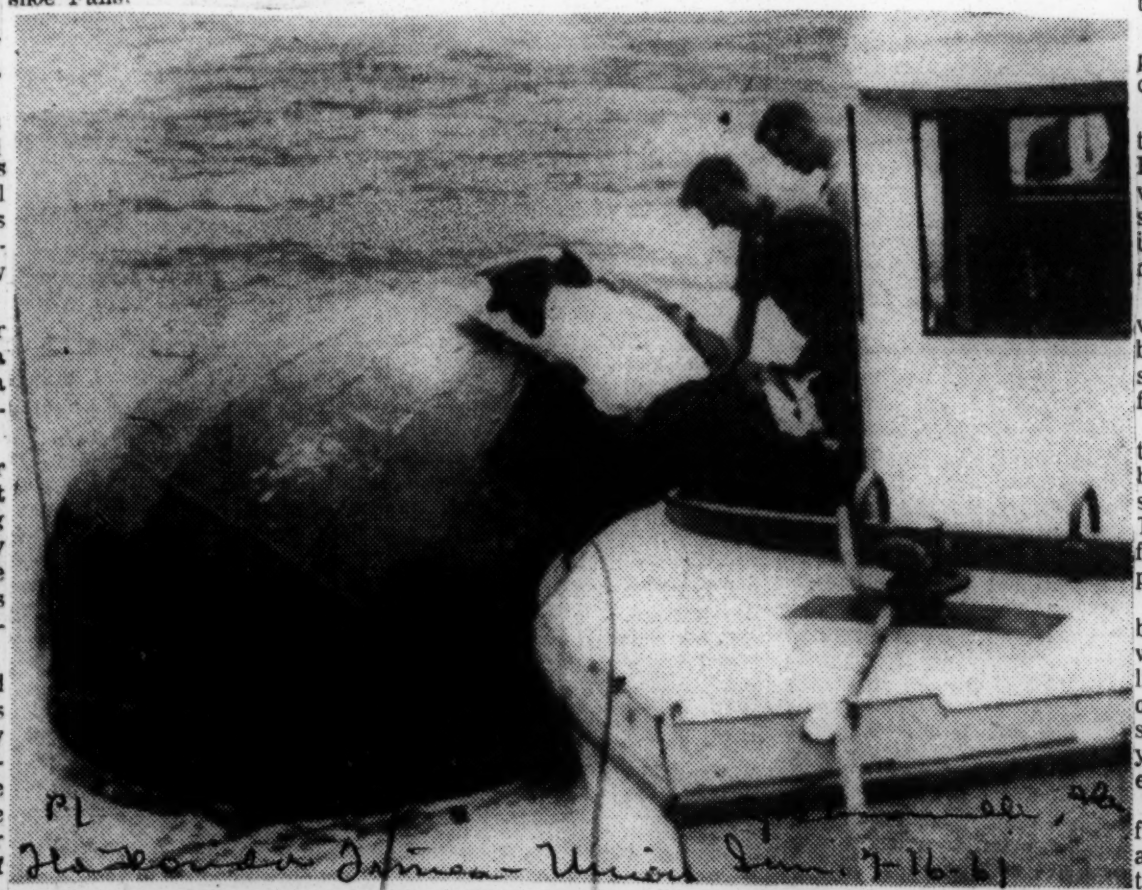
He said they had talked of marriage and a honeymoon at the famous tourist center.

"During our talks, the subject of daredevils had come up. I told her that men in this country do such things to prove their love — "like the knights of old." He said they had agreed that he would thus prove his love.

"So what I said in jest has become reality" he told investigators.

A year ago (July 9, 1960) then 7-year-old Roger Woodward of Niagara Falls, N.Y., was swept over the Horseshoe Falls accidentally and was rescued relatively unharmed from the lower river.

Two other stunt artists successfully rode over the Horseshoe Falls.



—AP Wirephoto

Boat Crew Recovers Ball in Which Boya Survived Niagara Falls Plunge

Negro Daredevil Integrates Niagara Falls In Steel Ball

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (AP)— A Negro, strapped inside an eight foot, rubber-coated steel ball, successfully rode over the 161-foot Horseshoe Falls Saturday and said he did it "for love" and to "integrate" the giant cataract.

Nathan Boya, 30, of New York, became the fifth person in history to negotiate the tumbling drop and escape unharmed.

"I did it to integrate the falls," Niagara park commission police quoted Boya. "I'm a Negro and proud of it," he said.

The ball, with a two-foot dent in it, was towed to the Canadian side of the Niagara River after the plunge. Boya was seen as he opened the hatch and waved to thousands of stunned spectators.

He was taken into custody by park police and was held on a charge of illegal entry.

"I'm happy I did it. It's something I've always wanted to do," Boya told investigators when he was taken to a hospital for a physical check-up. He was reported in good condition, having suffered only a few scratches on his arms.

The ball, dented into pear-shape was equipped with a snorkel breathing device. Boya had steeled himself with a safety belt for the ride.

Swimmers in the Niagara River told police that they had seen the ball being towed by a large boat shortly after 10 a.m. Saturday. The unauthorized ride over the falls started at about 10:50 a.m. police sail.

Boya told police the ride had been planned several months ago with Jean Lussier, the only other living survivor of a stunt-ride over the Horseshoe. He said Lussier, who went over the falls 32 years ago in a rubber barrel, aided in the design of the sphere.

Boya said the idea stemmed from a now-faded romance with a French girl while he was stationel with the Army in France, in 1947.

He said they had talked of marriage and a honeymoon at the famous tourist center.

"During our talks, the subject of daredevils had come up. I told her that men in this country do such things to prove their love—like the knights of old." He said they had agreed that he would thus prove his love.

"So what I said in jest, has become reality," he told investigators.

A year ago—July 9, 1960—then 7-year-old Roger Woodward of Niagara Falls, N. Y., was swept over the Horseshoe Falls and was rescued relatively unharmed from the lower river.

Two other stunt artists successfully rode over the Horseshoe Falls. The first successful try was made in 1901 in a wooden barrel carrying Anna Taylor. Ten years later, Bobby Leech, an Englishman, made it in a steel barrel. Lussier's feat was accomplished in 1928.

Boya said the steel ball cost him $5,000 and he had made the first payment several weeks ago.

38a 1961

AUGUST
CHAPEL HILL- THEATER
DESEGREGATED

NORTH CAROLINA

At Chapel Hill

Limited Integration Okayed For Theatre

CHAPEL HILL—Carolina Theatre here Thursday became the first white movie house in the South to adopt a policy of integration.

The theatre's new policy is limited.

It will apply only to Negro students at the University of North Carolina who show identification cards at the box office.

By mid-afternoon Thursday, the theatre reported that no Negro students had sought admission. Two Negro students said, however, that they would attend the movie Thursday night.

The movie playing is "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs."

With Raleigh Mayor.

Details of the integration arrangements were worked out by the Chapel Hill Human Relations Committee and Raleigh Mayor William Enloe, district manager of the ABC Paramount Theatre Chain, which owns the theatre here.

Although the theatre official did not say so, the new policy was regarded here as an experiment, which, if successful, would lead to a more liberal integration plan.

Negro students at the University were told confidentially of the new policy Wednesday night. No official figures were available at the University as to how many Negro students are currently enrolled, but the new policy was not expected to affect more than a dozen or so.

No Comment.

The only other white theatre in town, the Varsity, had no comment for the present. The Varsity manager said he had been unable to reach the theatre owner to determine whe policy chang
Both of the were picketed
spring by mem
Hill Committee for Open Movies.
The picketing began in January the nan effort to integrate the Carolina Theatre for a showing of and Bess failed.

Integration leaders held several meetings with the theatre managers here and with Mayor Enloe in Raleigh.

Picketing was halted in May when Enloe told integration leaders that he would find it much easier to work out something if there were no pressure. Enloe's chain owns theatres in Durham, Raleigh, Greensboro and throughout the South.

No Police Plans.

Chapel Hill Police Chief William Blake said he had been advised earlier of the theatre change in policy, but did not plan to make any changes in the policemen's regular beats.

"I don't think it will be necessary," he said.

Most of Chapel Hill's downtown eating places have been integrated for several months and there have been no incidents reported.

A new school desegregation plan will also go into effect here this fall, which will make Chapel Hill schools the most heavily integrated of any towns in the South.

Chairman Comments.

Mary Mason, Negro, graduate last spring of N. C. College and chairman of the Chapel Hill Committee for Open Movies, said "I'm very happy the step has been taken and I am confident it will in time be extended to the other Negroes in the community. I am willing to wait."

Hilliard Caldwell, Negro, employe at N. C. Memorial Hospital and leader in Chapel Hill's NAACP chapter and one of the integration leaders here, declared, "I know Chapel Hill is ready for integrated movies. I'm glad to see it. The manager and owners should be given some consideration. There will also be some resentment among Negroes and white liberals in town. Only about 10 Negroes are attending the University now full time. Just permitting Negro students to attend the theatre will not work out well."

Negro Coeds Mix Theater

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Two Negro coeds attended the Carolina Theater without incident Thursday night as the motion picture house first opened its doors on an unsegregated basis.

The theater, one of two in this college town, had been picketed by antisegregationists over a period of about five months, this year. The other theater remains segregated.

The new policy applies only to University of North Carolina Negro students, of whom there are 69 in a summer school enrollment of 3,600.

Says Monroe, N. C., Was Ripe For Violence

MONROE, N. C. (UPI)— The anti-segregation picketing which led to racial rioting here Sunday was billed as a "test of passive resistance" but it followed blunt talk of violence.

Law officers confiscated pistols, rifles, brass knuckles, butcher knives and meat cleavers from both whites and Negroes after the wild fighting broke out.

Local Negro leader Robert Williams, who sponsored the demonstrations, is known as an advocate of "meeting force with force." He was expelled from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in 1959 for his extreme views.

That was after he told Mrs. Daisy Bates, then N.A.A.C.P. head in Little Rock, that Negroes "must be willing to die and to kill as individuals and collectively to defend their homes and persons."

He later said he and other Negroes in and around this town of 11,000 persons—30 per cent Negro—were stockpiling small arms for use in self-defense.

Williams said local police were not giving Negroes protection from bands of white youths. He said his home had been shot up on several weekends recently and he had telegrammed Gov. Terry Sanford about the incidents.

This weekend, Williams called for peaceful picketing of the county courthouse by the Monroe Non-Violent Action committee. The protest, directed against the city's policy of segregation, was to be "a test of the passive resistance method."

Weekend shopping crowds Saturday swelled the town's normal population. Chief Mauney posted four policemen at the corners of Courthouse square and ordered them to keep onlookers on the other side of the street from the marching pickets.

In the crowds watching picketers, officers said they saw some hooded members of the Ku Klux Klan. White youths jeered at the pickets Saturday and fist fights broke out.

Police arrested two whites and two Negroes on charges of assault and charged three picketers with breaking an ordinance which requires picketers to stay 15 feet apart.

There was no serious violence, but the outbreaks and the hard talk set the stage for Sunday's rioting when the pickets returned to the courthouse.

Ex-NAACP Leader Is Sought

By ALAN RESCH

MONROE, N. C. (UPI) — This small Carolina town, racially uneasy for several months, exploded into violence Sunday when police tried to keep a white integrationist from joining Negro anti-segregation demonstrators in a taxi. A white policeman was shot in the melee.

Police arrested more than 50 persons, many of them whites, on charges of inciting to riot, and charged a Negro youth with assault with intent to kill the wounded policeman.

Police Chief A. A. Mauney also said Negroes temporarily held a white couple as hostages in an attempt to force release of integrated pickets jailed by officers during several hours of racial turbulence. He said, however, the couple was released unharmed.

Seventeen-year-old Albert Rorie was arrested at his home Sunday following more than seven hours of racial violence. He is charged with shooting Policeman J. W. Rushing in the leg, when Rushing tried to stop a white girl, Constance Lever of Durham, England, from entering a taxicab with other pickets.

Rushing told officers that the youth shot him after he chased three young Negroes from the scene of the afternoon disturbance and exchanged gunfire with them. He said the boy, cornered behind a car and trailer, crawled under the trailer, took aim, and fired at his legs.

Mauney said that earlier Sunday night a group of Negroes had temporarily held the white couple, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Stegal of near-by Marshville, N.C., as hostages. The couple was held in the home of Robert Williams, ousted leader of the NAACP, Ma[illegible]e.

Police said Tuesday night that Williams apparently has fled the city. Officers [illegible] shotguns and tear gas guns raided the headquarters [illegible] a self-confessed admirer of Premier Fidel Castro who was expelled by the NAACP for advocating violence against whites.

Williams had disappeared, officers said, and no guns were found in the building. Police asked the FBI to issue an alarm for Williams, who was believed to be traveling north.

About 50 law enforcement officers, working in teams of 25 on each shift, patrolled the city Tuesday on an around-the-clock basis to prevent a recurrence of racial violence here.

Officials indicated state police, called in Sunday by the City Council, would remain here as long as necessary. Officers moved through a crowd of about 400 white persons, most of them curious teenagers, Monday night at the city courthouse but there were no incidents or arrests.

Authorities had thought Williams had barricaded himself in the house with a group of followers and was distributing ammunition to the group.

But the house was empty and a group of Negroes involved in Sunday's rioting issued a statement saying they had simply stayed in Williams' "Freedom House" for their own safety.

"Therefore, we were in no position to influence the events that ensued," the group said.

Trouble had been brewing in Monroe for months. Local Negroes led by Robert Williams, had been protesting segregation and alleged unfair treatment by police.

Williams, ousted from the NAACP in 1959 after advocating that Negroes meet "force with force," has urged Negroes to arm themselves. By this weekend, the town of 11,000 on the South Carolina border, was a tinderbox of aroused feelings.

Williams said he invited pickets to parade around the county courthouse Sunday to protest the city's segregation policies "as a test of the passive resistance method." Williams did not take part in the picketing which followed minor racial tiffs earlier this weekend.

Violence erupted Sunday when Policeman J. E. Rushing tried to stop 20-year-old Constance Lever of Durham, England, from getting into a car with a group of Negro pickets. Miss Lever and other whites had been among the picketers.

James Foreman, Negro president of the National Freedom Council, said he was clubbed on the head and other Negroes were beaten as members of the white crowd who had been watching the picketers surged forward.

Mother Upset Over Daughter's Role In Monroe Rioting

DURHAM, England.—(UPI)—Mrs. Anita Lever said Monday she was "upset" by the news that her daughter Constance touched off Sunday's racial riot in Monroe, N. C.

"Of course I'm upset," she told UPI. "I'm sorry she went there."

"Constance's reaction to racial differences is governed by the fact that we lived in East Africa for years. She has no conception that a black person is any different from a white."

Mrs. Lever and her husband, J. W. Lever, a lecturer in English at Durham university, returned last year from Kampala, Uganda.

Lever was an instructor at Kampala's all-Negro Makere university, Mrs. Lever was a teacher at a native primary school, and 20-year-old Constance was a teacher at a school for Indian students.

Mrs. Lever said she hoped the British Embassy in Washington would arrange for her daughter's release from Monroe jail.

"I want to have a long talk with her," she said.

38a 1961

N. Carolina Judge Bans Race Pickets

By WALTER H. WAGGONER

(Copyright 1961 by the New York Times Co.)

MONROE, N.C.—Effective state and local police work and a judge's stern warning to integrationists against picketing the county courthouse here helped restore this tension-packed city to almost normal peace and calm Tuesday.

There was one incident at midday involving an attack on a Negro associate of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., an Atlanta integration leader. But it was quickly handled and the threats of more picketing that could have produced another clash between integrationists and their local white opponents did not materialize.

This county seat of about 11,000 persons was rocked Sunday evening when picketing of the courthouse in the heart of the city erupted into a fight between about 1,000 whites and Negroes.

A policeman was shot in the leg and about 50 persons were arrested. Among those jailed were a group of "freedom riders," who professed to a belief in non-violence. They had stopped in Monroe last week on their way north to protest what they regard as racial discrimination here.

At the height of the violence a white couple visiting the city from nearby Marshville were seized by a crowd of Negroes and held as hostages. Robert F. Williams, Negro extremist leader here, was indicted on a charge of kidnaping but he fled before police could capture him. He is still at liberty.

The victim of Tuesday's only incident was the Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker, also of Atlanta, executive director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, of which King is president.

Walker was about to enter the courthouse with two Negro journalists when their way was blocked by Vann M. Vickery, 32, a Monroe restaurant operator. He shouted abuse at the trio and then threw Walker down the concrete steps when he tried to pass.

Vickery is a massive man and the Negro a very slight one. Walker landed in the ivy at the base of a granite Civil War monument at the west entrance of the courthouse about 30 feet from the steps, but he was unhurt. Vickery, who struggled violently with police before he was handcuffed and bundled into a patrol car, was charged with public drunkenness and resisting arrest.

At 2 p. m., about an hour after the fracas on the courthouse steps, Superior Court Judge Allan H. Gwyn offered his explanation, which he said was requested by the integrationists, of what he meant when he said Monday that "there would be no picketing of this court or any other court, as far as I am concerned."

Speaking slowly and in a low voice often made inaudible by the large floor fan mildly agitating the stifling air in the big court room, Judge Gwyn said:

"If anything is fundamental in our law, it is that the judiciary shall be independent, not independent to trample on people's rights but independent to protect people's rights under the law. Judgment may not be coerced, or judges may not be coerced, and opinions may not be affected by pressures either by picketing or otherwise."

NORTH CAROLINA

The Monroe Mau-Mau

A significant point about the weekend violence in Monroe, North Carolina, was that a group of "freedom riders" had come to town to join Robert F. Williams, the Negro incendiary who has openly declared his affections for Castro, flown the Cuban flag in his yard, denounced the United States, declared himself in an "armaments race with the white people of Monroe," maintained a large arsenal of weapons and has long advocated violence.

Knowing this background, aware that Williams was suspended by the NAACP two years ago (although recently readmitted and reelected to leadership of the local chapter), these proponents of non-violence joined with him in a force of some 200 to provoke the "blood bath" Williams has talked about so long. One of their number shot a policeman, shots were fired at passing cars and, finally, they kidnaped a white couple.

All this in the name of the composite organization called the "Monroe Non-Violent Action Committee" formed recently.

A more appropriate name would have been the Monroe Mau-Mau, with Williams the Tarheel Kenyatta.

The South will wait to see what the reaction of the North will be to this outrageous black savagery, besides which the deplorable events in Alabama pale into insignificance. This should erase whatever doubt there might have been that the "freedom rider" type is really looking for trouble, all the while protesting his passivity.

But for swift and massive law enforcement, Burning Spear Williams might have had his blood bath. There are always enough white toughs around to accommodate the violence seekers.

But, for now at least, Williams' armaments race has become a foot race to escape prosecution for kidnaping. If he makes it to Cuba, however, North Carolina is not likely to offer a tractor or even a plow for his return.

MONROE, N.C.

Negro Is Indicted in Kidnapping Of White Couple in Race Clash

Leader of Carolina Pickets Flees Home —Freedom Riders in Monroe Vow to Continue Fight on Segregation

By CLAUDE SITTON

Special to The New York Times.

MONROE, N. C., Aug. 28—A Negro leader was indicted today on charges of kidnapping a white couple and holding them hostage during a race riot here yesterday.

Law enforcement officers armed with rifles and submachine guns searched the home of Robert F. Williams, the accused Negro, but found that he had fled, apparently taking his wife and two children with him.

The Union County grand jury, which was in regular session, returned the indictment shortly after hearing testimony from Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall of near-by Marshallville. They said they had been held captive in Williams' home last night for two and a half hours.

The police said Williams had promoted a series of anti-segregation demonstrations in this town of 10,000 persons, twenty-five miles southeast of Charlotte.

Racial animosity aroused during the picketing of the Union County Court House yesterday led to a clash between 1,000 whites and Negroes.

Mob Is Subdued

A policeman was shot in the thigh and a number of persons received lesser injuries before local officers, aided by seventy-five state troopers, brought the mob under control. Forty-eight persons were arrested.

Williams has publicly advocated violence as a means of ending racial restrictions.

In the July 10 issue of his mimeographed publication, "The Chursader," he told Monroe Negroes:

"No colored person is safe and secure in this outlaw land. Our best bet is to arm and defend ourselves. When the streets become rivers of blood, then and only then will the state and the National Government show an interest in the welfare of colored Americans."

Williams was suspended for six months by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in 1959 for voicing similar sentiments.

Freedom Riders Picket

Daily anti-segregation picketing, which began here last week, was sparked by a group of seventeen white and Negro Freedom Riders from outside the state. They said they had come at Williams' invitation.

The Riders, most of whom are from the North, had stopped off here en route to their homes after having been arraigned in Jackson, Miss., on charges growing out of efforts to end segregation in transportation facilities.

Four of the Freedom Riders asserted that they would continue their assault on segregation here. They were John C. Lowry and Edward Bromberg, both of New York; Daniel Thompson of Cleveland and Charles Butler of Charleston, S. C.

As they spoke, a group of some twenty Negro youths rode up in trucks. The Freedom Riders said the youths, who seemed angry and excited, were members of the newly formed Monroe Non-Violent Action Committee.

Negroes' Demands

The Freedom Riders and the others said their demands included opening of the municipal swimming pool on a desegregated basis, equal police protection for Negroes, improved job opportunities and a conference with Mayor Fred M. Wilson.

"We're going to stay until something is done," declared Mr. Thompson.

The thirteen other Freedom Riders who had arrived with them, including two white girls, were arrested during yesterday's rioting. They were held in lieu of $1,000 bonds on charges of inciting to riot.

Local officials and Mrs. Stegall said the capture of her and her husband had ben part of an attempt by the Negroes to force the police to release the Freedom Riders and other members of their faction.

Mrs. Stegall told newsmen she and her husband had been forced from their car at gunpoint, taken to the Williams home and bound back to back with tape from a Veneitian blind.

Williams, she said, had called Chief A. A. Mauney of the Monroe police and told him that if those in jail were not released the Stegalls "will be killed or sacrificed or done away with" within thirty minutes.

Voice Recognized

Chief Mauney was quoted as having said that he had received the call and had recognized Williams' voice.

Many residents here were shocked by the violence. One of them was Mrs. Margaret Baucom.

"It's tragic because we've never had anything but good relations between whites and Negroes in this town. And that's the truth."

Her comments and those of others indicated some willingness on the part of whites to sit down at the conference table with Negroes to see if their problems could not be resolved.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 28 (UPI)—Gov. John Patterson sent three telegrams today deploring the outbreak of racial violence in Monroe, N. C., which he blamed on "lawless elements" from the North.

The wires were sent to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina and Mayor Wilson of Monroe.

to send Alabama troops and law enforcement personnel to North Carolina if the state requested aid.

---

Robert Kennedy Comments

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (UPI)—Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy said today that those responsible for racial violence at Monroe should be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. He said no action by the Federal Government was contemplated since the weekend outbreak of racial strife seemed to be under control.

Arrests in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 28 (AP)—The police arrested four members of the Congress of Racial Equality—three Negroes and one white person—for picketing City Hall today.

CALM RETURNING TO MONROE, N. C.

But Negro Is Assaulted on Steps of Courthouse

By WALTER H. WAGGONER

Special to The New York Times.

MONROE, N. C., Aug. 29—An almost normal peace and calm returned to Monroe today.

There was one incident at midday involving an attack on a Negro associate of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. But it was quickly handled and the threats of more picketing that could have produced another clash between integrationists and local white opponents did not materialize.

This county seat of about 11,000 persons was rocked Sunday evening when picketing of the courthouse in the heart of the city erupted into a fight between about 1,000 whites and Negroes.

A policeman was shot in the leg and about fifty persons were arrested. Among those jailed were a group of Freedom Riders who had stopped in Monroe last week on their way North to protest racial discrimination.

At the height of the violence a white couple visiting the city from near-by Marshville were seized by a crowd of Negroes and held as hostages.

Negroe Leader Indicted

Robert F. Williams, Negro extremist leader here, was indicted on a charge of kidnaping yesterday, but he fled before the police could apprehend him. He is still at liberty.

The victim of today's incident was Wyatt Tee Walker, executive director of the southern Christian Leadership Conference, of which the Rev. Dr. King is president.

Mr. Walker was about to enter the courthouse with two Negro reporters when their way was blocked by Vann M. Vickery, a 32-year-old restaurant operator. He shouted abuse at them and then threw Mr. Walker down the concrete steps when he tried to pass.

Vickery is a massive man and the Negro a very slight one. Mr. Walker landed in the ivy at the base of a granite Civil War monument at the west entrance of the courthouse about thirty feet from the steps, but he was unhurt.

Vickery, who struggled violently with the police before he was handcuffed and bundled into a patrol car, was charged with public drunkenness and resisting arrest.

Judge Gives Warning

At 2 P. M., about an hour after the fracas on the courthouse steps, Superior Court Judge Allen H. Gwyn offered his explanation, which he said was requested by the integrationists, of what he meant when he said yesterday that "there would be no picketing of this court or any other court, as far as I am concerned."

Speaking slowly and in a low voice often made inaudible by the large floor fan mildly agitating the stifling air in the big courtroom, Judge Gwyn said:

"If anything is fundamental in our law, it is that the judiciary shall be independent, not independent to trample on people's rights but independent to protect people's rights under the law. Judgement may not be coerced, or judges may not be coarced, and opinions may not be affected by pressures either by picketing or otherwise."

Threatens Jail for Pickets

Anyone picketing the courthouse, he continued, would be guilty of contempt of court and would go to jail.

The judge refused to give any guidance as to what picketing might be permissible. But he strongly urged that it be abandoned at this time altogether.

Then he continued: "Now, those who from now on wish to engage in picketing are advised that they do so in the light of an inflamed community. They do so in the light of a jail full of people. They do so in the light of bills of indictment issued for kidnapping which grew out of this very disturbance. They do in the light of assaults.

"They do so in the light of weapons having been accumulated in certain quarters, if that is a fact, and I understand it is. They do so in the light of great danger to the peace in good order of this community. And if you feel you are entitled to picket under such circumstances, then go to it."

But the judge did not restrict his warning to the Freedom Riders or the integrationists. He refeerred to some of the local whites who he said "are of a temper to take the law in your own hands."

'Look After Your Own Business'

"So I say to you citizens who are concerned about picketing, who are opposed to some of the things they may have seen, you go home and look after your own business and give our officers an opportunity to perform their duties under the law as they have to do.

"As to all others, whether home-grown or foreign-born, I want to say that the chief and all of his deputies are here; the high sheriff and all his deputies are here; the forces of the State of North Carolina are here, not only under the direction of the government, but also the Federal government through the Attorney General.

"All are alert to the terrible situation which has arisen here, and we're going to have peace, and we're going to have order. And if anyone doesn't believe that, then let him express himself.

"We're not going to turn this government over to a bunch of hoodlums, either local or otherwise. We are going to be fair but be firm."

Police Find Arms Cache For Negroes

MONROE, N. C. (AP) — Police raided the home of the president of the Monroe Non-Violent Action Committee Wednesday confiscated a small arsenal of weapons, including automatic rifles.

Richard Crowder, 19-year-old Negro head of the group, had been picked up earlier for investigation in the kidnaping of a white couple during the aftermath of an interracial disturbance Sunday.

Crowder was charged with kidnaping and was held without bond.

Officers said they found 11 weapons, most of them rifles, in the attic of Crowder's home. They said the weapons were among those collected recently by Robert F. Williams, 36-year-old militant Negro leader, who is being sought on a kidnap warrant. Williams, with his wife and children, fled the city Sunday night in the wake of the disturbances.

The raid was conducted by local and county police, assisted by agents of the State Bureau of Investigation.

Crowder's committee has sponsored interracial picketing here for more than a week. Forty-seven persons were arrested Sunday in Connection with an hour-long free-for-all. They were released from jail Tuesday night and Wednesday after their bonds were reduced from $1,000 to $25 each.

Officers searched Williams' home Monday after a grand jury indicted him on the kidnap charges. However, no weapons were found.

With the city of 10,000 relatively quiet, it was learned that the Union County grand jury will reconvene Thursday, apparently to consider further presentments in connection with the weekend violence.

Meantime, the group of Freedom Riders regrouped in two homes in the Negro district to discuss future plans.

Williams Tells Worthy, 'I Was A Marked Man'

Afro American 36 Sat 10-21-61

Baltimore, Md.

Exile tells of his fears

By WILLIAM WORTHY
(Special to the AFRO)

HAVANA (Via Cable) — Robert F. Williams is going to be known to the listening world by a theme song.

When he begins his series of broadcasts over Radio Havana, the programs will open and close with a very moving song, "Look At My Chains."

It describes the pains and emotions of a people still in bondage.

In an exclusive all - night interview in my hotel room, the Monroe, N.C., civil rights leader said he agrees with Elijah Muhammad that the black man in the United States has no representatives in government.

* * *

WILLIAMS SAID Klan justice, operating nakedly, forced him to flee.

He said: "I'll never forget the Sabbath day brutality of the white Christians in my home town on August 27th. They beat 14 and 15-year-old girls while cops held the girls' hands behind their backs. While enjoying the sanctuary of my home. Mrs. Bruce Stegall, who changed her "kidnaping" story several times, mentioned that she had been to church that morning."

Widely known as the "Angola of the Western Hemisphere," Monroe has long offered ample reason for a colored man to flee. But Williams reports there was more behind his departure than just the local events.

An AFRO front page story on July 22 reported a Harlem meeting that raised $260 to send rifles to Monroe. Williams was beginning to receive invitations from all over the United States to come and help set up local rifle clubs.

"Defense of our homes" was becoming a watchword among a people that have turned the other cheek for 300 years. Washington was shaken.

ON THE international stage, the United States expected further embarrassment from Williams. The Freedom Now Committee of Los Angeles had asked him to present at the United Nations a petition citing wholesale United States violations of human rights.

The man who escaped to Cuba believes the man-hunting zeal of the FBI was not coincidental. An example had to be made of him to stave off further resort to the United Nations forum.

To anyone on the scene here in Cuba, the arrival of Williams clearly signifies a turning point in our civil rights struggle.

Currently awaiting a second invasion at any time, the Cubans say that the Yankees will have to send rockets to get Williams back. Afro - Cubans in particular link the Cuban Revolution to the black man's revolution that has clearly begun in the United States.

* * *

OUT OF THE 21 republics in this hemisphere Cuba is the only one that will give sanctuary to a refugee from the cotton curtain, Williams says.

With the United States world position going daily from bad to worse, Williams believes a quasi-fascist climate is rapidly developing. Many of us are not yet fully cognizant of it.

He fears that on a national level outspoken colored Americans will henceforth be disposed of in barbarous ways hitherto utilized by Mississippi savages.

Civil rights, advocates, Williams foresees, will begin "disappearing" at night. Strange car "accidents" will take the lives of careful drivers.

* * *

IN JUNE THE Klan tried this technique three times on him, he stated.

He said, "The plants of honest and militant publications will be blown up. Gangsters will be hired for fatal 'holdups.' Many determined freedom fighters will die unless we recognize the desperation of a declining power elite."

Carlos Moore, an Afro-Cuban who recently returned home after years in New York, sat in the lengthy interview. He and Bob Williams both warned this reporter to stay off the streets at night upon my return to the states.

"Because of your type of reporting in the AFRO," they said, "you are a marked man. You will pay with a knife in your back if you underestimate the ruthlessness of those whom honest journalism hurts."

* * *

WILLIAMS says he shoulders at the fatal consequences if the FBI had squeezed vn one lead out of those who befriended him. In the future, he believes, the only wise course is to equate federal agents and the Dixiecrat cops with whom they collaborate. Their questions should go unanswered.

Says Williams: "I, myself, would shut the door in their faces. No law compels a citizen to talk to them."

The former president of the Monroe NAACP sees other lessons to be learned from his vivid experiences. He wants us to begin relying more on our own publications for balanced news of today's world.

Simply by reporting the Monroe news straight, Williams maintains that the dailies and wire services would have prevented the would - be massacre of Monroe freedom riders.

* * *

TO FIGHT "the United front" of the Klan, White Citizen Councils, John Birch Society and state and federal officials, Williams wants to see hundreds of Freedom Now groups spring up.

In the natural course of development these groups would link themselves across the country. They would become a powerful deterrent to the creation of a full scale police state, he argues.

While still fighting in Monroe just to survive, Robert Williams was a force to be reckoned with. Now that he has access to global airwaves, he is an even greater threat.

* * *

HE RECALLS how John Brown mobilized world opinion by dramatizing the abolitionist struggle. For a man in exile, with ideas as his own weapons, Williams appears remarkably confident of multiplying his worldwide supporters.

He didn't tell me how or when, but he insists he will return. It sounds highly unlikely. Yet whoever thought he could make it to safety in Cuba?

OCTOBER

MONROE, NORTH CAROLINA

ROBERT F. WILLIAMS

Within the next year this reporter anticipates many unlikely events in the world of color. At 4:45 a.m., as Bob and his bodyguards said good night, I was asking myself what he will go back with and who will be at his side.

Robert Williams Hopes to Reach Negroes Through Castro's Propaganda Radio Station

HAVANA, Cuba.—(ANP)—Robert F. Williams, integration leader who fled arrest for the alleged kidnaping of a white couple, has announced that he hopes to reach his fellow Negroes in the South with his thoughts through Fidel Castro's propaganda radio station.

Williams, 36, of Monroe, N. C., has been granted political asylum in Cuba because American Negroes "are mistreated and persecuted as animals," the government newspaper El Mundo said.

A former president of the Union County branch NAACP and a founder of the Cuba First committee, Wlliams fled arrest in the United States several weeks ago. He had been at odds with the NAACP for advocating using violence to meet violence.

Williams was charged with kidnaping after allegedly holding a white couple as hostages during racial rioting in Monroe, touched off during a freedom rider demonstration.

No Weapons Found

He was allegedly training Negroes in Monroe in military tactics and amassing arms. However, no arms were found in a police raid on his house.

Sources close to Williams say he had no hand in the alleged kidnaping.

Prior to the Monroe rioting, Williams had reported at least three different attempts on his life by whites, asking for protection. He also told of whites firing guns at other Negroes as the Monroe situation worsened.

Williams, according to reports, has made two trips to Cuba as a guest of Castro, who called him the "greatest American." He had applied to the Cuban government for a passport for himself and family. The U. S. State Department at that time had refused to issue one.

The Monroe Defense committee, with headquarters in New York City, reports that it has sent a telegram to Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy telling him that violence continues unabated against Negroes in the Union county community.

"We condemn you for hypocrisy in hounding Robert F. Williams while giving the white mob a free hand to attack the black community," the committee told the attorney general. The message was signed by Calvin Hicks.

Whites Rape Negro Girl

The committee, in what it calls an "urgent communique," charges that on Sept. 16, in Union County, N. C., an Afro-American girl was beaten and raped by four white men who jumped her from their car as she was walking home about 7:30 p.m. The girl was dragged into a cornfield and attacked by the men, the report states.

The communique reads:

38a 1961

N.C. Airport Is Opened To Negroes

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Negroes were served in the restaurant at Raleigh-Durham Airport anRd used restroom facilities without incident Thursday prior to President John F. Kennedy's arrival.

Negro patrons entered the restaurant and were served breakfast several hours before Kennedy's arrival. Other Negroes order and were served throughout the morning. Negroes also entered restrooms which bore "white" signs.

Policemen were stationed in the lounge marked "white men" but made no effort to bar anyone.

CALLED OFFENSIVE

A local NAACP chapter had asked the President not to come to Raleigh-Durham Airport because of what it called "offensive signs" at the restrooms.

Airport officials conceded the signs were posted but said there was no segregation of any facilities and had been none for several years.

Airport manager Henry Boyd said Wednesday the signs would be removed at the request of the U.S. attorney general's office, but several were still on doors when the President arrived.

Kennedy did not enter any building at the airport.

Boyd said the signs had been posted in accordance with state law, but that there had been no attempt to enforce segregation for several years.

VOLUNTARY BASIS

A telegram from an assistant attorney general in Washington noted that the airport authority had desegregated terminal facilities on a voluntary basis, Boyd said. He said all of signs would be removed "in the next few days."

There was no demonstration by Negroes, although there had been reports that a Negro youth group from Durham might stage an anti-segregation demonstration during the President's visit.

Negroes mingled freely in the crowd of some 2,000 at the airport and there were Negro newsmen in the press section beside the parking apron when Kennedy spoke.

OCTOBER

NORTH CAROLINA

RALEIGH,N.C.--
RALEIGH-DURHAM AIRPORT OPENED TO NEGROES
RESTAURANT, RESTROOM FACILITIES
WITHOUT INCIDENT
PRIOR TO PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY'S
ARRIVAL(THURSDAY OCT. 12, 1961)

North Carolina Racial Strife Eases Up

MONROE, N.C., Sept. 2 (AP)—Public demonstrations against segregation apparently are at an end—at least for the time being—in this Southern city wracked by racial violence and tensions for the past several days.

Twenty-two people, many of them from out of state, were convicted Friday in Monroe Recorder's Court of inciting a riot through integrationist picketing here. All were given suspended sentences on condition they hold no more demonstrations. None testified and all agreed, through lawyers, to accept the conditions.

THE OUT-OF-STATE visitors planned to leave Monroe Saturday. Some had said after court they planned immediate departure, but Friday night several still were at the home of Robert F. Williams, militant Negro who is a fugitive on kidnap charges.

Williams and four other people have been indicted in the Sunday night abduction of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Stegall of nearby Marshville. The Stegalls said they were seized by an armed mob of about 200 Negroes, taken to Williams' house, tied up and held hostage for about 3½ hours. They were freed unhurt. The incident occurred at the height of racial feeling here, after a week of picketing capped by fist fights and other clashes.

In custody on the kidnap charges are Richard Crowder, 19, and Harold Reep, 18, Monroe Negroes, and John Cecil Lowry, 20, of The Bronx, N.Y. At large are Williams and a Negro woman, May Mallory.

WILLIAMS APPARENTLY left Monroe last Sunday night with his wife and two children. The FBI has issued a fugitive warrant for his arrest. Williams, 36, long had advocated meeting violence with violence, and had stored firearms at his home.

Judge James E. Griffin handed down sentences against the demonstrators ranging from six months to two years. But the 33-year-old, crew-cut judge told the defendants he would suspend the active terms for two years, provided they not picket or take part in any activity that might lead to race trouble in Union County.

Attorneys William Kuntsler of New York and Len Holt of Norfolk, Va., represented the defendants and entered innocent pleas for them.

Search For Williams In Clinton Area

CLINTON (AP)—A man answering the description of Robert F. Williams, militant Negro leader wanted for kidnaping in Monroe, was the object of a search in Eastern North Carolina Thursday night.

Highway patrolmen were told the man stopped his black, 1958 Chevrolet for mechanical repairs at a garage on U.S. 701 just north of here.

The patrol radio station at Raleigh said the car proceeded north on U.S. 701 before the repairs could be made. The station did not know the nature of the mechanical trouble.

Driver Described.

This description of the driver was broadcast to patrolmen in the area: Negro, 5-11, 210 pounds, wearing a goatee and having a heavy build.

The patrol station said the car bore National Association for the Advancement of Colored People stickers on its front bumper and windshield. The driver was believed traveling alone.

Williams was indicted on charges of kidnaping a white couple in Monroe Sunday night during an outbreak of racial violence.

Was Pretty Certain.

The patrol station at Elizabethtown said David Herring, operator of the garage, notified authorities telling them he was "pretty certain" it was Williams.

However, there was a 20-minute lag between the time the car left the station and the time a patrolman arrived. This would have given the driver sufficient time to reach the Newton Grove traffic circle, about 17 miles north - and cut off in almost any direction.

At Monroe, four additional kidnaping indictments were returned by the Union County grand jury Thursday as a result of the abduction last Sunday of a white couple during racial disturbances here.

Rally Called Off.

Meanwhile, a rally of integrationists scheduled for Thursday night at the St. James Holiness Church was called off. Bishop W. T. Bunn, pastor of the church would not comment on the reason, but an aide said the minister was afraid trouble might develop.

James Forman of Chicago, a Negro who coordinated picketing here last week which touched off the turmoil, said the Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker of Atlanta, the scheduled speaker, did not show up. Walker is executive director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

The grand jury Thursday indicted three Negroes and one white man in the Sunday abduction of Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall of Marshville, a small Union County community 11 miles west of here. The Stegalls said they were held captive 2½ hours by an interracial group at the home of Robert F. Williams, 36-year-old Negro leader.

Indicted by the grand jury on kidnap charges Thursday were three Negroes, May Mallory, age and residence unknown; Richard Crowder, 19, of Monroe, president of the Monroe Non-Violent Action Committee; and Harold Reep, 18, also of Monroe. Also indicted was 20-year-old John Cecil Lowry of the Bronx, N.Y., white, a former student at Queens College in New York City.

The Mallory woman's whereabout was not known, officers said. Repp, Crowder and Lowry were held in jail here without bond.

Another Negro, 38-year-old Leroy Hood of Monroe, Thursday turned four rifles over to police after he was questioned. The weapons were identified as foreign surplus, large caliber rifles.

State and local police staged another quick raid at Williams' home Thursday morning and picked up a case of dynamite hidden beneath a dog house in the back yard. The wet dynamite was wrapped in a plastic raincoat but officers said it could be detonated.

Gov. Sanford declared Thursday, "I hope we won't have any more demonstrations" at racially-troubled Monroe, and "I'll do everything I can to stop further demonstrations."

The Governor's comment came at his news conference when he was asked if he thinks violence will again erupt at Monroe.

"I think there is a danger violence will erupt again if they continue their activities down there." When asked who he meant by "they," the Governor said he meant those led by Robert E. Williams.

"I think the activities of Williams' crowd caused it in the first place," said the Governor in discussing the violence that erupt at Monroe Sunday night.

The Governor reiterated, "We are not going to put up with violence in any form for any purpose."

Now Safe in Cuba; Proclaims Innocence

Courier Month Ahead on Williams' Flight

(Special to The Courier)

MONROE, N. C. — A by-lined story appearing in The Pittsburgh Courier Sept. 9, reported that Monroe's fiery Robert F. Williams, 36, was safely en route to Cuba, fleeing harassment and possible harm from local authorities.

Last week these reports were verified by other publications and international wire services. He has been granted political asylum by the government of Cuba's Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

Williams, former president of the Union (N. C.) County NAACP has been indicted by a grand jury on charges of complicity in the alleged kidnapping of a white couple on Aug. 27.

SAFE IN HAVANNA he has written America, and broadcast on the air, statements avowing complete innocence of the charges. He is charged with the kidnapping and detention for two hours in his former Monroe residence, a white couple, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Stegall of Marshville, N.

What Williams actually did, according to his statement, and those of earlier witnesses, was to take the couple into his home after they had been disarmed and threatened by a crowd of colored persons who had gathered to protect themselves from a white mob.

Williams stated from Havana that he fled for his life only after he was told over the telephone by a police official that he would be "hanged in the courthouse square."

■

THE ACCUSED MAN has long been the target of police officials, klansmen and White Citizens Council followers because of his militant crusade for civil rights for Negroes, and equal protection by the law.

Williams wrote friends in the U. S., and several New York papers: "I am not guilty. My only crime is that I am a Negro who has loudly and militantly protested America's ruthless oppression of Negroes . . . in conjunction with the KKK, the U. S. government is seeking to lynch me for political reason."

Friends of Williams said this week that they did not expect him ever to return to Monroe to face the "trumped up charges." Most of them frankly consider the charge framed, devoid of even legal fact and aimed at ridding the community of the second Negro leader to openly fight racial discrimination.

■

THE EMBATTLED former NAACP leader skyrocketed to famed after another Negro (physician) had been accused of performing an illegal operation on a white woman. Cleared of the charge the medic later moved.

Also chased out of the country during the mid-1950's were two Negro youths, seven and nine years old, accused of kissing a white girl about their age.

Fleeing the city with Williams were his wife and children whose whereabouts at this time are also unknown.—McCRAY

August Oct.
MONROE, N.C.
MR. ROBERT WILLIAMS
Oct- Mrs. Willie Mae Mallory (Kidnapping

POLICMAN SHOT

Racial Violence Flares In North Carolina City

The Montgomery Advertiser

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — A policeman was wounded here Sunday as violence broke out during racial picketing on Monroe's courthouse square. Fifteen pickets and three others were charged with inciting to riot.

The shooting occurred about 4:30 p.m. as an interracial group marched around the square carrying signs protesting segregation.

Tension mounted Sunday night with a report that a white couple was being held hostage by Negroes. Police Chief A. A. Mauney said Negroes told him they were holding a couple hostage but he was unable to verify the report.

The wounded officer was J. W. Rushing, who was quoted as saying he was shot in the hip as he tried to disarm a Negro. The wound was not serious. Witnesses said the gunman got away.

Fighting broke out between pickets and several white persons and officers charged some 15 of the pickets and three white men with inciting to riot.

Chief Mauney said he received a call from a man identifying himself as Robert Williams—Monroe Negro integrationist—saying the Negroes would hold the white couple hostage until the pickets arrested Sunday were freed.

Mauney said Williams then put on the telephone a man who identified himself as G. Bruce Stegal, the hostage.

The police chief said Williams also claimed Mrs. Stegal was held.

Mayor Fred Wilson told newsmen he is sending a wire to Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy to ask his advice.

Chief Mauney said the fighting started when several cars arrived at the square to pick up the pickets. Mauney said the driver of the lead car, a Negro he identified as James Foreman, started cursing white bystanders.

The chief said Foreman pulled a gun as he was arrested, touching off the fighting.

Shortly after the flareup, the highway patrol dispatched 15 patrol cars to Monroe. Later, patrol Maj. Raymond Williams said 32 more patrol cars had been dispatched to the scene.

For the past week, members of the Monroe Non-Violent Action Committee have picketed the courthouse square, carrying signs protesting segregation.

Three men were arrested Saturday in connection with a fight involving a white picket. All were charged with simple assault and released under $50 bond each.

Carolina Indicts Negro Leader As Kidnaper Of White Couple

The Atlanta Constitution p. 2

By CLAUDE SITTON
(Copyright 1961 by The New York Times Co.)

MONROE, N.C.—A negro leader was indicted Monday on charges of kidnaping a white couple and holding them hostage during a racial disturbance here.

Law enforcement officers armed with rifles and submachine guns searched the home of Robert F. Williams but found that he had fled, apparently taking his wife and two children with him. Monroe police asked the FBI to issue a nationwide alarm for him.

The Union County Grand Jury, which was in regular session, returned the indictment shortly after hearing testimony from Mr.

The robbery—the third major robbery in DeKalb County this year—was swiftly executed. Witnesses said the bandit apparently lost his nerve and fled before taking all the money.

BRANDISHES PISTOL

H. F. Cowen, executive vice president and office manager, said the slender, dark-complexioned man wearing a short-sleeved sports shirt and khaki trousers walked into the office about 3 p.m. when only four employes were present.

Brandishing a pistol, he warned:

"This is a holdup . . . I'm not kidding."

He turned the gun on Mrs. Doris Zimmerman, an employe, and control. Forty-eight persons were arrested.

An uneasy truce was maintained Monday night between the heavily armed white and Negro residents and some persons voiced fears of renewed violence.

Williams, a bearded partisan of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, has publicly advociated violence as a means for ending racial restrictions.

In the July 10 issue of his mimeographed publication, "The Crusader," he told Monroe Negroes:

"No colored person is safe and secure in this outlaw land. Our best bet is to arm and defend ourselves. When the streets become rivers of blood, then and only then will the state and the national government show an interest in the welfare of colored Americans."

Williams was ousted by the NAACP several years ago for voicing similar sentiments. The daily anti-segregation picketing, which began here last week, was sparked by a group of 17 whites and Negro Freedom Riders from outside the state. They said they had come at William's invitation.

The riders, most of them are from the North, stopped off here en route to their homes after having been arraigned in Jackson, Miss., on charges growing out of efforts to end segregation in transportation terminals.
The Atlanta Constitution
p 2
Tues. 8-29-61
Atlanta, Ga.

3 Charged With Assault After N.C. Racial Scuffle

News Courier p 1 & 2

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Three men were arrested on assault charges Saturday as the result of brief scuffles during racially mixed picketing around the courthouse square.

Three pickets were cited for violating an ordinance that requires them to walk at least 15 feet apart.

Police Chief A. A. Mauney said David Lee Price, 27, of Rt. 2 Monroe, a white man, was arrested on a charge of simple assaul on Paul Deitrich of Washington, one of a group which has picketed here all week.

James L. Elmore, 21-year-old Monroe white man, and Leroy Glenn Wright, 20, a Negro picket from Nashville, Tenn., were charged with simple assault. The police chief said they engaged in a fist fight.

All three posted $50 bonds for trial next week in city court.

Named in warrants charging violation of the picketing ordinance were Roy Lee Crowder, 18, Horace Fincher, 23, and Eddie H. Manns, 19, all Monroe Negroes. They, too, were released under $50 bonds.

The half dozen pickets, members of the Monroe Non-Violent Action Committee, carried signs protesting the city's official policy of segregation in schools and recreation facilities.

They began marching in front of the Union County courthouse Monday. Saturday, their activity was made potentially dangerous because of large numbers of county people who visited the city of 10,000 for weekend shopping.

Mauney stationed officers at all four corners of the courthouse square. They ordered onlookers to remain across the street from the pickets. White youths yelled taunts a he pickes but most of them kept heir disance.

When he pickets left at 5 p.m., they marched by the courthouse singing hymns.

Negro Pickets Set Off Riot

50 Persons Arrested As Result Of Fight

Jackson Daily News
P. 1

MONROE, N. C. (UPI) — Roving bands of heavily armed police, special deputies and highway patrolmen kept tight control today of this tense city, torn by a shot-punctured night of race rioting.

Highway patrolmen armed with automatic carbines and sawed-off shotguns supplemented local police and a corps of about 75 hastily-deputized firemen in keeping the shaky peace in the south-central North Carolina city of 11,000 population. More than 50 patrol cars came here with the approval of Gov. Terry Sanford when long-smouldering racial tension broke out in violence.

Mon. 8-28-61

Police arrested more than 50 persons, many of them white, after the rioting was climaxed in the wounding of a policeman. A Negro youth was charged with assault with intent to kill the officer.

The trouble, which broke out late Sunday afternoon, grew from white resentment of Negro protests against segregation, particularly against Negro leader Robert Williams who once was expelled from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for advocating the Negroes meet violence with violence.

COURT HOUSE PICKETED

Violence finally did break out when Negroes picketed the county courthouse in a protest demonstration. Police moved in at a point when it appeared things were going to get out of hand, the Negroes fought, white onlookers moved in and the surface tension was broken.

Williams' house was heavily guarded by police today. Newsmen were not allowed to approach it but a patrolman reported that it looked like a fortress with armed men clearly visible.

"That's the police, don't shoot," the patrolman said he heard someone say when he approached the house.

Police Chief A. A. Mauney charged that Negroes temporarily held a white couple as hostages during the rioting in an attempt to force release of pickets arrested by police officers. The couple was later released unharmed, Mauney said.

Mayor Fred Wilson called the City Council into emergency session after a crowd of more than 1,000 jeering whites—some armed with butcher knives and meat cleavers — collected downtown, harassing police and apparently looking for more trouble.

The crowd began to disperse about 11 p.m., six hours after the original violence, but gunfire could be heard from the police station until 4 a.m. today.

The City Council called for state troopers to help regain control of the town, and Mayor Wilson wired Attorney General Robert Kennedy for advice on how to end the racial disorders.

(The FBI in North Carolina declined to comment on the matter and the Justice Department in Washington said it would have no comment until later today. Kennedy spent the weekend at his summer home in Hyannis Port, Mass.)

Jackson

Trouble had been brewing in Monroe for months. Local Negroes, led by Robert Williams, have been protesting segregation and alleged unfair treatment by police.

Williams, ousted from the NAACP in 1959 after advocating that Negroes meet "force with force," has urged Negroes to arm themselves. By this weekend, the town of 11,000, lying on the South Carolina border, was a tinderbox of aroused feelings.

TESTS PASSIVE RESISTANCE

Williams said he invited pickets to parade around the county courthouse Sunday to protest the city's segregation policies "as a test of the passive resistance method." Williams did not take part in the picketing which followed minor racial tiffs earlier weekend.

Violence erupted Sunday when policeman J. W. Rushing tried to stop 20-year-old Constance Lever of Durham, England from getting into a car with a group of Negro pickets. Miss Lever and other whites had been among the picketers.

Mon, 8-28-61

James Foreman, Negro president of the National Freedom Council, said he was clubbered on the head and other Negroes were beaten by members of the white crowd who had been watching the picketers surged forward.

GUNFIRE EXCHANGED

In the wild fighting which broke out, Rushing said he chased three Negro youths from the scene and exchanged gunfire with them. He said one youth, whom he identified as Albert Rorie, 17, crouched under a trailer and shot him in the left leg with a pistol. Rorie was charged with assault with attempt to kill.

Police arrested more than 20 pickets including Miss Lever, and several whites in the thick of fighting. Later more than 20 others were arrested after Mayor Wilson deputized fire department employes and about 75 states troopers arrived in town.

Mauney said he received a telephone call about 8 p.m. threatening "something bad will happen" if the integrationist picketers were not released. He said he was informed that Negroes were holding a white couple, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Stegal of nearby Marshville, N. C., as hostages in Williams' home.

Officers also said that at one point a carload of whites passed by Williams' house and were greeted by a volley of about 20 shots from the house next door.

Georgia Woman Nabbed In Monroe Kidnap Case

Charlotte and Observer Raleigh, N.C.
P 8 sat. 10-14-61

CLEVELAND (AP)—A 34-year-old Negro woman from Macon, Ga., was arraigned here Friday on a kidnaping charge, growing out of racial violence that broke out in Monroe, N.C., Aug. 27.

U.S. Commissioner H. A. Horn set a hearing for Oct. 27 for the woman, identified as Willie Mae Mallory, and set bond at $7,500. Horn said it was necessary to continue the case because a warrant, en route from North Carolina, had not arrived.

The Georgia woman, one of five persons indicted for kidnaping in the Monroe incident, was arrested in Cleveland Thursday. Another of those indicted is Robert Williams, militant Negro integrationist of Monroe who presently is reported to be in Cuba.

The five are charged with holding a white couple—Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall of Marshville — hostage for several hours during the Aug. 27 racial flareup in Monroe. The couple later were released unharmed.

38a 1961

NORTH CAROLINA

MONROE-DEFENSE COMMITTEE

MONROE, NORTH CAROLINA VICTIMS OF RACIAL INJUSTICE NEED YOUR HELP

Why Do Afro-American Citizens in Monroe Need You Help?

Fo many yeas in Monoe, North Carolina, Afro-Americans could not walk the streets without fear of attack. They were constantl beaten, shot and raped by racist mobs, including elements of law enforcement agencies.

On many occasions these mobs, robed in the garb of the KKK (Monroe is KKK Southeastern headquarters), would visit the black community to fetch some "nigra" who hadn't "stayed in his place" or simply to shoot up the area as an after-church, Sunday afternoon recreational.

Because the constituted judicial and civil authorities allowed such conditions to go unchallenged and failed to extend equal protection under law to all citizens, Afro-Americans in Monroe, under the dynamic leadership of Robert F. Williams, were obliged to meet force with force in defense of their homes and families.

No longer did the lan terrorize the community. But the concept of self-defense raised a terrifying maelstrom of hatred from racist elements against Robert F. Williams, and the black community in general. Monroe became a racial tinder-box, needing only a tiny spark to set off a major conflagration.

On August 27—following a series of peaceful picket lines conducted my Williams and his folowers in front of the segregated swimming pool (during which three attempts were made upon Mr. Williams' life in full view of local and state police who stood and laughed)—the Klan did cause combustion along racial lines.

Apparently dissatisied with their heretofoe haphazard terrorist tactics the Klan launched an armed attack against black citizens with, one must presume, every intention of wiping out that community.

What Does The Monroe Defense Committee Plan to Do?

THE MONROE DEFENSE COMMITTEE has already begun a campaign to tell the story of Minroe to the world. An important part of that story is the criminal negligence displayed by Attorney Robert Kennedy, who turned a deaf ear on repeated please from Mr. Williams and others for Federal protection after the complete failure of local and state police to defend Afro-Americans from racist mobs. He (Kennedy) did, however, move swiftly when North Carolina authorities called him for help in catching Williams.

THE MONROE COMMITTEE will also direct its efforts to informing the public of how Afro-Americans in Monroe are forced to endure constant betrayal of their rights in the courts, denial of welfare assistance, and systematic exclusion in employment, housing and recreational facilities.

THE MONROE DEFENSE COMMITTEE will bring its message to as broad a national and international audience as possible. However, it will pay particular attention to Afro-American communities across the nation in an effort to achieve mass solidarity behind the fighting spirit of Monroe citizens and Robert F. Williams.

Apart from the educational job the committee intends to perform, there is the extremely urgent situation concerning the four Freedom Fighters locked up in the Monroe, N.C., jail on kidnaping and similar charges. One of them is only 17 years old.

The legal expenses for these vaiant people is most assuredy going to be astronomical. Mr. Williams is a free man, but his friends in jail desperately need financial support.

WHAT Can You Do?

In order for THE MONROE DEFENSE COMMITTEE to be truly effective in accomplishing its desire to aid the people of Monroe, to aid those in jail and to aid those who are still being terrorized by the racists, we must have the active and generous support of al pogessive and feedom-loving people.

We urge all interested ersons to send their contributions to:

Calvin Hicks, Exec. Secy.
MONROE DEFENSE COMMITTEE
53 West 125th St.
New York 27, N.Y.
Phone: LE. 4-8411

Enclosed please find contribution of $..... I would like to know more about the Committee.

NAME .....
ADDRESS .....
CITY .....
ZONE STATE

SPONSORS:

James Baldwin
John H. Clarke
Nat Hentoff
Richard Gioson
Jesse Gray
Leroi Jones
V. T. Lee
Shirley Graham
Paule Marshall
Rev. A. J. Muste
Julian Mayfield
Dr. Anna Livia Lordero
Gerald Quinn
Bayard Rustin
Lyle Stuart
Daniel Watts
Walter Lowenfels
Melita del Villar
Rev. William H. Melish
Max Roach
Beatrice Langford
Maxwell Geismar
Mortimer Frankel
Victor Perlo
Abbey Lincoln
Warren Miller
Dr. Oakley C. Johnson
Ruby Dee
Ossie Davis
Luis Munoz Sullivan
Roth Francis
Paul Deitrich
Cyril Phillips
Tom McGrath
Arthur Knight
Leroy J. Porter
Rev. Charles A. Hill
Carleton Beals
Sylvester Leeks
Dr. Herbert Aptheker
Sidney Lens
Carl Marzani
Ishmael Florey
Rt. Rev. Clarence E Duffy
Holland Roberts
Tremon Nelson
Sidney J. Gluck

Charging airman $5 for Coke costs bartender $100, 30 days

The Afro-American P.1 Oct. 12-16-61

GRAND FORKS, N. D.—A 52 - year - old bartender charged an airman $5 for a soft drink. A local judge then "charged" the bartender $100 and sentenced him to 30 days in jail — the maximum penalty for breaking North Dakota's new anti-discrimination law.

Sgt. Joseph McClendon, 32-year-old New Yorker, told the court that John Brandt, the bartender, told him any drink would cost him $5. Sgt. McClendon ordered a Coca Cola, paid the $5, and took the case to court.

With the aid of the NAACP he proceeded under the state law passed last July which forbids a public business to deny equal service on the basis of race, color, religion or national origin. The law was adopted after colored airmen from Minor and Grand Forks Air Bases complained of being refused service in bars and restaurants.

The state's colored population, 257 in 1950, grew to three times its size with the activation of the two bases.

LINCOLN UNIVERSITY (Pa.) students rang chapel bells last week to celebrate the breaking of the color bar at the Oxford Hotel. The hotel dropped racial bars after a meeting between Chris Vergos, hotel owner; Donald McMeans, Lincoln U. NAACP president; J. B. MacRae, dean of students; Dr. Samuel G. Stevens, university chaplain, and other Oxford citizens.

The hotel was picketed last week as a student was denied a room repeatedly. He was told there were no vacancies and his reservation would not be accepted. Two other colored students, of fair completion, were given their choice of rooms and stayed overnight.

Another colored student was turned away with the "no vacancies" excuse but a white faculty member was given a room. Over 250 Lincoln students picketed the hotel in protest.

* * *

THE BERKELEY, CALIF. CORE chapter ended a 57-year-old discriminatory hiring policy at Hink's Department Store last week. The store hired two colored clerks after the group picketed. The store told Tony Salotto, CORE chairman, that colored persons will be hired for other jobs as they become available.

The CORE chairman said other local department stores will be contacted and urged to practice fair hiring.

* * *

IN McCOMB, MISS., CORE is challenging the right of U.S. District Judge Harold Cox to restrain or enjoin the organization from staging "freedom rides". CORE says that one judge cannot overturn a ruling on basic Constitutional rights made by a three-judge federal court.

Judge Cox, in issuing the ten-day temporary order, said that it applied only to CORE but not to other colored persons using the local bus terminal on an unsegregated basis. Issued on Dec. 2, the temporary restraining order went into effect immediately.

The order was first issued by Judge Sidney Mize and extended one day by Judge Cox.

It was sought by city officials who tried to maintain segregation even in the face of a ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission against it. When non-segregation signs replaced the jimcrow signs inside the terminal, the city posted jimcrow signs outside.

When these signs were ordered down, the city stationed policemen outside to pressure colored travelers to use the jimcrow waiting room. The restaurant was closed.

Thomas Gaither, local CORE representative, told the AFRO that nine CORE members had used the general bus station facilities before the order from Judge Cox. He said that if, after Dec. 13, Judge Cox makes his temporary order permanent, CORE will appeal to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court in New Orleans.

Carl Rachin, CORE attorney, said: "CORE members are simply exercising their constitutional rights as citizens. We do not feel that these rights can be denied."

* * *

ON DEC. 6, Robert Moses and 12 McComb students were released from Pike County jail under $1,000 appeal bond. Mr. Moses is assistant director of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee's Voter Registration Project.

The 13 were sentenced Oct. 31 for breach of the peace. The charge grew out of an Oct. 4 demonstration when 103 Burglund High School pupils walked out of school protesting the refusal of authorities to readmit Miss Brenda Travis.

Miss Travis and four others were arrested Aug. 30 for refusing to obey jimcrow regulations in the local bus station. Mr. Moses has been both arrested and assaulted for carrying on a voter registration project.

* * *

FOLLOWING THE ORDER of U.S. District Judge Sidney Mize of Gulfport, a U.S. marshal kept five CORE members, high school pupils, from using desegregated facilities at the bus station.

The five are McComb residents, expelled from Burglund High School, now attending the high school division of Campbell College in Jackson. Judge Mize issued the order on the request of McComb officials.

* * *

JUDGE MIZE later refused to issue an order forcing desegregation of Gulf Coast beaches. The order was requested by the Justice Department.

Judge Mize said he would not act until a suit already in Mississippi state court has been settled. In this suit, Mrs. Lee D. Guice seeks to determine ownership of sections of the beach.

The government contends that the beach is partially financed by federal funds through an agreement between Army engineers and Harrison County, Miss.

* * *

SOUTH CAROLINA Circuit Judge J. B. Pruitt upheld breach of peace charges against 288 sitdown demonstrators. The case started in March, 1960 when the demonstrators, from South Carolina State and Claflin Colleges, staged a march down town.

Police used fire hoses and tear gas to break up the demonstration. A local magistrate fined each $50 with a 30-day jail sentence after an all-white jury found them guilty of breach of the peace.

In refusing their appeal, Judge Pruitt last week said: "The evidence is clear that the arresting officers were motivated solely by a proper concern for the preservation of order and the protection of the general welfare."

* * *

MEANWHILE, IN COLUMBIA, the South Carolina Supreme Court upheld the convictions of 187 sitdowners arrested March 2 in Columbia. The court ruled that the demonstrators defied police orders in picketing on the State House grounds.

The state said the demonstration caused traffic congestion, public inconvenience and drew "potential troublemakers." In upholding this view, the high court sustained the fines of $10 to $100 sentences of from 10 to 30 days imposed by the magistrate's court.

* * *

THE NAACP has asked the Department of Justice to investigate the arrest of NAACP leaders in Mississippi.

Aaron Henry, state NAACP president, was arrested Dec. 7 along with four others. They were charged with conducting a selective buying campaign against stores which discriminate in employment and services.

Others arrested with Mr. Henry, a Clarksdale pharmacist, were: John C. Melchor, Clarksdale NAACP president; R. L. Drew, first vice president; Mrs. Vera M. Pige, secretary, and the Rev. Theodore Trammell, chaplain. They were released later on their own recognizance.

The selective buying campaign started before Thanksgiving. It came when invitations to colored high school bands to participate in the Christmas parade were withdrawn.

* * *

IN BATON ROUGE, colored citizens gave 12 downtown merchants two days to say whether or not they were going to hire colored persons and desegregate facilities.

Earlier in the week, CORE sitdowners were refused service at downtown variety stores.

In New Orleans, Judge Shirley G. Wimberley found three CORE pickets guilty of obstructing sidewalks and failing to move on. Convicted were Jerome Smith, David Dennis and Miss Doris Castle.

Following the convictions, twelve members of the Interdenominational Ministeral Alliance picketed stores while CORE members staged sitdowns.

* * *

IN CHARLOTTE, two department stores announced the end of segregation in their cafeterias. The decision followed two days of picketing by students at Johnson C. Smith University.

In High Point, N.C., ministers said they would call a statewide boycott of A. and P. stores unless colored clerks were hired. The Rev. B. Elton Cox, a field representative of CORE, said:

"The majority of the trade is from colored persons, yet they won't hire a colored cashier."

The ministers picketed the store last week after attempts to talk with the manager failed.

Kelly Alexander, state NAACP president, said his organization would assist CORE in the campaign if needed.

* * *

IN ATLANTA Friday night two members of the Student Non - Violent Coordinating Committee were ordered out of a restaurant in the Trailways Bus Terminal.

James Foreman told the AFRO that a case is already pending a hearing on his Nov. 1 arrest at the same restaurant. He said that the refusal of the restaurant to serve everyone is a violation of the ICC order. The ICC, he said, is interested in the case.

In Friday's incident, two white and two colored CORE members went to the restaurant separately. The whites shared their food with the colored demonstrators when they were refused service. When a waitress got a policeman, all left quietly.

The student organization wired Mayor-elect Ivan Allen asking him, as his first official act on taking office, to order the police department to stop enforcing segregation in the restaurant.

* * *

ALSO IN ATLANTA, the Georgia Court of Appeals overthrew convictions of three segregationists who were accused of "illegal parading."

The men, all connected with the Pentecostal church, said they interpreted the Bible as teaching segregation. Their demonstration was planned to coincide with the appearance in Atlanta of Robert Kennedy, U.S. Attorney General, at the University of Georgia.

* * *

"IRRESPECTIVE OF the attitude Federal authorities may take to you at times, you are clearly within your rights when you go out and enforce the laws of the State of Mississippi."

This was the message of Attorney General Joe T. Patterson to the meeting in Jackson of the State Sheriffs' Association.

Saying the state would back sheriffs who enforced Mississippi laws even if they conflict with federal laws, Mr. Patterson said:

"If they put a sheriff in jail for enforcing the law, then I may as well go to jail too."

* * *

THE MAYOR OF Slaton, Texas accused the U.S. Labor Department of "blackmail" in civil rights matters. L.C. Lemon said that the agency threatened to cut off Mexican farm labor in the area unless the city swimming pool is integrated in 30 days.

In Huntsville, Ala., Lewis M. Parker, 59, waived preliminary hearing on a charge of perjury. He is charged with giving false information when asked if he were a member of the Ku Klax Klan.

The questioning was preliminary to his service on a jury hearing the case against men accused of burning a Greyhound bus carrying Freedom Riders.

Seven of the accused were acquitted on a mistrial when the jury would not agree on a verdict.

* * *

HODDING CARTER, editor of the Delta Democrat - Times in Greenville, Miss., said in Providence, R.I. that he was threatened as a result of his remarks there.

Mr. Carter said he received a telehone call from an anonymous person who said: "You're going to get what the others did."

He was sure the threat referred to the beating of news paper men recently when an attempt was made to desegregate the McComb, Miss. bus station.

His wife, at home, reported that someone had also called his home in Greenville.

Mr. Carter had told a Pembroke College group that Federal troops should be sent if there is any more violence in Mississippi.

U. S. Airmen Win Dakota Victory

GRAND FORKS, N. D. — A white bartender was sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $100 here for charging Negro airmen $5.00 for a Coca Cola.

This was the first victory of the recently formed Greater Grand Forks chapter of the NAACP, made up mostly of Air Force personnel stationed at Grand Forks air bases.

Under leadership of Lt. Theodore Johnson, president of the NAACP unit, the airme nare waging a fight against strong prejudices in this region of the country.

The airmen are trying to get whites near the air base to live up to the new North Dakota law which forbids discrimination in places of public accommodations. Some restaurants and bars have openly defied the law.

Negro military personnel are also facing hardship in finding off-base homes for their families.

Leonard H. Carter, NAACP field secretary, informed James C. Evans, civilian assistant to the Secretary of Defense in Washington, D. C., that when Negro airmen find homes, "they pay higher rents than similarly situated white families because of the restricted market.

"Aside from the humiliating and personal insults these servicemen are subjected to, it is unthinkable that the U. S. Government will tolerate discrimination and exploitation against members of its armed forces," Carter added.

"Actually these Negro families are paying a color tax, in addition to excessive rents," he said.

The NAACP asked for an "immediate investigation into this matter .... and that some solution to this problem be found." The Association offered its "full co-operation" to the Secretary of Defense's office.

38a 1961

OCTOBER

NORTH CAROLINA

MONROE, N.C.

MR. ROBERT F. WILLIAMS

Escapes FBI net in Canada and Mexico

The Afro-American P.1

Sat 10-7-61.

Baltimore Md.

AFRO's Worthy first to report Monroe, N.C. rights leader in Cuba

By WILLIAM WORTHY

(Copyright by the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers. Use in part or whole expressly forbidden.)

HAVANA, Cuba — Robert Williams, the militant civil rights fighter from Monroe, N.C., has eluded the international manhunt of a month's duration and is now safe in Cuba.

I know because I ran into him Thursday, relaxed and smiling as he was leaving the ministry of foreign affairs. He appeared a free and unworried man.

Williams said very soon he will "begin refuting and documenting the officials' lies hatched in Monroe and echoed in Washington about the Aug. 27 kidnaping that never took place.

* * *

HE SAID HE will tell his story to the people of the world over the shortwave radio system of Havana.

Evidently for security reasons, only a few people until last Thursday shared the information that Williams is in Cuba.

Meanwhile, from Cuba, Worthy said Williams will hold a press conference Monday evening (Oct. 2) to "tell his story."

From now on Williams will be closely guarded. Cubans fear that if not guarded he would be assassinated.

Still a little breathless when he recalls his hair-raising odyssey, Williams said U.S. police agencies don't track down even murderers and bank robbers with the zeal that the FBI displayed in the continent-wide hunt for him and his family.

ROBERT F. WILLIAMS

* * *

HE SAID that after some of his Canadian friends had their homes searched they were told: "That man hasn't got a chance. We will send him back to the states in a pine-box."

Williams recalled that the weekend of violence in Monroe was responsible for the creation of the "underground railroad" which enabled him to elude the manhunt.

He said that after police cars sealed off the street where he lived he received a telephone call from police headquarters warning him that the National Guard was en route to his house.

Williams said he was told: "You will soon be hanging in the Courthouse Square."

* * *

HE SAID this was his moment of decision, that he told the four members of his family they would have to head for Cuba with just the clothes on their backs.

He said he chose Cuba, because he concluded that even in northern states he would be extradited to South Carolina where he would have been shot in a trumped up escape effort or tried on a phony kidnap charge.

Williams attributed his escape to what he described as "familar stereotype about colored male burliness."

Pointing out that he has no scars on his face or body and weighs far less than 250 pounds, he said circulars sent out about him described nonexistent facial scars and imaginary cut on his right leg.

Sat 10-7-61

HE SAID that in the thousands of round - about miles he traveled in order to reach Cuba not a single person showed any sign of recognizing him.

Canadian newspapers, he declared, carried stories stating that the FBI sent "hundreds of agents .... to guide Royal Canadian Mounted Police in the search for him.

Also there were many Federal agents in Mexico who participated in the search, Williams asserted.

He also claims that persons in cities and towns where he has appeared as a speaker and subscribers to his newsletter, the Crusader, have been questioned and shadowed.

* * *

REGARDING HIS newsletter. Williams says he will continue to publish it as "editor in exile," and that it will be distributed from New York City.

This is a photo of Robert Williams when he organized a gun club in Monroe, N.C. last spring.

In confidence, this reporter has been told the route Williams took to come here. I have also been filled - in on the coordinated network of groups that risked legal hazards in order to speed him along his journey to safety.

I was told that local attorneys were frequently at his aid on some legs of the journey in case of sudden capture, ready to testify as witnesses to refute phony police claims of "shot while resisting arrest."

* * *

THE CAREFULLY-thought - out trip was a fast-moving thriller that to all practical purposes updates Harriet Tubman's slower exploits on foot with the runaway slaves.

Williams said that at the final critical point of his journey he came close to making a fatal error, but would not go into details as he has reasons for keeping secret the details of how he escaped.

..AT THE FINAL critical point in his journey, Williams said underestimated the vast imperial arm-twisting power the United States exercises among our junior allies and especially among our satellites in "the American family of nations."

Williams has his reasons for keeping secret the details of his brilliantly executed trip. He expects to be called upon to help other endangered freedom fighters to follow in his tracks. For those coming occasions he wants to perfect a multidirectional and permanent underground railroad.

With Cuba now revealed as an ever-ready sanctuary for menanced "freedom fighters," all varieties of Dixiecrat terror and all the implicit threats of personal economic ruin will henceforth be less awesome to those on the equal rights firing line.

---

IN BALTIMORE, Saturday, FBI agent James Henderson said he had no knowledge of Mr. Williams' "Alleged escape to Cuba" from this country.

However, in Washington, a Justice Department spokesman said Williams, appearance in Cuba "came as no surprise" since he "long has been a Communist sympathizer and an outspoken advocate of Fidel Castro."

The statement was given after the AFRO's story by Worthy was published.

WILLIAMS TELLS

His story of Monroe

By WILLIAM WORTHY

Special to the AFRO

HAVANA, Cuba — Robert Williams, integration leader from Monroe, N.C. who fled here for "political asylum," shed some light on the hectic day that caused his flight from his home.

Mr. Williams spoke here at a press conference to a group of Latin, Asian and colored newsmen. He excluded representatives of the two major American wire services because, he said, they had not presented a fair picture of the situation in Monroe.

The FBI has out a "Wanted" flyer for Mr. Williams. He is charged with kidnaping a white Monroe couple, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Stegall.

* * *

REFERRING TO the "kidnaping," Mr. Williams denied he had held the couple as hostages in his home.

He said the Stegalls were recognized by the crowd around his house which was intent on harming them. Mr. Williams said he saved the couple from the crowd but refused to escort them from the area.

He did this, he said, despite the warning from a bystander that "the dead don't lie."

The couple, badly scared, followed him into his house, he said, for safety. They thanked him for allowing them to stay there.

However, when the couple went to police, he said, the woman told them that she had been kidnaped by 200 persons. She later narrowed down the number to implicate only Mr. Williams.

THE MILITANT ex - president of the Union County NAACP also challenged the police version of a telephone call he made at about that time. The chief of police told reporters that he had threatened to kill the couple unless a group of Freedom Riders was released from jail.

Actually, Mr. Williams said, he told police the crowd would march on the jail unless badly - beaten Freedom Riders were given medical attention.

The police took the Riders to the hospital and had their leader telephone Mr. Williams to assure him they were being cared for.

At this point, Mr. Williams told the newsmen, the chief of police called on Gov. Terry Sanford to send troops to supplement the 17 - man police force.

However, when he (Mr. Williams) telephoned the state house to ask for protection of his state and Constitutional rights, a governor's aide asked:

"Do you mean that you aren't dead yet? You're getting just what you deserve."

Mr. Williams met with no greater success in seeking federal protection. Someone told him Robert Kennedy, attorney general, was busy.

MR. WILLIAMS said it was he who shot a white Monroe policeman in the hip. The officer, he said, was preparing to fire into a crowd of colored girls.

The pacifists who came to Monroe are his friends, Mr. Williams said, despite the fact that he is not a pacifist and doesn't believe their philosophy will work with "conscienceless white racists."

He appealed for worldwide support of Freedom Rider John Lowry of New York, now jailed in Monroe on a companion kidnaping charge. Mr. Williams said that the white City College (N.Y.) student was sitting on the porch of the house next to his (Williams') when the Stegall couple was stopped by the crowd.

He said Lowry now faces 20 years in prison because he moved the Stegall car to the curb to avoid blocking the middle of the street.

EMBITTERED by his Monroe experiences, Mr. Williams advised colored soldiers and Marines to "lay down your arms, join the Cuban side and become free if compelled to come here in an invasion force.

"I will also tell colored servicemen," he continued, "that it is a farce to believe the United States wants to defend democracy in Germany.

"The Afro-American's fight is in the United States, not in Cuba, not in Germany, not in Asia."

For his listeners, Mr. Williams reviewed the unremitting racial strife in Monroe since 1958 when he gained international support after exposing the so-called "kissing case." In this incident, two colored boys, 8 and 10, were sentenced to reform school until 21 years of age after a white girl kissed them in play.

The children were later released because of world attention drawn to the case.

MONROE, N.C. - MR.ROBERT F. WILLIAMS
REFUGE TO CUBA

Wanted Negro Escapes To Cuba

The Herald Courier

HAVANA (AP)—Robert F. Williams, 36, militant Negro integrationist sought for kidnaping a white couple during racial riots in Monroe, N.C., has escaped to Cuba, whose revolutionary government he admires.

A Havana radio report, monitored Saturday in Key West, Fla., said that Williams asked and received political asylum in Cuba.

The FBI and the Royal Canadian Mounted police were seeking Williams, indicted by a grand jury in Union County, N.C. (Monroe) last Aug. 28 on charges of kidnaping Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall of Marshville near Monroe.

He was accused of joining other Negroes in keeping the Stegalls as hostages for three hours in his home to win release of Negroes arrested in a racial disorder. The Stegalls were released unharmed, and she said later that Williams had criticized the others about the kidnaping and did not help when they tied her and her husband up.

The Militant, a weekly newspaper published in New York City, published in this week's issue a letter purportedly from Williams in which he said he slipped by police in Monroe, hitchhiked a ride to Greensboro, N.C., with a passing Negro motorists, and from Greensboro took a bus to New York. A spokesman for The Militant said he did not recall the postmark on the letter.

Prensa, the official Cuban news agency, also announced Saturday that Williams was in Cuba, but gave no word on how he got there or where he is staying.

Prensa said that Williams fled the United States "because of threats against his life and persecution in his country."

The agency also charged that Williams, an avowed admirer of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro, was harassed by American authorities "because of his valiant fight in favor of colored people and his defense of the Cuban revolution" Williams visited Cuba last year, and said there was no racial discrimination in the country.

The Havana radio, in announcing that Williams was granted asylum, quoted him as saying after his arrival that "the fate of 20 million American Negroes is closely linked with the Cuban revolution, as is the case with the tremendous liberation movement in Asia and America."

The radio also quoted him as saying he sought asylum "because of continuing death threats he has been receiving, including threats from the Ku Klux Klan for being president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Williams is president of the Union County Chapter of the NAACP. The national organization suspended him after he advocated that Negroes meet violence with violence, but he was reinstated.

Williams once said he was stockpiling weapons in "an armament race with the white people of Monroe."

U.S. Confirms Negro Taking Refuge In Cuba

Jackson Daily News

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Justice Department has reported that Negro integration leader Robert F. Williams Jr. has fled to Cuba to escape prosecution in the kidnaping of a man and wife during racial strife at Monroe N. C.

A department spokesman said last night Williams apparently fled to Canada after leaving Monroe Aug. 27 and then went on to Cuba.

His appearance in Cuba "came as no surprise," the spokesman said, since he "long has been a Communist sympathizer and an outspoken advocate of Fidel Castro."

Williams once sought asylum in the Soviet Union, the spokesman said. He is considered extremely dangerous by the FBI.

Williams, former chief of the Monroe branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was charged with kidnapping a white couple and holding them during street clashes between white crowds and "freedom ridrs" at Monroe.

He fled his home before police arrived. The national NAACP has repudiated him for his views that Negroes should use any means, including violence, to counter violence by whites.

Fugitive in Race-Row Kidnaping Reported in Cuba

The Dispatch

YORK, Pa., Sept. 29 (AP) The York Gazette & Daily said today that Robert F. Williams, a Negro who disappeared after being indicted in the kidnaping ofa whitecouple in North Carolina during a race disturbance, is in Cuba.

The newspaper said the information was cabled to it by William Worthy, an American newspaperman. Worthy, a Negro, was the center of a controversy for visiting Red China in 1956 despite a United States ban on travel there.

The cable said in part:

"Robert F. iWlliams is safe in Cuba. I know because I ran into him today (Thursday) as he was leaving the Ministry of Fireign Affairs."

The cable indicated that Williams made the trip by some underground route.

Williams, 36, a resident of Monroe, N. C., is a militant desegregationist who once said he was stockpiling weapons in "an armament race with the white people of Monroe."

He was indicted on the kidnaping charge Aug. 28 by a Union County grand jury in an outgrowth of race disorders there.

Williams was accused of joining other Negroes in kidnaping Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall and holding them several hours as hostages in an attempt to gain the release of Negroes who had been arrested in the disorders. The couple then was released unharmed.

Mrs. Stegall said afterward that she heard Williams telephone to the police and say that "unless the Negroes in jail were freed, they'd kill us."

She said she and her husband were tied hand to hand and back to back, but that Williams did not participate in the binding. Shesaid he had chided the other Negroes about kidnaping them.

Worthy said in ihs dispatch that iWlliams' escape was coordinated by a network of groups that ignored legal hazards.

He wrote that local attorneys were frequently at Williams' side on various sections of the journey—to be on hand in case of sudden capture and also to refute any false charges of "shot while resisting arrest."

Cuba Gives Asylum to Man Sought in Monroe Kidnaping

P. 6 The Herald and Observer Sun. 10-1-61

HAVANA (AP)—Robert F. Williams, 36, militant Negro integrationist sought for kidnaping a white couple during racial riots in Monroe, N.C., has escaped to Cuba, whose revolutionary government he admires.

A Havana radio report, monitored Saturday in Key West, Fla., said that Williams asked and received political asylum in Cuba.

The FBI and the Royal Canadian Mounted police were seeking Williams, indicted by a grand jury in Union County, N.C. (Monroe) last Aug. 28 on charges of kidnaping Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall of Marshville near Monroe.

He was accused of joining other Negroes in keeping the Stegalls as hostages for three hours in his home to win release of Negroes arrested in a racial disorder. The Stegalls were released unharmed, and she said later that Williams had criticized the others about the kidnaping and did not help when they tied her and her husband up.

The Militant, a weekly newspaper published in New York City, published in this week's issue a letter purportedly from Williams in which he said he slipped by police in Monroe, hitchhiked a ride to Greensboro, N.C., with a passing Negro motorists, and from Greensboro took a bus to New York. A spokesman for The Militant said he did not recall the postmark on the letter.

Prensa, the official Cuban news agency, also announced Saturday that Williams was in Cuba, but gave no word no how he got there or where he is staying.

Prensa said that Williams fled the United States "because of threats against his life and persecution in his country."

The agency also charged that Williams, an avowed admirer of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro, was harassed by American authorities "because of his valiant fight in favor of colored people and his defense of the Cuban revolution" Williams visited Cuba last year, and said there was no racial discrimination in the country.

The Havana radio, in announcing that Williams was granted asylum quoted him as saying after his arrival that "the fate of 20 million American Negroes is closely linked with the Cuban revolution, as is the case with the tremendous liberation movement in Asia and America."

The radio also quoted him as saying he sought asylum "because of continuing death threats he has been receiving, including threats from the Ku Klux Klan for being president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

ROBERT F. WILLIAMS.

North Carolina Troopers Raid Negro Integrationists

Philadelphia

MONROE, N. C., Aug. 28. — Police and State troopers, determined to prevent further race rioting in this tense city, raided the stronghold of a Negro integration splinter group Monday.

Law officers holding shotguns and tear gas guns ready descended on the headquarters of Negro leader Robert Williams. Officers had described the place as an armed camp but found both guns and Williams gone.

Exec. 8-29-61

State Police immediately asked the FBI to issue an alarm for Williams who is charged with kidnaping a white couple and holding them hostages during last night's rioting.

Philadelphia Pa

Williams, a bearded admirer of Fidel Castro who once was suspended by the NAACP for advocating violence against whites had been reported issuing ammunition to his followers Sunday night as white toughs roamed the city. One carload of whites last night drove past Williams' home and his nearby "Freedom House," where visitors to his organization stayed, to be greeted by an estimated 20 shots.

The kidnap warrant against Williams was issued Monday by a Union county Superior Court Grand Jury which named Williams in two indictments, one for each of the two kidnaped persons — Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall of Marshallville, N. C.

Fifty state patrolmen helped keep the peace in Monroe and authorities said they would stay as long as needed.

In Washington, Attorney General Robert Kennedy said no Federal action was planned because local and State authorities had "moved vigorously" and had the situation under control. Kennedy said he hoped the persons responsible for the violence would be prosecuted "to the full extent of the law."

The reported kidnaping climaxed a week end of racial violence in this city of 10,000, where Negro and white pickets, some from as far away as England, have marched with placards for days.

The middle-aged couple who were held hostage, Mr. and Mrs. Stegall, testified before the grand jury which Superior Court Judge Allen H. Gwyn ordered to take up the interracial situation.

The Stegalls said they took a short cut on their way home Sunday night and a band of about 200 Negroes, many of them armed, stopped them on the street where Williams lives.

"We were scared," said Mrs. Stegall, who said they had nothing to do with the racial disturbances and passed through Williams' neighborhood by chance. "They took us in Williams' home and tied us up. They had guns on us. The house was filled with Negroes and others were outside in the yard and around the house."

The Stegalls were released later and escorted out of town by two carloads of Negroes, they said.

An uneasy quiet returned to this county seat 24 miles east of Charlotte. The pickets did not march and extra law officers patroled the city. Mayor Fred Wilson called the City Council into a second emergency session to consider ways of preventing further outbreaks of racial violence.

Carolina Racial Fights Result in 47 Arrests

Evening Star D.C.

Mon 8-28-61

MONROE, N. C., Aug. 28 (AP). — The City Council planned to ask an injunction today against anti-segregation picketing by mixed Negro and white youths which set off a week end of violence in this city of 10,000.

Washington D.C.

A policeman was wounded yesterday, a white couple was held hostage for several hours by Negroes, and the highway patrol said 20 shots were fired at a carload of white persons passing a Negro integrationist's house last night.

Sporadic fights downtown resulted in 35 arrests yesterday and last night, and more arrests raised the total to at least 47 by 2:30 a.m. today. Most of those arrested were charged with inciting to riot, but several persons were charged with carrying concealed weapons. Police said hearings for those arrested will be held September 11.

Mayor Fred Wilson sent a telegram to Attorney General Robert Kennedy saying the city had been invaded by Freedom Riders and carpetbaggers. He asked that they be "restrained by your office."

The Justice Department said it has asked the FBI to learn the facts.

Negro and white pickets from as far away as England and Chicago have been carrying placards in downtown Monroe for several days. They handed out leaflets charging discrimination in the city's recreation facilities, in hiring by Monroe factories and saying welfare officials deprive Negroes of relief.

Yesterday's melee—one officer privately said it developed into a riot—started as the pickets were about to disband. Officer J. W. Rushing said he tried to disarm a Negro picket who then fled but turned and shot the officer in the hip. The wound was not serious.

Another law enforcement man, who asked not to be named, said the incident began when a white English girl, 20-year-old Constance Lever, started to get into a car with some armed Negro pickets. He said Officer Rushing tried to dissuade Miss Lever from getting into the car and that ames Foreman of Chicago, a Negro integration leader, tried to pull her into the car. Mr. Rushing then disarmed two of the Negroes but another broke away, fired at Mr. Rushing, and fled.

Albert Rorie, 17, Monroe Negro who has taken part in the picketing, was arrested on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. He denied shooting Mr. Rushing.

Police Chief A. A. Mauney said Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegal of nearby Marshville were released unharmed last night after being taken hostage. Chief Mauney said his first word tat they were held came in a telephone call from Robert Williams, Monroe Negro integration leader, who said the Stegals would be held until Negro pickets under arrest were freed.

Newsmen were not allowed to see the Stegals.

Mr. Williams heads the county chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and is an outspoken admirer of Fidel Castro. He has boasted of having a large number of firearms in his home.

Mon 8-28-61

Lt. C. L. Teague of the Highway Patrol reported 20 shots were fired at a carload of white persons who drove down the street near Mr. Williams' home late last night. Patrolmen immediately closed off the street to motor traffic.

One of the white pickets, Daniel Thompson of Cleveland, Ohio, said a house has been rented near Mr. Williams' home to accomodate the visiting pickets. He said they call it "the freedom house."

Suspended Sentences Halt Monroe Pickets

The News and Observer

Sat

MONROE (AP) — Twenty-two racial pickets were convicted of inciting a riot and were let off with suspended prison terms Friday when they agreed to call off their demonstrations.

Sat 8-26-61

Judge James E. Griffin, who consolidated the charges against the group for a single trial, handed out sentences ranging from six months to two years in jail, but told the demonstrators he would suspend the active prison terms for two years on condition that they not picket or participate in any activity that might lead to trace trouble in Union County.

Plan Prompt Departure.

Raleigh N.C.

The demonstrators, through lawyers, agreed to accept the suspensions on that basis. Most of the out-of-town "freedom riders" said they planned to leave immediately.

They were charged with inciting a riot after their arrest in last weekend's series of racial outbursts which erupted following a week of picketing the county courthouse against segregation practices. Some also were charged with resisting arrest and simple assault.

More than 40 persons were arrested, some of them white people who became embroiled in the hour-long free-for-all.

Pleas of Innocent.

Attorneys William Kuntsler of New York and Len Holt of Norfolk, Va., had entered pleas of innocent for the seven freedom riders and other integrationists.

None of the defendants testified.

Two were fined $100 and ordered to pay court costs, in addition to their suspended prison terms of two years. They were Le Roy Wright, 19, Nashville, Tenn., Negro, and Woodrow Wilson, 19, Monroe Negro.

In addition to the riot charge, Wright was convicted of carrying a concealed weapon. Wilson also was charged with using profane language, and resisting arrest.

Racial Equality Leader.

Four were given 12 months suspended terms and fined $50 and costs. They were James Forman of Chicago, a leader in the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE); Richard T. Griswold, 35, white of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Paul Deitrich, 29, white, of Washington, D.C.; and J. Vance Covington, 17, Monroe Negro.

Robert Kilgo of Monroe and William Mahoney, 19, of Montclair, N.J., were fined $25 and costs and given eight months suspended terms.

Given six months, suspended, and let off without fines were John Hough, Brown Massey, Dorothy Massey, Josephine Massey, Leonora Massey, Ola May Massey, Charles Nance, Eddie Nance, Heath Rush, Constance Lever, Kenneth Shilman, Joe Wilson and Joseph Williams.

Came As Observer.

Miss Lever, a white woman of Manchester, England, joined the freedom riders here the day before the outbursts on Sunday. A staff member of the British Embassy in Washington, Donald James Graybrook, came here for her trial. He said he came "purely as an observer at the request of Miss Lever."

Miss Lever said she planned to leave Monroe by morning.

The big legal question during the trial was whether it was legal for the demonstrators to continue picketing under the tense situation that prevailed last weekend.

Negro Indicted In Race Kidnaping

The New York Times Service

MONROE, N.C. — A Negro leader was indicted Monday on charges of kidnaping a white couple and holding them hostage during a race riot here.

Law enforcement officers armed with rifles and submachine-guns searched the home of Robert F. Williams but found that he had fled, apparently taking his wife and two children with him.

The Union County Grand Jury, which was in regular session, returned the indictment shortly after hearing testimony from Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall of nearby Marshallville. They said they had been held captive in Williams' home Sunday night for 2½ hours.

Police said Williams had promoted a series of anti-segregation demonstrations in this town of 10,000 persons some 25 miles southeast of Charlotte.

Racial animosity aroused during the picketing of the Union County Courthouse Sunday led to a clash between some 1,000 whites and Negroes.

A policeman was shot in the thigh and a number of persons received lesser injuries. Local officers, aided by about 75 state troopers, brought the mpb under control. Forty-eight persons were arrested.

An uneasy truce was maintained Monday night between the heavily armed white and Negro residents, and some persons voiced fears of renewed violence.

Williams, a bearded partisan of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, has publicly advocated violence as a means of ending racial restrictions.

In the July 10 issue of his mimeographed publication, The Crusader, he told Monroe Negroes:

"No colored person is safe and secure in this outlaw land. Our best bet is to arm and defend ourselves. When the streets become rivers of blood, then and only then will the state and the national government snow an interest in the welfare of colored Americans."

Williams was ousted by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People several years ago for voicing similar sentiments.

Arms Seized In Monroe Negro Home

MONROE, N. C., Aug. 31 (UPI)—Police raided the home of the youthful president of a Negro "nonviolent" committee last night and seized a cache of arms and ammunition.

Police arrested the leader, Richard Crowder, 19, and another Negro, Harold Reap, 18, on charges of kidnaping connected with the alleged Harold Reap, 18, on charges of kidnaping connected with the alleged abduction of a white couple during a Sunday night riot.

Both men were wanted, along with bearded Robert Williams, a Negro leader who advocates violence, in the kidnaping of Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall, who said they got lost and happened onto the street where followers of Williams were staying during the rioting.

Arrested earlier on the same charge and now in county jail is John Cecil Lowry, 20, a New York white man.

Police said Crowder admitted the weapons found in the attic of his home were the same guns that earlier had been stored in the home of Williams. Police with drawn guns raided the Williams home Monday in expectation of seizing the arms and Williams, but found both gone.

The rioting grew from incidents at the Courthouse in downtown Monroe where followers of Williams had been picketing in protest against segregation.

Dixie City Seeks Ban After Racial Violence

Associated Press.

MONROE, N. C., Aug. 28.—The City Council planned to ask an injunction today against anti-segregation picketing by mixed Negro and white youths which set off a weekend of violence in this city of 10,000.

A policeman was wounded yesterday, a white couple was held hostage for several hours by Negroes, and the Highway Patrol said 20 shots were fired at a carload of white persons passing a Negro integrationist's house last night.

35 Were Arrested.

Sporadic fights downtown resulted in at least 35 arrests.

Mayor Fred Wilson sent a telegram to United States Attorney General Robert Kennedy saying the city had been invaded by "freedom riders" and "carpet baggers." He asked that they be "restrained by your office."

The Justice Department said it has asked the Federal Bureau of Investigation to learn the facts.

Negro and white pickets from as far away as England and Chicago have been carrying placards in downtown Monroe for several days.

Police Seize Arsenal At Monroe, N. C.

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Police raided the home of the president of the Monroe Non-Violent Action Committee Wednesday night and confiscated a small arsenal of weapons, including one of Russian manufacture.

Richard Crowder, 19-year-old Negro head of the group, had been picked up earlier for investigation in the kidnaping of a white couple during the aftermath of an interracial disturbance Sunday.

Crowder was charged with kidnaping and was held without bond.

Officers said they found 11 weapons, most of them rifles, in the attic of Crowder's home. They said the weapons were among those collected recently by Robert F. Williams, 36-year-old militant Negro leader, who is being sought on a kidnap warrant. Williams, with his wife and children, fled the city Sunday night in the wake of the disturbances.

Police said one of the rifles was Russian, of a large caliber, and had a hammer and sickle emblem on its side.

The raid was conducted by local and county police, assisted by agents of the State Bureau of Investigation.

Bronx 'Rider' Jailed In Dixie Race Riots

Associated Press.

MONROE, N. C., Aug. 30.—A 20-year-old former college student today faces charges of aiding and abetting in the abduction of a white Union County couple Sunday night during a series of inter-racial fights here.

John Lowery, 20, of the Bronx, N. Y., was charged late yesterday after he was questioned by authorities in the abduction of Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall of nearby Marshville.

Mr. Lowery was jailed without bond and, under North Carolina law, could get life in prison if convicted. He said he was a "Freedom Rider" and former student at Queens College in New York City.

Meanwhile Robert F. Williams, 36-year-old militant Monroe Negro leader who was indicted Monday on two charges of kidnaping, is still being sought. Mr. Williams, his wife and two children have been missing since the Stegalls were released about 9 p.m. Sunday.

Several days of picketing in downtown Monroe around the courthouse square erupted Sunday into several inter-racial fights and an hour-long battle involving some 300 persons of both races.

Daniel Thompson, 26, of Cleveland, a white member of the Monroe Non-Violent Action Committee, said his group might hold a rally today in the Negro section of this city of 10,000, but there probably would be no more picketing.

Meanwhile County Judge James E. Griffin reduced bonds for "Freedom Riders" arrested in the wake of Sunday's outburst to $25. Dr. C. M. Alston, a Negro dentist, posted the bond money and the "Freedom Riders" were released from jail.

UNIDENTIFIED WHITE PICKET PROTESTS SEGREGATION IN MONROE, N. C. DEMONSTRATION
Policeman At Right Stands Guard To Prevent Violence In Racially Tense Tar Heel City

The Newsand Courier Charleston SC Sun. 8-29-61 P. 6 A

BRUCE STEGALL LEAVES HEARING ROOM
He Gave Testimony About Alleged Kidnaping

MRS. BRUCE STEGALL TALKS TO REPORTERS
She Said Negroes Tied Her To A Chair

Grand Jury Indicts Monroe, N.C., Negro On Charge Of Kidnaping White Couple

FBI Asked To Issue Alert For Williams

The Herald-Tribune
p. 6A

MONROE, N. C. (AP) — A kidnap indictment was returned Monday against Robert F. Williams, controversial Monroe Negro who long has advocated violence by his race.

The Union County Grand Jury returned the true bill after hearing testimony by a white couple held hostage by Negroes Sunday night. The couple said they were abducted by about 200 armed Negroes, and tied up but later released.

About 30 officers immediately raided Williams' house where the Negro leader has kept a large store of arms. Williams himself was believed to have fled, and no weapons were found.

Also raided was the rented so-called "Freedom House" near Williams' home. Pickets from outside the state have been staying there.

Monroe police asked the FBI to issue a nationwide alert for the goateed Williams.

The reported kidnaping climaxed a weekend of racial violence in this city of 10,000, where Negro and white pickets, one from as far away as England, have marched with placards for days.

POLICEMAN WOUNDED

A policeman was wounded Sunday by a Negro he said he was trying to disarm. Sporadic fighting over the weekend resulted in 47 arrests. Extra highway patrolmen were ordered in to help keep order. The city appealed to the federal government for help.

The bearded Williams, an avowed admirer of Fidel Castro, apparently had fled. Police patrolled the area of his home, where Williams has boasted of maintaining a large arsenal. Reporters have seen a large number of firearms there.

The 36-year-old, muscular Williams has said he was stockpiling weapons in "an armament race with the white people of Monroe."

Two bills of indictment were returned against Williams, charging him separately in the alleged kidnaping of the man and woman. Warrants for his arrest say that he "unlawfully, wilfully, feloniously, and forceably did kidnap," them.

Highway Patrol Lt. C. W. Teague told newsmen his 50 patrolmen would stay in Monroe as long as the police chief wants them.

An uneasy quiet returned to this county seat of 10,000 population, 24 miles east of Charlotte. No pickets marched and extra law officers patrolled the city. Mayor Fred Wilson called the City Council into a second emergency session to consider ways of preventing further outbreaks of racial violence.

SANFORD STATEMENT

In Raleigh, Gov. Terry Sanford declared that the Monroe situation "is under control, and is going to be kept under control."

The governor ordered 50 State Highway Patrolmen and two State Bureau of Investigation agents here to assist the overworked Monroe police department headed by Chief A. A. Mauney and Union County Sheriff D. Shelly Griffin's men in restoring order. The FBI, asked by the Justice Department to learn the facts, also dispatched agents to watch the situation.

The middle-aged couple who were held hostage, Mr. and Mrs. G. Bruce Stegall of the nearby community of Marshville, were questioned by the grand jury which Superior Court Judge Allen H. Gwyn ordered to take up the interracial situation.

The Stegalls said that as they took a short cut on their way home Sunday night a band of about 200 Negroes, many of them armed, stopped them on the street where Williams lives.

INNOCENT BYSTANDERS

"We were scared," said Mrs. Stegall, who said they had nothing to do with the racial disturbances and passed through Williams' neighborhood by chance.

"They took us in Williams' home and tied us up. They had guns on us. The house was filled with Negroes and others were outside in the yard and around the house."

About 20 shots were fired at another car containing white persons who passed near Williams' house, said Highway Patrol Lt. C. L. Teague. On a visit to the Williams' residence about two weeks ago, a reporter saw 13 carbines in his living room, a double-barreled shotgun propped beside the front door and a snub-nose revolver on the dining room table.

Mrs. Stegall said Williams didn't help tie them up but that he reported by telephone to Police Chief Mauney that he had white hostages and demanded the release of Negro pickets who had been arrested.

"MOB WOULD GET YOU"

"He told us he couldn't let us go," said Mrs. Stegall, "because the mob outside 'would just get you and I can't do a thing.'

"The mob was hollering 'Let me kill them.' "

The Stegalls were bound and taken to a vacant house near Williams' but were released later and escorted out of town by two carloads of Negroes, they said.

The seizure of the Stegalls climaxed a day in which several fights erupted about the picket line manned by Monroe Negroes and some civil rights advocates, some of them white, from as far away as Chicago and Durham, England. The out-of-towners were Williams' guests during the week-long picketing.

Williams, 36, a self-proclaimed admirer of the Cuban regime of Fidel Castro, once was stripped of the presidency of the Union County chapter of the national convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. But the goateed, muscular Williams subsequently was reelected president by the Union NAACP chapter which has a membership now of 13.

OUTSIDE AGITATORS

"We are not going to allow outside agitators to promote violence in our state," said Gov. Sanford.

"The band of agitators who have descended on Monroe came at the request of an outspoken advocator of violence, a self-styled Castro who has attempted to grow a beard, who wears a beret and who carries a loaded carbine. It is significant that he has been denounced by the respected leadership of both races."

The governor's statement did not mention Williams by name.

ROBERT F. WILLIAMS
Indicted For Kidnaping

POLICMAN SHOT

Racial Violence Flares In North Carolina City

Montgomery Advertiser 8/1

Mon 8-28-61

MONROE, N.C., (AP) — A policeman was wounded here Sunday as violence broke out during racial picketing on Monroe's courthouse square. Fifteen pickets and three others were charged with inciting to riot.

Montgomery Ala

The shooting occurred about 4:30 p.m. as an interracial group marched around the square carrying signs protesting segregation.

Tension mounted Sunday night with a report that a white couple was being held hostage by Negroes. Police Chief A. A. Mauney said Negroes told him they were holding a couple hostage but he was unable to verify the report.

The wounded officer was J. W. Rushing, who was quoted as saying he was shot in the hip as he tried to disarm a Negro. The wound was not serious. Witnesses said the gunman got away.

Fighting broke out between pickets and several white persons and officers charged some 15 of the pickets and three white men with inciting to riot.

Chief Mauney said he received a call from a man identifying himself as Robert Williams—Monroe Negro integrationist—saying the Negroes would hold the white couple hostage until the pickets arrested Sunday were freed.

Mauney said Williams then put on the telephone a man who identified himself as G. Bruce Stegal, the hostage.

The police chief said Williams also claimed Mrs. Stegal was held.

Mayor Fred Wilson Told newsmen he is sending a wire to Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy to ask his advice.

Chief Mauney said the fighting started when several cars arrived at the square to pick up the pickets. Mauney said the driver of the lead car, a Negro he identified as James Foreman, started cursing white bystanders.

The chief said Foreman pulled a gun as he was arrested, touching off the fighting.

Shortly after the flareup, the highway patrol dispatched 15 patrol cars to Monroe. Later, patrol Maj. Raymond Williams said 32 more patrol cars had been dispatched to the scene.

For the past week, members of the Monroe Non-Violent Action Committee have picketed the courthouse square, carrying signs protesting segregation.

Three men were arrested Saturday in connection with a fight involving a white picket. All were charged with simple assault and released under $50 bond each.

Rifle Fund Raised By Harlem Negroes

The News and Courier

NEW YORK (Speciall) — Cash contributions and pledges totaling $260 were raised here Monday at a public meeting in Harlem called to buy rifles for Robert F. Williams of Union County, N. C., the Afro - American, a Negro newspaper, reported. P-4-C

Citing what they called a "new level of struggle," the speakers announced plans for a national appeal for individual donations of $12.50—the price per rifle.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Afro-American Alliance for Action. Thurs 7-20-61

On Tuesday afternoon, following the Harlem rally, the Alliance staged a two-hour demonstration in behalf of Williams outside the United Nations. Charleston S.C.

Picket signs read: "Monro, N C., is America's Angola," "American Freedom Is a Fraud," "We Need A Mau Mau," "Robert Williams Must Not Be Murdered as Lumumba Was."

NORTH CAROLINA

N. C. Negro Leader Collects Rifles For 'Armament Race'

The News and Courier

P-4-C

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Robert F. Williams, a Castro-oriented Negro leader, said today he is collecting rifles for two reasons: 1. To form a rifle club for sport, and 2. For an "armament race with the white people of Monroe."

Williams, an avowed admirer of Cuban Dictator Fidel Castro, declined to say how many members he has in his rifle club, but he said the group has about 100 weapons, mostly foreign rifles.

"I keep an armed guard on my house at night," said Williams, "and if anyone attacks my house, the City of Monroe is going to see a blood bath."

Dr. Fred M. Wilson, a dentist serving his third term as mayor of Monroe, said, "Anyone is free to have firearms and we hope they use them in a judicious manner." Thurs 7-20-61

Williams, president of the Union County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has been in trouble with the national group because of his various militant statements. Charleston S.C.

Williams, who has made two trips to Cuba since Castro seized control of that country, often flies the Cuban flag in his backyard. Newsmen who have visited his home have reported seeing firearms there.

He also publishes a newsletter called "The Crusader," which he said has a circulation of 1,500 to 2,000. Through the newsletter, he has asked for funds to support his rifle club. He declined to say how much money he has collected.

The idea of the rifle club was first started in 1959, Williams said, but was dropped asd only recently was revived. Williams said he hopes to obtain land and start construction within a month.

Conrad J. Lynn, a New York lawyer who represents Williams, said in New York that a meeting sponsored July 10 at Unittd Mutual Auditorium raised "several hundreds of dollars" for Williams' project. He said about 40 rifles were sent to North Carolina as replacements for defective weapons Williams had.

MONROE. N.C.

Williams declined to confirm this but said he expected "two or three hundred rifles from such places as Harlem and Chicago."

He said some of the money being raised will be used to buy ammunition, gas masks and steel helmets.

Carolina Negro Aims 'Arms Race' at Whites

The Evening Star P-A-2

Washington, D.C.

MONROE, N. C., July 20 (AP).—A Monroe Negro leader says he is collecting rifles for two reasons—to form a rifle club for sport and for an "armament race with the white people of Monroe."

Robert F. Williams, an avowed admirer of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, declined to say how many members he has in his rifle club, but he said the group has about 100 weapons, mostly foreign rifles.

"I keep an armed guard on my house at night," he said yesterday. "If anyone attacks my house, the city of Monroe is going to see a blood bath."

Thurs 7-20-61

Flies Cuban Flag

Mr. Williams, president of the Union County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has been in trouble with the national group because of his various militant statements.

Mr. Williams, who has made two trips to Cuba since Mr. Castro seized control of that country, often flies the Cuban flag in his backyard. Newsmen who have visited his home have reported seeing firearms there.

At East Lansing, Mich., four Negro officials from Tanganyika and Kenya have complained to Michigan State University authorities of discrimination because, they said, they were allowed only one drink each in two Lansing area bars.

Dr. John A. Hannah, university president, expressed regrets over the incident. He is chairman of the President's Civil Rights Commission. The Negroes, who spent several days at the university on a tour of the United States, made the complaints in a letter to MSU officials.

Riders in Memphis

Five Freedom Riders arrived at Memphis, Tenn., after an uneventful bus trip from Chattanooga, Tenn., via Nashville, ate at a bus terminal restaurant, and commented "we don't know where we're going next."

City Judge James Spencer convicted two Negro leaders at Jackson, Miss., for contributing to the delinquency of minors who were arrested on breach of peace charges in desegregation attempts.

The two were James Luther Bevel, 24, of Itta Bena, Miss., field secretary for the Congress of Racial Equality, and Bernard Lafayette, 20, of Tampa, Fla., field secretary for the Jackson Non-Violent Movement. Mr. Bevel was convicted on three counts and Mr. Lafayette on two. They were sentenced to $500 fines and six months in jail on each count.

The color ban at the municipal swimming pool in Maplewood, Mo., a St. Louis suburb, has been lifted. The pool was closed Tuesday when about 40 Negroes tried to buy admission tickets, but yesterday the City Council voted unanimously to open the pool to all residents of Maplewood, regardless of race.

The racial scene—

Negro club collects rifles in 'armament race' with whites

The Birmingham News

By The Associated Press

A Monroe, N. C., Negro leader says he is collecting rifles for two reasons—to form a rifle club for sport and for an "armament race with the white people of Monroe.'

Robert F. Williams, an avowed admirer of Cuban Dictator Fidel Castro, declined to say how many members he has in his rifle club, but he said the group has about 100 weapons, mostly foreign rifles.

Thurs 7-20-61

"I keep an armed guard on my house at night," he said yesterday. "If anyone attacks my house, the city of Monroe is going to see a blood bath."

Birmingham Ala.

WILLIAMS, president of the Union County Chapter of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, has been in trouble with the national group because of his various militant statements.

Williams, who has made two trips to Cuba since Castro seized control of that country, often flies the Cuban flag in his backyard. Newsmen who have visited his home have reported seeing firearms there.

At East Lansing, Mich., four Negro officials from Tanganyika and Kenya have complained to Michigan State University authorities of discrimination because, they said, they were allowed only one drink each in two Lansing area bars.

MSU PRESIDENT John A. Hannah expressed regrets over the incident. He is chairman of the President's ivil Rights Commission. The Negroes, who spent several days at the university on a tour of the United States, made the complaint in a letter to MSU officials.

Five freedom riders arrived at Memphis, Tenn., after an uneventful bus trip from Chattanooga, Tenn., via Nashville, ate at a bus terminal restaurant, and commented, "We don't know where we're going next."

At Annapolis, Md., five Negroes who conducted a carousel sit-in at an amusement park near Washington planned to ask the Supreme Court to review their trespassing convictions, upheld by the Maryland Court of Appeals.

CITY UDGE James Spencer convicted two Negro leaders at Jackson, Miss., for contributing to the delinquency of minors who were arrested on breach of peace charges in desegregation attempts.

The two leaders were James Luther Bevel, 24, of Itta Bena, Miss., field secretary for the Congress of Racial Equality, and Bernard Lafayette, 20, of Tampa, Fla., field secretary for the Jackson nonviolent movement. Bevel was convicted on three counts and Lafayette on two. They were sentenced to $500 fine and six months in jail on each count.

The color ban at the municipal swimming pool in Maplewood, Mo., a St. Louis suburb, has been lifted. The pool was closed Tuesday when about 40 Negroes tried to buy admission tickets, but yesterday the city council voted unanimously to open the pool to all residents of Maplewood, regardless of race.

Pastors In Lead On The Picket Line

Colored Patrons Not Permitted To See Colored Film

CHAPEL HILL — (UPI) — Pickets at a Chapel Hill theater have indicated they were more interested in general desegregation than seeing a movie with a predominantly Negro cast.

Both colored and white pickets paced in front of the Carolina Theater Friday and Saturday after the management refused to allow colored citizens to see the movie "Porgy and Bess," a story of Negro life in Charleston, S. C.

THEATER Manager E. Carrington Smith had offered to show the movie to an all-Negro audience but was firm in his refusal to allow mixing of the races in his theater audiences.

But leaders of the demonstrations said they were not even considering Smith's offer for a private showing.

SEVERAL white University of North Carolina students and a few professors reportedly joined the Negroes in the picket line in front of the theater. There were no incidents reported. About 60 persons participated in the picketing, with four carrying sign on one-hour shifts. One of the signs read "all-Negro cast, but in Chapel Hill all white audiences." Another sign said "Protest segregation policy of the manager" and a third, which was carried by a colored picketer, read "We enjoy movies too."

A GROUP of 11 ministers said they would boycott the theater until the segregation policy was dropped. The ministers were from a local ministerial association which had asked the manager to admit Negroes for one showing of the movie.

Durham Board Tells White Workers:

"You Have The Right To Protest Segregation, But Just Don't Do It"

DURHAM, N. C. — The local County Welfare Board does not consider it "consistent with good judgment" for its white employees to join colored persons on picket lines protesting racial segregation at motion picture theatres.

That, in essence, is the upshoot of action taken by the board last week when two white women, one of them a native of Scotland who has not yet been naturalized a US citizen, and the other the wife of a professor at Duke University, were brought before the body.

THE TWO had participated in a picketing demonstration before a segregated theatre t Chapel Hill, N. C. where both live.

The board, after hearing what the two had to say in defense of their acton, adopted a resolution which recommended that welfare workers "place the good name of the welfare program foremost and refrain from the exercise of any right which can reasonably be expected to reflect adversely upon the department or the program."

WELFARE Supt. W. E. Stanley said that State Atty. Gen T. Wade Bruton had ruled that participation in picket lines by welfare workers "is strictly a matter between employer and employe." Atty. Gen. Bruton said there is no state law which would prohibit such activity.

THE LOCAL board acknowleged the right of employees to join in the demonstrations but asserted that "exercise of every individual right is not always consistent with good judgment.

38a 1961

Funeral Head Doesn't Want Negro Business

The Black Dispatch
Dallas, Texas, Dallas,
7/22/61

CINCINNATI (ANP) — One of the city's largest funeral homes last week disclosed that they won't handle the funeral of a Negro (which wasn't surprising, but that it would prefer not to have the funerals of whites who associate with Negroes.

The Cement Masons' Union No. 524, a mixed local, through it's business agent and financial secretary, Frank Saffel, sent a letter to white and Negro morticians asking them to submit a fixed rate for funerals of the local's membership.

Twelve hours after the letter was sent, one of the biggest white morticians in Cincinnati telephoned Saffel.

Saffel said that the caller was upset over the possibility that his firm would be asked to conduct Negro funerals.

When he was assured this was ont the case, but that the local had white members also, the speaker said that he was not even interested in the white members as "their Negro friends in the local would probably come to view the body . . . and we certainly can't have that."

Portland League S... Progress In Rights

PORTLAND, Ore. — Although a high degree of residential segregation remains and there are no Negro longshoremen or supermarket clerks Portland, Ore., has struck major blows against housing and job bias, the Portland Urban League reported here last week.

League Director of Community Services John S. Holley stated that Oregon's FEPC, enacted in 1949 and its freedom of residence law passed in 1957 had made the gains possible, but he said much still has to be done in the Portland area. Negroes and Orientals live almost completely in two areas of the city, the League said, adding, however, that public housing is completely unsegregated.

The League report said, "There are no Negro clerks in local branches of the mail-order concerns, and our most famous knitting mill hired Negroes only as charwomen." It also pointed out that job opportunities are "limited" in financial institutions and utility companies.

Due to Oregon's civil rights law banning bias in public accommodations the report stated, discrimination in public places is "extremely rare." However, many barber shops, beauty shops, reducing salons and other "personal service" establishments still discriminate and the 1961 Oregon Legislature is considering an amendment to cover such businesses.

Schools, colleges, hopitals, welfare agencies, and public recreational facilities are operated on a non-segregated basis, the League reported.

38a 1961

PENNSYLVANIA

Jail Philly 'White' Woman For Walk in Negro Area

PHILADELPHIA — "We don't want white women seen walking in this district," was what two policemen told Mrs. Yvonne Randolph, last week, when they pushed her into a car and bruised her arm while she was strolling through a Negro district on her way home from work.

Mrs. Randolph, who lives at 84 W. Johnson St., happens to be a Negro. She also happens to be a striking, 27-year-old blue-eyed blonde, who has worked for eight years as an IBM operator at the Naval Depot.

Along with the local branch of the NAACP, she is taking action against the two members of the police department, who allegedly grabbed her and placed her in a cell at the Hunting Park Ave. Police Station, where she was not permitted to make a telephone call.

38a 1961

FEB.1961 (COMBINED)
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE
HIGHLANDER FOLK SCHOOL

REV.MARTIN LUTHER KING
REV. MYLES HORTON

King group, folk school join in mixing fight

NEW YORK, Feb. 23—(AP)—The Southern Christian Leadership Conference and the Highlander Folk School have joined forces to train Negro leaders for the civil rights struggle, The New York Times said today in a story from Atlanta.

The Times said the program was disclosed in Atlanta by the headquarters of the conference, made up of various antisegregation groups and headed by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

A conference spokesman was quoted as saying that 11 Negroes had just completed a week's training course at Highlander, and that another class of 15 or more will be held in about two weeks.

THE INSTITUTION is in the Cumberland Mountains near Monteagle, Tenn., between Chattanooga and Nashville.

The Times story said:

The school, headed by Myles Horton, has been involved in several controversies because of the political affiliation of persons connected with it. The school's reputation has been defended by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and other nationally prominent liberals.

The school's charter was revoked by a state court in February, 1960. But it has continued to operate, pending the outcome of an appeal. The revocation order developed from a legislative investigation during which it was charged that Communists and their sympathizers had visited and lectured at the school. Charges that the school had violated segregation and alcoholic beverage laws were the basis of the legal action.

SOME OBSERVERS said the affiliation of Dr. King's conference with the school raised serious questions of prestige for the conference. They contended that because of the delicacy of the racial problem and the school's controversial status, it would be difficult now for Southern whites of liberal or moderate leanings to deal with the conference. They also said the affectiveness of the conference on the national scene might be reduced.

Dr. King's administrative assistant, James R. Wood, said the conference is aware of the problem, but he added:

"We find no reason not to cooperate with any organization that is interested in the development of full citizenship for Americans which cannot be proved to have conducted itself in a manner which is not American or patriotic."

WOOD SAID THE conference hopes to receive a foundation grant to finance the program.

The Highlander classes are aimed at equipping trainees to set up citizenship schools in which Negroes will be taught how "to help themselves and their neighbors to become first-class citizens. "This includes preparation for registering to vote and for participation in other civic activities.

Negroes Take New Tack In Sit-In Case

News & Courier 6-B
Tues. 11-14-61
Charleston, S.C.

BY W. D. WORKMAN
A Special Correspondent

COLUMBIA — Negro sit-in demonstrators convicted of breaching South Carolina laws shifted their appeal Monday from constitutional to statutory grounds in arguments before the State Supreme Court.

The new emphasis was made necessary by last week's Supreme Court decision on a Greenville case involving very similar circumstances. The Greenville case (City v. Peterson) dealt with 10 Negro students arrested for trespassing after notice when they refused to leave a variety store lunch-counter after having been asked by the store manager to do so.

The same essentials were present in three cases which came before the Supreme Court Monday. Two of the cases arose in the city of Columbia, the third arose in Charleston, all stemmed from the refusal of Negro students to leave lunch counters after being asked to do so by both management and police officials.

A major argument in the Greenville case was the contention that the arrest and conviction of the defendants violated the 14th amendment of the U. S. Constitution in that the actions were designed to further the custom of racial segregation.

NO REFERENCE

The Supreme Court disposed of that argument by saying this:

"The (anti-trespass) act makes no reference to race or color and is clearly for the purpose of protecting the rights of the owners or those in control of private property. Irrespective of the reason for closing the (lunch) counter, the evidence is conclusive that defendants were arrested because they chose to remain upon the premises after being requested to leave by the manager."

Negro attorney Matthew Perry admitted to the Supreme Court Monday that last week's ruling adversely affected the three cases on appeal this week. He made no argument on constitutional grounds, therefore. Instead, he and his associate, Lincoln C. Jenkins Jr., appealed to the court on grounds that no real case of trespass had been made out against their clients. (The two Negro attorneys represented appellants in all three cases Monday as well as in the Greenville case).

OLD LAW CITED

They pointed out that in the three current cases, their clients had been charged under an older trespass law which made no reference to having to leave upon being asked to do so. They contended that the statute dealt only with persons who entered upon premises after having been warned not to do so. In their cases, they added, the question was one of remaining on premises which they had entered by implied invitation to the public.

The opposite point of view was advanced by Edward A. Harter Jr., for the city of Columbia, and Morris D. Rosen and Robert L. Clement Jr., for the city of Charleston. They cited earlier cases in which trespass had involved a refusal to leave premises after having been ordered to do so by the owner.

One of the Columbia cases (Columbia v. Bouie) also involved a conviction for resisting arrest.

Civil Rights Suit Looms

Deputies Assault Teacher on Allen U Campus

By JOHN H. McCRAY
(Courier's Carolina Editor)

COLUMBIA, S. C. — Three white Richland County deputy sheriffs, out of uniform and riding in an unmarked car, have stirred up civil rights storm here after beating a young junior high school teacher on the edge of the Allen University campus.

The victim, Herman Abel, had to have three stitches in the head after one of the men, allegedly hurling the "n . . ." epithet, struck him in the presence of his wife and several students.

AFTER a conference in the office of Richland Sheriff S. S. Sligh, Mr. Abel was charged with reckless driving, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

His trial was continued after a two-hour hearing, Monday afternoon, before Township Magistrate Calvin Lawson. Only the deputies testified. Interestingly, their testimony closely paralleled details Mr. Abel gave The Courier in an exclusive interview.

"I intend to fight this thing as far as I can," he told The Courier. "I could probably get over it myself, but if it happens to me, it can happen to everybody else who tries to be a good citizen and obey our laws."

■

OTHER INFLUENTIAL leaders were preparing appeals to various agencies and sources, including the U. S. Department of Justice.

■

The Richland County Sheriff's office has been under attack from Negroes for several years. It has refused to employ Negro deputies, although a number of less populous and important counties have long since done so. The City of Columbia, itself not involved in the incident, employs Negro policemen.

■

A PUBLIC officer who would not be identified said "I'll bet that had they (deputies) suspected they were messing with this type of citizen, they'd never have done it. They'd like to get out of it, of course, but I hope they don't.

■

"I HOPE THE colored citizens give them just what they deserve. It's people like this who make race relations bad in our city."

38a 1961

SOUTH CAROLINA

Links To Mix In May

The News and Courier p. 1

Mayor Gaillard Urges Courtesy, Understanding

Sun. 4-7-61

Mayor J. Palmer Gaillard Jr. last night urged "courtesy and understanding" by all persons using Charelston's court integrated Municipal Golf Course.

His appeal came on the heels of an order from the 4th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals to desegregate the facility by May 26.

The appeals court directed the golf course be desegregated two months earlier than a date set by U. S. District Court Judge Ashton H. Williams last fall.

The Negro plaintiffs in the case appealed Judge Williams' order on the grounds the eight-month delay was unreasonable.

Handed down yesterday in Richmond, Va., the appeals court ruling said it found no evidence in the record "to explain the postponement of the effective date of integration for what would seem to be an unreasonable period of time."

UNSIGNED OPINION

The unsigned opinion, in part, said the record showed nothing to explain why integration "could not have been made immediately effective."

After a long study of other Southern cities with desegregated golf courses, Charleston City Council and the Golf Course Commission agreed to continue operation of the course "rather than lose a first-class recreational facility," Mayor Gaillard said.

The text of his statement follows:

"Legal action was commenced against the city and the golf course commission in July, 1959, approximately six months prior to this administration's taking office. The present legal staff of the city took over the defense of this action when this administration took office.

"The matter came for trial in the United States District Court at Charleston in September, 1960, and in November, Judge Ashton H. Williams, U. S. District Judge, ordered the city to permit use of the Municipal Golf Course by all citizens, with the proviso that this order was to take effect after a delay of eight months, which would have been July 26, 1961.

'OPEN TO ALL'

"The plaintiffs appealed to the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals from that portion of the order which provided for a delay of eight months, and the Circuit Court has now ordered the city to open the Golf Course to all citizens.

"The Ways and Means Committee of City Council and the Golf Course Commission have both met and both have determined to abide by the order of the court.

"The property on which the Municipal Golf Course is located was deeded to the City of Charleston by the Edisto Realty Company in July 1929, with the stipulation that it be used as a municipal golf course, and that if it ever ceased to be used for this purpose it would revert to the Edisto Realty Company.

The News and Courier

"We must, therefore, continue to operate our golf course as the court has directed or deprive our citizens of this recreational facility that they have enjoyed for over 30 years.

Sun. 4-7-61

"In an effort to broaden the possible courses of action which it might take, the city attempted to purchase the reverter rights from Edisto Realty Company, and on August 18, 1960, the city made a cash offer to the realty company for the reverter, which offer was turned down. Following this, meetings were held in an attempt to work out some solution with the Edisto Realty Company, but these efforts were unsuccessful.

"After the decision by the lower court in December of last year, it became evident that the city would have to make a decision as to the future of the golf course before August of this year, and possibly sooner, if the appeal were successful.

"City Council and the Golf Course Commission authorized the sending of certain persons to other Southern cities which have opened their courses to all persons. This was done and we have received reports on the situation in Wilmington, N.C., Atlanta, Ga., and Miami, Fla., which reports show beyond doubt that these Southern cities have operated their municipal courses successfully while open to all citizens.

"In addition, I personally conferred with the mayor of Savannah, which city voluntarily opened its course sometime ago, and have been advised that Savannah has incurred no problems and has suffered no financial loss.

"After considering the information gained from the experience of other Southern cities and the additional reluctance to lose a first-class recreational facility which has been serving citizens of the city and county for over 30 years, City Council and the Golf Course Commission have agreed to continue operating the Municipal Golf Course as a public facility in accordance with the orders of the U. S. District Court and the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

"I urge citizens of all races, and particularly the golfers, to cooperate with courtesy and understanding so that our municipal course may continue to be operated successfully."

Office Worker Cracks Tough Clarendon Bias

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 3-4-61

By JOHN H. McCRAY

(Courier's Carolina Editor)

SUMMERTON, S. C.—After 15 years of bitter race rattling, during which some of the bitterest aspects of racism flourished, Summerton, focal spot of the 1954 and 1955 U. S. Supreme Court's school rulings affecting Clarendon County, has quietly undergone a bit of integration; not on the school level, of course.

The integration, now about one month old, is in the office of a motel, one of the largest in this area of South Carolina, where a young Negro woman, Myrtle Maria Richburg, is efficiently working as bookkeeper and secretary.

Formerly, she kept records in the dry cleaning establishment of Wiliam (Mitch) Ragin, Negro. She replaced a young white woman, and her employers, reportedly, have defied any local whites to "tell them how to run their business."

■

ALSO BACK on jobs at the same motel are Mrs. Harry E. Briggs Sr., mother of the first listed plaintiff in the celebrated Clarendon County school case of 10 years ago, and Mrs. Robert Georgia.

Both women, along with hundreds of other Negroes in the county, had been forced out of their jobs by efforts of the White Citizens Council which went into business here in 1955, taking over some of the work previously handled by the Ku Klux Klan and other white supremacy elements, intent on retaining racially segregated schools.

Thus far, there has been no reaction among whites to Miss Richburg's position.

Negroes, however, regard it happily and suggest that it may mean the ending of their battle against racism, which developed in 1946 under the leadership of a fugitive from South Carolina, the Rev. J. A. DeLaine, now in Brooklyn, N. Y.

■

A LOOK at other changes around Summerton reveals that this optimism may not be simply wishful thinking.

Many Negroes who were fired lost the privilege of credit buying, to rent homes or work on sharecropping farms, report things different from even two years ago.

Whites had tossed economic pressures against all plaintiffs in the several court actions Negroes initiated, suspected NAACP members and members of their families and, here and there, also against a few other Negroes who had been too self-contained and independent in their business or work.

Two examples of the new frontier in Summerton are Smith's Grill and Oliver's Cafe.

Both places, their proprietors were told, had been placed on "the list uptown" by Summerton whites and neither could be serviced by salesmen for any beer distillery, several soft-drink companies, confectionaire enterprises, bread, candy, and other companies.

Smith's Grill was operated at the time by the late Robert Smith, who took his own life three years ago after he said whites "framed" him and were about to imprison him.

This week, his son, Abraham Smith, admitted to this reporter that several of the white salesmen who had been forced to pass Smith's Grill by under threat of losing all of their white customers, had returned with apologies and offers to trade again. Some he accepted; others, he'll never again do business with.

■

THE STORY is the same with Mrs. Mary Oliver Jones of Oliver's Cafe. Today, her busy place is well-stocked and salesmen call on regular rounds.

Some civic leaders credit the change of heart to the showing made by the Clarendon County Improvement Association, headed by Billie S. Fleming of Manning.

CCIA stepped in with crop and any other sound loan where banks and stores balked for racial reasons only. CCIA's loans were cheaper and easier, therefore more satisfactory and profitable.

■

THERE WAS some speculation that the U. S. Department of Justice's moves in Fayette and Haywood Counties, Tenn., may have "scared" white boycotters in this area, especially with a new Federal administration, suspected of seeing that Negroes get their rights and protection.

A third point of explanation was this: "Summerton whites have lost considerable money by following behind the White Citizens Council. With money being short now, these whites realize more than ever the folly of losing good trade."

William Ragin (not related to the dry cleaner) told The Courier of one white man who undertook to grind corn into grits or meal. Bowing to the Citizens Council, he had instructed his Negro aide to tack up a sign reading "No corn ground here for NAACP members."

■

SCORES of farmers arriving at the mill Saturday morning for their weekly grindings read the sign, turned around and gathered, one by one, some distance away, their unground corn in bags.

They sat talking, some trying to figure where to go. Meanwhile, the proprietor, who had been doing the biggest grinding business in the area, noted he

STATE PARK CLOSES

State Park Closes To Bar Negroes

The News and Courier
P. 8-A
Sept. 17, 1961
Columbia, S.C.

COLUMBIA (AP) — Officials shut down Sesquicentennial State Park near here Friday when about 20 Negroes sought entry to the all-white park. No immediate decision was made on how long it would stay closed.

C. West Jacocks, state parks director, said "We will be pretty much guided by what the law enforcement people recommend."

Jacocks said he planned to meet with agents of the State Law Enforcement Division and Harry Walker, legal aide to Gov. Ernest F. Hollings.

The Rev. I. Dequincy Newman of Columbia, field secretary of the South Carolina branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was among those seeking admission.

With Rev. Newman was the Rev. David Carter, also of Columbia. Rev. Carter has been active in integration demonstrations here.

Both Negro ministers took part in a civil rights rally held by the state NAACP here Thursday night.

The Negroes, travelling in three automobiles, were met by state police offficers and Marshall Holder, superintendent of the park. He told them it was closed to Negroes and whites alike.

Carter questioned Holder's right to close the park, saying he thought it took "an act of the legislature" to do so.

Several years ago the General Assembly passed an act closing down Edisto State Park in Charleston County. The legislative action was taken after Negroes had sought admission to the park. Edisto Park is still closed.

Jacocks said officers turned back a group of white women, members of a garden club, after the Negroes had appeared at Sesquicentennial.

Rev. Carter said "We will be back out there again."

He denounced police actions in turning him and the other Negroes away "because they wouldn't tell us why the park was closed and then demanded that we get back in our cars."

ATTY: THURGOOD MARSHALL
COLUMBIA, S.C. -STATE HOUSE MARCHERS

Marshall to Handle S. C. Appeals

Pittsburgh Courier

COLUMBIA, S. C.—"Thurgood's coming back." Those words echoed over South Carolina as both Thurgood Marshall's beneficiaries as legal foes noted that his name has been added to the roster of attorneys handling the cases of 189 Negro youths convicted after they paraded around the South Carolina (State House) last March.

The 189 are among more than 900 appeals in sit-ins, etc., the NAACP is handling. At the same time, CORE is estimated at handling more than 100 similar, but additional cases.

Mr. Marshall, architect of the basic laws by which most Southern Negroes have won court battles for their rights, is highly respected and also feared by South Carolina whites.

Pittsburgh Post

FOR ONE THING; he's never lost a single court battle involving South Carolina, dating back to 1944 when the bustling state NAACP Conference made its initial pitch in the civil rights area.

And, another thing; Thurgood has been critical of sit-ins and most demonstrations connection with them and the protests against segregation, contending that more "guinea pigs" than were necessary were being used.

His belief was that, ir strictly legal approcahes, not more than two or three persons are necessary to establish a class-action cause. Beyond that number, those fighting the issue were superfluous and, pending court disposal, were at the best costing needless money in fines and other efforts.

His association in this case of the "State House Marchers" has suggested possible victory and involvement of a basic right to assembly and protest and, also a revitalization of the NAACP's future activities in South Carolina.

Segregation-Integration Row Ending, Wannamaker Says

The News and Courier
Charleston, S.C.
6/28/61

An Orangeburg chemical executive expressed belief here yesterday, "that the 'segregation-integration controversy' is rapidly coming to a close."

D. DeElliott Wannamaker told the Charleston Sertoma Club yesterday he had planned a series of three talks on the race issue, but "the third talk. . .to include a thorough discussion of segregation, integration and the various other institutions so as to provide some assistance in our selection for the future. . will probably never be presented."

"Unfortunately, the controversy is rapidly coming to a close, and perhaps the answer will be forthcoming before the talk is prepared," he said. Dr. Wannamaker, a graduate of The Citadel and Cornell, traced the history of slavery in the United States and said subsequent institution of segregation was needed "as a framework in which the Negro race might receive further schooling, indoctrinating, and disciplining in the ways of our civilization in which they, one day, would become a conscious part."

"Had this social institution called segregation been anything other than provisional, had it been perpetuated with any idea of permanence, then by all our knowledge of truth it would be considered wrong," Dr. Wannamaker said.

Dr. Wannamaker then said "it is interesting to note that it was within the framework of slavery and segregation that they made the greatest strides of any race known to man."

He said that some of the great Negro leaders "recognized that social status in this country is not and should never be legislated — that social acceptance can only be purchased by comformity. . . But, he said, "we in the South have been rudely awakened and shocked by the irrevocable transfer of leadership from the ones we knew to the modern Pied Piper who flutes the tune of quick results."

Dr. Wannamaker called the two controversies which have affected the South—slavery and segregation—a "paralled. . .so striking. . . a better understanding of the parties in each controversy may provide a better solution in our current predicament." He charged that the persons who cry for equality and absolute freedome are repeats of "the radical reformer and . . abolitionist of the earlier era."

He attributed the conflict of philosophies during the 1800's and today to the controversies between the radical reformist churches and the conservative churches which were concentrated in the South. Dr. Wannamaker said the radicals' "process of equating slavery with sin made the two positions irreconcilable" and that the process is being repeated today.

"With the ever tightening noose of school integration by judicial decree—with the sit-in, kneel-in and wade-in, one cannot help but conclude that 'progress' is a non-directional term. . ." he said.

Dr. Wannamaker was introduced by Sertoman A. Edwards Tisdale, program chairman for the weekly luncheon

Thurmond Says Talk Limit Would Mean Forced Mixing

The News + Courier
Charleston, S.C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., said Sunday that legislation to force racial integration will be shoved through if the Senate restricts further its rules on debate.

Mon. 1-16-61

In a letter to constituents, the 1948 States Rights candidate for president said:

"Should the radicals win further restriction of debate and speech, the skids will be greased for an unrestrained majority to shove through the Senate legislation to force racial integration and many of the costly, unreasonable and socialistic schemes of the modern-day radicals."

A truce has been declared in the dispute over the Senate's rules on the length of time a debate may go. The fight is expected to be resumed later in the session.

Thurmond said he thinks his side in the dispute will be in a "stronger position to fight at that time since under present rules two thirds of the senators present and voting must vote to shut off debate on a rules change."

Hodges Criticizes Racial Prejudice

Charleston, S.C.
Thurs. 4-27-61

By JOHN H. MOYE

COLUMBIA — Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges urged South Carolina Democrats attending the Jefferson - Jackson Day fund raising dinner here Wednesday night to "look toward the long range interest of the nation" and bypass sectional interest and racial prejudice.

Sec. Hodges, speaking to an overflow crowd at the 20 dollar a plate affair, said however "I make it a rule never to criticize another state on how to run their business, especially their segregation business."

Sec. Hodges suggested that states handle their affairs so that "we can make progress and change without rancor or hate and let us not in a party or segment of a party play on the passions of minorities."

Sec. Hodges congratulated the South Carolina Democratic leaders — some 750 strong — for their work in putting South Carolina in the Democratic column in the presidential election last fall. Sec. Hodges admitted that he had worked for Lyndon B. Johnson's nomination by the party for president because he wanted to see a Southerner elected to the presidency. He said after John F. Kennedy got the nomination he volunteered to work "mainly for the same reason, to fight prejudice."

Sec. Hodges explained that he believed Northerners were prejudiced against the South in so far as the presidency was concerned and that non-Catholics felt the same way about a Catholic candidate. He said he believed that President Kennedy would have "annihilated" Nixon in the election instead of the narrow margin he got if it had not been for the religious issue.

Sec. Hodges lauded President Kennedy's first 100 days in office portraying him as a man of energy, movement, and decision "even if the decision is wrong." He said he believed that the people of the country "want their problems settled."

Sec. Hodges had some praise for Gov. Hollings and his achievements in the industrial development field in South Carolina. He said "I believe that the case of South Carolina and North Carolina we have achieved a measure of balance between agriculture and industry." He pointed out that South Carolina had increased its income 7 per cent in the last year against the national increase of 5 per cent.

Charleston S.C.

He said if the South was to continue going in the right direction "we need to continue the type of leadership we have now."

He told the South Carolina democrats they should set up a full time democratic organization with a full time director as is done in North Carolina. He urged "fellow democrats of South Carolina to align more closely with neighboring states and the entire nation to work for the common good.

"I don't see that it is inconsistent being a conservative and seeing the nation's need as a whole." He added that "we have strengthened Germany, Japan and Italy financially so that their industrial machine is greater than ours. We have go to think in terms of looking to the needs of our own people as well as the rest of the world."

No New Bills Due On Segregation

The Atlanta Journal & Constitution

Atlanta, Ga

By S. L. LATIMER JR.
The Columbia State
Special to Atlanta Journal-Constitution

COLUMBIA, S.C., Feb. 4—Though there are signs of restlessness in the General Assembly, in view of developments in Georgia and elsewhere, the Gressette Committee, South Carolina's recognized watch-out against public school integration, has not suggested any changes in this state's status on segregation.

The committee met behind closed doors to consider "top secret tentative recommendations."

But the chairman, Sen. L. Marion Gressette, said his group did not feel "additional anti-integration" measures are needed at the moment. And generally what this committee says is the policy adopted.

However, the "tentative recommendations," the contents of which were not revealed, were referred to a subcommittee and the legal staff "for further consideration and analysis."

The committee said it would make a report to the General Assembly before the end of the present session.

* * *

ASKED FOR his views, Gov. E. F. Hollings said he didn't foresee "any school integration in South Carolina at any level."

He feels South Carolina is on "sound legal ground to keep segregation education," but that recently enacted legislation in Georgia and Louisiana "has got to be studied carefully."

He has no recommendations in this field for the General Assembly at present.

In the meantime, several bills aimed at strengthening the segregation laws, and criticizing efforts of Northern liberals, were introduced in the House of Representatives.

* * *

REP. JOHN HART of Union proposed a tuition plan.

Under his bill parents would get a state grant of about $200 a year per school child.

The money would come from regular school funds, and would allow parents to choose a private school, or keep their children in the public school. Hart said he didn't want to wait for action until "Yankee liberals are breathing down our necks."

Rep. Hall Yarborough of Orangeburg, and others, offered a bill to halt free schooling of children left behind by parents who migrate North, "leaving their off-spring to be educated at the expense of this state."

He would require tuition from such boys and girls. He said a number of Negro families are following the practice of leaving younger members of the family here.

* * *

REP. A. W. BETHEA of Dillon would create a permanent State Rights Committee to "tell the true story of the South."

He suggests a budget of $100,000 and hopes other states would join in the movement.

In both the House and Senate resolutions were offered lashing out at those who would "pack" the rules committee of the national House.

BRIEFLY . . .

Robert S. Reese of Florence is the new potentate of Omar Shrine Temple, and Fitz Hugh Smith of Columbia, the new potentate of Hejaz. . . . Former Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson was a weekend visitor to Columbia in his role as one of the 12 Apostles of the Morman Church. . . . A portrait of Jean Thurmond, wife of Sen. Strom Thurmond, who died last year, has been presented by him to Winthrop College, from which Mrs. Thurmond was graduated in 1947. It is in the student activities building.

Sen. John Long of Union would scrap the South Carolina property tax assessment laws in favor of "a more realistic tax on income." . . . The Editors: There has been much said recently about what the youth of today will be tomorrow.

It is true they are being told right from wrong. . . . They are told to trust in their Maker . . . conduct guided tours and answer questions from visitors. . . . Winthrop College, Rock Hill, may change the name of Winthrop Training School, its elementary and high school auxiliary across the street from the campus, where Winthrop girls for years have been given teacher classroom training. The reason is the word "training" now is associated generally with reformatories, etc.

Because nearly 2,500,000 pounds of soybeans from South Carolina has been seized in recent weeks due to suspicion of the presence of poisonous crotalaria, Sen. Olin Johnston has launched an investigation to find out why Southeastern farmers for 40 years have been encouraged to plant the legume. . . . The new president of the S. C. Veterinary Medical Association is Dr. R. E. Atkinson of Kingstree.

Capital Radicals Blasted as Dixie Governors Elect Ellington

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 27 (AP). Moderates elected Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee chairman of the Southern Governors Conference today in a session highlighted by a militant segregationist's blast at "liberals and radicals" in Washington.

A showdown floor fight was averted when Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas, central figure in the Little Rock high school integration fight in 1957, persuaded backers to withdraw his name from nomination for the chairmanship.

The four-day annual convention then closed on a note of harmony when Ellington was elected by acclamation and Faubus accepted the vice chairmanship, carrying out the recommendations of a nominating committee headed by Gov. J. Lindsay Almond of Virginia.

Faubus had been nominated from the floor by Gov. Jimmie H. Davis of Louisiana and seconded by Gov. John Patterson of Alabama.

Stand Up and Fight

Militant segregationist Gov. Ross R. Barnett of Mississippi previously broke the calm of an otherwise routine session on highway programs with a fiery demand for Southern governors to "stand up and fight" to banish the "liberals and radicals" from their posts of "all-powerful central rule in Washington."

Barnett said the "liberal and radical elements" must be shown that the conservatives will not compromise and "join them in their headlong dash to oblivion."

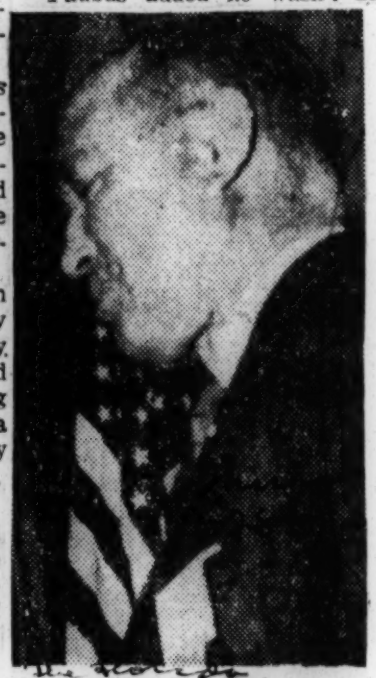
"They have sought to fool the people by stirring up the radical issue and using that as a camouflage for their greedy desires," he declared.

Barnett called for conservative forces to work tirelessly to restore "sanity to government" to save the people he said are beginning to "feel the bruises on their bodies caused by the wild doings of the liberals."

It was Faubus himself, chairmaning the highway discussion, who softened the impact of Barnett's speech when the Mississippi governor sat down.

"Thank you," he told Barnett, as a ripple of laughter flowed over the meeting, "for your comments on road building in Mississippi."

Faubus added he wasn't sure



Wirephoto

Gov. Buford Ellington

whether Barnett's talk came under the heading of "free and unlimited or controlled access highways," but said it was "a courageous exposition of your philosophy at the only opportunity afforded you at this conference."

Up until today, leaders of the conference, headed by Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, the retiring chairman, had been able to soft pedal issues like states' rights and segregation, neither of which was on the official agenda. And the critical international situation has provided the background for much of the governors' discussions.

When the nominating committee, made up of Almond and Govs. Farris Bryant of Florida and Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina, recommended the election of Ellington, with Faubus as vice chairman, Davis put Faubus's name in competition for the top post.

Davis said he knew of few men with "as much courage and intestinal fortitude" as the four-term governor of Arkansas and said "no man has more endeared himself to his people."

Patterson, in seconding Faubus's nomination, commented that the Arkansas governor had served more terms than any governor at the conference.

Competition Unwanted

But Faubus, in persuading him to withdraw his name, said the Southern governors "must not allow this conference to become an arena of competition."

Previously, both Daniel and Almond had branded as false a published report that "Washington" was opposed to the election of Faubus. Faubus said he did not believe the report was true, and that "I certainly hope it is not."

It was Davis, who while he said he felt strongly about the issue, moved that Ellington be elected by acclamation.

The conference accepted an invitation from Bryant to meet in Florida next year at a date and city to be determined.

Resolutions adopted unanimously by the governors were topped by demands for the protection of Southern domestic industries from foreign imports.

The Office of Emergency Planning was asked to expedite a decision on the textile industry's appeal for a ruling that imports of textile products "are impairing the national security."

Dixie Governors To Meet Today

Vice President Will Speak During 4-Day Meeting In Nashville

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

NASHVILLE, Sept. 23.—Southern governors began arriving here Saturday for a four-day conference on a variety of problems common to them all, from law enforcement to highway construction and finance.

Chief executives from 15 states will hold the 27th annual meeting of the Southern Governors Conference, which opens Sunday.

Among main features will be an address Monday night by Vice President Lyndon Johnson.

High on Monday's program is a meeting of the Southern Regional Education Board. Reports are the board may recommend a commission on adult education be established and a study on development of state science and research centers.

Four governors interested in the Southern unity movement are expected to huddle for a discussion in that field. They are Ross Barnett of Mississippi, John Patterson of Alabama, Orval Faubus of Arkansas and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina.

Speculation is that Buford Ellington of Tennessee will be named conference chairman to succeed Gov. Price Daniel of Texas.

Dixie Governors Choose Ellington As Faubus Bows

Floor Fight At Conference Is Averted By Arkansas Chief's Withdrawal

By WILLIAM BENNETT

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

NASHVILLE, Sept. 27.—Gov. Buford Ellington was named chairman of the Southern Governors Conference Wednesday after a floor fight, which for a moment appeared inevitable, was short-circuited by Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus.

The Arkansas chief executive, some felt, might have been able to command enough strength to win over Governor Ellington if the selection of a chairman had been allowed to reach a showdown.

And it was said, too, that Governor Ellington might have asked that his name be withdrawn if the movement in favor of Governor Faubus had gained steam.

Asked To Withdraw

As it was, Governor Faubus—after his floor nomination by Louisiana Gov. Jimmy Davis which was seconded by Alabama Gov. John Patterson—asked that his name be withdrawn to keep the conference from being "an arena of competition."

After that, the governors voted unanimously to accept the decision of the conference nominating committee and elect Governor Ellington chairman and Governor Faubus co-chairman.

Governor Ellington, who succeeds Texas Gov. Price Daniel as conference leader, accepted his new role of leadership with a pledge to work closely with his fellow governors on problems common to them all.

Gov. Lindsay Almond of Virginia, chairman of the nominating committee, strongly resented published suggestions that the Kennedy Administration had indicated any governor would be acceptable as chairman except Governor Faubus. He said no outside influence whatever was exerted on the nominating committee.

Faubus Comments

Governor Faubus, in asking that his name be withdrawn from nomination, also mentioned the outside influence reports and said he thought Washington would have the "good judgment" to find acceptable anyone selected by the conference.

In nominating Governor Faubus, Governor Davis said he didn't "know many men in the United States who have as much courage" as the Arkansas chief.

The Southern governors closed their four-day meeting here shortly after agreeing to hold next year's conference at a city in Florida to be chosen later.

(Additional Stories on Page 8)

PULLING TOGETHER — Gov. Buford Ellington (left) of Tennessee was named chairman of the Southern Governors Conference yesterday after a floor fight was averted by withdrawal as a candidate by Gov. Orval Faubus (center) of Arkansas. Governor Faubus became vice chairman. Retiring chairman is Gov. Price Daniel of Texas (right).

—UPI Telephoto

Southern Governors Deny Leadership to Faubus

Move to Name Him Chairman Is Blocked by Moderates

By CLAUDE SITTON

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 27 —Moderates at the Southern Governors Conference blocked a move today to name Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas as chairman.

They were supported by Governor Faubus himself. Apparently he realized that he could not win and wanted to avert the Conference disunity, and the political embarrassment to his colleagues, that could have resulted from a showdown.

The post went to Tennessee's Gov. Buford Ellington, the nominating committee's choice, but only after a floor fight by the Deep South pro-Faubus bloc.

Mr. Faubus was chosen to succeed Gov. S. Ernest Vandiver of Georgia as vice chairman. Mr. Vandiver had been regarded as a candidate for the chairmanship. He reportedly stepped aside to clear the way for the compromise.

White House Role Denied

Governors Price Daniel of Texas, the outgoing chairman, and J. Lindsay Almond Jr. of Virginia, who headed the nominating committee, denied that the Kennedy Administration had sought to influence the choice.

Governor Almond asserted that no suggestion had come "covertly, overtly or otherwise" from any "outside influences."

There were published reports that a message had been relayed from Washington that anyone but Mr. Faubus would be acceptable to the Administration.

Mr. Faubus had been passed over three times before for the chairmanship, which usually goes to the senior Governor. This was attributed to his controversial role in the Little Rock school desegregation dispute. He fought unsuccessfully against integration.

Mr. Faubus was said to want the chairmanship as a matter of vindication. Nevertheless, he cooperated with the moderates in a series of political maneuvers that preceded the closing session of the three-day conference at the Hermitage Hotel.

Davis Backs Faubus

These moves set the stage for the events that followed after Governor Almond presented a report nominating Governor Ellington as chairman and Mr. Faubus as vice chairman.

Gov. Jimmie H. Davis of Louisiana was then given the floor. He pointed out that Mr. Faubus was the senior member of the conference and asked that the order in which the two had been nominated be reversed. Gov. John Patterson of Alabama seconded the Faubus nomination.

Governor Faubus asked immediately that his name be withdrawn from consideration. "I do not think it wise at this time to allow our conference to become an arena of political competition," he said.

After Mr. Ellington had been chosen by acclamation, one Governor commented, with obvious relief, "To make an omelet you've got to break some eggs. It was the only way to come out of it alive."

Gov. Orval E. Faubus

Textile Quotas Urged

In a series of resolutions, the Governors, for the second year, urged that the executive and legislative branches of the Federal Government establish import quotas for textiles and other products.

Another resolution called for stepped-up vocational training and increased efforts to provide adequate financing for construction of new industry. But a precautionary not was sounded in this area.

The Governors suggested that the Southern states "cease 'shooting with a shotgun' to bag any and all enterprises" and, instead, "use the 'rifle approach' in order to interest industries paying high wages."

Johnson warns Soviets—

Birmingham News

Dixie governors back JFK's pronouncements

BY GAVIN SCOTT

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 26— Southern governors put aside sectional problems today and stood united behind the Kennedy administration's promise to work for peace but never surrender to blackmail.

Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, substitute at the Southern Governors Conference last night for President Kennedy, warned the Soviets not to misjudge the character and strength of this nation, lest the world be pushed into nuclear war.

"We seek peace but we shun appeasement because we have learned appeaseemnt is surrender on the installment plan and the signal for ultimate war," the vice president said.

JOHNSON SPOKE slowly and at times rather grimly. He drew his biggest applause from the 17 governors present when he declared the U. S.Z would never desert West Berlin or Nationalist China.

He joined the governors in praising the President's speech yesterday to the United Nations in which Kennedy told the world the U. S. has both the will and the weapons to defend the free world.

"We challenge no one," Johnson told the governors at a black tie state dinner. ". . . The path of reason, of diplomacy, of negotiation, of honorable settlement is open. We want to take it."

The governors applauded again when Johnson added:

"The quiet, enduring, patient, invincible strength of demoracy is ready. It will never be used except in a just cause, and in such a cause it can never be broken or defeated by any Communist dictatorship."

THE VICE PRESIDENT said the difference between Soviet and American policies are fundamental and profound.

"The Soviet Union seems to talk of negotiations solely as a form of certifying the gains already won in Berlin and East Germany and registering new gains," he said. "The United States wants only genuine negotaitions which will protect the vital interests of all concerned.

"False negotiations are a waste of time."

The governors interrupted the first business session of their annual meeting to listen with solemn approval to the president's televised address to the U.N. After the talk, they stood as one man to give a ringing, unanimous endorsement.

Orval Faubus of Arkansas, was adopted in which Kennedy's speech was termed "a magnificant address."

Gov. Wesley Powell, New Hampshire Republican, called Kennedy's address "one of the great documents of history and the utterance of one of the great leaders of the world." Powell is attending the conference, which ends tomorrow, as chairman of the National Governors Conference.

IMMEDIATELY following his speech, the vice president left by plane for Texas to meet today with that state's county judges. He said he would leave Thursday for Sweden to attend the funeral of the late Dag Hammarskjold.

Today's session of the 27th annual meeting of Southern gover-

A resolution, submitted by Gov. Lindsay Almond of Virginia and nors was devoted to law enforcement, highway safety and industrial development.

Gov. J. Howard Edmondson of Oklahoma made the report of the conference committee on highway safety of which he is chairman. Boiled down, the report urges the Southern states to work harder for gretaer uniformity in highway rules, regulations and safety requirements.

The report said the construction of the high speed, interstate superhighway system makes it imperative that the drive toward uniformity be pushed.

The goal to be sought, Edmondson's report added, is "that of facilitating the maximum flow of traffic among and between our states, with minimum intereference attributable to unnecessary departure from reasonable limitations and adjustments."

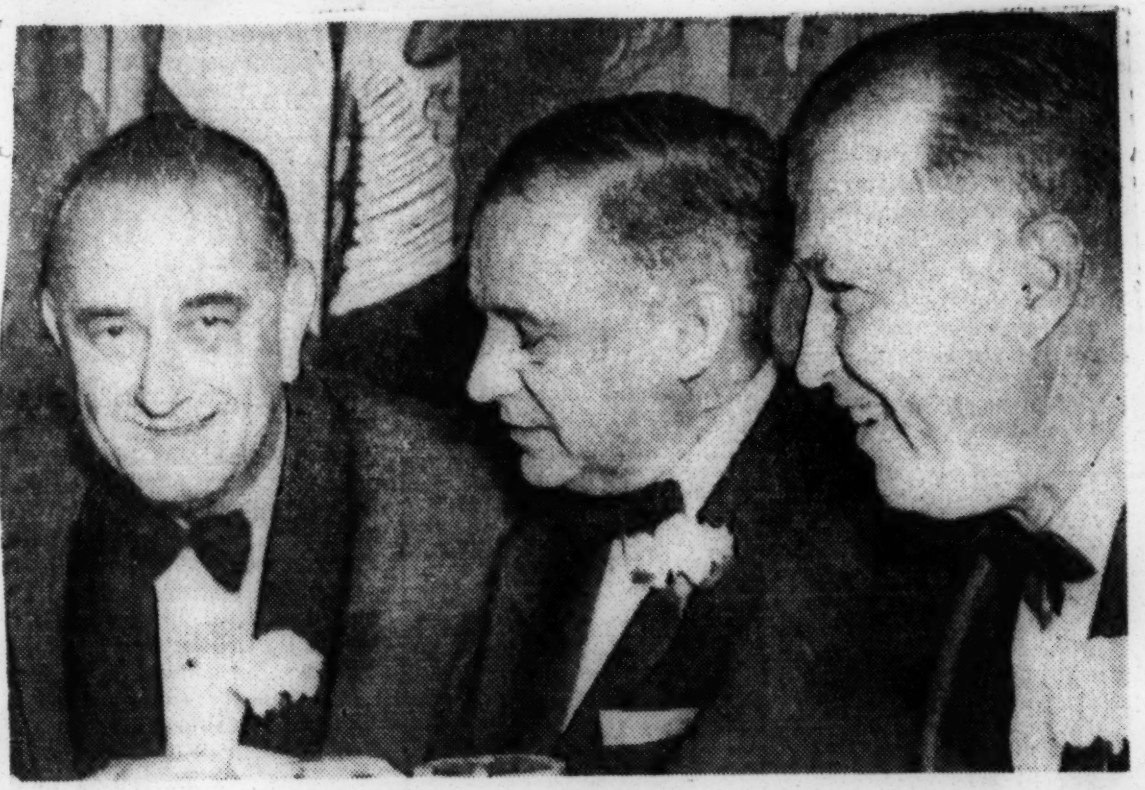
Integrationist demonstrators, including one white youth, picketed the conference yesterday. They carried signs which read "Are the Southern states part of the United States?" "Gov. Barnett, release freedom riders," and "Gov. Patterson, why support mob action?" Ross Barnett of Mississippi and John Patterson of Alabama were among the chief executives attending the conference.



Associated Press wirephoto

SOUTHERNERS CHAT AT CONFERENCE
. . Vice President Johnson, Texas Gov. Price Daniel, center, and Tennessee's Buford Ellington, right, talk

Ticket Fixing Discussed by Southern Governors

The Times-Picayune
P. 20

Executives Steer Around Racial Issue

By W. F. MINOR
(Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Southern governors talked about topics ranging from ticket fixing to industrialization here Tuesday as they continued to steer around the racial issue.

Wed. 2-27-57

Several governors chimed in to give testimonials against gubernatorial traffic ticket-fixing during a discussion on highway safety programs.

Gov. Jimmie Davis of Louisiana, attending his first business session, got the discussion going when he asked Gov. Elbert N. Carvel of Delaware if "You have any ticket fixing in your state."

Carvel, who had just told of reducing traffic fatalities 40 per cent in his state, declared: "I haven't fixed one ticket, and I don't know of any being fixed."

FAUBUS SPEAKS

Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas, speaking out strongly against intervention by governors in traffic violations, said: "I've never personally fixed a ticket in seven years I've been in office. The worst thing you can do is let a highway patrolman go out and risk his life and then not back him up. It has a demoralizing effect."

Faubus said, "You are always going to find people who think they have special privileges because they are close to the administration. They have had no comfort from me."

Also speaking against fixing tickets by governors, Gov. Lindsey Almond of Virginia, charged, "No person has a right to operate a motor vehicle on the highways of a sovereign state. It is a privilege which a state may condition."

Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, commended the work of his state police in giving Texas a high rating in traffic safety.

Credit for reducing the traffic fatality score in Mississippi this year was given by Gov. Ross Barnett to the head of the state's highway patrol, Col. T. B. Birdson. Barnett added that the number of highway patrolmen in Mississippi has not been increased since 1950.

Gov. Howard Edmonson of Oklahoma, who presided over the traffic safety discussions, observed: "Where we find centralization toward Washington, we find often that it is the failure of the state to move with imagination into an area where we have responsibilities."

The conference was told by Gov. Ernest Vandiver of Georgia that the region has begun—but certainly not completed—the challenging task of diversifying the economy on which we depend and by which we grow."

'MORE SELECTIVE'

Vandiver, head of the committee on industrial development, called on each governor to be "more selective" in the types of industries being established.

State and local agencies working in vocational education, he said, must be encouraged to adopt a wider outlook on future job opportunities.

Vandiver said Southern state governments are becoming concerned over the "unrelenting federal encroachment of states' rights in the field of water — its uses and its conservation."

He said his committee urged caution on the administration bills to establish a water resources council, river basin water resource commissions, and grants for water resources planning.

"Specifically, the committee is concerned over a provision which would let the President create a river basin commission for any region upon request of only one governor of that region," he said. "We feel a majority of the governors of the affected states must make the request."

Wayland L. Speer, assistant to the commissioner of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, told the conference that the Daniel-Boggs narcotic control act of 1956 has been an effective weapon against unlawful narcotic sellers.

The mandatory penalities for sale offenses with no probation, no suspended sentence and no parole have proved prohibitive," he said. "No longer is there profit in the unlawful sale of narcotics.

"This is particularly true in those jurisdictions in which the courts have moved from the minimum mandatory penalities toward the maximum confiment possible under the statue."

He said that some groups over the nation have launched a concerted drive to repeal the Daniel-Boggs act "lashing it as being too ferocious and placing emphases on federal government presecution of the drug addict."

Speer said the act to the contrary "attacks the trafficker with this legislation and turns the unfortunate addict who does not peddle drugs to local authorities."

38a 1961

SOUTHERN GOVERNORS CONFERENCE

NAACP Asks Governors To End Segregation

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 24 (UPI)—Negro leaders called on delegates to the 27th annual Southern Governors' Conference today to lift the Southern economy by eliminating racial barriers in education, employment, voting and politics.

The local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) delivered its appeal to Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, chairman of the Southern Governor's Conference, and sent a copy to Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, who will be the main speaker Monday night. Early arrivals among the 16 chief executives of Southern and border states declined any immediate comment.

Daniel, who said he has not seen the NAACP statement, told a news conference that "civil rights, as far as I am concerned, is not on the program."

The formal business of the conference does not begin until tomorrow. It was preceded by a reception tonight at the residence of Tennessee Gov. Buford Ellington.

The conference traditionally avoids matters of controversy and limits its discussions to such items as law enforcement, highways, nuclear energy and industrial development.

The NAACP appeal was tied directly to the question of industrial development, a question dear to the heart of all Dixie governors who consider new industry the answer to Southern economic problems.

"It is a fact that good race relations is good business, and the removal of racial barriers in such areas as education and employment will pay significant dividends to the economy of the South and the nation by creating more manpower potential which is so vitally needed," the NAACP statement said. "This, at the same time, would help eliminate poverty and the burden of low income dependents, such having been characteristics of the South for too long."

Plans Meeting

Gov. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina declined comment on the NAACP statement, but said he "definitely" plans to meet informally with Barnett and Govs. Orval Faubus of Arkansas and John Patterson of Alabama to discuss plans for Southern Unity.

Patterson plans to call a Unity meeting at Montgomery, Ala., sometime next month.

Early arrivals at the conference included New Hampshire Gov. Wesley Powell, chairman of the National Governors' Conference, who was invited to the Southern conclave to "be advised of the region's problems." Powell said, however, he did not consider Southern economic problems unique and pointed to the fact that New Hampshire only recently has enacted an anti-discrimination law for the first time in its history.

Governor's Meet To Eye Adult Education Question

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Governors will be asked at their annual meeting here next week to take steps to improve adult education in their home states.

Dr. Winfred L. Godwin, director of the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB), said Saturday he will propose to the governors that they establish a regional commission on adult education. This agency would offer advice to states on how best to improve their programs, he said.

"We are approaching the time when we may have to establish general extension services for urban areas," Godwin added, similar to those provided rural areas through the agricultural extension service.

Godwin will make his report Monday to the SREB, which is meeting in conjunction with its parent organization, the Southern Governors' Conference.

The 27th annual Southern Governors' Conference opens with a reception given by Tennessee Gov. Buford Ellington Sunday night. During the three days that follow the 15 member governors will talk shop at informal gatherings, exchange ideas on common problems at official sessions and discuss politics the rest of the time.

Traditionally, items that might stir up a controversy are not brought up. Instead the governors will discuss such subjects as education, highways, law enforcement, industrial development, atomic energy and freight rates.

"STATE DINNER"

Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson will address the governors and their wives at the "state dinner" Monday night.

There probably will be a good deal of backstage maneuvering over selection of a conference chairman to succeed Gov. Price Daniel of Texas Reportedly either Ellington, as host, or Georgia Gov. Ernest Vandiver, the conference vice chairman, will get the job.

Godwin said the adult education commission he will recommend to SREB would advise state institutions on coordination and improvement of adult education. The southern states, he continued, must coordinate more carefully their plans for extension programs, evening colleges and televised instruction.

He said he also will report to the SREB that over 900 students attended colleges outside their home states under the board's contract program. The cost of this program for the year was $1,469,692, he said.

Ellington, retiring SREB Chairman, said he will ask the board to recommend that a special conference be held later this year for the purpose of making public the report of the Commission on Goals for Higher Education in the South.

The commission was created by SREB last year to study and recommend long-range goals for educational development in the south. Its chairman, former Virginia Gov. Colgate W. Darden Jr., will address the SREB meeting Monday.

Two meetings are scheduled for Sunday afternoon ahead of the formal start of the conference. The first will be briefing session of the Conference of Appalachian Governors.

This group, formed at Lexington, Ky., last year to study the economic ills common to the mountain region, is headed by Gov. Bert Combs of Kentucky. The group plans a business session Wednesday.

The regional advisory council on nuclear energy, headed by Gov. Ernest Hollins of South Carolina, also meets Sunday afternoon.

Fifteen southern governors, all Democrats, are expected to attend the conference. They represent Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

Gov. Millard Tawes of Maryland, another conference member, will not be present because of illness in his family. Also to be present as guests will be Govs. Wesley Powell of New Hampshire and John M. Dalton of Missouri. Powell is chairman of the National Governors' Conference.

Gov. Faubus Bypassed by Dixie Group

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Moderates at the Southern Governors Conference this week by-passed Governor Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas as chairman, and named instead Tennessee's Gov. Buford Ellington.

As senior Governor of the conference, the chairmanship normally should have gone to Faubus. He was by-passed, however, only after a stiff floor fight by the Deep South pro-Faubus bloc. He had been passed over three times.

■

• CONFERENCE LEADERS denied that Faubus was put aside due to an Administration hint that his choice would be embarrassing because of his role in the Little Rock school desegregation rumpus of several years ago.

Faubus did step aside following his nomination, and the controversy, for sake of unity in the conference held at the Hermitage Hotel. He said to have wanted the chairmanship as a matter of "vindication."

Faubus was chosen to succeed Georgia's Gov. S. Ernest Vandiver as vice chairman of the body. He was strongly backed as chairman by Louisiana's Gov. Jimmie H. Davis.

Governors Give Rights Back Seat

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—The international crisis relegated civil rights controversies into the background Sunday night as chief executives from 15 states assembled here for a four - day Southern governor's conference.

Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, the chairman, outlined a program in which civil defense, including fallout shelters, was an eleventh hour addition, and pointed out that civil rights has no place on the official agenda for the 27th annual conference.

Both he and Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee, the conference host, said it should not be brought up at all.

High on the program is the growing worry in the South over inroads of foreign imports or oil, textiles and other Southern manufactured goods.

Daniel told a news conference he thinks Southern governors will support an extension of the reciprocal trades agreement program, due to expire next June, if it puts limits on "excessive imports which endanger the domestic economy."

"There should be some restrictions on any foreign imports that supplants rather than supplements our industries," he declared.

Daniel, like Ellington who met with newsmen earlier, showed little disposition even to discuss civil rights, which, while never on an official agenda of the conferences, frequently has overshadowed official conference business in past years.

"I know of no emotional problems that are in the wind," he declared.

Ellington said that on race relations, "We are moving faster toward solutions" than any of the northern and eastern states.

Vice President Lyndon Johnson will deliver an address at the governors' state dinner Monday night.

Daniel wouldn't comment on President Kennedy's nomination [illegible]od Marshall, Negro in[illegible]t leader, to the U.S. [illegible]it Court of Appeals in [illegible]

[illegible]lington said that he is [illegible] a position to tell the [illegible] what he can do and what he can't do.

Nor would Gov. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina comment when asked for his reaction.

NEED QUICK ACTION

Both Daniel and Ellington stressed the importance of moving as fast as the South can to meet the needs of civil defense.

Daniel announced that Thomas Goodman, regional director of the new office for emergency planning, will be here Monday to answer questions on mass evacuations, fallout shelters and other precautions.

The Texas governor said the experience of his own state with Hurricane Carla "demonstrated what can be done with elaborate plans are made for mass evacuation."

Daniel said the program, in addition to civil defense and foreign imports, would lay heavy emphasis on cooperative plans for the application of peaceful uses of atomic energy to the expanding Southern industry, higher education, highway improvement and allegedly discriminatory freight rates.

INFORMAL TALKS

As for civil rights, he said, "I wouldn't have the subject mentioned, insofar as I'm concerned."

Meanwhile, Hollings said he would get together informally with interested governors from a number of other Southern states for further discussions of a campaign originated in Jackson, Miss., last July to strenghthen their states rights stands in the wake of moves against their segregated social patterns.

Attending the Jackson meeting were Hollings, Govs. Ross Barnett of Mississippi, John Patterson of Alabama and Orval Faubus of Arkansas and representatives of governors of a number of other states.

SECTIONAL WOES FORGOTTEN

Dixie Governors Rally Behind Kennedy Stands

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Sectional problems were temporarily forgotten Monday as the Southern governors conference rallied behind President Kennedy in an unanimous demonstration of support in an hour of crisis.

The governors recessed their business meeting to listen with solemn approval to the President's televised address to the United Nations. Then, in an impressive display of national unity the governors stood as one man to give it a ringing, unanimous endorsement.

They acted on a resolution submitted from the floor from Govs. Lindsay Almond of Virginia and Orval Faubus of Arkansas congratulating Kennedy for "a magnificent address" and "unanimously expressing our support" for its peaceful aims.

Gov. Wesley Powell, New Hampshire Republican, the visiting chairman of the National Governors' Conference, speaking later, called Kennedy's message "one of the great documents of history and the utterance of one of the great leaders of the world."

GREAT COUNTDOWN

Even before the President spoke, Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee, the conference host welcoming the delegates to the 17-state conference—Missouri was admitted Monday—said that in these "moments of the great countdown" the problems of the South "jump far beyond the boundary lines of our states."

He said the countdown in New York "will determine the future power and influence of the United Nations."

Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, the conference chairman, also emphasized the "world tension," and called for a stepped-up program of civil defense, including preparations for fallout shelters and mass evacuations. The conference heard Thomas Goodman, regional director of the new Office of Emergency Planning, tell of the government's civil defense planning.

Monday, Gov. Ross Barnett of Mississippi, a strong advocate of segregation, spent most of his news conference telling of his state's efforts to attract outside industries.

Under questioning, he told reporters he felt "more strongly than ever" that governors of similar turn of mind should pursue their "Southern unity" movement initiated at Jackson, Miss. last July.

But he stressed that this movement was not being interjected into the conference discussion and will await further meeting in Alabama this fall and in South Carolina later.

The business session Monday placed emphasis on an expanding program for higher education in the South under a regional compact which has been in existence for more than a decade.

Two Governors See No Need For 'Unity'

NASHVILLE, Sept. 24 (UPI)—Two leaders in the Southern Governors Conference indicated today they see no need for a "Southern Unity" group proposed by Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett.

Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, conference chairman, shrugged off all civil rights questions at a news conference with a curt "no comment." Daniel said he thought the present conference structure is the best way of advancing the progress of each Southern state.

The host governor, Buford Ellington of Tennessee, said he felt that all of the problems of the South that could be solved best be "solved within the conference."

Barnett, South Carolina Gov. Fritz Hollings, Alabama Gov. John Patterson, Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus, and Louisiana Gov. Jimmie Davis plan to meet informally during the conference to discuss Barnett's Unity proposal. A full-scale meeting on the Unity theme is expected next month at Montgomery, Ala.

Both Daniel and Ellington had no comment on President Kennedy's appointment of Negro leader Thurgood Marshall to the Second U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

He said he thought the conference would adopt a strong resolution calling for a limitation on imports which "put the domestic economy in danger." He said he thought oil imports would be added to a list of imports in a similar resolution adopted last year which mentioned chiefly textiles and shrimp.

"We should not do anything to prejudice our dealings with other countries, but we should not let it get out of control," Daniel said.

Ellington said he thought the South was making more progress than some other sections of the country in solving civil rights problems, and both Daniel and Ellington said they do not believe the new Interstate Commerce Commission ruling against segregated bus facilities will have any effect in their states.

Patterson Takes Kennedys On Painful Ride Over Coals

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

NASHVILLE, Sept. 25.—Alabama Gov. John Patterson raked the Kennedy Administration painfully over the coals here Monday and accused the President's brother of actively aiding so-called "freedom riders" in their Southern travels.

He said that, chiefly because of Federal interference in civil rights matters in his state, President Kennedy "would have a very difficult time carrying Alabama" if he were running again.

Not long after the Alabama executive made his comments, a group of Negroes displeased by the treatment of protest riders began picketing the Hermitage Hotel, headquarters of the Southern Governors Conference.

Governor Patterson told newsmen there is evidence Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy helped plan protest riders' routes and arranged transportation for them in their demonstrations.

'Sued Once A Week'

Getting down to some of the reasons why he feels President Kennedy has lost strength in Alabama, Governor Patterson said his state is "being sued about once a week" by Robert Kennedy.

Additionally, he said, agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation have been "spying and snooping" there and violating the constitutional rights of citizens.

He said the Justice Department in filing a multitude of civil rights suits in the South is trying to "knock off our states" one at a time.

The Kennedy Administration during the past six months has done more to hurt race relations than in any other similar period in his lifetime, he declared.

Governor Patterson indicated the President spends much of his time with foreign affairs and mostly blamed close Kennedy advisers for civil rights trouble in the South, saying they "are not giving him sound advice" on domestic matters.

Bus Owners 'Won't Integrate'

The Interstate Commerce Commission's order last week that racial segregation in interstate bus travel be ended was, according to Governor Patterson, politically inspired and unnecessary and will lead to "serious consequences."

Pointing out that bus terminals generally are owned and operated by private individuals, the Governor said that in Alabama, at least, those owners "won't, I'm certain, under any circumstances operate integrated facilities."

The ICC order, he added, may lead to bus lines having to take on and discharge passengers 'out on the highway under the trees."

He defended the "Southern unity" movement begun at Jackson, Miss., last summer and said he felt it was a sound idea for chief executives to meet and exchange ideas and plan co-operative action on matters peculiar to the South.

Litigation in connection with civil rights is one area where such co-operation is called for, he said.

Less than two hours after the Governor answered reporters' questions, nine Negro college students began picketing the hotel in what they termed a "poster walk."

Urge Release of Prisoners

Among the posters they carried were those saying, "Southern Governors, what God do you serve?" and "Governor Barnett, the ICC rules against segregation. Will you?"

The picketing group said in prepared statements they were urging the release of persons who now are serving prison terms because of their protest ride and sit-in activities.

They asked the conference leaders to consider putting the matter of integration on their formal agenda and again called on Gov. Buford Ellington to help reinstate 14 Negro students who were dismissed from Tennessee A & I University because of their convictions in connections with protest riding at Jackson, Miss.

PRO-KENNEDY—Among the chief executives attending the Southern Governors Conference yesterday in Nashville were (from left) Governors J. Lindsay Almond of Virginia, Bert Combs of Kentucky, Ross Barnett of Mississippi and Orval Faubus of Arkansas. After listening to President Kennedy's televised speech to the United Nations, Governors Almond and Faubus offered a resolution, passed unanimously, expressing the governors' support of Kennedy.

SMILING QUARTET—Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett and Mrs. Barnett (left) were greeted yesterday by Gov. and Mrs. Buford Ellington of Tennessee. Governor Ellington is host governor for the Nashville meeting. —UPI Telephot

South's 'Unity Governors' Run Into Stone Wall at Conference

The News and Observer P-1 Raleigh N.C.

Mon, 9-25-61

By RAY PARKER JR.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A small band of deep south governors bent on turning the Southern Governors Conference into a sounding board for State's Rights Extremism found themselves in a familiar posture as the three-day gathering got under way.

They were boxed in before they started, as the conference opened here Sunday afternoon.

Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett had sounded the call for a new grouping of chief executives based on "southern unity." He called a meeting in late July to form the organization. Govs. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, John Patterson of Alabama, and Orval Faubus of Arkansas turned out for the meeting in Jackon, Miss.

They vowed to carry their fight to this 16-state gathering.

But as the governors gathered, the "Unity Governors" ran against a stone wall of opposition from the moderates who have controlled the Southern Governors Conference since its inception.

Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee, the host governor, told a press conference he hadn't been party to the Barnett thinking and said he thought "we can work out any problems we have in this conference."

Asked if he wasn't for "southern unity," Ellington said: "Not that kind of unity."

To emphasize that this conference, made up completely of Democratic chief executives, is not interested in any "unity" movement that would split the party, Ellington was instrumental in getting Vice President Lyndon Johnson to be the main speaker. Johnson will speak Monday night at the big state dinner.

Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, chairman of this year's conference, said he didn't know anything about Barnett's plans, and said he didn't think there was "any room" on the busy conference schedule for talk about civil rights.

Govs. Hollings and Faubus both indicated in press conferences they didn't intend to make the "unity" question an issue at the conference.

Hollings said he would talk informally with other governors but would not join in any strictly southern grouping.

Faubus said he had no further indications of "unity" plans other than the board discussions at Jackson.

Barnett did not arrive for the conference until later in the evening, and was not available for comment about his plans for pushing his "unity" ideas.

Gov. Hollins told reporters he would meet with the Mississippian for "informal talks."

But so far, the only concrete move planned by any member of the group was literary.

Hollings announced he was going to distribute especially-bound copies of a political speech by famous South Carolinian John C. Calhoun, the 19th century philosopher of southern conservatism.

The Calhoun speech advocates the long-outmoded theory of the "concurrent majority," a political philosophy which claims the states are supreme in American government.

Hollings has already pulled back some from full support of Barnett's idea for a strictly southern grouping of conservatives. The young South Carolina chief executive has issued a call for a national organization of governors who "have the conservative philosophy."

With the State's Rights issue laid in the shade—as it always has been in the past—the governors prepared to turn to a program packed with discussions of bread and butter issues.

Education, foreign imports, highways, industrial development, law enforcement, and civil defense are on the agenda.

Gov. Terry Sanford led the North Carolina delegation to the conference, arriving early in the evening with Mrs. Sanford, House Speaker and Mrs. Joe Hunt, and Democratic party Chairman Bert Bennett Jr. and Mrs. Bennett.

Also in the Tar Heel party are several gubernatorial aides, including assistant to the governor Hugh Cannon, press secretary Graham Jones, Highway Patrol Lt. Lloyd Burchette, economic development assistant George Stephens Jr., and Dr. George Simpson, UNC sociologist who is Sanford's representative on the staff of the Appalachian Governors Conference.

Terry To Asheville.

Sanford takes off from the conference today to fly to Asheville to attend the 50th anniversary celebration of the National Parks Forests System.

He will attend the Appalachian Governors meeting Wednesday afternoon as soon as the southern group ends its work, and fly to Chattanooga to speak at an educational rally Wednesday night.

Sanford is on the program Tuesday, taking part in a roundtable discussion of law enforcement.

Dixie Governors Shun Mix Issue

Jackson Daily News

Mon, 9-25-61

P. 1

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) —A threat to push the states rights-segregation issue to the forefront of the southern governors' conference collapsed today as the chief executives of 15 states stuck to less controversial topics.

The moderates, led by conference chairman Price Daniel of Texas, said the subject of civil rights ought not to be brought up at all. Several "Deep South" governors agreed this wasn't the time nor place.

Instead the governors, at the first business session of the four-day meeting — which opened with a gala reception Sunday night — took up mutual problems in the fields of education and atomic energy.

TO HEAR LYNDON

Tonight vice president Lyndon B. Johnson addresses the governors' State Dinner.

Before the 27th annual conference began, there was talk Gov. Ross Barnett of Mississippi and several other governors would bring up their "Southern Unity" plan, which they developed at a meeting last July at Jackson, Miss.

But Barnett announced on his arrival that the matter wouldn't come up, except in informal talks with individual governors. He said a meeting would be held later at Montgomery, Ala., to continue discussions of forming a bloc of conservative governors to "defend" states rights.

Barnett, like most of the governors, shied away from comment on the segregation issue. Alabama's John Patterson was an exception.

He said the purpose of the "Southern Unity" movement is to allow the governors and attorneys general of the Southern states to plot a mutual defense against what he called the Kennedy administration's "South baiting."

Patterson said the issue wouldn't be brought up at the conference because meetings of this type always shy away from controversy.

"I deal in controversy," he added.

RFK UNDER FIRE

The Alabama governor bitterly condemned Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy for supporting the "Freedom Riders" and for "harassing and intimidating" voting registrars in his state.

Patterson, the first southern governor to endorse John Kennedy for President, told newsmen he hadn't had much time to look over the President's record.

"I've had to spend too much time defending myself against suits brought by his brother (the attorney general)," he said. Asked if President Kennedy could carry Alabama in an election now, he replied:

"He can't get enough votes in Alabama to wad a shotgun."

Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee, the conference host, gave just the opposite answer. Ellington said he feels Tennessee now would vote for Kennedy. Tennesseans have found, he said, that the religious issue wasn't what they feared it would be.

Daniel and Ellington, at separate news conferences, expressed hope that the governors' once again would go on record as favoring tariff restrictions on imports that are driving domestic industry out of business. They listed oil, textiles and other manufactured goods as being in this category.

NAACP Makes Racial Appeal To Governors' Conference

Atlanta Daily World P. 1. Sun. 9-26-61

Atlanta, Ga.

By LOWRY BOWMAN

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — (UPI) — Negro leaders called on the annual southern governors' conference Sunday to lift the southern economy by eliminating racial barriers in education, employment, voting and politics.

The local chapter of the NAACP delivered its appeal to Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, chairman of the Southern Governors' Conference and sent a copy to Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, who was the main speaker Monday night.

Early arrivals among the 16 chief executives of southern and border states declined any immediate comment.

Daniel, who said he has not seen the NAACP statement, told a news conference that "civil rights, as far as I am concerned, is not on the program."

The formal business of the conference did not begin until Monday. It was preceded by a reception Sunday night at the residence of Tennessee Gov. Buford Ellington.

The conference traditionally avoids matters of controversy and limits its discussions to such items as law enforcement, highways, nuclear energy and industrial dvelopment.

The NAACP appeal was tied directly to the question of industrial development, a question dear to the heart of all Dixie governors who consider new industry the answer to southern economic problems.

"It is a fact that good race relations is good business, and the removal of racial barriers in such areas as education and employment will pay significant dividends to the economy of the South and the nation by creating more manpower potential which is so vitally needed," the NAACP statement said.

"On the other hand, poor race relations, tensions, conflict and reassistance to chang eis bad business and not good for the economy of the South ..... The South, under your leadership, must meet the challenge of progressive race relations if it is to prosper and catch up with the rest of the nation in socia-economic standards," the statement said.

Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett, leader of a "Southern Unity" movement to oppose all forms of racial integration, said last week that Mississippi's segregation policies attract industry.

He pointed specifically to location of a new $125 million Standard Oil Company refinery at Pascagoula, Miss. Standard Oil, however, replied the new plant was established strictly for economy reasons.

Gov. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina declined comment on the NAACP statement.

Back Seat For Rights Issue Hinted As Governors Meet

The Commercial Appeal P. 1

By WILLIAM BENNETT
Staff Writer

NASHVILLE, Sept. 24.—The Southern Governors Conference opened here Sunday with early indications the civil rights issue may be pushed into the background by other matters more directly affecting progress and development of the South.

It appeared, for example, the governors will interest themselves in additional tariff protection for the Southern manufacturing industry during their four-day meeting.

The probable need for more such protection was suggested by the same two chief executives who indicated to newsmen they will have little to do with "emotional problems" relative to civil rights—Gov. Price Daniel of Texas and Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee.

Governor Daniel, in fact, had this to say after civil rights had been mentioned, "I wouldn't have the subject mentioned for anything." The Texas Chief Executive is conference chairman.

Mon. 9-25-61

Unity Move Ignored

Both the Texan and Governor Ellington evidenced little interest in the so-caled "Southern unity" movement which has commanded the attention of Govs. Ross Barnett of Mississippi, Orval Faubus of Arkansas, John Patterson of Alabama, and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina.

Governor Ellington said, "We have Southern unity now. All our problems can be solved within the Southern Governors Conference."

He added the problems of civil rights are reaching solution faster in the South than in the North and East.

Neither Governor Ellington nor Governor Daniel felt the Interstate Commerce Commission's order last week to desegregate interstate bus travel will have much effect on their states.

The two governors expressed concern about the effect growing foreign imports are having on the domestic economy and indicated the conference may produce a strengthened resolution calling for increased import restrictions.

Governor Ellington said Tennessee industry has "definitely" suffered and indicated he would like to see stiffer restrictions on foreign bicycles, since one Tennessee plant furnishes a large share of the national production.

Formal Address Is Today

Governor Daniel made it clear that in his formal address to the conference Monday he will stress civil defense and disaster relief. Disaster relief played a huge role in his state when hurricane Carla struck this month.

The governors, representing 15 states, will get down to main business Monday with reports by the Committee on the Regional Advisory Council on Nuclear Energy and the Southern Regional Education Board. Monday night they will hear Vice President Lyndon Johnson.

Sunday night the governors were guests of the Ellingtons at a reception in the executive residence.

Governors avoid rights debate

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 25 — (AP) — A therat to push the states' rights-segregation issue to the forefront o fthe Southern Governors' Conference collapsed today as the chief executives of 15 states stuck to less controversial topics.

The moderates, led by conference Chairman Price Daniel of Texas, said the subject of civil rights ought not to be brought up at all. Several "Deep South" governors agreed this wasn't the time or place.

Instead, the governors, at the frist business session of the four-day meeting—which opened with a gala reception last night—took up mutual problems in the fields of education and atomic energy.

Tonight, Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson will address the governors state dinner.

BEFORE THE 27th annual conference began, there was talk Gov. Ross Barnett of Mississippi and several other governors would bring up their "Southern unity" plan, which they developed at a meeting last July at Jackson, Miss.

But Barnett announced on his arrival last night that the matter wouldn't come up, except in informal talks with individual governors. He said a meeting would be held at Montgomery, Ala., to continue discussions of forming a bloc of conservative governors to "defend" states' rights.

Barnett, like most of the governors, shied away from comment on the segregation issue. Alabama's John Patterson was an exception.

He said the purpose of the "Southern unity" movement is to allow the governors and attorneys general of the Southern states to plot a mutual defense against what he called the Kennedy administration's "South baiting."

PATTERSON SAID the issue wouldn't be brought up at the conference because meetings of this type always shy away from controversy.

"I deal in controversy," he added.

The Alabama governor bitterly condemned Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy for supporting "freedom riders" and for "harassing and intimidating" voting registrars in his state.

Patterson, the first Southern governor to endorse John Kennedy for president, told newsmen he hadn't had much time to look over the president's record.

"I've had to spend too much time defending myself against suits brought by his brother (the attorney general)," he said. Asked if President Kennedy could carry Alabama in an election now, he replied:

"He can't get enough votes in Alabama to wad a shotgun."

Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee, conference host, gave the opposite answer. Ellington said he feels Tennessee now would vote for Kennedy. Tennesseans have found, he said, that the religious issue wasn't what they feared it would be.

DANIEL AND Ellington, at separate news conferences, expressed hope that the governors once again would go on record as favoring tariff restrictions on imports that are worrying industry. They listed oil, textiles and other manufactured goods as being in this category.

Most of the governors declined to comment on President Kennedy's nomination of Thurgood Marshall, a Negro integration leader, to the Second U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. But South Carolina's Ernest Hollings gave this reaction:

"I just hope (the Rev.) Martin Luther King doesn't decide to get a law degree."

Two meetings were held yesterday preliminary to the offic[ial] start of the conference. The Conference of Appalachian Governors, headed by Kentucky's Bert Combs, called for faster action in getting a redevelopment program started in the region.

"PEOPLE ARE starving in our area," Combs said. "We need to plow through the talk and get some work started."

In a second meeting, eight Southern states formally created the Southern Interstate Nuclear Board to plan for regional development of atomic industries. The board promptly called for the Atomic Energy Commission to drop its insistence on regulating firms which use nuclear products.

The board said AEC, in its stand, violated the intent of Congress which has called for the states to take over the licensing of users of nuclear materials.

15 GOVERNORS MEET TONIGHT

Group to Be Asked to Aid Adult Education

By GAVIN SCOTT

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern governors will be asked at their annual meeting here this week to take steps to improve adult education in their home states.

Dr. Winfred L. Godwin, director of the Southern regional education board (SREB), said Saturday he will propose to the governors that they establish a regional commission on adult education. This agency would offer advice to states on how best to improve their programs, he said.

"We are approaching the time when we may have to establish general extension services for urban areas," Godwin added, similar to those provided rural areas through the agricultural extension service.

Godwin will make his report Monday to the SREB, which is meeting in conjunction with its parent organization, the Southern Governors' Conference.

MEETING TO OPEN

The 27th annual Southern Governors' Conference will open with a reception given by Tennessee Gov. Buford Ellington Sunday night. During the three days that follow, the 15 member governors will talk shop at informal gatherings, exchange ideas on common problems at official sessions and discuss politics the rest of the time.

Traditionally, items that might stir up a controversy are not brought up. Instead governors will discuss such subjects as education, highways, law enforcement, industrial development, atomic energy and freight rates.

Vice-President Lyndon B. Johnson will address the governors and their wives at a "state dinner" Monday night.

There probably will be a good deal of backstage maneuvering over selection of a conference chairman to succeed Gov. Price Daniel of Texas. Reportedly either Ellington, as host, or Georgia Gov. Ernest Vandiver, the conference vice-chairman, will get the job.

TO ADVISE GROUPS

Godwin said the adult education commission he will recommend to SREB would advise state institutions on co-ordination and improvement of adult education. The Southern states, he continued, must co-ordinate more carefully their plans for extension programs, evening colleges and televised instruction.

He said he also will report to the SREB that more than 900 students attended colleges outside their home states under the board's contract program. The cost of this program for the year was $1,469,692, he said.

Ellington, retiring SREB chairman, said he will ask the board to recommend that a special conference be held later this year for the purpose of making public the report of the commission on goals for higher education in the South.

The commission was created by SREB last year to study and recommend long-range goals for educational development in the South. Its chairman, former Virginia Gov. Colgate W. Darden Jr., will address the SREB meeting Monday.

Two meetings are scheduled for Sunday afternoon ahead of the formal start of the conference. The first will be a briefing session of the Conference of Appalachian Governors.

ALL DEMOCRATS

This group, formed at Lexington, Ky., last year to study economic ills common to the mountain region, is headed by Gov. Bert Combs of Kentucky. The group plans a business session Wednesday.

The regional advisory council on nuclear energy, headed by Gov. Ernest Hollins of South Carolina, also will meet Sunday afternoon.

Fifteen Southern governors, all Democrats, are expected to attend the conference. They represent Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

Gov. Millard Tawes of Maryland, another conference member, will not be present because of illness in his family. Also to be present as guests will be Govs. Wesley Powell of New Hampshire and John M. Dalton of Missouri. Powell is chairman of the National Governors' Conference.

Dixie Governors Gather for Meet

Party Unity Not an Issue at Meet Editorial, ..... Page 6

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 24 (AP)—The international crisis relegated civil rights controversies into the background tonight as chief executives from 15 states assembled here for a four-day Southern governors' conference.

Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, the chairman, outlined a program in which civil defense, including fallout shelters, was an eleventh-hour addition, and pointed out that civil rights has no place on the official agenda for the 27th annual conference.

Both he and Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee, the conference host, said it should not be brought up at all.

High on the program is the growing worry in the South over inroads of foreign imports on oil, textiles and other southern manufactured goods.

Daniel told a news conference he thinks Southern governors will support an extension of the reciprical trades agreement program, due to expire next June, if it puts limits on "excessive imports which endanger the domestic economy."

"There should be some restrictions on any foreign imports that supplant rather than supplement our industries," he declared.

Daniel, like Ellington who met with newsmen earlier, showed little disposition even to discuss civil rights, which, while never on an official agenda of the conferences, frequently has overshadowed official conference business in past years.

"I know of no emotional problems that are in the wind," he declared.

Ellington said that on race relations, "we are moving faster toward solutions" than are many of the Northern and Eastern states.

Vice President Lyndon Johnson will deliver an address at the governors' state dinner tomorrow night.

Daniel wouldn't comment on President Kennedy's nomination of Thurgood Marshall, Negro integrationist leader, to the U.S. 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals in New York.

Nor would Gov. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina comment when asked for his reaction.

Both Daniel and Ellington stressed the importance of moving as fast as the South can to meet the needs of civil defense.

Daniel announced that Thomas Goodman, regional director of the new office for emergency planning, will be here tomorrow to answer questions on mass evacuations, fallout shelters and other precautions.

As for civil rights, he said, "I wouldn't have the subject mentioned, insofar as I'm concerned."

Meanwhile, Hollings said he would get together informally with interested governors from a number of other Southern states for further discussions of a campaign originated in Jackson, Miss., last July to strengthen their states rights' stands in the wake of moves against their segregated social patterns.

Attending the Jackson meeting were Hollings, Govs. Ross Barnett of Mississippi, John Patterson of Alabama and Orval Faubus of Arkansas and representatives of governors of a number of other states.

Faubus told reporters tonight that he knew of "no further plans" for another such meeting.

He was asked if "it would be fair to say the movement has collapsed."

"I wouldn't go so far as to say that," Faubus replied.

The newly created Southern Interstate Nuclear Board urged the Atomic Energy Commission tonight to drop its insistance on regulating firms which manufacture, use or dispose of atomic materials.

The board voted to ask the governors' conference tomorrow to support this position, which it said expressed the intent of Congress.

Gov. Ellington (right) greets Texas Gov. Daniel

Ellington Leads Dixie's Governors

The Atlanta Constitution

By ERNEST B. VACCARO

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Moderates elected Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee chairman of the Southern Governors Conference Wednesday in a session highlighted by a militant segregationist's blast at "liberals and radicals" in Washington.

A showdown floor fight was averted when Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas, central figure in the Little Rock high school integration fight in 1957, persuaded backers to withdraw his name from nomination for the chairmanship.

The four-day annual convention then closed on a note of harmony when Ellington was elected by acclamation and Faubus accepted the vice chairmanship, carrying out the recommendations of a nominating committee headed by Gov. J. Lindsay Almond of Virginia.

Faubus had been nominated from the floor by Gov. Jimmie H. Davis of Louisiana and seconded by Gov. John Patterson of Alabama.

(Georgia's Gov. Ernest Vandiver, mentioned in some speculation as a candidate for the chairmanship, asked not to be considered.)

BARNETT BROKE CALM

Militant segregationist Gov. Ross B. Barnett of Mississippi broke the calm of an otherwise routine session on highway programs with a fiery demand for Southern governors to "stand up and fight" to banish the "liberals and radicals" from their posts of "all-powerful central rule in Washington."

Barnett said the "liberal and radical elements" must be shown that the conservatives will not compromise and "join them in their headlong dash to oblivion."

"They have sought to fool the people by stirring up the racial issue and using that as a camouflage for their greedy desires," he declared.

Barnett called for conservative forces to work tirelessly to restore "sanity to government" to save the people he said are beginning to "feel the bruises on their bodies caused by the wild doings of the liberals."

It was Faubus himself, chairmaning the highway discussion, who softened the impact of Barnett's speech when the Mississippi governor sat down.

RIPPLE OF LAUGHTER

"Thank you," he told Barnett, as a ripple of laughter flowed over the meeting, "for your comments on road building in Mississippi."

Faubus added he wasn't sure whether Barnett's talk came under the heading of "free and unlimited or controlled access highways," but said it was "a courageous exposition of your philosophy at the only opportunity afforded you at this conference."

Up until Wednesday leaders of the conference, headed by Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, the retiring chairman, had been able to soft pedal issues like states' rights and segregation, neither of which was on the official agenda. And the critical international situation provided the background for much of the governors' discussions.

Governors Back Kennedy

P. 5 The News and Courier

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Governors from the South, a region that in the past has emphasized its separateness from the rest of the nation, emphasized national purpose and participation in the mainstream of American life as the Southern Governors Conference continued its 27th meeting Monday.

Thurs 9-28-61

At the opening business session, the Governors pledged their support to President Kennedy's foreign policy goals expressed in his speech to the United Nations General Assembly.

Television sets were wheeled into the conference meeting room and the opening meeting took time out to listen to President Kennedy.

Immediately afterwards, the governors adopted a resolution praising the speech and pledging their support to the President's quest for peace.

Several times, the 17 governors (Missouri became the 17th member of the conference just before the speech) applauded Kennedy. All the governors are Democrats.

Emphasizing the national unity theme further, New Hampshire Gov. Wesley Powell, a Republican who is chairman of the National Governors Conference, told the gathering the states have an increasingly vital role as governmental units that can help strengthen America for her world struggle.

Thurs 9-28-61

He praised Kennedy's speech as "one of the great documents of human history."

Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee set the theme in his remarks opening the first session of the three-day meeting.

"In the past," said Ellington, "we have at these conferences been able to confine our discussions and actions principally to domestic affairs."

Now, he said, "our problems jump far beyond the boundary lines our our states."

Referring to the present "moments of countdown," the Tennessee Governor told his colleagues: "The states must now join the Federal Government in taking the initiative in reaching those decisions that control the future of the world."

State leaders, he said, must take part in the responsibility to provide "the things that we in America want for ourselves and for all the people of the world." He said these things are "freedom without fear, liberty without limitations, and survival without suspense."

Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, chairman of this year's conference, told his colleagues one of the most vital programs that should be undertaken for state governments is adequate attention to civil defense and disaster planning.

He pointed out that the evacuation of 400,000 Texans from the path of Hurricane Carla proved disaster plans are valuable. He urged all exchange among governors on ideas and plans for civil defense.

Education, economic development, peaceful uses of atomic energy, law enforcement, and highway construction will be topics for sessions Tuesday and Wednesday.

Even in the field of foreign import restrictions, a field in which the South has become increasingly insular, the conference is expected to steer a middle-of-the-road course.

Gov. Daniel, longtime advocate of import restrictions to reduce overseas competition with oil and textiles, told a press conference he felt "we must have trade in order to strengthenen our international friendships" and said the conference should support continuation of the Reciprocal Trade Act, which comes up for re-enactment in Congress next.

At the same time, he said he thought adequate safeguards could be agreed on to curtail imports that might cause loss of jobs in domestic industry.

Moderates' Entry Wins Dixie Helm

Montgomery Advertiser

Thurs 9-28-61

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Moderates elected Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee chairman of the Southern Governors Conference Wednesday in a session high lighted by a militant segregationist's blast at "liberals and radicals" in Washington.

A showdown floor fight was averted when Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas, central figure in the Little Rock high school integration fight in 1957, persuaded backers to withdraw his name from nomination for the chairmanship.

SEE PICTURES ON PAGE 12A

The four-day annual convention then closed on a note of harmony when Ellington was elected by acclamation and Faubus accepted the vice chairmanship, carrying out the recommendations of a nominating committee headed by Gov. J. Lindsay Almond of Virginia.

NOMINATED BY DAVIS

Faubus had been nominated from the floor by Gov. Jimmie H. Davis of Louisiana and seconded by Gov. John Patterson of Alabama.

Militant segregationist Gov. Ross R. Barnett of Mississippi previously broke the calm of an otherwise routine session on highway programs with a fiery demand for Southern governors to "stand up and fight" to banish the "liberals and radicals" from their posts of "all powerful central rule in Washington."

Barnett said the "liberal and radical elements" must be shown that the conservatives will not compromise and "join them in their headlong dash to oblivion."

"They have sought to fool the people by stirring up the racial issue and using that as a camouflage for their greedy desires," he declared.

Barnett called for conservative forces to work tirelessly to restore "sanity to government" to save the people he said are beginning to "feel the bruises on their bodies caused by the wild doings of the liberals."

It was Faubus himself, chairmaning the highway discussion, who softened the impact of Barnett's speech when the Mississippi governor sat down.

"Thank you," he told Barnett, as a ripple of laughter flowed over the meeting, "for your comments on road building in Mississippi."

Faubus added he wasn't sure whether Barnett's talk came under the heading of "free and unlimited or controlled access highways," but said it was "a courageous exposition of your philosophy at the only opportunity afforded you at this conference."

SOFT PEDAL ISSUES

Up until Wednesday, leaders of the conference, headed by Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, the retiring chairman, had been able to soft pedal issues like states' rights and segregation, neither of which was on the official agenda. And the critical international situation has provided the background for much of the governors' discussions.

When the nominating committee, made up of Almond and Govs. Farris Bryant of Florida and Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolian, recommended the election of Ellington, with Faubus as vice chairman, Davis put Faubus's name in competition for the top post.

Davis said he knew of few men with "as much courage and intestinal fortitude" as the four-term governor of Arkansas and said, "No man has more endeared himself to his people."

Patterson, in seconding Faubus' nomination, commented that the Arkansas governor had served more terms than any governor at the conference.

But Faubus, in persuading him to withdraw his name, said the southern governors "must not allow this conference to become an arena of competition."

Previously, both Daniel and Almond had branded as false a published report that "Washington" was opposed to the election of Faubus. Faubus said he did not believe the report was true, and that "I certainly hope it is not."

It was Davis, who while he said he felt strongly about the issue, moved that Ellington be elected by acclamation.

The conference accepted an invitation from Bryant to meet in Florida next year at a date and city to be determined.

Resolutions adopted unanimously by the governors were topped by demands for the protection of southern domestic industries from foreign imports.

The office of emergency planning was asked to expedite a decision on the textile industry's appeal for a ruling that imports of textile products "are impairing the national security."

Governors Ignore Rights Discussion

The News and Courier
C&B

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) —The international crisis relegated civil rights controversies into the background Sunday night as chief executives from 15 states assembled for a four-day Southern Governors Conference.

7-25-61

Gov. Price Daniel of Texas, the chairman, outlined a program in which civil defense, including fallout shelters, was an eleventh hour addition, and pointed out that civil rights has no place on the official agenda for the 27th annual conference.

Charleston, S. C.

Both he and Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee, the conference host, said civil rights should not be brought up at all.

High on the program is the growing worry in the South over inroads of foreign imports on oil, textiles and other Southern manufactured goods.

Daniel told a news conference he thinks Southern governors will support an extension of the reciprocal trades agreement program, due to expire next June, if it puts limits on "excessive imports which endanger the domestic economy."

Vice President Lyndon Johnson will deliver an address at the governor's state dinner Monday night.

Meanwhile, Gov. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina said he would get together informally with interested governors from a number of other Southern states for further discussions of a campaign originated in Jackson, Miss., last July to strengthen their states rights stand in the wake of moves against their segregated social patterns.

Attending the Jackson meeting were Hollings, Govs. Ross Barnett of Mississippi, John Patterson of Alabama and Orval Faubus of Arkansas and representatives of a number of other states.

Faubus told reporters he knew of no further plans for another such meeting.

Later, at a news conference, Hollings said there was a feeling "we shouldn't superimpose an additional conference" on the Southern governors' meeting.

But he said the Jackson group, which he described as a conservative one, would delay its second meeting and gather then in Montgomery, Ala.

"A followup conference has no yet been held," he declared. He said he wants to talk with Gov Patterson of Alabama and others individually about plans for the meeting.

The South Carolina governor said he hoped the group would find an appeal to conservatives in states outside the South.

Faubus In Line For Leadership

The News and Observer
Dem. 9-26-61
P 1

By ROY PARKER JR.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas, whose name is linked with the bitter Little Rock school desegregation crisis, is reportedly the first choice of his colleagues for the 1961-62 chairmanship of the Southern Governors Conference.

The election of Faubus to the post would signal the fact that

Related Stories, Pages 5-22

Raleigh, N. C.

Dixie governors have finally reached agreement that this conference is no place to air the dirty linen of the region's racial problems.

It would indicate too, that Faubus has now gotten back on a track many of his colleagues feel he temporarily jumped when he precipitated the 1957 Little Rock crisis by calling out the Arkansas National Guard to halt integration of that city's schools.

This year's conference opened as many have, with a small band of Deep South governors toying with the idea of turning it into a sounding board for extremist views on the racial situation. By mutual agreement, all the revolters tossed in the towel.

This action set the stage for the selection of Faubus as chairman, a post that had been denied to him twice by the moderates who control the conference.

He would replace Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee. The election of new officers will be held Wednesday.

Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett, who sought last summer to precipitate a revolt of racial extremists from the conference, himself tossed in the towel at a press conference Monday morning.

Barnett, known in the past for inflammatory remarks on the racial question, spent the time talking about industrial development in his state, and even refused newsman's bait when asked his opinion of a recent Interstate Commerce Commission order banning segregated transportation terminal facilities. He said he hadn't read the report and had no immediate comment.

He said the "Southern unity" movement he promoted by calling a summer meeting at Jackson, Miss., was aimed mainly at a discussion of industrial development.

Faubus, at a news conference Sunday night, brushed aside the Barnett-inspired movement although he attended the Jackson meeting.

Faubus even disagreed with a reporter who classified him as a "conservative." Said Faubus: "I have never classified myself as a conservative."

He, too, stressed the need for industrial development and improvements in education and economic opportunity.

Resolution Backs Kennedy.

The four-term Arkansas governor was chosen, along with Gov. Lindsay Almond of Virginia, to co-sponsor a resolution in which the conference pledged its support to President Kennedy's foreign policy goals expressed in his speech to the United Nations.

Almond and former North Carolina Gov. Luther Hodges had been instrumental during several conference sessions in denying Faubus the chairmanship because of the extremist stigma attached to him as a result of the Little Rock action.

As late as last year, when the conference met in Arkansas, Faubus had been turned aside by the moderate leadership of Almond and Hodges.

But as one governor put it, "The feeling is he has now done his penance, and deserves the chairmanship."

Faubus was an active supporter of the Democratic national ticket in the 1960 elections, although wooed by Southern extremists to be a third party candidate.

Faubus has been in the conference since 1955, longer than any of the 16 members. He has taken an active part in the programs of all the conferences, and is personally popular with his colleagues who nevertheless had denied him the chairmanship because of the Little Rock stigma.

Loeb Outlines Aims On Patriotism, Race Issues

Commercial Appeal

The text of Mayor Henry Loeb's speech before the Memphis Rotary Club yesterday:

Mayor Loeb

A week ago today, Tuesday, July 25, will, in my judgment, be a day to be remembered by free people everywhere. On that day, Jack Kennedy, President of the United States, reminded all tyrants that Americans have the courage to fight with whatever weapons may be necessary to preserve America and the free world.

Wed 8-2-61

Our Commander-in-Chief truly expressed the will of the American people. We want no more compromises with communism! We want no retreat before the Soviet slaves! This struggle may again call for our "blood, sweat and tears." If it must be, then let it be. As the President said: "We have fought before! We can fight again."

All of us who are here today had America handed to us on a silver platter. We must remember, however, that the blessings of this land came to us out of the agonizing struggle of our forefathers who wrote into the cornerstone of America these words:

Mustn't Sit Idly

"And to this cause we dedicate our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor." If we are to safeguard America for our children, we must be willing to do the same. The only way we can repay our debt to the past is to make the future indebted to us because we preserved this land with our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor. This we intend to do!"

I wish that President Kennedy had also and will also more clearly spell out and call for what he promised in the campaign—not the false panaceas of cradle to grave security but a spelling out of what each of us can do FOR our country on the new frontier. He will find when he does so, Americans waiting to participate.

In the meantime, we must not sit idly waiting. In the community where we live we must perform our duty with courage and honesty. It is reported that during the "Battle of the Bulge" an American GI who became lost from his outfit ran up to an officer, saluted, and said: "Sir, where can I be of help?" The officer replied: "Fall in anywhere; There's fighting all along the line." In the struggle to preserve and advance America, there's fighting all along the line.

For the present, at least, a large part of your duty and mine is in the City of Memphis. The finest contribution we can make to America is to see to it that our city has clean, progressive, honest government.

Mayor Of All

I think every fair-minded citizen of this city knows how I am trying to practice what I preach. No matter what demigogs may say, I am mayor of all the people; with malice toward none, I am striving for the welfare of all.

Some intemperate people of both races are attempting to hang the tag of racial prejudice around my neck. The vast majority of the citizens of both races will not be taken in by this falsehood. My whole heritage places me on the side of those who struggle for freedom and for a better way of life for all of us.

But I know, as does every intelligent Negro citizen of Memphis, that full citizenship never comes to any minority group through the hands of politicians, attempting to use the minority group. It does not come from always asking and never giving: It does not come from continuously pushing and not pulling in the whole community's interest: It does not come from political chicanery of shrewd leaders of Negroes whose talents could be better used in leading their constituents down the road of responsibility.

Full citizenship comes from the toil of the level-headed people of common sense and moderation. It comes primarily from education over a long period of time, and a desire for something stable and better.

Other Sources

It comes from a desire to put something into the community instead of taking out from the community. It comes from the leadership spiritually and materially of a community's leaders. It comes from a leaving behind of "shade tree" philosophy of welfare roles and a determination to work towards economic stability. It comes from a resolve to improve and lift up the morals and mores of a people and the carrying out thereof. It comes finally—and this has not been done and this is the challenge—with an assumption of responsibility by the Negro community meeting the white community half way on what is best for all of us.

Following the Civil War men known as "Carpetbaggers" came down from the North. Posing as friends of the rights of the Negro they placed the Negro in places of political responsibility for which he was not prepared. It did not take the Negro long to discover that he was being used. He discovered that his real friends were not the politicians black or white trying to use him, but those vast numbers of Southern white people who began the struggle to give him better schools and better economic opportunities.

Surely our Negro citizens will not forget that lesson of history so soon. Again the real friends of the Negro are those vast numbers of whites who strive not to elevate a few, but to elevate all the race to new heights of educational and economic opportunity.

Outlines Choices

I choose to be with these moderate, decent, level-headed people who desire to elevate all of the races. When we choose this road, we know that we shall have to endure the slander of the lunatic fringe of both races. To this way I am committed because I believe that it is right, that it is the American way and that it will win. While Mayor of this city, I believe that the greatest service I can render to all races, colors and creeds is to strive to have in places of highest trust those who by their qualifications and efficiency are best prepared to lead and thereby to serve. Those who know me best know that I will not budge one inch in doing my duty. In the end it may not be said of me that I was popular, but I hope it may be said of me as it was said of Henry Hudson, the explorer of this new world—

He kept the courage of a certain aim,
Amid the peril of uncertain ways,
And sailed ahead, and left the rest to God.

I have covered the phase of appointments. There are many other facets of the problem and many other problems. To each I promise the course of moderation with diligence and determination for Memphis and all of us.

Throughout his talk, he dealt with race relations and civic responsibility without going into the details of the incident which prompted the statements. He did not refer to the appointment of A. W. Willis Jr. to the Memphis Transit Authority, an appointment later rescinded on a legal technicality after it brought a flood of protests to the City Commission.

In a question and answer session after the 10-minute talk, Mayor Loeb made these points:

In the 18 months he has observed them from his office, the various private and governmental agencies in the county have failed to make a unified effort to attract industry.

Reaffirms Support

Present talks should lead to setting up a Charter Commission which, the Mayor hopes, will produce a plan for consolidation tailored to the needs of Memphis and Shelby County. He reaffirmed his support for a strong mayor plan.

Those opposing consolidation apparently are interested in holding on to jobs they have or to tax advantages they have obtained under the present form of government.

Mayor Chides Negro Leaders

Commercial Appeal

Wed 8-2-61

Have Failed To Assume Their Responsibilities, Loeb Declares

Mayor Henry Loeb called on Memphis' Negro community yesterday to meet its white neighbors half way on the road to what is best for the entire city.

Memphis Press

Staking himself but solidly for moderation in race relations, he said Negro leadership has failed to assume its responsibilities to the city as a whole.

"Full citizenship comes from the toil of the level-headed people of common sense and moderation," the Mayor told a luncheon meeting of the Memphis Rotary Club at the Peabody.

Avoids Incident

39 Negroes, 11 Whites Held In Memphis Case

Jackson News
Wed 8-30-61

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)—Thirty-nine Negroes from Fayette County, Tenn., and 11 whites were arrested for a taunting, name-calling dispute at a hamburger drive-in here Tuesday night.

Jackson, Miss.

Police Inspector J. A. Brasher said "apparently no blows were struck, but it could have been serious." Brasher said police confiscated knives, blank pistols and clubs from the school bus which had brought the Negroes here for a day at the fairgrounds. Whites claimed some Negroes had knives in their hands at the drive-in.

Brasher said the whites apparently resented the presence of the Negroes in the drive-in, and began to exchange words with them.

Eleven Negroes and four whites were charged with disorderly conduct. The other Negroes on the bus were sent to juvenile court. The Negro bus driver, Leo Reed, 45, also was charged with carrying a dangerous weapon after police found a knife under his seat.

Seven whites were arrested on the drive-in lot when they refused to obey officers' orders to get back in their cars.

Police said two carloads of whites followed the bus from the drive-in and stopped it a few blocks away, but police arrived on the scene before any blows could be struck.

Police Stop Race Clash In Memphis

Montgomery Advertiser
Fri 9-1-61
Montgomery, Ala.

MEMPHIS (AP) — A narrowly averted racial clash resulted in 11 Negroes and three whites being held to the grand jury Wednesday on charges of "attempting to commit a common affray."

In addition, 22 Negro youths and one white were turned over to juvenile court. Officers said several carloads of whites got away from the scene before police arrived.

Special officer Horace Fry said it started when a school bus loaded with Negro students from Brownsville, Tenn., stopped at a hamburger drive-in last night.

BUY SANDWICHES

Fry said about 15 boys and girls got off to buy sandwiches to take back aboard the bus and white youths crowded around and cursed them.

Fry said he blocked trouble by getting the Negroes to board the bus and move on, but five carloads of white youths followed. Police were called.

Lt. W. O. Crumby said one carload of whites forced the bus to the curb and others stopped around it. He said driver Leo Reed, 45, threw the bus in reverse and crashed into one of the cars behind. Police arrived soon after.

ALL NABBED

All Negroes on the bus were arrested, and all of the whites in the damaged auto, the only one remaining on the scene.

Reed was fined $51 for carrying a dangerous weapon because a knife was found under his seat, plus $11 for "improper backing."

Acting City Court Judge Carlton Barnes dropped disorderly conduct charges against all defendants in favor of the state charge.

Common affray, an old English term, means a fight which causes public terror. The Negroes were here to visit an amusement park.

Police Stop Race Clash In Memphis

The Montgomery Advertiser
P 1 B

MEMPHIS (AP) — A narrowly averted racial clash resulted in 11 Negroes and three whites being held to the grand jury Wednesday on charges of "attempting to commit a common affray."

Fri 9-1-61

In addition, 22 Negro youths and one white were turned over to juvenile court. Officers said several carloads of whites got away from the scene before police arrived.

Montgomery, Ala.

Special officer Horace Fry said it started when a school bus loaded with Negro students from Brownsville, Tenn., stopped at a hamburger drive-in last night.

BUY SANDWICHES

Fry said about 15 boys and girls got off to buy sandwiches to take back aboard the bus and white youths crowded around and cursed them.

Fry said he blocked trouble by getting the Negroes to board the bus and move on, but five carloads of white youths followed. Police were called.

Lt. W. O. Crumby said one carload of whites forced the bus to the curb and others stopped around it. He said driver Leo Reed, 45, threw the bus in reverse and crashed into one of the cars behind. Police arrived soon after.

ALL NABBED

All Negroes on the bus were arrested, and all of the whites in the damaged auto, the only one remaining on the scene.

Reed was fined $51 for carrying a dangerous weapon because a knife was found under his seat, plus $11 for "improper backing."

Acting City Court Judge Carlton Barnes dropped disorderly conduct charges against all defendants in favor of the state charge.

Common affray, an old English term, means a fight which causes public terror. The Negroes were here to visit an amusement park.

High court review of airport bias sought

NEW YORK — The U.S. Supreme Court was asked Friday to review the case of bank executive Jesse Turner against the Dobbs Houses Restaurant in the Memphis Municipal Airport which refuses to serve colored persons in its main dining room.

Mr. Turner, executive vice president and cashier of the Tri - State Bank in Memphis, and the first colored person elected to the Shelby County, Tennessee Democratic Executive Committee since Reconstruction, was, in 1959, twice refused service in the Dobbs Houses Restaurant in the Memphis airport.

He was barred on the grounds that the state law prohibits service of colored persons with whites. The manager offered to serve Mr. Turner in a small room reserved for colored persons.

MR. TURNER first brought his suit in the federal district court in Memphis in April, 1960.

In January, 1961, the court, consisting of three judges — Sixth Circuit Judge John D. Martin of Memphis, District Judge Marion S. Boyd of Memphis and District Judge William E. Miller of Nashville — refused to enjoin segregation.

The court ruled that before Mr. Turner continues his case in the federal court, he should first initiate suit in the state court for construction of the statutes and a state regulation issued by the State Division of Hotel and Restaurant Inspection permitting segregation.

Restaurant To Bar Group Of Mixers

SEWANEE, Tenn. (AP)—The doors of a segregated restaurant on the Episcopal-operated University of the South campus will be barred to a group of white and Negro Episcopal clergymen if they try to eat there.

This was the word Thursday from Mrs. Clara Shoemate, who operates Sewanee Inn and Claramont Restaurant on the campus under contract with the university. The contract gives Mrs. Shoemate the right to refuse service at will and she previously has refused to serve Negroes.

The six white and one Negro ministers arrived in the area this morning as part of a South-wide "prayer pilgrimage" and said they did, indeed, intend to seek service at the restaurant as a group.

STAGE SIT-IN

"If we are denied service as a group," said the Rev. Malcolm Boyd, of Detroit, "I can assure you that we not only will stage a sit-in but also go on a hunger strike until we are served as a group."

The seven are part of a group of 28 Episcopal ministers who left New Orleans Tuesday on the pilgrimage, en route to the church's 60th general convention in Detroit. They arrived in Chattanooga by plane after 15 of their number had been arrested in Jackson, Miss., for trying to desegregate a bus terminal.

Those arrested in Mississippi included New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's son-in-law, the Rev. Robert L. Pierson.

TEST SEGREGATION

The Rev. Mr. Boyd, chaplain of Wayne State University, said the seven who arrived in Chattanooga planned firs to drive to nearby Monteagle, where Tennessee's Episcopal clergy are in conference with Bishop John Vander Horst.

From there, he said, they planned to go to Sewanee and test segregation at the Sewanee Inn and its restaurant.

He said they already had accepted the invitation of Dr. Edward N. McCrady, vice chancellor of the University, to sleep in the school gymnasium. The dormitories, he said, are full.

Dr. McCrady has said on previous occasions that Claramont Restaurant, while on university property, "is not a university facility" because it is leased to Mrs. Shoemate.

Integration Suit Sent Back to State

MEMPHIS (AP)—A Memphis Negro banker seeking desegregated facilities at a municipal airport restaurant must proceed through state courts, a three-judge federal court panel ruled Monday.

The judges said Jesse Turner, an officer of the Tri-States Savings Bank, must test a state segregation statute before a ruling is made in his suit against a Dobbs House restaurant.

The judges said the case would be stayed pending a declaratory judgment suit "to be brought by the plaintiff in the courts of Tennessee." To be clarified is an 1875 state law requiring segregated public facilities.

The decision was made by District Judges Marion S. Boyd of Memphis and William E. Miller of Nashville, and Appeals Court Judge John D. Martin of Cincinnati.

The judges cited a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that deferred to the "doctrine of abstention" in these words:

"This now well-established procedure is aimed at the avoidance of unnecessary interference by the federal courts with proper and validly administered state concerns, a course so essential to the balanced working of our federal system."

Priest Slugged, Old Woman Injured In Racial Clashes

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)—A white man slugged a Negro Episcopal Priest and an elderly white woman was injured Thursday as an aftermath of Chattanooga's latest theater stand-in demonstration.

In addition, nine young Negroes who tried to buy tickets to a movie theater which patronizes only whites were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

The outbreak of racial friction was by far the most serious since Negroes began their stand-in movement here five weeks ago, although tension as a result of the stand-ins has been building up all week.

Harry (Nub) Light, 34, an ex-convict, was charged with assault and battery after police said he slugged the Rev. Robert Hunter, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church — a Negro parish. Light has a long police record here and once served a Michigan prison term for armed robbery. The Rev. Mr. Hunter, who was observing the stand-in, was not seriously hurt.

But Miss Lillie Trotter, 88, a white woman, was hospitalized after she was bowled over by a group of Negroes fleeing from a pursuing band of white youths. The whites, some armed with knives, hurled rocks, stones and garbage cans at the Negroes, and Negroes returned in kind. None of the youths was injured, but Miss Trotter suffered cuts, head bruises and other injuries. Her condition was not believed serious.

The Negro arrests brought the total of disorderly conduct charges placed against the stand-in demonstrators in the past five weeks to 25. At least one of the 25, Willie Ricks, 18, has been arrested and fined three times.

The nine were arrested Thursday after the theater manager reported they were blocking the entrance to his establishment. He said they each had tried 14 times —and were refused each time— to buy tickets, he decided to prefer charges.

The incidents came less than 24 hours after a cross was burned on the front lawn of the home of the family of young Ricks, the Negro youth who has been fined $50 on three different occasions.

His father said the boy's life had been threatened by a telephone caller who identified himself as "the grand dragon of the KKK." Police were investigating the threats.

OCTOBER
KNOXVILLE, TENN. - 51 COLLEGE STUDENTS ARRESTED
PICKETING THEATER

51 Students Arrested For Picketing

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — (UPI) — Fifty-one college students arrested for picketing two downtown white movie theaters refused bond Monday and filled the city jail with a choral rendition of Negro spirituals.

One white man, identified as Clarence Edward Riggs, also was arrested when the Negroes appeared in front of the theaters Monday night and blocked traffic on Gay street, Knoxville's main business thoroughfare.

There was no violence. Police said the mass picketing attracted sightseers and white boys—some of them itching to start something."

The students listed their home address as Knoxville college. Dr. James Colston, president of the college, said he knew in advance of the students' action and approved of it.

"They are young people trying to secure their rights, and they went about it the way they felt would be best," Colston said.

Knoxville college is a private institution with 585 students. It is affiliated with the Presbyterian church.

Knoxville and Knox county schools were desegregated a year ago under a grade-a-year plan, and most downtown lunch counters and variety stores were desegregated last year after sit-in demonstrations. The motion picture houses, however, remained segregated, and Negroes have picketed them several times in the past.

55 Theater Pickets Arrested in Knoxville

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 10 (AP).—Police arrested 54 young Negroes and one white girl on disorderly conduct charges last night as they were picketing three motion picture theaters.

The integrationists, all of whom police said were Knoxville College students, gathered at the Tennessee, Bijou and Riveria Theaters.

The group then attempted to purchase tickets. When refused tickets, they formed a circle and marched by the window chanting, "Tickets please," police said.

Police said the circle march continued for nearly two hours before officers asked the groups to disperse. When the group refused, a paddy wagon was called.

"The situation had gotten to the point where there was a high possibility that trouble was going to erupt. We asked both the marchers and spectators to move n. Most of the spectators did but the marchers remained," Patrol Capt. Neal Long said.

One Act of Violence

Police said there was only one act of violence. A white youth, Clarence Edward Riggs, 19, tossed a stink bomb into the group standing in front of one of the theaters, according to officers. Young Riggs, like the students, was charged with disorderly conduct.

Police identified the white girl arrested as Mary Todd, 20, a student at predominantly Negro Knoxville College.

Bond was set at $15, but the entire group decided to spend the night in jail prior to City court hearing today.

At Jackson, Miss., yesterday, the son-in-law of New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller was among 14 Episcopal ministers who pleaded not guilty during an appeal hearing in connection with an attempt to desegregate a Jackson bus station during last month's "prayer pilgrimage."

The Rev. Robert L. Pierson of New York and Evanston, Ill., and the other ministers made their pleas during arraignment before Hinds County Judge Russell Moore on appeals from breach of peace convictions in City Court. The judge set trial dates at two a day from May 7 to May 15.

Freedom Riders Fined

In another case, 26 Freedom Riders declined to contest their breach of peace conviction appeals in Hinds County Court and were sentenced to $200 fines and suspended jail terms.

A field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People protested sending a 16-year-old Negro girl to a reform school after her arrest during a sit-in attempt at a McComb, Miss., bus station on August 30.

More than 100 demonstrators were arrested in McComb last Wednesday for protesting her suspension from high school.

The field secretary, Medgar Evers, said he sent telegrams to President Kennedy and Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy asking for an investigation. However, Sheriff Clyde Simmons said she was committed as a rountine case because of her previous police record. He did not detail the record.

In Anniston, Ala., eight of nine men charged in the burning of a Freedom Rider bus last May pleaded not guilty in United States District Court. They will be tried together the week of October 30. The ninth man was unable to appear because of injuries suffered in an accident and will be tried separately.

At Nashville, Tenn., Southern School News reported a survey of 17 Southern and border States showed 31 more school districts were desegregated this fall with 392 Negroes enrolled in the districts.

The survey showed that schools opened without violence in any of the Dixie or border States. The report said that only Alabama, Mississippi and South Carolina maintained segregated policies.

Georgia Gov. Ernest Vandiver said the Legislature next January may change the legal age for execution in Georgia which now is 14.

He said he will grant a stay of execution to a 15-year-old Negro boy, Preston Cobb, jr., under death sentence for murder, if his motion for a new trial is rejected prior to or during the legislative session. This would be done to give the lawmakers an opportunity to change the lagal age.

Young Cobb's appeal for a new trial is pending. He was convicted of killing a white farmer for whom he worked.

Movie Theaters To Run Despite Negro Pickets

KNOXVILLE, Oct. 11 (UPI) — Managers of Knoxville's downtown movie theaters said today they will continue business as usual despite a drive by Negro college students to desegregate the theaters.

"When, or if, we decide to make a move it will not be because of any pressure groups," Manager William Coury of the Tennessee and Bijou Theaters said. "As long as they demonstrate in an orderly manner we don't intend to do anything about it."

About 90 young Negroes from Knoxville college picketed the downtown theaters last night for the second consecutive night. Three white persons and lone Negro were arrested on disorderly conduct charges when a crowd of 200 to 300 persons, mostly white teen-agers, gathered to watch.

French Harris, 47, a towering police veteran just completing his first year as police chief in this mountain city of 112,000, personally drove off a crowd of white youths who tried to jostle a line of 30 Negro students at the Tennessee Theater on Knoxville's main street.

Harris said the Negroes would not be molested so long as they were orderly and stayed in line at the theater box offices. Fifty-one demonstrators were arrested Monday night when they stepped out of line and blocked traffic.

Negroes in Clarksville

Pittsburgh-Courier P14 Sat 12-9-61

At Bottom of the Pile

Pittsburgh, Pa 1

By FRANCIS L. YOUNG

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn.—Negroes share so little of what this burgeoning middle Tennessee county seat has to offer for the not-so-simple reason that they "have not asked for anything."

Of course this has nothing to do with registration and voting rights. The expressed opinion on the matter is that of some leading whites recently interviewed.

■

CLARKSVILLE, the seat of Montgomery County, acccording to last census has a total population of some 22,021 Negroes and whites. Negroes, approximately 5,630, comprise roughly one-fourth of the populace.

Economically they are at the bottom of the heap. Most, according to whites interviewed for The Courier, do not get equal pay with whites for doing the same work — where permitted, and rarely are they paid for overtime.

No Negro is, nor has one ever been, a member of the law enforcement department here; no Negro delivers mail in this city, and none works as a clerk in the post office.

■

IN THIS DEPARTMENT, also, it is known that Negro war veterans have passed the qualifying tests only to be overlooked by whatever postmaster is in office at the time. Negroes have no voice whatsoever in power-structure committees in this community's life.

There are whites and Negroes who feel the need for a functioning interracial committee to establish communications between the races. No Negro has been a member of the Clarksville Chamber of Commerce since the death of Dr. R. T. Burt, some years ago.

Negroes and whites in Clarksville are so far apart that colored are excluded entirely from planning committees for civic affairs. This applies to Veterans Day, Red Cross, Cancer Drives, March of Dimes and the UGF Campaign.

NO NEGROES in Clarksville serve in any government post. The last was the late Nace Dixon, alderman from the Ninth Ward. That was some 40 years ago.

It goes without saying that no Negro is on either a Democratic or Republican committee in this town, the buses are still segregated, and the local newspapers rarely mention a Negro except as related to some crime.

MARRIED OR SINGLE, Negro women are never referred to in the local paper with the common courtesy of Miss or Mrs. It just isn't done here, and Negro is spelled with a small "n."

In a roundup on Clarksville, it should be borne in mind that it was in the outlying county areas that Negroes were evicted from tenant farms for having attempted to register and vote.

It is also at nearby Somerville that Tennessee's famed "Tent City" for displaced Negroes still exists, and at Tipton. Mid-Tennessee counties run from 25 to 30 per cent Negro population. What do they want, and what can they get by merely asking. They can't vote!

■

IT HAS BEEN the same here since Reconstruction Days. No change is in sight, not even for the run-down Cobb Elementary School in the heart of one of the worse slum areas in any Tennessee city of comparable size.

Articulate Clarksville Negroes sum things up in this manner:

We don't want to be the white man's brother-in-law. We only want a rightful place in the family of man, and to live with digniy of freedom, and opportunity."

38a 1961

TENNESSEE

NOVEMBER
WHITE MINISTER FASTS FOR RACIAL JUSTICE
REV. MAURICE McCRACKIN

White Minister Fasts For Racial Justice

The Courier-Journal 3/3
Fri 11-3-61

He's In Jail In Tennessee

Louisville Ky
Fri 11-3-61

Brownsville, Tenn., Nov. 2 (AP)—A white minister from Cincinnati, here to help a Negro civil rights drive, was on a jail cell "fast for justice" today.

Sheriff S. T. Hunter said the Rev. Maurice McCrackin, 55, has ignored food since his arrest last Sunday.

The United Presbyterian minister was carried back to his cell yesterday after refusing to pay a $50 fine imposed on a charge of loitering.

Officers had to carry him every step of the way to the courtroom and back. He adopted an attitude of passive resistance that included rejection of legal counsel.

Served Tax-Case Term

Asked by Judge Sam Lewis how he would plead, the minister replied: "I am pleading for justice, in Africa, India, Cincinnati, Brownsville and everywhere."

Mr. McCrackin is treasurer of "Operation Freedom," formed last year to help Negro sharecroppers who said whites were trying to squeeze them out of the area because they registered to vote.

He served a six-month federal prison term in 1959 after refusing to pay income taxes because part of the money goes to buy armaments. Officers had to carry him in for that trial, too.

Nashville Civil Rights Lawyer Victim Of Planned Harassments

NASHVILLE. — (ANP) — Foes and champions of civil rights have employed many unique techniques in their long struggle prompted by young, militant college students here.

But Avon Williams, an attorney who has been active in many of the cases growing out of the student demonstrations, is the victim of a long series of harassments. With his law partner, Z. Alexander Looby, he represented the plaintiffs in a federal court suit which resulted in the school desegregation case several years ago.

Looby's home has been bombed. While Williams has received only bomb threats, he has been the target of a series of annoying and sometimes costly "jokes" since the beginning of the year.

The most recent occurred when he entered his office one morning last week to find 12 men waiting in response to an ad for truck drivers inserted in the local daily paper giving his name and office address.

"Fooled Many Times"

Williams hadn't placed the ad, in fact he had no knowledge of it and had to explain to the men that they had been cruelly fooled as he has many times before.

Here are some of the things that have happened to Williams recently:

Three or four times a day he has received anonymous telephone calls. Sometimes the callers say nothing. Sometimes they curse or threaten Williams.

A four-foot funeral wreath with the message "In Loving Memory Of Avon" was delivered, COD, to Williams at his office.

Food For 25 Persons

A caterer arrived at the office one afternoon with a butler and food for 25 persons, sent by someone who identified himself to the caterer as Williams.

Loads of concrete, fertilizer and sand have been delivered to his home, none of it ordered by Williams but all of it to his account.

At least a dozen ambulances have been summoned to his home by unidentified persons.

Taxicab drivers, not called by Williams pound on his door in the middle of the night.

Fire engines and police have rushed to his house after receiving calls in Williams' name.

Water Turned Off

His water was turned off after someone called to say Williams was moving out of town. A real estate agent returned a call Williams never made about selling the house. Nashville Electric Service inquired about turning off the electricity.

A florist sent a bill for a $20 arrangement sent in Williams' name to Police Chief D. E. Hosse when Hosse was hospitalized recently. A fruit shop sent a bill for a "sunshine basket" for the chief.

"This is very embarrassing to have to call all these merchants and tell them what's happening," Williams said. "And it's surprising to me they would be so gullible to send these things on just a telephone call."

"Blessing In Disguise"

"The only thing I've kept is the fertilizer. My wife had been after me for a year to get some. This was dumped in the back yard. They settled for half price."

Williams said he has informed Sidney Ritter, Nashville detective chief, about some of the pranks and about all threats.

But Ritter said he hasn't investigated because "there's no way to find out who orders these things."

"We've turned it all over to the FBI," Ritter said.

Clarence Kelly of Memphis, chief FBI agent in Tennessee, declined comment.

Chattanooga race tension at high point

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., March 17—(AP)—Racial tension gripped Chattanooga today after the worst outbreak of Negro-white friction in the five-week history of the theater stand-in movement here.

A white man slugged a Negro minister and an elderly woman was injured when a group of Negroes fled a missile-throwing band of white youths in an aftermath of the latest stand-in last night.

THE WHITE MAN, nine Negro demonstrators and a Negro juvenile were arrested on various charges, and police mobilized for more trouble as roving groups of white and Negro teen-agers gathered in various parts of the city.

No further trouble was reported, however.

It all started as nine Negroes sought, unsuccessfully, to buy tickets—as they have intermittently for the past five weeks—to a movie house which admits only white patrons.

The Rev. Robert Hunter, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church—a Negro parish, watched the demonstration. Suddenly, police said, Harry Light, 34, a white man, slugged Hunter above the eye.

Light, who once served a Michigan prison term for armed robbery, was arrested on assault and battery charges.

WITNESSES SAID that minutes after the incident between Light and the Rev. Hunter, about three white youths pounded the minister across the shoulder with their fists and fled when police arrived.

The Negro rector was not seriously injured.

The nine demonstrators were arrested on disorderly conduct charges after the theater manager reported they were blocking the entrance to his establishment.

Police officials said the city attorney has ruled if Negroes make repeated efforts to buy tickets and are turned away, they are an annoyance.

SHORTLY AFTER the arrests, some 12 Negroes walked up a [illegible] street when six white boys [illegible] out of a car and words were [illegible]nged. Several in each group [illegible]dished knives and sticks and [illegible] throwing garbage cans and [illegible] objects.

[illegible] the Negroes fled, one of [illegible] accidentally knocked down [illegible] Lillie Trotter, 88, a white [illegible]. She suffered cuts, head [illegible] and other injuries, but [illegible]ndition was not believed [illegible].

[illegible]ce said a band of white [illegible] armed with sticks, were [illegible]ng the downtown streets [illegible] in the night. They fled [illegible] officers tried to question [illegible].

A patrolman caught a 15-year-old Negro armed with a steel ratchet wrench "because somebody might jump me." He was released.

Police Halt Racial Melee At Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Taunting white youths, throwing punches and eggs, charged an integrationist picket line here Saturday night. Club-swinging police broke up the melee, arresting 15 Negroes and white persons.

Two youths—one white, one Negro—were treated at a hospital for bumps and bruises.

The racial outburst occurred outside a supermarket chain store just before closing time. The predominantly Negro picket line, which had grown during the night to about 40 demonstrators, accused the store of discrimination by refusing to hire Negroes as clerks.

Two hours later, a singing, chanting crowd of about 75 Negroes demanding to be jailed marched on city police headquarters but no further arrests were made.

Negro leaders called a mass meeting at a Baptist church Sunday afternoon and declared another march would be made on police headquarters where one picket remained in custody by her own choice.

A crowd of about 500 filled every pew of the church and flowed into the lobby. Most were Negroes but a few were white.

In two hours of speech-making, the leaders asserted the number of pickets at four target stores of the grocery chain would be doubled and tripled. "We must stand together and we must march together," one speaker said.

About a third of the audience walked to the police station where they sang and prayed. The marchers drifted away quietly after the sidewalk demonstration.

Police Inspector Carney Patterson said 10 of the 15 arrested had been members of the sign-carrying picket line. All but Diane Nash, 21, coordinating secretary of the Nashville Student Non-Violent Movement, posted $5 bond on disorderly conduct charges and gained release.

The Negro woman, police said, had insisted that she be arrested along with the others and refused to leave the jail.

Patterson said the clash was touched off by about half a dozen teen-age white boys who said they happened to be driving by and spotted the pickets. They were armed with eggs, tomatoes and other missiles.

"We found tire tools, chains and lug wrenches inside their car," the inspector said. He said the boys were from various sections of the city.

15 Arrested In Nashville Racial Fight

NASHVILLE, Aug. 6 (AP)—Taunting white youths, throwing punches and eggs, charged a desegregationist picket line here last night. Club-swinging police broke up the melee, arresting 15 Negroes and whites.

Two youths—one white, one Negro—were treated at a hospital for bumps and bruises.

The racial outburst occurred outside a supermarket chain store just before closing time, about 9:45 p. m. The predominantly Negro picket line, which had grown during the night to about 40 demonstrators, accused the store of discrimination by refusing to hire Negroes as clerks.

Two hours later, a singing, chanting crowd of about 75 Negroes demanding to be jailed marched on city police headquarters but no further arrests were made.

Today "appalled" Negro leadres called a mass meeting at a Baptist church and said another march would be made on police headquarters where one picket remained in custody by her own choice.

Police inspector Carney Patterson said 10 of the 15 arrested had been members of the sign-carrying picket line. All but Diane Nash, coordinating secretary of the Nashville student Non-violent movement, posted $5 bond on disorderly cnduct charges and were released.

The 21-year-old Negro woman, police said, had insisted that she be arrested along with the others and refused to leave the jail.

SEPTEMBER
DALLAS, TEXAS- DR. CLIFTON O. DUMMETT

Dentist Bias Suit Winner

By SAM YETTE

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—The refusal of a Dallas, Tex., hotel to honor the reservation of a Negro dentist resulted in a $500 out-of-court settlement for Dr. Clifton O. Dummett, chief of Dental Service of the Tuskegee Veterans Administration hospital.

Dr. Dummett revealed this week how, upon advice of counsel, he had agreed to the settlement from the Dallas Stateler-Hilton, which, he said, refused him room accommodations in 1958, although he presented a bona fide reservation card he had obtained through the mail.

According to Dr. Dummett, he had made reservations to stay at the Statler-Hilton with other delegates attending the national meeting of the American Dental Association. He was to present an exhibit on "Oral Pigmentation" (gum discoloration).

THE HOTEL, he said, offered to make him reservations in some other hotel in Dallas, and honor his Statler-Hilton courtesy card if he would attend meetings and dine at the Statler-Hilton, but sleep elsewhere.

His exhibit was presented as scheduled at the Dallas Coliseum, but Dr. Dummett attended some branch meetings (with meals) at the Statler-Hilton. He roomed, however, at "a nice colored motel."

The Tuskegee dentist, who is editor of the Quarterly of the National Dental Association, said he attempted to sue the hotel on grounds that his civil rights had been violated.

The charge, carried to court by Dallas attorney Fred J. Finch Jr. was dismissed on grounds that breach of contract—rather than civil rights—was involved.

■

FINCH RETURNED to court with breach-of-contract charges, but the hotel asked the out-of-court settlement, Dr. Dummett said.

In a letter to Dr. Dummett announcing the settlement this week, Finch said that Dallas, in recent months, has voluntarily desegregated 41 restaurants, and that Negroes are saying in heretofore white motels.

Tuskegee Dentist Wins $500 Out-of Court Argument

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — (ANP) — The refusal of a Dallas, Texas hotel to honor the reservation of a Negro dentist resulted in a $500 out-of-court settlement for Dr. Clifton O. Dummett, chief of Dental Service of the Tuskegee Veterans Administration hospital.

Dr. Dummett revealed last week how, upon advice of counsel, he had agreed to the settlement from the Dallas Statler-Hilton, which, he said, refused him room acommodations in 1958, although he presented a bona fide reservation card he had obtained through the mail.

According to Dr. Dummett, he had made reservations to stay at the Statler-Hilton with other delegates attending the national meeting of the American Dental association. He was to present an exhibit on "Oral Pigmentation" (gum discoloration) at the Dallas coliseum.

Buys Mink Stole; Denied Cup of Coffee

DALLAS, Tex. — To sell a customer a $1,000 mink stole as one of the stand-in participants did, and then be refused a diligent cup of coffee is an un-Godly lack of recognition of moral and business ethics.

The above statement came from the Dallas Committee on Appeal for Human Rights regarding the 'sit-ins currently being staged at Titche-Goettinger Department Store.

The group said white sympathizers are calling in daily, asking what they can do so that their moral intentions can be heard and felt, and many are volunteering to close their accounts at all stores which seek to lower human dignity and human rights.

The Rev. H. Rhett James led a group of four women and a man to the lunch room. Upon entry one lady was able to gain admittance before the management and guards placed a velvet rope in the path of the others.

38a 1961

TEXAS

Plan Times Ad To Help Mix Movies

Chicago Defender
April 4 - 1961
p. 1

AUSTIN, Tex. — (UPI) — The leader of a University of Texas group seeking to integrate movie houses said they plan to advertise their cause 2,000 miles away in New York City.

Chandler Davidson of El Paso, Tex., chairman of the Students for Direct Action, said funds are being raised to purchase a full-page ad in the New York Times in an attempt to reach the president of the ABC-Paramount theater chain with their plea.

Davidson said his group would ask college students and "famous personalities" throughout the country to contribute to their cause.

"There is little doubt that the Times will run the ad," Davidson said.

SDA has held stand-ins and picket lines at Austin theaters since mid-November trying to change segregation policies.

38a 1961

Dr Nabrit To Attend Conference In Africa

Dr S. M. Nabrit, president of Texas Southern University, will attend a ten day conference on University Adult Education in Africa at the University of Ghana, Lagon Hill, Ghana, Africa, January 2nd to January 10, 1962.

This conference is being co-sponsored by the Carnegie Corporation, New York and will include a series of joint meetings including a Symposium on University Adult Education in North America. Twenty African and twenty North American University adult educators will participate.

The Conference purpose is threefold, viz. (1) to provide an opportunity for a comprehensive review and discussion of adult education in Africa by those mainly responsible for this increasingly important work in the new Universities; (2) to provide a number of leading North American adult educators with a better understanding of the progress and problems of University educators in Africa, and at the same time to provide those in Africa with a perspective of what is happening in North America; (3) to facilitate an interchange of ideas and experiences between the two groups and especially to plan towards meeting the needs of Africa in the most effective fashion.

The conference will last ten days and will consist of six to seven days of talk and three to four days of field excursions.

Dr Nabrit is scheduled to make a 40 minute speech on "The characteristics of Adult Students in America" at one of the several sessions.

White minister wife win fight for colored daughter

The Afro-American
Sat. 11-4-61

RUTLAND, Vt. — Christians should be willing to adopt human beings who require it, said the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick P. Miller of this city.

P. 10

And because they were willing to fight for their belief, a little brown girl will have an opportunity for a normal and happy life.

Baltimore Md.

THURSDAY SUPERIOR Court Judge William C. Hill approved the adoption of five - year - old Katharine by the white couple. Judge Hill, in effect, rebuked a lower court that had refused to let the couple adopt the child because of the difference in race.

The Millers have had custody of the child since 1958. When they petitioned for adoption recently, Judge George F. Jones refused to let them adopt the child because, said he, he did not want the records to show a colored child with white parents.

THE MILLERS' plans for an adopted family began in 1957, according to the wife. She said that she and her husband considered accepting to a child of mixed race.

She added that they de-

THE REV. MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK P. MILLER of Rutland, Vt. took their fight to higher court and won the right to adopt five -year - old Katharine, shown with them above. Their son, Van, 2, also adopted, is of Puerto Rican background. The Millers are white.

Police Probe Racial Clash In Virginia

BLACKSTONE, Va. (AP) —The police chief of this southside Virginia town said Friday he was still investigating an interracial clash in which two white boys were peppered with shotgun pellets.

Until that investigation is complete, said Chief Bruce Farley, it is impossible to say whether—or if—any charges might be brought.

The battle between white and Negro youths broke out about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, and Farley said, "by the time police got there it was completely over."

He said the combatants were confined to about 10 or 12 Negro youths and about the same number of white youths.

"There was no big fight. . .no fists. . .no fighting, no rioting."

Some bottles were thrown, the chief said, and a shotgun was fired.

"We don't know which side fired it (the shotgun), or who fired it, at this time," he said.

He said he believed the two white boys were struck by riccocheting pellets and added that neither was hurt seriously. It was doubtful, he said, whether either even required any treatment.

Reports Wednesday night contended the clash was a result of a feud which had smouldered for several days between the white and Negro youths. According to these reports, the fight began when about 50 white youths arrived by car to accept a challenge brought to them by two small boys.

Farley said police "don't know whether they (reports of the challenge) are correct. The colored boys say they did not do it (send the two boys)."

The Negro youths and the white boys accused each other of throwing bottles.

The Wednesday night reports said volunteer firemen armed with hoses broke up the battle. But Farley said the firemen were summoned merely to wash broken glass from the street.

He said the incident was "not of a serious nature. . .with just a few involved on each side."

As far as the reports of a feud are concerned, Farley said, "there was a slight argument the night before between one white boy and a couple of colored boys."

Va. Trespassing Case Dropped; Cafe Closed

Arrest of NAACP official protested

LYNCHBURG, Va. —A trespassing charge against W. Lester Banks, executive secretary of the Virginia conference of NAACP Branches, was nolle prossed in Municipal Court, here, Thursday.

Commonwealth Attorney Royston Jester III, requested that the charge not be prosecuted and Judge Earl W. Wingo granted the motion. Jester said he based his action on a U. S. Supreme Court case involving an interstate passenger refused service in a bus terminal.

Banks was arrested on Oct. 16 in the Lynchburg station of the Norfolk and Western Railway. He had entered the station to purchase a ticket to Bluefield W. Va., after which he sought service in the "white" restaurat. He was refused servie and told to go around to the "colored" lunch counter. He told the waitress that he was comfortable" where he was and wished service there.

* * *

THE NAACP representative then left the station to inform the Association's national office and Washington bureau of what was happening. When he returned to the restaurant he was met by police officers who "politely but firmly" ordered him to leave. When he refused he was placed under arrest for violating Virginia's anti-tresspass law. He was released in $1,000 bond for the hearing.

Witnessing the denial of service and arrest was the Rev. Jack Teeter, a white clergyman who is vice president of the Lynchburg NAACP branch.

Complaints against the restaurant were filed by Clarence Mitchell, director, NAACP Washington bureau, with the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Department of Justice which is investigating the incident.

* * *

MEANWHILE, THE station restaurant has been closed. The closing was ordered after Mrs. Margaretha Newcomb, proprietor, failed to guarantee equal service to all travelers.

Stuart Saunders, N. and W. president, said in New York City, the "regrettable incident" was "clearly a case of failure to carry out company policy since we do not designate or maintain segregated facilities either abroad our trains or in our stations."

Saunders added; "Even though we were not connected directly with the incident and no N. and W. employes were involved, we are sorry it occurred and we are taking steps to see it doesn't happen again."

* * *

W. R. JOHNSON president of the Lynchburg NAACP petitioned Mayor William C. Vauhan for an apology "for the arrest of a nationally known figure who organized a convention in Lynchburg." Mr. Banks had attended the NAACP state convention held in Lynchburg for three days over last weekend.

The Mayor said he regretted the incident and "sincerely hopes the legislative branch, judicial and community customs will not continue at odds." He said "when he (Banks) violated a state law he took any action I might take out of my hands and put it in the legal profession."

White Cleric Claims Bias In Va. Court

LYNCHBURG, Va., Nov. 8 (UPI)—A white minister said today he was ordered from the "Negro side" of a segregated courtroom when he attempted to take a glass of water to the mother of one of his Negro parishioners.

"Justice has become fantastic when a minister cannot give a cup of cold water to a sick woman and sit beside a member of his parish in a courtroom in the United States," said the Rev. John H. Teeter, 36.

Teeter, who is a vice president of the Lynchburg branch of the NAACP, is vicar of the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd here. He said he was asked to get water for a material witness during a preliminary hearing and when he came back with the water he was asked by a bailiff to move to the white side of the court room.

"I refused to comply and left," he said.

(Mr. Teeter said he thereupon asked the Justice Department to investigate segregated Lynchburg courtrooms and quoted a Justice Department aide as saying the Government would "look into it.")

AFTER ARREST OF NAACP OFFICIAL:

N & W President Acts Swiftly To End Jim Crow At Restaurant

Journal and Guide 01 Sat 10-28-61

Norfolk, Va.

Lester Banks Held For 'Trespass'

Convention Visitors Sample Lynchburg's "Hospitality"

Special Correspondence

LYNCHBURG, Va. — The ar-arrests of two Norfolk anch NAACP officials for requesting service in the "white" section of the Norfolk and Western Railway terminal restaurant set off a chain of events which resulted in:

- Arrest of the executive secretary of the Virginia State Conference of NAACP Branches on "trespass" charges.
- A statement by the president of the Norfolk and Western lines deploring segregation in terminals and ordering its end;
- Protests to the Mayor of Lynchburg, railway officials and U. S. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, and
- Request for an "apology" from Lynchburg officials.

THIS SERIES of events was launched early Saturday afternoon when the Rev. W. L. Hamilton, vice-president, and Mrs. H. W. B. Walker, board member of the Norfolk branch NAACP, went into the restaurant at the Lynchburg N & W station and asked for service. Rev. Dr. Hamilton was enroute to Norfolk via train, Mrs. Walker was returning to State NAACP convention sessions then underway.

After they were seated, they were approached by a waiter who told them that they would have to "move to the other side." Rev. Dr. Hamilton told the waiter he was "comfortable" where he was and explained that he had purchased a ticket to Norfolk and preferred having lunch at the terminal to dining on the train.

REV. DR. Hamilton said he also explained recently-enacted ICC and other ordinances to the waiter who, at that time, had been joined by a woman later identified as Mrs. Margaretha Newcomb, manager of the terminal restaurant. Mrs. Newcomb said that the facility was a "private" one and that usual regulations did not apply.

Two police officers arrived and Rev. Dr. Hamilton again reiterated the fact that he and his party were "comfortable."

The officers explained that they had been sent to the terminal by "higher ups" and it was not their desire to make any arrests. Several minutes later, Rev. Dr. Hamilton's train arrived and he and his party left.

ON MONDAY, the arrest of the State NAACP conference's executive secretary took place in the same restaurant.

W. Lester Banks, who had handled arrangements for the convention which ended Sunday, went to the terminal and purchased a ticket to Bluefield, W. Va. While awaiting arrival of his train, Mr. Banks saw a white friend, the Rev. John H. Teeter, vicar of the Church of the Good Shepherd and vice-president of the Lynchburg branch NAACP, and joined him.

WHEN MR. BANKS asked for coffee and pie, he was told by a waitress to go to the other side.

"I told her I was comfortable," Mr. Banks said. Refused service, he asked for the manager. The waitress said that she was the manager.

MR. BANKS left momentarily to make a telephone call and police officers were waiting his return. He again asked for coffee and pie and was directed "politely but firmly" by police officers to leave. When he refused to do so, Mr. Banks was taken into custody on charges of violating the state's anti-trespass laws. The arresting officers were Lt. W. N. Smith and Capt. W. E. Gilliam.

Within an hour, Mr. Banks was released on $1,000 bond furnished by Dr. Walter "Whirlwind" Johnson of Lynchburg.

Mr. Banks said that he would file a complaint with the Federal Bureau of Investigation at Lynchburg and explained that during his absence from the restaurant he had made a telephone call to the Washington branch NAACP asking that office to contact the Justice Department.

MR. BANKS said "As an authorized interstate passenger, I was shocked at the restaurant's refusal to serve me. It was particularly shocking after the conclusion of such a peaceful NAACP meeting here."

The operator of the restaurant, who swore out the complaint, Mrs. Newcomb, is a German war bride who became an American citizen in 1955 "It is a strange world when a former German can have a native-born American arrested when he seeks only civil rights guaranteed under the United States Constitution," said Mr. Banks.

DEVELOPMENTS continued Tuesday when the president of the N & W Railway said steps would be taken to eliminate segregation at the Lynchburg terminal restaurant.

Stuart Saunders, N&W head, said that the treatment of Mr. Banks was "clearly a case of failure to carry out company policy since we do not designate or maintain segregated facilities either aboard our trains or in our stations."

THE RESTAURANT here has doors labeled "white" and "colored."

Mr. Saunders said that "Even though we were not connected directly with the incident and no N&W employees were involved we are sorry it occurred and we are taking steps to see that it doesn't happen again."

On Thursday, the restaurant was not open for business.

IN THE MEANTIME, W. T. Johnson Jr., president of the Lynchburg NAACP, had sent letters of protest to Mr. Saunders, to Lynchburg's Mayor William C. Vaughan, to Burk Marshall, Assistant U. S. Attorney General, Civil Rights Division, and to Attorney General Kenendy.

The branch asked that the Justice Department make a "full-scale, on-the-scene investigation . . . so that all facilities of interstate railroads be open to all persons."

IT ALSO asked that city officials apologize for the incident. "Already the news story of Mr. Banks' arrest has reached the people of Africa and Asia with whom the United States government wishes to maintain cordial relations," a letter to Mayor Vaughan said, adding, "Certainly this arrest tarnishes the reputation of Virginia, Lynchburg, and the nation."

Mr. Banks is to be tried Oct. 26 at 9 a. m. in Municipal Court on trespass charges.

Mr. Banks' case is a result of the anti-trespass laws which were unanimously passed in the last session of the Virginia General Assembly.

W. LESTER BANKS
Charge: Trespass

VIRGINIA

NOVEMBER
LYNCHBURG- UNION STATION
RESTAURANT

Virginia-Maryland Briefs

Restaurant Owner Won't Reopen on Integrated Basis

LYNCHBURG, Va., Nov. 5 (AP)—An offer by the Norfolk and Western Railway to Mr. and Mrs. Maurice E. Newcomb to reopen their closed restaurant in Lynchburg's Union Station has been rejected, Mrs. Newcomb has disclosed.

The restaurant was closed Oct. 17, two days after NAACP Virginia Conference executive secretary W. Lester Banks was arrested there and charged with trespassing. He had sought service in the white section of the restaurant.

The case against Banks was subsequently dropped.

Mrs. Newcomb said Clark Hale, superintendent of the Norfolk division of the Norfolk and Western Railway, told her the restaurant could be reopened if she would permit desegregation.

She said she had a letter dated Nov. 2 from Railway President Stuart Saunders saying the company was "willing to permit you to reopen this restaurant provided you are willing to comply with requirement of the law which prohibits discrimination between patrons on the basis of race."

The letter added: "I understand . . . that you were not willing to do this . . . I take it . . . this is your final decision."

Mrs. Newcomb, German-born war bride of a former United States Airman, said Friday that her attorney had arranged with a railway lawyer for cancellation of the lease, allowing her and her husband 90 days to remove approximately $7500 worth of equipment from the building.

She said she had "too much pride" to reopen the restaurant now.

SEPTEMBER

VIRGINIA LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE ORDERED LAWYERS AND CIVIL RIGHTS LEADERS IN 4 CITIES TO PRODUCE RECORDS ON THEIR DESEGREGATION ACTIVITIES.

Negro Law Firm Raided in Norfolk

The Washington Post

Virginia Civil Rights Leaders Told To Produce Desegregation Records

p. 9

Fri. 9-8-61

Wash. Star, D.C.

By Laurence Stern
Staff Reporter

A Virginia legislative committee ordered lawyers and civil rights leaders in four cities yesterday to produce records on their desegregation activities.

Committee agents unsuccessfully raided the office of a Negro law firm in Norfolk and subpoenaed clergymen in Hopewell, Lynchburg and Petersburg for the suspected evidence.

The forays by the Committee on Offenses Against the Administration of Justice marked the opening of a wide-ranging investigation of seven groups seeking to break down segregation barriers in the Old Dominion.

These groups are the Congress on Racial Equality (CORE), Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Inc.; Virginia Christian Leadership Conference and the Hopewell, Lynchburg, Petersburg and Portsmouth Improvement associations.

The Committee also is seeking a court order which would compel the NAACP to divulge the names of contributors. This case is pending in Richmond Hustings Court.

In the Norfolk raid, three city sergeants and two representatives of the Committee tried to attach records and correspondence in the office of Jordan, Dawley and Holt, a Negro firm.

They left empty-handed after a half-hour meeting with two of the partners, E. Armistead Dawley Jr. and Leonard W. Holt Jr. "We took the position that we had no records that would be of interest to them," Dawley said.

Dawley and Holt said the legislative committee also demanded records within 24 hours from the Rev. Virgil Wood in Lynchburg, the Rev. Milton Reid in Petersburg and another clergyman in Hopewell. All are leaders of local improvement associations.

A committee spokesman said his group is looking into possible violation of the Commonwealth's 1958 barratry act.

Barratry—the improper solicitation of clients and excitement of litigation—is a common-law offense in Virginia.

Dawley and Holt said they are planning to take legal counter-action against the committee.

Bias Case In Appeals Court

The Defender
Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — The full nine-member bench of the U. S. Court of Appeals was asked last week to reinstate a claim against Hot Shoppes, Inc., for refusing to serve a Negro in Alexandria.

Charles E. Williams, said he could prove, if given chance, that a restaurant manager acted "under color of Virginia law" when excluding him in November, 1959.

Williams, a Treasury department attorney arguing his own case, said it made no difference that State Atty. Gen. Albertis S. Harris, jr., later declared that Virginia's segregation laws did not apply to restaurants. The point is that the manager thought the law applied, Williams said.

Williams complaint for $5000 damages, which was dismissed in District court, stated that the manager disavowed personal prejudice but cited the Virginia law.

This kind of discrimination, Williams said, is a form of "state action" barred by the 14th amendment and the Civil Rights Act of 1875.

Atty. Charles J. Steele said the manager was obeying the law as he understood it, not enforcing on behalf of the State. Hot Shoppes and other corporations desegregated their Virginia restaurants after last summer's sit-in demonstrations.

Signs gone in wake of protests

The Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

NORFOLK, Va. — Officials of the city of Norfolk said Thursday that there are no signs in the new public Safety Building to segregate restroom facilities on a racial basis.

The statement was made after Joseph Jordan, a Norfolk attorney, began circulation of petitions urging that Norfolk, recently designated an "all-American City," be requested to remove the signs which were in evidence during dedication of the new building on Feb. 18.

The signs were taken down shortly after the dedication, officials said, but declined comment on who ordered the signs taken down or had authorized them to be put up in the first place.

Mr. Jordan said that he would check the building again, and that if the signs were no longer in evidence, he would withdraw his petitions.

U.S. Apologizes For Racial Snub

The Defender.
Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — The Department of State this week expressed regrets to the Nigerian Embassy for the embarrassing incident of segregation which the second secretary, C. C. Uchuno, was recently subjected to in Charlottesville, Va.

The department also asked the mayor of that city, Louie L. Scribner, to furnish information on the refusal by a restaurant there to serve an African diplomat. This request was made by assistant secretary for African affairs, Joseph C. Satterthwaite, after the Nigerian embassy had entered a formal protest on the incident.

The incident came to public attention last week-end when the Nigerian secretary reported that he had been given food in a paper bag at a restaurant and told to eat outside.

DIPLOMATIC IDENTITY

Although Uchuno showed his diplomatic identity card he was still told to leave the premises.

"There was no place to eat outside so I sat down in the restaurant and ate my breakfast," Uchuno said. But when he asked for a second cup of coffee, he was refused.

The Nigerian diplomat had boarded a train in Washington enroute to Charleston, West Virginia, where he was scheduled to address a forum at West Virginia college. He took advantage of a 30-minute layover in Charlottesville to get off the train and have breakfast at a nearby restaurant.

Dorothy Kilby, the restaurant owner at the station is reported as having said that the restaurant had a long standing policy of giving Negro patrons their orders in a bag so that they could eat elsewhere.

The mayor of Charlottesville told reporters that he was not investigating this matter even though he had been requested to do so by a telegram from the state department.

He claimed that he knew of no official action that could be taken since this took place in a private eating establishment, but added that he regreted the incident.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner said he would call a meeting of Manhattan councilmen "within a reasonable" time to select another Borough president.

The post is expected to go to another Negro.

N.Y. Kicks Out Insurance Bias

Chicago Defender

ALBANY, N. Y. — (UPI — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller Thursday took a major step in ending a form of discrimination in the state by approving a bill prohibiting distinction because of race, color, creed or national origin in the writing of insurance policies.

Present law prohibits discrimination only in connection with the writing of life insurance. The bill which became the law bans any distinction in premiums or rates for policies or in any other insurance matters.

Church Racial Duty Stressed

The Washington Post
Washington, D. C.

By Kenneth Dole
Staff Reporter

The minister of Walker Chapel (Methodist) told his congregation yesterday that there is no more important task before them "as representatives of Jesus Christ in Arlington, in Virginia, in the South, in America in 1961" than helping to solve the race problem.

Though, as Christians, "we must be impatient to be about the job of reaching a Christian solution, we must also"—Negroes and whites alike—"be patient enough not to push too hard doors that are opening slowly," said the Rev. Dr. Garland Evans Hopkins.

He said he believed that the "intelligent and farsighted leadership in both races" can get together on methods and means.

Sometimes ministers and churches, the minister said, "have stood with the most reactionary movements in American life, staunchly defending the status quo and refusing to face the fact that we are caught in a tide that will not go back because we command it to."

Nevertheless, he said, "the most fearless and hopeful leadership in the crisis has come from the churches and particularly from the clergy."

Richmond Groups Fight City Court Biased Seating

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

RICHMOND, Va. — (ANP) — A plea for desegregation of spectator seating facilities in Petersburg Municipal Court was taken under advisement here last week by U. S. Dist. Judge Oren R. Lewis.

The judge advised Len Holt, counsel for three Petersburg Negroes who are complainants in the suit, that because of a crowded court docket a decision may not be handed down until next month.

The Negroes seek a federal court injunction to restrain Petersburg Municipal Judge Herbert A. Gilliam from enforcing segregation in courtroom.

Walter E. Rogers, counsel for Judge Gilliam, said the purpose of segregation of the races in the court is to prevent friction.

Holt replied that segregated seatings is not necessary to preserve order in the court.

Holt said, and Rogers agreed, that the practice of segregation of spectators in Virginia's state courtrooms is not universal some do, some don't. The Negro complaint, Holt added, is that they are being classified according to race in the Petersburg court and Negroes find this "repugnant."

"It seems that the courts of the land should lead in integration," Holt, a Norfolk attorney, told Judge Lewis.

Colored Patrons Denied Service At Norfolk Store

Management of the W. G. Swartz department store was apologetic but firm in its policy not to allow colored patrons use of its dining facilities when three prominent citizens sought and were denied service Thursday morning. One of the group, Mrs. W. T. Mason, told the store management that as a consequence, "a hundred or more charge accounts will be withdrawn" by colored patrons.

That is the upshoot of action taken Thursday at noon when the three persons, representing the NAACP, the local Women's Committee of 100, and the National Council of Negro Women sought service in the Swartz dining room.

THE THREE were the Rev. W. L. Hamilton, board chairman of the local NAACP; Mrs. Mason and Mrs. H. W. B. Walker. Both Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Walker are affiliated with the two women's groups. Mrs. Mason is president-emeritus of the national organization.

When the three arrived at the Swartz dining facility, the official hostess refused to admit them and asked them to await arrival of the store manager.

SWARTZ Manager John A. Watts told the group that store policy made it necessary for him to ask them to leave without service. When asked by Rev. Dr. Hamilton to give an official statement of store policy, Mr. Watts declined to do so, but said that the management of Swartz felt that this was "not the proper time to integrate" the dining facility.

Mrs. Mason stated that the members of the National Council of Negro Women and the Committee of 100 Women had authorized the three to state that they (the members) would withdraw their accounts with the Swartz firm unless the delegation was served. Mr. Watts replied "That's your privilege" but said he was "sorry that (closing accounts) is necessary."

MRS. MASON, then went to the Accounts Department where she announced the accounts withdraway plan. She said that open accounts would be paid up and then closed.

Mr. Watts said that the Swartz firm had been ready to make a policy statement during recent meetings between representatives of uptown groups and representatives of other local department stores which have since desegregated their dining facilities. He said that he had not been allowed to make the statement during the meetings.

PERSONS WHO took part in those sessions, including Dr. Hamilton, Mrs. Mason, R. D. Robertson and others, refuted the charge, saying that at no time was the privilege to make a policy statement denied any of the participants.

Three other department stores, Smith and Welton, Ames and Brownley and Rice's, as result of the conference, voluntarily opened their dining facilities to all customers on Feb. 3.

Some Of Lynchburgh's Political Background

THE CURRENT RACIAL crisis in Lynchburg which resulted last week in two Negro ministers, among others, being sentenced to jail for 60 days each, has had our editorial department looking into the political background of the quiet, and apparently placid city in the foothills of Virginia.

After reading some chapters in Volume I of the Debates of the Constitutional Convention of 1901-02, we reached the conclusion that Lynchburg is largely a reflection of the mind of the late Senator CARTER GLASS—as that keen, politically astute mind worked around the turn of the century.

Mr. GLASS was a great power in the Constitutional Convention of 1901-02. He was a spokesman—not for racists in that convention — but for a small group that stood between the racists and the more reasonable and moderate delegates, such as the late Gov. JOHN GARLAND POLLARD. He was agreeable to Virginia adopting a constitution which would withhold from Negro children all except a primary education, operating a maximum of five months a year. But he opposed a plan which would use only taxes paid by Negroes for the education of Negro children. However, he would not stand for education beyond the primary grades for members of the Negro race.

On one occasion when the convention was debating a report of its committee on public education, which had set up a very restricted system academically, Mr. GLASS believed that the restrictions were too rigid. A curious paradox of his championship of colored children's right to a primary education was the language which he used during these debates in defense of his position.

Speaking on one occasion of the loopholes in the education committee's report which would have allowed localities in south-side Virginia to provide no education al all for Negroes, Mr. GLASS said, "it might be that in any white community in this state, not afflicted with the presence of Negroes, that sort of sentiment would largely prevail, in this district, or another, and it is against that we stand here to protest."

Then Mr. GLASS went on to say that as matters stood a concession had been made "to the very desire of the people who are afflicted with the Negro—as my own town is, by the way—"

The concession which Mr. GLASS referred to and which he was defending was the constitutional right of white citizens to provide schools for white children that would take up where the primary schools for Negroes and whites left off, but would use none of the public funds to provide similar education for Negro children of the state.

This attitude which was general throughout Virginia, and particularly in the Southside and Southwest. left its impact on Lynchburg, which was the home town of Mr. GLASS.

He felt there were counties and cities in the state which were "afflicted" with the presence of the Negro and these places included Lynchburg. At that time he looked upon Negroes as a social and political affliction. Looking upon Lynchburg today and the power which Mr. GLASS and his colleagues exerted over Lynchburg we do not know which was the city's greatest affliction, the colored citizens, or Mr. GLASS.

It is a paradox however. that as CARTER GLASS went on to rise from one position of responsibilty to another—State Senator, Representative in the House, Secretary of the U. S. Treasury and U. S. Senator—his attitude toward colored people softened. There were times in the experience of Howard University when the institution's annual appropriations were being held up by recalcitrant Congressmen, the president of the University could go to Senator GLASS and get the appropriations moving.

In the afternoon of his life Senator CARTER GLASS was a good friend to education for all people, but we believe that his beginning years in politics had an impact on Lynchburg which remains to this day, when pastors of churches, college students of mature age, and a 16-year-old female juvenile are put in jail for trying to impress the city in a non-violent manner with the dignity of the whole human race.

The Lynchburg crisis, from latest reports, is relaying, due to the intervention of both white and colored citizens of good will.

38a 1961

VIRGINIA

C O R E- CONGRESS OF RACIAL EQUALITY

Fairfax County Orders Halt Of CORE Classes

Fairfax County yesterday issued formal notices charging that an institute for racial demonstration is violating the zoning ordinance and must be ended by 8 a. m, Monday.

The notices went out to six trustees of the Mt. Vernon Unitarian Church on whose hilltop estate the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) is holding classes on anti-segregation protest.

The church's trustees, talking informally, have decided to refuse the County's ultimatum, Board Chairman Joseph J. Remington said yesterday. The trustees do not feel the ordinance is being violated, he added.

County officials charged that the residential neighborhood site is being used as a school without a permit and that the buildings are occupied by more than one family in a zone restricted to single-family dwellings.

The notices warned that the County would "institute such action as may be necessary to terminate the violation" if the Monday deadline is not met. They were issued after County Executive Carlton C. Massey met with Commonwealth's Attorney Robert C. Fitzgerald and Asst. Zoning Administrator William T. Mooreland.

About 35 CORE students are attending the workshop sit-ins and other demonstrations and have lived in two buildings on the estate. The institute is scheduled to conclude on Thursday.

Negro's Counsel Charges Frameup

RICHMOND, April 25 (AP) Counsel for an Alexandria Negro attorney charged today that Warern county officials had framed his client "to put (him) into a difficult position."

The charge was made to the State Supreme Court by Samuel W. Tucker of Emporia, representing his brother, Otto L. Tucker of Alexandria.

Otto Tucker appeared before a special Warren County Circuit Court in 1959 following a 7th district bar committee's charge of unprofessional conduct.

The Alexandria attorney was charged with improper solicitation of business. The case resulted from an assault case in Warren county in which the Negro attorney represented one of several defendants.

The misconduct charge stemmed from Otto Tucker's representation of a white teenager.

Samuel Tucker told the high court the entire case against Otto Tucker is built upon an affidavit sworn to by his brother's white client "most of which was refuted by its maker in sworn testimony upon the stand."

Francis C. Lee, assistant state attorney general, representing the Commonwealth, countered that he would be willing to "dismiss the affidavit and rely solely on the testimony in this case."

Lee said Otto Tucker, for whom a reprimand was ordered, should be "very happy that the court treated him so leniently."

He said that for the Supreme Court to reverse the lower court's verdict would "put the seal of approval" on the alleged misconduct "thereby lowering the standards of the bar."

Fairfax Stand Asked In Desegregation Plan

Fairfax County Supervisors have been asked to take a stand on racial desegregation in places of recreation and public accommodation in the County.

The request came from the County Council on Human Relations which recently made plans to seek desegregation of bowling alleys, theaters and motels.

A resolution was requested "expressing the sense of the Board that there is no obstacle in the law or in community sentiment to the adoption of non-discriminatory practices by all places of public entertainment, recreation and accommodation in the County."

The Council also asked Commonwealth's Attorney Robert C. Fitzgerald for opinions whether Virginia's segregated assembly laws apply to bowling alleys, theaters, and motels.

The Supervisors took no action on the request yesterday.

K to Visit Morocco

Reuters

RABAT, Morocco, April 26 Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev has accepted an invitation by King Hassan to make an official visit to Morocco, at an unspecified date, the Foreign Ministry here announced today.

Priest Prays For Arrested Fighters Of Bias

MIDDLEBURG, Va. — UPI — President Kennedy heard his priest offer a special prayer Sunday for efforts to desegregate public eating places in this Virginia community near the Chief Executive's country retreat.

The Rev. Albert F. Pereira, pastor of St. John's Roman Catholic parish, pronounced the prayer at the Mass which the President and Mrs. Kennedy attended at the Community center here.

"With the eyes of the world on this little town of Middleburg, we should be ashamed that we did not correct this injustice until we were pressured by outsiders, local custom notwithstanding," the priest added in a strongly worded parish bulletin.

"Jesus was a Samaritan lover, which is equivalent to being a nigger lover today," he added.

Fr. Pereira and local Protestant clergyman persuaded lunch counter and restaurant operators last week to allow Negroes to eat in the formerly white-only establishments.

The clergyman wanted to avoid any embarrassment for the President whose rented Glen Ora estate is just outside town.

A Negro couple was served without incident Sunday at the Red Fox Tavern where the presidential press corps is staying, Several other Negroes were served at the [redacted] street.

The President and First Lady were accompanied to Mass by Kennedy's sister, Jean, and her husband Stephen Smith. The Smiths flew to Glen Ora with the President by helicopter Saturday.

Kennedy planned to fly back to the White House by helicopter on Monday morning, if the weather permits. His schedule will be devoted to diplomatic matters, starting with a 10 a.m. (EST) visit from Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, new U. S. Ambassador to Spain.

Says Africans need passes in Virginia

RICHMOND

If African diplomatic personnel carry papers proving they are not colored American citizens, they stand a fair chance of being treated courteously in Virginia — that is, if they make prior arrangements and if local businessmen are so inclined.

This is the reply of Virginia Gov. J. Lindsay Almond to President Kennedy's request (sent to the governors of all states) that foreign diplomatic personnel, especially Africans, be courteously treated.

Citing the fact that new African embassies will substantially increase the number of diplomatic personnel, the President wrote:

"Unfortunately, there have been incidents which have brought complaints to the Department of State and received adverse attention in the world's press.

"Although most of these incidents have not been the subject of formal protests, they understandably still rankle and are a disservice to the individuals involved, our own nation and the cause of international understanding."

* * *

REPLYING THAT he would be pleased to cooperate, Gov. Almond said: "The operation of private business ... is under the control of the owners and proprietors."

He further said: "Specifically, would it not be well to suggest to the representatives of other nations that they clearly identify themselves when seeking service in any establishment ...?" and "I suggest, also, where possible, travel and other arrangements be made in advance, in order that proper hospitality may be assured."

The governor sent copies of the two letters to mayors and trade associations of various Virginia cities saying "I know I can count on your support in bringing the President's message to the attention of those individuals and businesses that may be directly concerned."

'Unforgivable insult'—

Negroes protest Reb flag on tag

SPOTSYLVANIA, Va., April 17 —(AP)—The Confederate flag on the license tag that Spotsylvania County sells to motorists apparently will stay there despite the outraged protest of Negro leaders.

"I don't see that anything can be done about it now," says A. Miller Arritt, chairman of the County Board of Supervisors. "It's just something to call attention to the Civil War Centennial."

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, however, see the flag-on-the-tag affair in a radically different light.

"AN UNFORGIVABLE insult to every colored citizen of the country." The executive secretary of the Virginia NAACP conference, W. Lester Banks, calls the presence of the Rebel battle flag on the county license.

The NAACP'S Spotsylvania County branch officially protested the license early last week. It said its protest was ignored by the supervisors. Last Saturday, the state NAACP joined in the fray.

With the help of the state organization's legal counsel, the county NAACP fired off a brand new letter to the supervisors which said Negroes feel "personally degraded" by having to carry the license on their cars.

The letter said Negroes are being compelled "to imply that we thank the Confederacy for doing its best to keep us in physical bondage."

ARRITT DIDN'T say yesterday that the supervisors would grant a hearing the NAACP has demanded on the flag-on-the-tag issue, but he remaked that the matter was brought up awfully late in the game.

The county already has sold more than 4000 tags—or 90 per cent of all it has—the supervisors' chairman said. They've been on sale since March 15 and the deadline for buying them was last Saturday.

MONTICELLO HOTEL, NORFOLK, VA.
VICE MAYOR JAMES B. SIMMONS, JR.

No Room For The Vice Mayor

Vice Mayor James B. Simmons Jr. (rear) is shown leaving the Monticello Hotel in Norfolk on Sunday after being informed that his room reservation had been cancelled because of his race.

Preceding him is William Mercer, instructor of music at Norfolk Division of Virginia State College. Mr. Simmons was an official delegate to the International Municipal Workshop on Parking at the hotel. Mr. Simmons said the manager was apologetic, and that he was permitted to use all of the hotel's other facilities for delegates (including dining).

Reservation Cancelled In Norfolk

Journal + Guide
Norfolk, Va
Apr. 5-6-61

Virginia Jim Crow Greets Negro Solon At Parking Parley

Denied a room along with other delegates to the International Municipal Workshop on Parking at the Monticello Hotel in Norfolk on Sunday, Vice Mayor James B. Simmons Jr. of Toledo, Ohio, told the Guide on Monday that he received every other courtesy the hotel could offer. The meetings will end Wednesday.

Mr. Simmons said that when he arrived at the hotel the clerk on the registration desk informed him that his reservation, made by Toledo officials, had been cancelled.

HE ASKED TO see the manager, Jack Armory, who apologized and stated that Virginia law does not permit the hotel to offer lodging to both white and colored guests. Mr. Simmons said he was told the hotel would lose its license if it housed whites and Negroes at the same time.

Mr. Simmons said his reservations were made by the city of Toledo and the required $25 fee was paid by the city.

THE MONTICELLO sent reservations by mail to Mr. Simmons for a room with twin beds and extended a welcome to him and his wife as guests of the hotel and the city of Norfolk. He acknowledged the reservations, but informed the hotel that his wife would not attend the workshop.

He said that since the Sunday incident he had received every courtesy from city officials and from the hotel manager including use of the dining room.

"I have received more attention here than at any similar meetings I attended in the North," he said.

MR. SIMMONS, who is stopping at the home of his former Lincoln University (Pa.) classmates, William Mercer and Dr. Edward R. Archer, said he was aware of conditions in the South and did not wish to create an incident.

"HOWEVER, I felt that as a representative of my city, I should seek the same services that were made available to delegates from other cities," he said.

"I came here to deal with parking problems, and I intend to do my job with dignity," he continued.

Mr. Simmons is a member of the off street parking committee in Toledo.

He will remain in Norfolk until May 4.

The workshop is being sponsored by the American Municipal Parking Association, of which Norfolk is a member. This is the seventh annual workshop sponsored by the group.

Dine? Yes--Sleep? No

James B. Simmons Jr., vice mayor of Toledo, Ohio, is shown at the right with his back to the camera as he showed reservations for a room at the Monticello Hotel in Norfolk on Sunday.

The clerk told him that the reservation had been cancelled, and the manager said Virginia's segregation laws were to blame. At the left is William Mercer, music instructor at Norfolk Division of Virginia State College. Mr. Simmons was in Norfolk for a meeting of the International Municipal Workshop on Parking at the hotel.

Segregated Virginia Theater Is Picketed

The Washington Post
Washington, DC
p. 1, 3-26-61
1, 3-A

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., March 25 (Special)—Nine University of Virginia students demonstrated in front of the privately owned University Theater here today in the first instance of picketing in protest of the segregation policy of a Charlottesville business.

Seven white and two Negro students carried placards urging the theater's management to admit Negroes.

A spokesman for the group, Peter H. Wiernik, a fourth year pre-medical student, said the picketing stemmed from a breakdown in negotiations in Richmond on Wednesday when the students met with Morton G. Thalheimer, president of the board of Neighborhood Theaters, Inc., owners of the University Theater.

Wiernik said the picketing will be resumed Sunday.

On March 1, six Negro students, backed by 15 white students and faculty members were turned away from the theater's ticket window. The manager told them he had been instructed to abide by Virginia law requiring segregated seating, and that he had no separate facilities for Negroes.

Subsequently, a group of students and faculty members at the University drew up a petition calling on the citizens of Charlottesville to protest by refusing to attend the theater until its policy was changed.

38a 1961

VIRGINIA

THE REV. JOHN H. TEETER, VICAR
GOOD SHEPPERD EPISCOPAL CHURCH AND
VICE PRESIDENT OF THE LYNCHBURG NAACP GROUP

The Montgomery Advertiser

VICAR GETS BOUNCED

The Rev. John H. Teeter, vicar of the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd in Lynchburg, Va., and vice president of the Lynchburg NAACP group, was forcibly ejected from a courtroom Monday for refusing to abide by court-ordered segregation.—AP Wirephoto

"WALK IN MY SHOES"
TELEVISION SERIES CALLED "CLOSEUP"

Racial Program On TV Sets Off Louisiana Storm

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A storm of protest arose here Wednesday over a racial program carried on a local television station.

Sheriff J. Howell Flournoy of Caddo Parish said the program —"Walk in My Shoes"—could bring about "conditions which could bring bloodshed."

Television station KTBS, an affiliate of American Broadcasting Co., carried the program Tuesday night. It was part of a network series called "Closeup."

One Negro speaker on the program said the white man's way "would be buried" while another said, "The white man's way is running out on him. He's got to go. The whole white man's empire is about to crumble. I hope he'll be able to cope with it and be as humble as we were when we were on the bottom."

SIT- INS
NEGROES LOSE BIRMINGHAM SIT-In APPEAL

RULING FAVORS MERCHANTS

Court Upholds Conviction Of 12 Arrested In Sit-Ins

Ruling that a merchant can serve which customer he sees fit, the Alabama Court of Appeals Tuesday upheld the conviction of 12 Negroes arrested in a series of sit-ins.

Ten Negro students were taken into custody after trying to eat at white lunch counters in five downtown Birmingham stores March 31, 1960.

Two Negro leaders, the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth and the Rev. Charles Billups, were charged with inciting the students to violate the law.

The students were fined $100 and costs each and sentenced to 30 days in jail under a city ordinance which makes it unlawful to remain on the property of another after being warned to leave.

Presiding Judge Robert B. Harwood, writing the controlling opinion in 10 student cases, said no segregation law involved; only trespassing.

He pointed out that the stores involved are private interprises with "no connection with any governmental agency, federal, state, county or city."

The Judge's finding was based on a sit-in at Pizitz Department Store, but the rule was applied to all 10 students who visited the downtown store in pairs.

Harwood said the store, "Being the owner of its premises, had a full right to limit the use of its own premises as it saw fit. By its own choice it could limit the use of any part of its premises. It exercised this right to limit the use of its restaurant."

Continuing, the judge wrote: "The right to operate a restaurant on its own premises under such conditions as it saw fit was an inalienable property right . . . the appellant (the students) would destroy this property right by attempting to misapply the 14th amendment, ignoring the provision in that amendment that grants the right to a private property owner the full use of his property."

The court said each Negro entered the downtown stores "as a licensee by implied invitation. He had no interest in the premises." And, the decision added, "it is fundamental . . . that the grantor of a license, which has not become coupled with an interest, may revoke the license at will."

When the Negroes were asked to leave and refused, Harwood concluded, their status as licensees "was destroyed" and they automatically became trespassers.

Shuttlesworth and Billups were convicted of organizing the sit-in demonstrations. Shuttlesworth was fined $100 and sentenced to 180 days in jail; the other minister fined $25 and 30 days in jail.

The students arrested were James Gober, Robert L. Parker Jr., Jessie Walker, Willie J. Willis, Roy Hutchinson, Robert D. Sanders, William West, James Albert Davis, Robert J. King and Roosevelt Westmoreland.

Negroes Lose Birmingham Sit-In Appeal

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Ruling that a merchant can serve which customers he sees fit, the Alabama Court of Appeals Tuesday upheld the conviction of 12 Negroes arrested in a series of sit-ins.

Ten Negro students were taken into custody after trying to eat at white lunch counters in five downtown Birmingham stores March 31, 1960.

Two Negro leaders, the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth and the Rev.

Set Student Fund as Topic At Conference on 'Sit-Ins'

WASHINGTON, D. C. (ACNS) — When members of the American Council on Human Rights meet here March 4 to discuss 1960 activities and avenues opened for future action, they are sure to discuss the importance and effect of the Student Emergency Fund on the current "sit-in" demonstrations.

Since its inception in early 1960, the fund has received the support of the national member organizations of ACHR and has received more than $7,300 in contributions from Alpha Kappa Alpha, Sigma Gamma Rho, Zeta Phi Beta and Delta Sigma Theta sororities and individuals.

To date, $3,884 has been donated to several organizations to help continue the fight against racial discrimination in America.

■

FINANCIAL SUPPORT from the fund has gone to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Greater New York Students' Association, the Atlanta Student Defense Fund, The Pittsburgh Courier's "Dollars for Dignity," the Women's Steering Committee of Atlanta, and the D. C. Area Non-Violent Group.

In keeping with its primary function, the fund also has helped several college students who have suffered financial difficulties because of "peaceful protest demonstrations against America's caste system."

The first grant of $1,120 went to four students at North Carolina's A. and T. College who started the protest movement in February, 1960.

■

COMMENTING ON the aid, Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, president of A. and T. said: "This will encourage them as they seek to complete their education. Neither young man had personal glory or monetary return in mind and I have found them to be very grateful for the response that you have made to their schools' needs."

Ezell A. Blair Jr., and A. and T. student wrote the council a letter in which he said: "The finances will aid me considerably in the continuance of my quest for knowledge. May God's blessing continue to be yours for the rewarding tasks you are doing to rid our nation of discrimination based upon race, religion or creed."

John R. Lewis, an American Baptist Seminary student in Nashville, Tenn., says: "This was an opportunity for me to do something about a system which I have always hated. As a ministerial student I felt that it was my moral and Christian duty to put my Christian faith into action. I view racial injustice as one of the greatest evils of our times and I feel that I must play a part in bringing it to an end." Lewis also received aid from the Student Emergency Fund.

■

A HOWARD University student, Henry Thomas, who received a ACHR award for risking his educational opportunities said: "I saw the movement as the once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for me to do something about a situation that has long troubled me. I had reached that stage in life when the issue of racial discrimination could no longer be thought of as something that would eventually pass away. I felt that this type of thing only passes away when we work for its end."

According to Dr. Barrington D Parker, national president of ACHR, the council is still accepting applications for award to students suffering reprisals because of peaceful protest demonstrations.

Students seeking ACHR aid should address their applications to the Student Emergency Fund of ACHR, 1130 Sixth St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

ACHR Votes $1,000 to Aid Broke Sit-Ins

WASHINGTON — The forgotten class of 1959 was remembered when members of the American Council on Human Rights' Board of Directors voted to contribute $1,000 to the Prince Edward County Christian Association to aid its efforts in providing guidance to Negro students who have not attended public school for more than two years.

The Association is headed by the Rev. L. Francis Griffin, a Farmville, Va., minister who has been active in the organization since the state's massive resistance laws turned 1,700 Negro pupils out of their classrooms in 1959.

The $1,000 contribution which was made in answer to an appeal by Miss Dorothy I. Height a representative of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, came from ACHR's Student Emergency Fund.

The Student Emergency Fund was started early in 1960 to aid college students who have suffered financial difficulties because of "peaceful protest demonstrations against America's caste system." This marks the first time that ACHR has extended financial support to public school students.

Negroes stage jail sit-down, riot follows

FOLSOM, Calif., March 4 (AP)—Ten convicts were injured at Folsom Prison Friday night in a race riot that broke out in a mess hall. Some were hit by flying trays and plates, others by lead ricocheting from the ceiling when guards fired warning shots.

Six Negroes and four whites were injured, none critically. Warden Robert Heinze said the outburst erupted from tension over the black supremacy Muslim sect at the huge penitentiary near Sacramento.

Heinze described the situation today as "incendiary," with a serious threat of new outbreaks between Negro and white prisoners.

A white convict, Joe C. Croffland, of Alameda County, tossed his mess tray into a group of seated Negroes in dining Hall No. 1, Friday night and touched off a free-for-all involving scores of prisoners, Heinze said.

Guards fired their revolvers toward the ceiling in warning, and the melee broke up with prisoners scurrying under dining tables. Two men were wounded.

EARLIER IN THE DAY 24 Negroes, including 11 Muslim leaders, were transferred to Soledad Prison in what officials called a security move to break tension at this maxium security facility.

Warden Heinze traced the flare-up in part to "sit-ins" by Muslims in dining areas which white prisoners considered theirs by tradition. He said the Muslims aggressively sought to create incidents.

Heinze said there is no racial segregation at the prison, but added it works out that way in the dining hall where prisoners are allowed to select their own tables and meal companions.

"The Muslims definitely do not have the support of the majority of the Negroes here. As a matter of fact, many actively oppose the movement," the warden said.

HEINZE ESTIMATED there still are about 30 active Muslims at the prison, but said the dining hall outbreak may have won more converts.

"We've got to find them," he said.

Muslims are members of a Negro nationalist movement which claims its race will be the only one to survive. It preaches segregation from whites.

Prison officials disagreed sharply with the Muslims over their claim to being a religion, saying they had no ties to Moslems or other recognized religious groups.

This week the state Supreme Court began studying a petition which asks that Folsom prison officials be ordered to permit Muslims to practice their rites.

Warden Heinze said the outbreak Friday night justified the prison's efforts to break up the sect.

Catholics in Ceylon End School Sit-Ins

COLOMBO, Ceylon, Jan 18 (AP).—Ceylon's Roman Catholic bishops today called off the occupation of Catholic schools by parents protesting the government's decision to put religious schools under state management.

Incensed Catholic parents have been squatting since December 1 in some of the island's 750 Catholic schools, saying they would not allow them to be run by the state. The bishops said after consultation and prayer they had decided to have confidence that the government would do nothing to harm Catholic interests.

Prof. Threatened For Criticizing Judge, Police About Tallahdssee Sit-In

TALLAHASSEE — (ANP) — James N. Eaton, instructor of history at Florida A. and M. university and adviser to several student organizations, has received several calls threatening his life and warning him to leave the city because of an article which appeared in the local paper.

It criticized a city judge and the city police department for injustices suffered by Negroes in sit-in demonstrations.

Tells Of Incidents

Here is Eaton's account of the incidents:

"Reporting the threats to the local police department and informing them of the extreme profanity used by intimidators, I was told by the officer at the desk: 'It must be a n..... calling because whites don't cuss like that.'"

"Calling the police department a second time, I was told: 'Call back after something happens to you.'

"After hearing the latter statement, I maintained an armed vigilance of my residence, along with a group of volunteers, swearing to annihilate any whites who dare to set their feet in my yard. The chief of police has been notified of this decision.

"The first evidence of any police activity in regard to the situation did not appear until the third night. On that night, each time the calls were made, the police officers appeared five minutes after, which has led to some speculation on the part of many people of this city that perhaps there is some connection between the calls and the police department. When I hailed the passing squad car and asked if my telephone could be tapped to help catch the intimidators, I was informed the police department could not do this."

Citizens Praise Eaton

The letter written by Eaton has received widespread publicity and praise from Negroes throughout the city, including the students and the faculty members at A&M.

Due to frequent requests by students to read the letter, a special copy has been placed on reserve in the library.

Ira Charles Robinson, a five-year pharmacy major at Florida A. & M. university, has been called to City Judge John Rudd's office and threatened to be charged with contempt of court after writing a letter similar to that of Eaton's.

Robinson's letter appeared in the Tallahassee Democrat on April 4, 1961. He said the judge asked him to write a retraction.

Judge Rudd defended one of the four white rapists of a Florida A. & M. coed a short while ago. The case received international publicity and the four whites were convicted and sentenced to life in prison.

U. S. Suit Cancelled Action

Sitdowners Were Headed For Congress

By SAMUEL HOSKINS

WASHINGTON

Both the White House and the Justice Department will deny it, but the real reason the Federal Government intervened in the Prince Edward County (Va.) school case was to head off sitdown demonstrations in Congress and the White House.

The decision of the Justice Department to enter the case was made after April 21, although considerable thought had been given to the matter since April 13 when President John F. Kennedy was formally notified of the proposed sitdown demonstrations.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., spiritual leader of the sitdown movement, met with President Kennedy for 20 minutes on April 21.

* * *

WHILE NO INFORMATION was available regarding the conversation between the President and the Rev. King, the persons responsible for mounting the pilgrimage which would have climaxed with sitdown demonstration in the capital on May 17 were given to understand that the Government "was going to do something."

Five days after the Rev. King's White House visit, U.S. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy announced that the Justice Department had filed suit to force Prince Edward County to re-open its public schools which have been closed since September, 1959.

Said the Attorney General: "We have tried to work this out to permit colored children to go to school. They are unable to. Court orders are being circumvented and nullified.

"Therefore, we have brought this action to protect the integrity of the judicial process of the United States."

* * *

AS A RESULT of the government action, the Rev. Milton A. Reid, of Petersburg, Va., coordinator of preparations for the Capitol and White House demonstration, announced May 3 that the project had been cancelled.

"Having been made aware of the action by the United States Government toward deprivation of schools in Prince Edward County. . .our purpose in going to Washington has been served," Rev. Reid stated.

It is significant to note that the Virginia Christian Leadership Conference, headed by the Rev. Reid, at a special meeting on April 21, the day the Rev. King visited the White House, voted to call off the demonstrations.

The Virginia group is an affiliate of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of Atlanta, Ga., which is headed by Dr. King.

* * *

ELABORATE PREPARATIONS had been made for the pilgrimage to Washington, which was the brainchild of the Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker, executive director of SCLC.

The Rev. Walker "sold" the idea to Dr. King and a sponsorship committee composed of a number of national leaders representing the CIO-AF of L, American Friends Service Committee, Congress of Racial Equality, the National Beauticians Committee.

Contact also was made with Congressman Adam Clayton Powell (D., N.Y.), the Washington Bureau of the NAACP and the national office of the NAACP.

Cool to the idea from its inception, the NAACP backed away from it after Oliver Hill, Richmond attorney for the plaintiffs in the Prince Edward school case, advised the Rev. L. Francis Griffin of the Prince Edward NAACP, not to participate.

* * *

THE REV. WALKER reasoned that the county, heart of the "Black Belt" of Virginia, was the only school district in 50 states without public schools and ought to be declared a "disaster area."

The Congressional and White House sitdowns, it was argued, would provide President Kennedy an opportunity to act via executive authority "in light of this disaster."

Also, the President could use the moral influence of his office to encourage remedial action through Congress and the courts, the minister told the sponsoring committee.

Planning meetings were held in Washington during late February and at the Diamond Hill Baptist Church in Lynchburg, Va., on March 10.

* * *

IT WAS SUGGESTED to A. Philip Randolph, AF of L. vice president, that each member organization of the committee be assessed $500.

A total of 500 persons from Prince Edward County would be transported to Washington, 450 students, 26 parents and 24 center workers.

The lowest bid for transportation was submitted by the Virginia Trailways Bus Corporation, a sum of $3,160.32.

Contract was made with both Democratic and Republican members of Congress for passes. Admittance to the White House was to be as "visitors."

* * *

THE PLAN was that once the sitdowners were admitted in the Congress and White House they would refuse to leave, thus calling national attention to the "disaster situation" in Prince Edward.

The President, the Attorney General and Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Abraham Ribicoff knew of these plans and the determination of the sponsors to carry them out.

The Justice Department tried to negotiate reopening of the schools, but the effort failed.

So the Administration was faced with the alternatives: (1) Taking forthright action, or (2) permitting the integrity of the judicial process at home and the country's good name abroad to be defiled by the unreasonable and unreasoning racial bigotry of a single county.

Non-Violence On The Picket Line

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following first-hand account of incidents leading to the recent arrest of several persons picketing Canal Street stores which operate segregated lunch counters have been released by the Congress of Racial Equality, New York. It was written by Connie Bradford, 19, white sophomore at Sophie Newcomb College, New Orleans, two days before the arrests. She is at liberty on $1,000 bail.)

On Saturday, April 15, about noon, I was picketing close to the outside edge of the sidewalk in front of McCrory's on Canal Street when a white lady about 50 years of age, stopped and asked me if I was a member of "that nigger" organization (i.e. CORE). I answered "Yes ma'am" and continued walking. She followed close beside and at times behind me for about three lengths of the store, shouting questions and accusations at me. I remember her asking me if I knew what I was doing, and if I knew what Japan, China, Russia and Cuba were doing.

My refusal to answer must have annoyed her, because she began shoving and pushing me. She tried to knock my sign down, but I lifted it up again and tried to keep walking. Then she pushed me against a parked car, kicked me, and hit me around the shoulders and body with her purse and her hands. This time I relinquished my placard. She put it on the roof of the car and before I could regain my balance, she began pushing and hitting me again. All the time she was screaming insults at me.

When she realized she was not making much headway, she took the sign from atop the car and, rushing into the street, she threw it in front of a moving car. The car stopped and the bewildered driver got out. During this time the lady had quickly and prudently removed herself from the scene. I had regained my balance but I was a little dazed and could not decide on a course of action, but my picket mate, Pat Smith, told me to take her sign while she recovered mine. She did so, and we continued picketing. Soon the crowd that had formed to watch the incident dispersed and the traffic cleared.

No one in the crowd had offered assistance to the lady or to us, probably because the action had taken place so quickly. The incident must not have taken over three or four minutes.

I had first picketed only a week before and, although I had been hit on one occasion and had taken many insults and accusations, I had not yet had a chance to apply the technique of nonviolence. I had heard much about it and I thought it would be very difficult to be nonviolent in such a situation. However, all I had time to think about was keeping on my feet and keeping my arms down. I had no time to strike back, either in anger or in self-defense. I was helped by the knowledge that my picketmate Pat was with me and would come to my assistance, in a nonviolent way, if necessary. I hope that the people in the crowd were affected in some way by the sight of a nonviolent CORE member being roughed-up by a screaming, nearly hysterical woman of the type familiarized to the entire country by the TV coverage of the school desegregation crisis here. Fortunately her blows were mostly ineffectual and I was able to continue picketing that afternoon.

Least understandable part of the episode was the behavoir of the police. A policeman and a policewoman were stationed across the street, apparently to direct traffic. It is difficult to believe that they did not notice the activity on the opposite sidewalk. However, whether they saw the incident or not, they failed to investigate, even after they had been informed of it about fifteen minutes later by Bob Heller, another CORE MEMBER. Later in the day, was routinely questioned by a policeman about picketing. This was not a result of the incident; the police department questions all pickets nearly every day. This policeman asked me if I was aware of the regulations concerning picketing - do not stop walking, do not speak to anyone, and do not molest anyone. He then stated the ironic remark that if we obeyed these regulations, "the police department would be right with us all the way."

SIT-IN PRESSURES GROW

The New York Times 10 E

Economic Forces Are Often Stronger Than Legal Actions in the Campaign for Desegregation

New York N.Y.

By CLAUDE SITTON
Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, May 6—Economic considerations rather than sit-in demonstrations or court pressure may prove to be the decisive factor in forcing privately owned businesses to accept desegregation. This is indicated by the results of the fourteen-month campaign by Southern Negroes against racial barriers in these establishments.

A case in point is that of Raymond B. Randolph Jr. He was one of thirty-four students arrested during a demonstration in Thalhimer's Department Store in Richmond, Va., in February, 1960.

Mr. Randolph was convicted of trespass. He appealed to the Supreme Court of Appeals, Virginia's highest tribunal. While his lawyers did not challenge the trespass law, they contended that its use to exclude Negroes constituted a denial of his Constitutional rights.

Conviction Upheld

In a decision handed down recently, the court upheld the Randolph conviction. Chief Justice John W. Eggleston said in the court's opinion that a privately owned business may accept some customers and reject others "on purely personal grounds." He also said that while the public has an implied right to enter a retail store, the proprietor is free to revoke that right and to eject any individual who refuses to leave on request.

The Randolph case is expected to join others in the Federal courts, where a final decision on the legal issues may soon be made.

Significantly, the question is academic for Thalhimer's and a number of other Richmond stores. Their eating facilities were desegregated following a boycott conducted by the students and their adult supporters.

Legal roadblocks have proved similarly ineffective in preventing demonstrations and maintaining segregation in other Southern cities. Scores of new state laws and municipal ordinances have been adopted since the first in the current series of sit-ins took place Feb. 1, 1960, at a Woolworth's lunch counter in Greensboro, N. C. Some of these new laws, particularly those involving trespass, have been employed.

Variety of Charges

However, officials have relied chiefly on previously existing statutes. Demonstrators have been charged variously with disturbing the peace, loitering and inciting to riot. In some cases, adults have been accused of contributing to the delinquency of minors. Frequently, the efforts at suppression have only aroused militancy.

The movement has spread to new areas and new fields. Recent student protests against segregation in public libraries and buses in Jackson, Miss., marked the campaign's extention to the only Southern state heretofore untouched by it. Some form of pressure—sit-ins, boycotts or picketing—is being exerted in every state of the region.

Sun. 5-7-61

All segments of the Negro community have joined in the drive. The students remain as its symbol because of their use of the more dramatic, although not necessarily the most effective, methods.

Goals have been expanded from lunch counter desegregation to equal job opportunity and greater Negro voter registration. Racial barriers in zoos, parks, swimming pools, art galleries and even municipal courts have been attacked through one means or another. Hospitals and similar facilities are said to be next.

Much emphasis has been placed this year on a campaign to desegregate movie theatres. Adults generally consider this a minor objective. But "stand-ins" at ticket windows have such appeal to the students' taste for the dramatic that the older leaders have been forced to go along.

Burck in The Chicago Sun-Times
'We ain't had a good president since Jefferson Davis."

Urban Movement

The anti-segregation movement has centered in urban areas, which have large Negro communities and a pool of leaders independent of white control. Virtually all its gains have been made in five states—Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Florida and Texas.

However, Atlanta businessmen and Negro representatives have agreed upon a plan for desegregating lunch counters by this fall. And similar steps in other Deep South cities now appear likely to come sooner than previously expected.

The economic factor has been present in all of the settlements and in a good many it apparently was the key. The sit-ins alone have failed to breach the walls of segregation, although they have served to unite the Negro community by dramatizing the issue.

The boycott has been the most apparent source of the pressure on white merchants to reach an accommodation. Boycotts or threats of boycotts have been used effectively in such cities as Richmond, Petersburg and Norfolk, Va.; Raleigh, Greensboro and Charlotte, N. C.; Nashville, Knoxville and Chattanooga, Tenn.; Corpus Christi, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio, Texas; Miami, St. Petersburg and Tampa, Fla., and in Atlanta.

The demonstrators have been aided by the changing patterns of the cities themselves. Whites have been moving to the suburbs in increasing numbers, while the Negro population of the central city has been growing rapidly. Downtown merchants face intense competition today from suburban shopping centers. For many of them, Negro patronage represents the difference between profit and loss.

A less evident factor has been the tendency of white customers to avoid downtown stores during demonstrations out of fear that racial tension would lead to incidents.

Forces at Work

Intangible forces have had an important effect. Some whites have been influenced by the moral implications of refusing Negroes service at lunch counters while welcoming their purchases at other counters within the same stores. Many others have acted because of their concern that continuing racial tension would bring a deterioration of community social and political life and a breakdown of law and order.

Almost without exception, desegregation of lunch counters has been accomplished peacefully and without any significant loss of white customers. This has led business leaders in some of the holdout areas to reconsider their position. Even some of those who continue to oppose change have been reluctant to employ the new legal weapons placed at their disposal by State Legislatures and City Councils to thwart the demonstrators. This apparently has stemmed from a desire to avoid alienating Negro customers.

"There seems to have been a change in the climate, a little shift for the better," said Mrs. Hurley, Southeastern secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Although N. A. A. C. P. lawyers are still seeking Federal Court sanction for the demonstrators, there are many who now believe this is of secondary importance. Leslie W. Dunbar, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, noted: "It has been gratifying and instructive to see that so many Southern towns and cities have, when confronted by the Negro protests, succeeded without legal compulsion in working out satisfactory desegregation."

38a 1961 GENERAL AUGUST
NAACP LAWYERS DRAFT - SIT-IN BRIEFS

NAACP Lawyers Draft Sit-In Briefs

By Mary Hornaday
Staff Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

New York

The most difficult briefs of its 21-year history are being drawn up this summer by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's Legal and Educational Fund, Inc. (LEF), in preparation for United States Supreme Court hearings on sit-ins.

In a skyscraper next to New York's Coliseum, a group of lawyers is searching diligently for new legal arguments that may determine the disposition of approximately 400 sit-in cases now pending in Southern courts. Immediately before the Supreme Court are cases, involving disputes in North Carolina, Louisiana, and Virginia.

At stake is the question whether the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution—insuring equal protection to all citizens—is being violated by state action.

The "freedom riders" are getting so much attention these days that many people are forgetting about the sit-ins, in the view of the lawyers, who have mobilized under the leadership of Thurgood Marshall, direct counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), to prepare a legal barrage in their favor for the highest court.

A major sit-in brief due in Washington on Aug. 25 concerns Baton Rouge, La., cases in which students staged antisegregation sit-in demonstrations in a bus station, a drug store, and a variety store. The main case concerns seven students from Southern University at Baton Rouge who "sat in" at a bus station March 29, asking to be served.

The waitress called the police, whose captain immediately arrested the group for "disturbing the peace." His charges were vague and indefinite, going little beyond that the group was merely present in the bus station.

This is a case the NAACP lawyers feel they might win if the court decides to rule on it. Oral argument is scheduled for October.

The latest case which the NAACP attorneys have asked the United States Supreme Court to review concerns a series of sit-ins by 34 Negro students in Richmond, Va., last year. The Supreme Court of Virginia upheld the students' conviction last April.

Students Fined

The students, enrolled at Virginia Union University, demonstrated at Thalhimers, one of Richmond's largest department stores. They were arrested and fined $20 each. The group had attempted to obtain service at two lunch counters reserved for whites in a store which maintains a lunch counter for Negroes in its basement.

During the demonstration, which was entirely peaceful, the Negroes were refused service and were asked to leave the store. When they remained, police were called and the students were arrested. Their cases were tried originally in a Richmond police court, resulting in conviction under a Virginia statute which makes it a crime not to get off private property when ordered to do so by an owner, or by someone acting for the owner.

The LEF petition to the Supreme Court contends that the Virginia arrests were motivated by segregation, maintained by state law, and "constituted state enforcement of racial discrimination contrary to the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment."

Also before the Supreme Court is a North Carolina case involving seven Negro and two white college students, arrested and convicted in connection with lunch-counter sit-in protests in Durham and Raleigh. Seven of the nine students were arrested for seeking service at a lunch counter in the S. H. Kress variety store in Durham. The other two were jailed for seeking service in a McCrory-McLellan store in Raleigh. All were convicted on charges of trespassing.

Five of the seven students arrested in Durham are Negroes from North Carolina College. The other two are white students from Duke University. Three were sentenced to 30 days, one received 20 days, and one 15 days. Two female students, one white and one Negro, did not draw jail sentences. The North Carolina Supreme Court affirmed the convictions Jan. 20, 1961.

The two Raleigh students, James A. Fox and Albert R. Sampson from Shaw University, were arrested March 21, 1961, when they sought service at a lunch counter of the variety store. They were tried in the Raleigh City Court and found guilty. Appeals to the State Superior Court resulted in a prison sentence of 30 days.

Laws Termed Vague

The NAACP lawyers will argue that state trespass laws are vague and arbitrary and generally include no clear-cut definition of what is covered.

Other sit-in cases may reach the Supreme Court before it is set to rule on the constitutionality of this often locally initiated antisegregation maneuver, but these are the cases in which local attorneys have requested the help of Mr. Marshall's office.

Sitdown Highlights Victories, Arrests

Include Peace Pacts,

Theatre chains sign agreement

LEXINGTON, Ky.,—Lexington theatres of two chains have signed an agreement calling for integration. The agreement was signed after seven months of demonstrations in Lexington, supporting picketing in Rochester, New York and negotiations at the national and local levels.

CORE Chairman Julia Lewis announced the agreement, signed late the night of April 27. The agreement called for:

1. Integration of the three downtown theatres after a limited period of controlled testing.

2. Withdrawal of all pending injunctions against CORE and its members.

3. The theatres to use their good offices to secure dismissal of charges aginst 22 CORE members arrested while picketing the Kentucky Theatre.

4. All demonstrations to cease.

The pattern negotiated in Lexington is expected to be applied in Richmond, Kentucky and other communities as well.

Stand-ins and picketing of the theatres have been going on since last fall. On April 4, 22 members of CORE were arrested.

CORE National Director, James Farmer wrote hundreds of CORE members in every community where the Schine Company had theatres. Field Secretary Genevieve Hughes was assigned to secure Northern support.

On April 8, 80 students from the University of Rochester, Rochester Institute of Technology and Colgate-Rochester Divinity School demonstrated for nine hours before two Schine Theatres.

Picketing has continued in Rochester. Picketing had been arranged for April 28 in Syracuse, Buffalo, Geneva and Penn Van, New York.

On April 25, Farmer and Miss Hughes negotiated with representatives of the Schine Theatre in their national headquarters in Gloversville, New York. Negotiations continued over the phone and the final agreement covers not only the Schine Theatres but also the Kentucky Theatre owned by N. Switow and Sons of Louisville.

Prior to the theatre campaign, Lexington CORE had successfully integrated all Lexington variety store lunch counters as well as numerous restaurant facilities.

Louisville mayor backs sitdowners

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — "Integration of downtown public accommodations is not only morally right and economically feasible but is also inevitable," according to Mayor Hoblizell.

The mayor made this statement, last week, as he called upon operators of downtown restaurants and theatres to discontinue racial segregation by May 1.

At the same time, the mayor called upon leaders of the sitdown movement to discontinue demonstrations until at least May 3.

The mayor plea is a follow-up of a trip he made to St. Louis, Mo., with representatives of the Mayor's Committee and the Steering Committee which directs the demonstration.

* * *

THE PURPOSE of the trip was to observe how desegregation works in St. Louis, which came as a result of the strong stand taken by the mayor of that city.

There were these developments in other aspects of the local desegregation effort: —

State Safety Commissioner Glenn Lovern ruled that the authority of merchant policemen "does not extend to the arrest of a peaceful sit-in or demonstrator."

The authority of merchant policemen, he wrote, is limited to the preservation of the peace and protection of the property they are hired to protect.

* * *

COMMISSIONER LOVERN stated that his department considers the arrests of peaceful demonstrators to "exceed the authority bestowed upon (merchant policemen) under State law."

Louisville Safety Director W. George Matton issued a statement, April 25, stating that police policy in desegregation demonstrations has been one of "strick neutrality."

The day before police arrested 162 demonstrators in front of a cafeteria on Walnut St. Total arrests since the campaign started in February are 651.

A group of four women representing citywide women's groups praised the mayor for his call for an end of segregation and said they were interested in ending the segregation problem.

Ten University of Louisville professors presented the mayor a petition signed by 120 faculty members supporting the desegregation effort.

Court approves Atlanta peace move

ATLANTA, Ga. — The indefinite delay, April 24, granted in the trials of 84 sitdown demonstrators is being viewed here as part of the desegregation negotiations strategy.

The delays were granted in cases due to have been tried before Fulton Criminal Court Judges Charles Bruce and Charles Wofford.

Request for the postponement was made by D. L. Hollowell, counsel for the defendants.

* * *

THE MOTION was supported by Ivan Allen Jr., president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; A. T. Walden, attorney; Joseph Ross, president of Davison-Paxon's; Robert Wood, attorney for Sears; Cecil Semple, vice president of Rich's Inc., and H. B. Thompson, public relations director for Woolworth's.

Noting that desegregation negotiations still are going on, the Chamber of Commerce president told the court:—

"The problems that confronted us several months ago have been eliminated. The relations today are better than they have been in a long time, and they are better than in any other Southeastern city which has been confronted by this problem."

In granting the delay, Judge Bruce said that the postponement was "to serve the cause of justice."

Judge says 'disorder' not proved

MEMPHIS, Tenn. —The fines levied against 15 students charged with disorderly conduct because of sitdown demonstrations were erased, April 25, by Circuit Judge John Wilson.

The cases went to Circuit Court on appeal from a lower court.

Judge Wilson ruled that the city failed to prove the students had been disorderly.

* * *

THE STUDENTS were participating in a demonstration in the downtown store.

The case of one student arrested when he attempted to attend services at a white Baptist Church also was dismissed, as was one of a student arrested for failing to move to the rear of a city bus.

Stockholder protests store's policy

WILMINGTON, Del. — With pickets parading outside, the annual stockholders meeting of McCrory Corporation on April 25 heard charges that the company lags behind major variety chains in desegregating lunch counters in Southern stores.

The charges were made by Jim Peck, a minority stockholder who is a member of the Congress of Racial Equality.

Peck pointed out that while Kresge's has desegregated its stores in the South in all but three communities, McCrory's has desegregated only 54 per cent of its Southern stores.

FIGURES ALSO were cited to show that Woolworth and Grants are far ahead of McCrory's in the desegregation process.

Peck specifically criticized managers of McCrory's stores in Rock Hill, S.C., and New Orleans, La. where sitdowners have been arrested in McCrory's stores. This was the first time the desegregation issue was raised at a stockholders meeting of the company.

Richmond students schedule appeal

RICHMOND, Va. — The decision of the Virginia Supreme Court upholding a lower court's conviction of 34 college students for sit-down demonstration is being appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, Martin A. Martin, defense attorney, has announced.

The students, enrolled at Virginia Union University, were arrested Feb. 22, 1960, convicted and fined $20 on charges of violating the state anti-trespass law.

The Supreme Court's decision was written by Chief Justice John W. Eggleston on the appeal of one of the students, Raymond B. Randolph Jr. It applied to the case of the other students.

Also being appealed in the ruling in a companion case in which the Supreme Court upheld the conviction of Mrs. J. M. Tinsley, who was arrested as she stood nearby watching the picketing of the store. She was fined $100 on a charges of failing to move on when ordered by a police officer.

Mixed student group tests jimcrow

SIKESTON, Mo. — The practice of racial discrimination in public eating places serving interstate passengers is being tested by a group of 15 colored and white students from the University of Missouri and Congress of Racial Equality members.

As a result of the group's attempt to obtain service in the Cyrus restaurant here which caters to bus passengers 15 were arrested on April 22. The hearing in the case was April 29 before Police Judge E. R. Schrader. Convictions will be appealed.

* * *

THE GROUP, headed by Herman Thompson, a St. Louis school teacher, boarded the bus in East St. Louis, Ill. The lawyer in the case is Charles Oldham of St. Louis, who followed in an automobile.

The warrants for the arrest were issued on complaint of Wendell, manager, who charged the students with disturbing the peace.

'Sit-Ins' Cost Woolworth $$$

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill.

4/5-21-61

NEW YORK CITY — "Segregation doesn't pay: the decline in Woolworth profits for 1960 once again proves what most of us have known for a long time," commented CORE National Director James Farmer on the 1960 Woolworth Annual report.

"Woolworth profits dropped 2.7 per cent, even with a new method of reporting income, which increases the stated foreign income by approximately half-a-million dollars as compared with last year."

Profits in 1960 were $46,927,000, a decline of $1,305,000 from the 1959 figure. Farmer added, "the company profits declined in the face of an increase of 4.9 per cent in the number of stores to make a total of 2,430 at the end of the year.

The 1960 Woolworth annual report states: "A number of influences combined to prevent the company from realizing its goal ... among the major factors... interruption of normal shopping patterns in some communities as a result of local actions taken in the interest of desegregating eating facilities in certain Southern communities."

"A policy of complete integration in every Woolworth store would bring many thousands of customers back to Woolworth. A democratic serving policy would pay better than the present half-way policy," said Farmer.

38a 1961

GENERAL

SIT-INS
NATIONAL SORORITY OF PHI DELTA KAPPA

Ask JFK to erase sit-in jail records

DOVER, Del. — A recommendation that a letter be sent to Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy asking for the removal of jail records of sit-in students and the establishment of $500 emergency fund for needy teachers in troubled areas were highlights of the eastern regional meeting of the National Sorority of Phi Delta Kappa.

The conference, held here recently on the campus of Dover State College, met under the theme: "Tommorrow's World Needs Today's Teaching." Approximately 200 sorors from 22 chapters attended.

* * *

MRS. HELEN W. MAXWELL, supreme basileus of Brooklyn, N.Y., said in her greetings, "We have gathered here to exchange ideas. For we are all working for promotion of the ideals of the National sorority of Phi Delta Kappa no matter where we are.

In a challenge to sorors, she further stated: "It's not what the sorority can give you but what can you give the sorority."

Mrs. Hilda G. Bryant, eastern regional director of Nyack, N.Y., delivered the opening address, welcoming delegates to the two - day conference.

* * *

DURING THE workshop period, many delegates from the Southern areas cited actual experiences in sit - ins and other racial demonstration to bring about integration. The discussions were highlighted by the showing of films of actual occurrences.

Mrs. Blackson Carrine was presented a "Citation of Achievement" in recognition of her "outstanding service to the community" during her 41 years of teaching.

* * *

GOV. ELBERT N. CARVEL brought greetings to a luncheon session and congratulated teachers on contributions made to help build America.

Tuskegee speaker lauds sitdowners

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Student sit-downers, in their drive for social equality, are answering a divine command, a Detroit minister said here Sunday.

The Rev. Jacob C. Oglesby, president of the Baptist Ministers Conference of Detroit, told a Religious Emphasis Week convocation at Tuskegee Institute that God is constantly telling everyone (even Russia) to "get up and build a world of brotherhood — a world that respects human dignity."

Commending the student movement, the Rev. Mr. Oglesby said the sit-downers are "getting up" — for they realize "God will not spoon feed us while we're lying on our backs."

He predicted victory for colored people in their quest for first - class citizenship. That all people be recognized as "children of God" is a decree handed down from heaven, he said. Then he added: "God is with us — and on our side."

Woolworth's loss due to pickets?

NEW YORK CITY (ANP) — "Segregation doesn't pay: the decline in Woolworth profits for 1960 once again proves what most of us have known for a long time," commented CORE national director, James Farmer on the 1960 Woolworth annual report.

"Woolworth profits dropped 2.7 per cent, even with a new method of reporting income, which increases the stated foreign income by approximately half -a-million dollars as compared with last year."

The 1960 Woolworth annual report states:

* * *

"A NUMBER of influences combined to prevent the company from realizing its goal . . . among the major factors . . . interruption of normal shopping patterns in some communities as a result of local actions taken in the interest of desegregating eating facilities in certain Southern communities.

"A policy of complete integration in every Woolworth store would bring many thousands of customers back to Woolworth. A democratic serving policy would pay better than the present halfway policy," said Farmer.

* * *

ROCKVILLE, MD. —A hearing is scheduled for April 24 in the case of a bondsman arrested here April 5 on charges of trespassing.

He is Edward Johnson, 52, of 900 N. Stone St. The arrested occurred at the Stanley Diner, 321 E. Montgomery Ave., where he sought to purchase a cup of coffee.

"The furtherest thing from my mind was an incident," the bondsman declares, "but when they said no, I sat there."

The warrant for Mr. Johnson was sworn out by Stanley F. Carver, according to police. Bail was set at $200.

38a 1961

Sit-in movement gets $10,000 gift

The Afro-Am.
Baltimore, Md.

OAKLAND, Calif.— Over 8,500 persons attending a rally keynoted by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., here on Palm Sunday gave more than $10,000 to the sit - in movement, 4-15-61

Dr. King, 32 - year - old internationally famous integration leader from Atlanta, spoke to the more than capacity audience at Oakland Auditorium under the sponsorship of the Western Christian Leadership Conference, northern division. 4, 16

The young pastor, who became famous as leader of the bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala., declared "we must win (the fight for equality) by peaceful means."

"We're not interested in becoming the white man's brother - in - law," he said. "We're just interested in becoming his brother."

38a 1961

GENERAL NAACP SIT-IN DEFENSE FUND

$25-plate dinner nets $5,000 for sit-in fund

PHILADELPHIA

A check for $5,000 was presented to Judge Hubert T. Delany of New York for the benefit of the NAACP Sit-in defense fund at a $25 per plate dinner held at McAllister Restaurant Saturday attended by more than 250 leaders in Philadelphia business, professional and social life.

In accepting the history-making presentation the jurist was dynamic, dramatic and poetic in his portrayal of America as we stand seeking civil rights and civil liberties. He stressed civil liberties, as a most important factor in our Bill of Rights in the Constitution of the United States.

He both read and quoted civil liberties, which protect "freedom of speech, freedom of peaceable assemblies." He declared that the President of the United States under the laws of the Constitution, "has the right and duty as President to take care that the laws are faithfully enforced."

Judge Dulany declared "We are determined to secure our rights in our times, thru civil rights and civil liberties, fighting hand and hand for democracy of all citizens of the nation."

* * *

THE $5,000 check was presented to the speaker by Mrs. Lawrence Christmas, who originated the idea of the dinner and organized the group with Judge Theodore Spaulding as co-chairman.

Mrs. Catherine Smith, wife of Dr. J. Shepherd Smith, presented Attorney A. Leon Higginbotham with an additional check for $846 for 169 new and renewal memberships in the Philadelphia Branch NAACP of which he is president. This was another feature of the affair.

Mrs. Christmas stated that the goal of the dinner was $5,000 for College Sit ins; and NAACP memberships; and now the balance will be surplus money presented to college sit - in students who are now living here in Philadelphia.

Dr. Maurice Clifford as master of ceremonies, in presenting Calvin Matthews, leader of the first College students, sit - in protest in lunch counter segregation, stated that this is the most massive social movement of our time, this passive resistance of colored college students, to gain equal rights, as citizens. He said "It takes courage and strength to sit still."

Calvin Matthews uttered a prayer, "God Bless you," to the audience, who gave their time and money to help the movement.

Talladega Daily Home

Widespread Controversy Over Integration Continues

Daily Home
Talladega, Ala.
Wed. 3-15-61

A stand-in demonstration pro-ters and men are granted liberty testing segregation in theaters with no discrimination whatsoturned into a rock-throwing me-ever . . ."
lee between Negroes and white youths in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Only two persons were arrest-on Negro officers and men" in ed but police broke up clashesvisiting strictly segregated ports involving as many as 30 whitein South Africa.
persons and 50 Negroes before order was restored late Tuesday night.

In other Southwide demonstrations, 175 Negroes were arrested during a singing, clapping protest against segregation at downtown stores in Louisville, Ky.; five pickets were jailed at Rock Hill, S.C., and six sit-in demonstrators were arrested at Rutherfordton, N.C.

Pickets who paraded in front of lunch counters at Columbia, S.C., carried signs reading, "If We Cook For Them, Why Can't We Eat With Them?"

South Carolina's Gov. Ernest F. Hollings refused to yield to what he called attempts "to exact the customs of New Jersey" on his state. Demands were made for desegregating hotel facilities in Charleston for a meeting of the National Civil War Centennial Commission next month.

World heavyweight boxing Champion Floyd Patterson declared himself satisfied that there was no segregation of the audience at his successful Miami Beach title defense against Ingemar Johansson Monday night, and returned a forfeit check of $10,000 to Feature Sports Inc. The check was put up as a guarantee against segregation.

The Navy, replying to a protest from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said, "All officers and men are granted liberty with no discrimination whatever . . ."

Owners of the largest amusement park in the Washington area, Glen Echo at Rockville, Md., announced that the park will be completely desegregated when it reopens March 31. Scores of demonstrators were arrested there in the past.

Negro leaders at Oklahoma City called off their "squat-in" demonstrations ater 13 persons were arrested for blocking the lobby of a building where a cafeteria refused to serve Negroes.

Protests against segregation will continue, said E. Melvin Porter, "but we won't block aisles and we won't violate fire laws."

Analysis of Financial Pages

Dixie Cities Feel The Boycotts and Desegrate!

BUSINESS & FINANCE

By LEE N. ROY

Slump and unemployment take part in the news on the financial pages along with the sit-in demonstrations engaged in by Negroes in several major cities in the South.

While unemployment levels rose to a total of nearly six million, the over-all employment rose to a 64½ million record.

In connection with the sit-in campaigns, a settlement has been reached to desegregate lunch counters and other facilities in stores in the major cities of the South, who have felt the pinch of the buying boycott engaged in by Negroes as a counterpart of the sit-in movement.

DESPITE THESE unfavorable aspects affecting the economy, there has been significant activity in the stock market, causing a succession of five million share sale days, and a rise in price of many industrial stocks.

New highs in low-priced stocks have been posted in the past few weeks. This is said to give evidence of a general upturn.

The Kennedy Administration is still pressing for the speedy enactment of anti-recession proposals to cope with rising unemployment. It is generally agreed that this impending legislation is responsible for the new desire of the public to rush into investment in common stocks as a protection against inflation.

■

HOUSING, ROAD BUILDING, and defense preparations are regarded as the keys to reduction in the unemployment rolls.

Federal, state, and municipal agencies are bringing forth plans and programs which call for immediate action in these areas. Predictions are freely made in all circles that the upturn is just a few months away.

Just to top-off the optimistic turn of the economy, there is a concerted desire to seek new worlds to conquer. This is evidenced in the frantic rush to pieree the outer-bounds of space and achieve contact with the moon, Venus and Mars.

'Sit-In' Leader To Deliver Ghandi Talk At Howard

WASHINGTON, D. C. —The Rev. James M. Lawson, Jr., leader in the Nashville, Tenn. student "sit - in" movement, will deliver the third annual Gandhi Memorial Lecture at Howard university, Tuesday April 11. The lecture is scheduled for 8 p.m. in Andrew Rankin Chapel, Sixth street and Howard Place, northwest, and is open to the public.

Under the general subject, "The Measure of a Movement," Mr. Lawson will evaluate the gains and accomplishdents of non - violent methods of protest in the United States.

MR. LAWSON is pastor of the Scott Chapel Methodist church, Shelbyville, Tenn. He completed his theological studies at Boston University during the summer of 1960 following his dismissal from the Diviniy School of Vanderbilt Univedsity, Nashville, for his particiiation in the "sit-in" movement.

He is a former southern secretary for the Fellowship of Reconciliation, has cnducted student workshops on non-yiolence; serves as a special consultant to the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, a member, executive comfittee, Nashville Christian Leadership Council and adviser, Student Non - Violent Coordinating Committee.

From 1953 to 1956 he was a missionary in India, serving as director of the department of physical education and chaplain at Hislop college.

38a 1961

GENERAL

SIT-INS

Sitdown Story: Gains — Challenges — Pickets

Students to stage sympathy strike

HOPEWELL, Va. — A mass boycott of local schools has been called for by the Hopewell Improvement Association, the Rev. Curtis W. Harris, president, told the AFRO this week.

The boycott is set for April 26, the day 30 youngsters are to be tried in Juvenile Court on charges of trespass as a result of sitdown demonstrations at George's drug store here.

"The boycott is to be a protest against the chairman of the board of education and in support of the 30 accused youths," Rev. Harris said.

He explained that the chairman of the board of education is Dr. Charles E. Hunter, who also is president of George's Drug company, the firm which owns the store where the juveniles and 35 adults were arrested during last August and September.

* * *

THIRTY-TWO of the adults have been convicted and sentenced. The case now is on appeal to a higher court. Three reamining adults also are to be tried on April 26.

They are Mrs. Maria Roberts, Robert Graves and Simon Johnson Jr.

The schools that are to be boycotted are Carter G. Woodson High, Harry E. James and Arlington Elementary Schools. The Rev. Harris said: "The teachers are pretty solidly in support of the boycott movement."

James E. Cuddihy, an attorney, has been appointed to preside at the trials.

Reidsville job pickets get results

REIDSVILLE, N.C.—As a result of the five-week- old drive for equal job opportunity here four stores have dropped racial segregation policies and hired colored employees.

The stores are West End grocery, H. H. Clothing, Lucky Strike grocery and the Colonial Store.

Three other stores which are maintaining previous hiring practices, still are being picketed by the Rockingham County Improvement League, the Youth Council and local branch of the NAACP.

The Rev. J. A. Griggs, NAACP president, says about 99 per cent of the colored shoppers refuse to cross the picket lines.

The equal job opportunity drive has the support of ministers both in Reidsville and Rockingham County, the NAACP president said.

IN RUTHERFORDTON, a hearing on the appeal of six high school students convicted on trespass charges is scheduled for May 15 before Superior Court Judge George Morrow.

The students were convicted April 10 in Rutherford County Recorder's Court. The charges grew out of a sitdown demonstration on March 14 in a local drug store.

Students at Carver High School in Spindale were fined $25 and cost of court. They are Geraldine Abrams, 16; James E. Grant, William N. Smith, Jonathan Vance, all 17; Charles A. Edgerton and James E. Webster, 18.

'All served, but not all can serve'

PHILADELPHIA — Eighteen members of the local CORE picketed the downtown Horn and Hardart restaurant in protest against employment discrimination, last week.

They drew considerable interest from heavy midtown shopping crowds.

CORE chairman, Leverne McCummings said, "Horn and Hardart's employs 700 but has only three colored waitresses. We've tried through negotiations to get them to hire colored as well as whites. Now we're bringing the discrimination to the attention of the public."

THE CORE pickets bore signs saying "Not a Bite While All Waitresses are White" — "Help Win Equal Job Opportunities" — "White Cashiers Only, Is This the North?"

A leaflet distributed to passersby said "While serving everyone, they refuse to allow everyone to serve. We have tried to talk with them. They will not sit down and discuss their policy. There is not a single colored cashier in the entire restaurant chain, and very little possibility that there will be one unless we do something."

Arkansas Sitdown Law challenged

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The State Supreme Court is expected to rule soon on the validity of Act 226 of 1959, the so-called "sitdown act."

The law makes it a misdemeanor to "create or threaten to create a disturbance." Such charges have been alleged to persons arrested for sitdown demonstrations.

The law was challenged by six persons convicted of disturbances charges growing out of sitdown demonstrations.

* * *

CHARLES PARKER, 22, of St. Louis, Mo., one of seven persons arrested Nov. 30, 1960, for sitdown demonstrations in Woolworth, has asked for a jury trial.

Consequently, Circuit Judge William J. Kirby postponed the case until next September term of court, due to a recent, ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit, that there is a racial pattern of discrimination in the selection of Circuit Court juries.

Last Dec. 1 Judge Quinn Glover of the Municipal Court fined Parker $500 and $9 cost of court.

Louisville ordinance to be tested

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Following the conviction of 11 persons who participated in sitdown demonstration here, defense attorneys announced, last week, that they are challenging the constitutionality of the ordinance which authorizes the arrests.

The announcement was made by J. Earl Daring, attorney, who also is state president of the NAACP.

The trials of 17 defendants were before Police Court Judge Hugo Taustine. Charges against six of the accused were dismissed.

* * *

THE JUDGE said that the defendants found guilty would be fined $25 each unless the claim that the disorderly conduct ordinance is unConstitutional is upheld.

One of those found guilty was Frank Stanley Jr., 24, assistant to the publisher of the Louisville Defender. Chief William Binder testified that Stanley was one of a group of adults helping youths block the entrances to theatres.

Schine theatres target of pickets

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The trial of 11 adults arrested April 4 for picketing the Kentucky Theatre here is due to be held on April 26.

No trial date has been set for 11 juveniles arrested at the same time. The theatre is a member of the Schine Theatre Company chain.

Schine theatres in Rochester, N.Y., were picketed last week end in protest to the segregation policy of the theatre here.

James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, meanwhile wrote personal letters to hundreds of CORE members in communities where the Schine Theatre Company has movies asking them to write letters calling for integration in Lexington.

The arrest of the 22 members of Lexington CORE has "aroused the community to real action" reports CORE chairman Julia Lewis.

* * *

SINCE THE arrest, scores of CORE members have returned to the picket line each evening.

"They don't dare arrest us. They know we are right," added Miss Lewis. On two previous occasions CORE members were arrested while picketing theatres and both times charges were dismissed.

Eleven of the 22 in the interracial CORE group spent the night in jail. Among them were three children of the Rev. Lamong Jones. James Crummlin of Louisville is the attorney.

Police Lt. Morris Carter reported that the CORE members were "singing loudly." The group continued to sing "We Shall Not Be Moved" and "Stand-In For Freedom" as they were taken to police headquarters.

* * *

IN COLUMBUS, OHIO, Miss Evelyn Pierce, one of the nine Tougaloo College students who were arrested on March 29, for attempting to use the public library in Jackson, Miss., will speak here at an NAACP mass meeting in Columbus on Sunday, April 23, at Second Baptist Church.

When Miss Pierce and the other eight students were in court on March 30, persons who had come to witness the trial overflowed the court room and gathered on the street outside, were attacked by vicious Nazi - trained police dogs.

The German police dogs now with the local police force, were trained by a former Nazi storm trooper.

Ask High Court For Review of 'Sit-In' Cases

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat. 5-13-61
P. 3.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The U. S. Supreme Court has been petitioned for a review of the cases of seven Negro and two white college students arrested and convicted in connection with lunch counter "sit-in" protests in North Carolina.

Seven of the nine students were arrested for seeking service at a lunch counter in the S. H. Kress Variety Store in Durham.

The other two were jailed for seeking service in a McCrory-McLellan store in Raleigh. All were convicted on charges of trespassing.

■

THE NINE students were convicted in two separate cases. Both cases were taken to the North Carolina Supreme Court on appeals from the city and state courts and the convictions upheld.

They were taken to the U. S. Supreme Court by NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund attorneys in behalf of the nine students.

The two Raleigh students, James A. Fox and Albert R. Sampson, from Shaw University, were arrested March 21, 1960, when they sought service at a lunch counter of the McCory-McLellan Variety Store on Fayetteville St.

■

THEY WERE tried in the Raleigh City Court and found guilty. Appeals to the State Superior Court resulted in a prison sentence of 30 days.

Five of the seven students arrested in Durham are Negroes from North Carolina College.

The other two are white students from Duke University.

NAACP Legal Defense Fund attorneys for the nine students are Thurgood Marshall, director-counsel, Jack Greenberg and James M. Nabrit, III, all of New York City. Local counsel representing the Shaw University students are Samuel S. Mitchell, George R. Greene, F. J. Carnage and George E. Brown, all of Raleigh, North Carolina. Local counsel representing the Durham students are L. C. Berry Jr., William A. Marsh Jr., F. B. McKissick, C. O. Pearson, W. G. Pearson, and M. Hugh Thompson, all of Durham, N. C.

Arrest Hundreds As Sit-In Movement Plagues Various Cities Throughout Country

The Black Dispatch
Okla. City, Okla.
Fri. 3-24-61

Counsel from the national office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People will be on hand for the upcoming injunction suit against the squat-in city demonstrators to be heard in district court Tuesday, E. Melvin Porter said today.

However, the hearing for the arrested demonstrators, scheduled to be heard Monday, will be continued for two weeks by agreement between Porter, local NAACP head and counsel, and B. H. Carey, Cravens building attorney.

Agree On Delay

Porter says he sought the delay in the Monday hearing because the ruling in the injunction hearing "may decide the whole issue." Unconfirmed sources say that Judge Kenneth Shilling of Ardmore will probably hear the case.

Meanwhile, NAACP attorneys continued their legal conferences in secret meetings held this week at Tulsa. On Tuesday, Porter met with Amos T. Hall, Tulsa attorney; John E. Green, city lawyer; and Chester I. Lewis, Wichita attorney who heads the NAACP branch there and is a recent appointee to the NAACP national staff.

May Set Precedent

Demonstrators arrested in the Saturday squat-ins of two weeks ago are named in a temporary restraining order prohibiting demonstrations at the Cravens building. Should the judge rule the injunction as permanent, other public buildings will probably use it to bar demonstrators.

Porter said that "To my knowledge the NAACP has never been faced with a situation quite like this one. This should set some precedents not only in Oklahoma City, but elsewhere, too."

ANP Covers Sit-Ins

ST. LOUIS.— An estimated 5,000 Negro teen-agers are scheduled to march on Jefferson City, the state capital, April 15, in one of the biggest civil rights protest demonstrations ever held in Missouri.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Magistrate Frank Powell plans to speed up the trials of 190 persons arrested here on breach of peace charges during a march on the State House March 1.

SAN ANTONIO. — Negro and white students from six colleges and universities and two high schools held another stand-in demonstration here with the Majestic theatre as the target for the third time in six weeks.

SAVANNAH. — The NAACP charged that a member of its youth council had been beaten by eight white youths during a sit-in demonstration at a downtown F. W. Woolworth store. Officials said Benjamin West, a 19-year-old Negro, suffered mouth lacerations and was treated by a private physician.

ROCK HILL, S. C.—Five Negro anti-segregation demonstrators were arrested outside a Rock Hill drug store that operates a segregated lunch counter.

DURHAM, N. C.—An interracial team of faculty members from North Carolina college and Duke university, joined forces with students from those institutions here in picketing two local theatres which segregate their audiences by race.

NEW ORLEANS.—Civil rights forces took the initiative in New Orleans once again as members of CORE and the Consumers League picketed and staged a march on City Hall and the State building.

Eighteen members of CORE began the demonstration at noon by picketing the Woolworth and McCrory stores on wamed Canal street. Previously CORE members had been arrested at both stores. This time, the 18th—both white and Negro—were pulled in by police and questioned for several hours.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. — Students from Friendship college who went to prison for demonstrations at Rock Hill, S. C., told a mass meeting of the Winston-Salem branch of the NAACP they are ready to go back if need be in their fight for equality.

Nine students appeared briefly on the program at Goler Metropolitan A. M. E. Zion church to tell of their experiences in prison and the reason they chose jail terms instead of fines or getting out on bond.

LYNCHBURG, Va.—Embattled colored citizens of Lynchburg, fighting racial injustices at every turn, have postponed a threatened boycott of downtown merchants to allow a special bi-racial committee to further negotiate with the Lynchburg Retail Merchants Association on matters of employment and segregation.

CHATTANOOGA.—A stand-in demonstration protesting against segregation in theatres turned into a rock-throwing melee between Negroes and white youths in Chattanooga. Only two persons were arrested, but police broke up clashes involving as many as 50 white persons and 50 Negroes before order was restored later.

Are Sit-ins Legal?

The Washington Post
Washington D.C.
3-28-61
P. 10-A

The refusal of a three-judge Federal District Court in Richmond to intervene against the punishment of sit-in demonstrators in Virginia will not be the last word on this subject. The Supreme Court has agreed to review a group of Louisiana sit-in cases. Presumably this decision will provide an authoritative statement of the law to be applied in the sit-in cases.

Meanwhile, the reasoning of the District Court seems narrowly based. It concluded, in an opinion by Judge Albert V. Bryan, that the operator of a lunch counter "may lawfully forbid any and all persons, regardless of his reason or their race or religion, to enter or remain upon any part of his premises which are not devoted to a public use." It further ruled that protection of this right "is the entire and sole aim" of Virginia's anti-tresspassing laws. The Court also made much of the fact that the anti-trespassing acts were enforced by the arrest of white as well as Negro demonstrators.

The conclusion that the lunch counters where the sit-ins occurred are "not devoted to a public use" will certainly be challenged. It is true that restaurants are not public utilities, but why should the question of rights here turn upon the vague notion of certain property being "affected with a public interest?" No establishment which offers its services to the public can be regarded as being "private" in the sense of being wholly insulated from public policy.

Even if a proprietor has a right to limit patronage of his restaurant along racial or other lines, the question remains as to whether he can call upon the state to help him do so. In these cases the sit-in demonstrators were arrested under Virginia's anti-trespassing laws, which had been amended in 1960 greatly to increase the penalties. The Supreme Court decided in 1953 that the courts could not be used to enforce covenants forbidding sale or occupancy of real estate by non-Caucasians. Since covenants of this sort ran contrary to public policy, the Court said in effect, it would be quite unreasonable to permit persons who resort to such covenants to fall back upon the courts for protection.

In the light of this it is difficult to see any justification for Virginia's use of her police power for the enforcement of the discriminatory policies of private restaurant owners.

Fight On Segregation Spreads Over Southern Fronts

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An elderly white woman was knocked down and a Negro Episcopal rector slugged during an outbreak of racial violence at Chattanooga, Tenn., where Negroes have been staging stand-ins protesting segregated theaters for five weeks.

Bands of Negroes and white youths roamed the streets after nine Negroes were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct at a motion picture house yesterday. The manager said they each tried 14 times to buy tickets and were blocking the entrance.

Police broke up one group of white youths armed with sticks as they roved downtown. A 15-year-old Negro boy, who told officers he was carrying a heavy steel wrench "because somebody might jump me," was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Miss Lillie Trotter, 88, said she was bowled over by Negroes fleeing white youths. The groups were hurling rocks and garbage cans at each other. Miss Trotter suffered cuts and head bruises but her condition was not believed serious. None of the youths was injured.

Police said an ex-convict slugged the Rev. Robert Hunter, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal church—a Negro parish—while Hunter was watching the stand-in demonstration. Harry Light, 34, was charged with assault and officers said he had a long police record.

At Columbia, S. C., 36 Negroes were convicted of breach of the peace charges in connection with a mass march on the state house two weeks ago during which 190 persons were arrested. All filed notice of intention to appeal.

Ten of those convicted were adults. Magistrate Frank Powell told them: "For you I have absolutely no sympathy because each of you is a grown man. You got children to fight your battle and my battle."

Three Negro young women were acquitted of breach of the peace charges at Rock Hill, S. C., after they testified they did not hear police orders to disband an anti-segregation picket line. Two others were convicted.

Four members of the Texas House of Representatives and about 100 students from the government classes of St. Mary's University, San Antonio, walked out of an Austin restaurant when management refused to serve a Negro in the group. Steak lunches had been ordered in advance.

"When they saw there was one colored boy with us they refused to serve us," said Rep. John Alaniz, San Antonio. "So we just walked out and left them with 100 steaks on their hands. We went to another place where they would serve all of us."

In Atlanta, Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told a Spelman College lecture series audience that "school desegregation does not proceed of its own volition."

Wilkins urged Negro college students to conduct a campaign to encourage Negro transfers when public schools are desegregated. Atlanta public schools are under a federal court order to start desegregation in the 11th and 12th grades in September.

The Charleston (S.C.) News and Courier said in an editorial that Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., and his colleagues "still enjoy waving the bloody shirt" in their efforts to prevent a meeting of the National Civil War Centennial Commission at Charleston in April.

The New Jersey Civil War Centennial Commission announced several days ago it would boycott the gathering because a Negro woman member of the commission would be denied integrated hotel quarters. Case asked the national commission to shift the ceremonies elsewhere because, he said, subjecting Negro delegates to segregation "would be irony of a most bitter sort."

The News and Courier said editorially it "has not been enthusiastic from the beginning over some aspects of the Civil War Centennial. Memories of a war in which ancestors of today's citizens died in combat are bound to be painful. Wounds have not yet healed. Sen. Case and his colleagues still enjoy waving the bloody shirt."

At Kansas City, the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics announced its post-season football championship game, known as the Holiday bowl, had been moved from St. Petersburg, Fla., to Sacramento, Calif. Segregation problems in Florida were given as the reason.

Arrest Hundreds As Sit-In Movement Plagues Various Cities Throughout Country

The Black Dispatch
Okla. City, Okla.
pg. 3-24-61

Counsel from the national office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People will be on hand for the upcoming injunction suit against the squat-in city demonstrators to be heard in district court Tuesday, E. Melvin Porter said today.

However, the hearing for the arrested demonstrators, scheduled to be heard Monday, will be continued for two weeks by agreement between Porter, local NAACP head and counsel, and B. H. Carey, Cravens building attorney.

Agree On Delay

Porter says he sought the delay in the Monday hearing because the ruling in the injunction hearing "may decide the whole issue." Unconfirmed sources say that Judge Kenneth Shilling of Ardmore will probably hear the case.

Meanwhile, NAACP attorneys continued their legal conferences in secret meetings held this week at Tulsa. On Tuesday, Porter met with Amos T. Hall, Tulsa attorney; John E. Green, city lawyer; and Chester I. Lewis, Wichita attorney who heads the NAACP branch there and is a recent appointee to the NAACP national staff.

May Set Precedent

Demonstrators arrested in the Saturday squat-ins of two weeks ago are named in a temporary restraining order prohibiting demonstrations at the Cravens building. Should the judge rule the injunction as permanent, other public buildings will probably use it to bar demonstrators.

Porter said that "To my knowledge the NAACP has never been faced with a situation quite like this one. This should set some precedents not only in Oklahoma City, but elsewhere, too."

ANP Covers Sit-Ins

ST. LOUIS.—An estimated 5,000 Negro teen-agers are scheduled to march on Jefferson City, the state capital, April 15, in one of the biggest civil rights protest demonstrations ever held in Missouri.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Magistrate Frank Powell plans to speed up the trials of 190 persons arrested here on breach of peace charges during a march on the State House March 1.

SAN ANTONIO. — Negro and white students from six colleges and universities and two high schools held another stand-in demonstration here with the Majestic theatre as the target fo. the third time in six weeks.

SAVANNAH. — The NAACP charged that a member of its youth council had been beaten by eight white youths during a sit-in demonstration at a downtown F. W. Woolworth store. Officials said Benjamin West, a 19-year-old Negro, suffered mouth lacerations and was treated by a private physician.

ROCK HILL, S. C.—Five Negro anti - segregation demonstrators were arrested outside a Rock Hill drug store that operates a segregated lunch counter.

DURHAM, N. C.—An interracial team of faculty members from North Carolina college and Duke university joined forces with students from those institutions here in picketing two local theatres which segregate their audiences by race.

NEW ORLEANS.—Civil rights forces took the initiative in New Orleans once again as members of CORE and the Consumers League picketed and staged a march on City Hall and the State building.

Eighteen members of CORE began the demonstration at noon by picketing the Woolworth and McCrory stores on wamed Canal street. Previously CORE members had been arrested at both stores. This time, the 18th—both white and Negro—were pulled in by police and questioned for several hours.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. — Students from Friendship college who went to prison for demonstrations at Rock Hill, S. C., told a mass meeting of the Winston-Salem branch of the NAACP they are ready to go back if need be in their fight for equality.

Nine students appeared briefly on the program at Goler Metropolitan A. M. E. Zion church to tell of their experiences in prison and the reason they chose jail terms instead of fines or getting out on bond.

LYNCHBURG, Va.—Embattled colored citizens of Lynchburg, fighting racial injustices at every turn, have postponed a threatened boycott of downtown merchants to allow a special bi-racial committee to further negotiate with the Lynchburg Retail Merchants Association on matters of employment and segregation.

CHATTANOOGA. — A stand-in demonstration protesting against segregation in theatres turned into a rock-throwing melee between Negroes and white youths in Chattanooga. Only two persons were arrested, but police broke up clashes involving as many as 50 white persons and 50 Negroes before order was restored later.

Praises student sitdowners

Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 4-1-61

BALTIMORE

Congressman James Roosevelt called on the United States Sunday to speed up its program of eliminating racial barriers.

Speaking at the 36th annual dinner meeting of the Baltimore Urban League, the Democratic Congressman from California said he hoped President Kennedy would consider calling a White House Conference to "produce a climate of equality for citizens of the United States."

Sold out two weeks in advance, the dinner at the Sheraton - Belvedere Hotel meeting attracted 392 community leaders of both races.

Dr. Furman B. Templeton is executive director of the Baltimore Urban League.

* * *

MR. ROOSEVELT said the State Department recently had to name a committee to find housing in New York and Washington for diplomats from Africa and Asia.

"We should have the courage to admit our errors and not shove them under the rug," he declared, "We should tell the world 'yes, we've been slow about equalizing opportunities for all but now we have combined all our resources to do the job in the shortest possible time.'"

The speaker condemned the closing of public schools to avert desegregation.

"Where the basic responsibility of public education is not being met in a locality, it becomes the responsibility of the next layer of government to make sure that no group can abolish the public education system."

Turning to the question of the ballot, Mr. Roosevelt suggested a Constitutional Amendment that would deny the states the right to impose any restrictions on voting except residence requirments.

"Without the right to vote you have second class citizenship," Mr. Roosevelt asserted as he called for community and national leadership to guarantee the right to vote to all within the next two years.

Pointing out inequalities in housing and job opportunities, Mr. Roosevelt said racial discrimination is not a local problem but a national one. He said the fact that the Urban League has operated for 51 years in the north and south, supports this statement.

* * *

MR. ROOSEVELT praised the student demonstrators, members of the Civic Interest Group, who were honored at the meeting for their contribution in desegregating eating facilities here.

"In some areas, these participating in sit-ins are considered lawbreakers, but whenever basic human dignities are breeched, citizens have the right to protest. You and I wouldn't be here today if we hadn't had a revolution."

He commended the Urban League for its activities and said he looked forward to the day when the League will have worked itself out of existence.

"We must not be in patient with the African nations that have just gained their freedom. We must remember that it has been almost 100 years since Abraham Lincoln and we still have to have the Urban League in the United States."

Elks' 'Grand' Pledges His Order Backs Sitdowners

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 4-8-61

Reynolds reports on great gains

By STEVE W. DUNCAN
NEWARK

Elks Grand Exalted Ruler Hobson R. Reynolds of Philadelphia declared here Friday he was preparing a program for his 475,000 - member order which will be inviting to younger persons and reinvigorating to older members.

Mr. Reynolds received the key to the city from Mayor Leo P. Carlin after arriving here with his wife to attend the annual ball of the New Jersey State Association of IBPOE of W, and its auxiliary.

"With this great mass of Negroes, we propose to back up a program of first class citizenship for all Americans," the Elk leader stated.

Mr. Reynolds said the Elks will continue to support the student sit-in demonstrations in the South and will also lend aid to the struggle against discrimination and segregation in Northern communites.

He stated his fraternal order is in position to participate in the all-out struggle for first class citizenship because it is independent and uncontrolled by any factions.

Mr. Reynolds, elected grand exalted ruler in Chicago last August, noted that in many Southern communities Elks homes have been made available for training of sit-in demonstrators.

He said the order had spent thousands of dollars to support this facet of the struggle for freedom.

Mr. Reynolds said during an interview at the Hotel Essex House that Elk membership since September has increased 2½ to 3 per cent as against an 11 per cent decline in 1959.

During that time, he said, the order has reinstated 126 lodges representing approximately 3,000 members.

The Elk leader also disclosed that because of a keen interest in the apprenticeship training program, his group has earmarked $100,000 in special scholarships to be raised for students in scientific training.

Already, he noted, Elks spend about $30,000 a year for scholarships. Throughout the country there are 59 college students, eight of them white, studying under Elk scholarships, Mr. Reynolds said.

The Elk exalted ruler also touched on the controversial meeting next month of the National Civil War Centennial Commission.

Praising the stand taken by New Jersey delegates not to participate unless the meeting is integrated, Mr. Reynolds said:

"I think the Federal Government ought to demand that there should be no discrimination."

He stated he thinks Gen. U.S. Grant, III, commission official, is entirely wrong in stating nothing can be done about the Charleston situation.

Mr. Reynolds said that for the first time the Elks have a national headquarters at 1522 N. 16th St., Philadelphia, with the offices of the

3Pa 1961

GENERAL

SIT-INS
TOP STORY 1960

ANP EDITORS SAY:

The Black Dispatch
Okla. City, Okla.
Apr. 6, 61
p. 3

SIT-INS TOP STORY OF 1960

By Associated Negro Press

The emergence of a new leadership and the refinement of a rediscovered technique in the Negro's continuing struggle for full equality in the United States as demonstrated in the sit-in demonstrations was the biggest and most important single news story of 1960.

This is the consensus of the editors and correspondents of the Associated Negro Press.

For a year notable for achievement by Negroes and in behalf of the cause of equality in America, the selection of the sit-ins further points up its lasting significance.

For 1960 was the year in which a fighter, Floyd Patterson, shattered a jinnx to regain the world heavyweight title, a Negro politician, Rep. William L. Dawson, turned down a federal cabinet post and the jailing of a Negro minister in Georgia determined the election of a President.

It was the year in which a little known girl athlete, Wilma Rudolph, captured the admiration of the world by winning three Olympic gold medals, and Hulan Jack, the Negro holding the highest elective municipal job in the nation, was convicted of lying about acceptance of a gratuity.

Spotlight Harlem Hotel

A run-down Harlem hotel became the focal point of the world when Cuba's fiery Fidel Castro took refuge there and acted as host to Russia's explosive Nikita Khrushchev, who a few months earlier had caused the collapse of the Paris Summit Conference to the embarrassment of President Eisenhower.

The same 12-month period saw the South's militant Dr. Martin Luther King jr. cleared of a trumped-up tax charge by a team of smart Negro attorneys and another national figure, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, sweat out a federal trial on income tax violation that ended inconclusively.

It flung the name of a Negro newsman across the nation's headlines when Andrew Hatcher was made assistant press secretary to President - elect Kennedy and marked the end of the brilliant literary career of writer Richard Wright in Paris.

The year produced the not unprecedented factional clash of the America's largest Negro religious body when the annual meeting of the National Baptist Convention, USA, Inc., ended in disorder with two men, Dr. J. H. Jackson of Chicago, and Dr. Gardner C. Taylor of Brooklyn claiming the presidency.

Africa Emerges

1960 will go down in history as the year of emergence for Africa which gave painless birth to 14 new independent states and then nearly wrecked the United Nations and dominated the world's headlines when violent complications developed in the fifteenth, the infant Congo, that reached all the way to Brussells, Moscow and Washington.

Implementation of the six-year-old Supreme Court school decision proceeded with deliberation but little speed and finally exploded in New Orleans where it is more a legal fact than a living reality, with three little Negro girls in one school by themselves and another maintaining a beachhead along with eight white youngsters in another.

A beautiful American Negro girl, Lejeune Huntley, traveled to the Bohemian Cannes film festival and out-bikinied the other scantily-clad beauties of the world, and another, Corinne Huff, invaded the South to compete in the Miss United States contest in Miami.

Gets Olympic Crown

A powerful Negro athlete and excellent student, Rafer Johnson, manfully outperformed a Chinese rival to win the coveted Olympic decathlon crown and thus becomes the world's greatest all-around athlete. And taukative but talented Sammy Davis finally married a white girl, Swedish May Britt, and at year's end was happily awaiting the arrival of the stork.

But above and beyond all these eventful happenings of 1960, the sit-ins still remained the top solid achievement of the year.

A group of college students in Greensboro, N. C., last February rediscovered the sit-in technique which historians have traced back over the decades to the great Frederick Douglass, who is credited with having made effective use of it.

It spread like wild-fire, igniting militant flames in more than 300 communities, confounding the South and ruthlessly ripping up ingrown racial customs. It sent attorneys back to their law books, provoked special legislattive sessions, aroused new and bitter racial animosities and even forced an uncertain Eisenhower to make a half-hearted approving comment.

But more than anything else, it developed a broad base of mass support and a new, youthful, vigorous and fearless leadership that caused the NAACP to re-evaluate its operations, and Negro educators many sleepless nights of anguished meditation.

The sit-ins also aroused the conscience of many young white people, North and South, and brought about a new interracial alignment against social injustice.

SIT-IN STUDENTS GET AID

The Iowa Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa
Thurs. 1-5-61

Washington, D. C. — Executive Committee members of the American Council on Human Rights received a check last week from Dr. Gladyce B. Jones (R), basileus of Epsilon Omega Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Baltimore, Md. ACHR president, Dr. Marjorie Parker (L), and Dr. Lorraine Williams, chairman Student Sit-In Emergency Fund, announced sending $1,120 to aid student protest leaders at A. & T. College, Greensboro, N.C.

Sees Sit-In Movement As A Moral Protest

Chicago Defender Chicago, Ill
1-C7-13-61

BALTIMORE, Md. — "It is a shocking fact that a great many Americans no longer believe in the Bill of Rights," Stringfellow Barr, author and lecturer and former president of St. John's college in Annapolis, told Morgan State college students recently in an assembly celebrating Bill of Rights Day at the college.

Mr. Barr, now teaching at Rutgers university, said that in order to understand the Bill of Rights one must look at the moral issues behind the printed words.

In regard to the "sit-in" movement in this country, Barr said this movement illustrates the unwillingness of people to accept slavery.

It is a moral protest against mere legal power.

People are saying "I cannot obey a law which I feel is morally wrong."

"In disobeying immoral laws," Barr continued, "you should not do it secretly or by violence."

"As sad as it may seem, I believe that World War II had more to do with integration than any other factor.

"Many Negroes died on the battlefield fighting for the same ideals that all Americans fought for. Many asked themselves, 'why should they be treated any differently than anyone else?'

"But there is just one little problem — Americans have the shortest memory of any people on the face of the earth.

"When everything is going along satisfactorily, our moral senses are apt to get blunted.

"It just might be that the "sit-ins" are the re-awakening factor to our moral senses.

"They must feel they are morally right in doing this because they are running the risk of being shot without firing a shot at anyone."

Asked how a person would know what is morally right, Barr replied:

"The only way you can decide what is morally right is with God's help."

Barr, in closing, said that he did not advocate nor feel the need for rewriting the Bill of Rights but that present day facts should fit into the principles and moral issues behind it.

Sitdowners given back Tenn. fines

The Afro-Am' Baltimore, Md.
Dec. 1-14-61

WASHINGTON

The sitdown movement, now nearly a year old, entered a new phase this week as the action moved from the lunch counters to the courts.

For the first time a case involving the sitdowns is before the United States Supreme Court.

The high court is considering three cases involving the conviction of 15 students for demonstrations at Baton Rouge, La. lunch counters. A. Rough, La. lauch counters. A. students, filed the petition with the court last week.

* * *

IN MEMPHIS, TENN., circuit court judges not only dismissed charges against 40 persons convicted of staging sitdowns, but also refunded the fines imposed.

Arthur Shea, assistant city attorney, asked the courts to dismiss the charges and refund the fines because the facilities involved have been desegregated.

The demonstrators were arrested at the public library, zoo, art academy and museum. Tehy drew fines ranging from $26 to $51 when they appeared in city court.

* * *

THE SITDOWN movement neared a showdown on the legal front in three other areas:

In Little Rock, Ark., the state Supreme Court set Jan. 9 to hear oral arguments in the cases of 12 persons convicted in three sitdown demonstrations in Little Rock last March and April.

The defendants, all college students, were convicted in Municipal Court and Circuit Court of threatening to create a breach of the peace in a business establishment and refusing to leave the established when asked.

The students were fined and sentenced to jail.

The appeals involved constitutional questions.

Wiley A. Branton and Harold B. Anderson, attorneys of Pine Bluff, contend that laws are unconstitutional in nature and application. They also contend that the punishment meted out to the defendants was excessive and harsh and intended to break the spirit of other colored persons working toward racial equality.

They argued that there wasn't enough evidence for convictions.

* * *

IN BALTIMORE, MD., Judge Joseph R. Byrnes heard arguments on constitutional questions in connection with trespassing charges against students who staged a sitdown in a downtown restaurant several months ago.

Defense Counsel Tucker R. Dearing, Robert B. Watts and Mrs. Juanita Jackson Mitchell argued that the students were voicing their constitutional right of free speech by the sitdown procedure. They contended that this is a "new form of freedom of expression symbolizing a meaningful method of communication."

The defendants declared that although the trespass statute was a fair one, it was being enforced only against colored persons and therefore was being used to further discrimination.

It was further argued that the private property had been dedicated to public use, and that the users could not be denied their constitutional right to freedom of expression by the courts.

James W. Murphy, representing the State, contended that no court had ever held than an individual has the right to enter upon private property to exercise his constitutional rights.

IN RICHMOND, VA., Len R. Holt an attorney for 125 persons convicted on treaspass charges after sitdowns in Hopewell, Petersburg and Lynchburg, Va., argued that the application of the trespass law was unconstitutional.

The law, an emergency measure, was adopted by the Virginia General Assembly during the height of the sitdown demonstrations last February.

Holt had subpoenaed Gov. J. Lindsay Almond to testify but the three-judge Federal court excused the governor.

During a 4½ hour hearing, Holt was engaged in a lively verbal exchange with Presiding Judge Herbert S. Boreman. Holt told the court that had Almond been permitted to take the stand the governor would have testified "beyond any doubt that the statutes were enacted with the intent and purpose to punish and deter Negro citizens who might seek service at lunch counters practicing racial discrimination."

The judge asked "are you saying that is what you would like him to testify?"

Holt answered: "We say this is what he would testify."

Judge Boreman asked: "What do you base this statement on? Have you talked to the Governor? Can you present any witnesses who overheard the Governor say that?"

Holt answered: "We believe he would tell the truth. Never in the past has the Governor hesitated to say that he favored racial discrimination and that he would use his good offices to preserve it."

The three - judge panel reserved a decision pending briefs to be submitted by both sides.

* * *

IN OTHER lunch counter developments:

The managers of sever variety stores in Clearwater Largo and Denedin, Fla., agreed Thursday to desegregate their lunch counters. The move came after a committee of four colored persons met with the store managers.

One of the managers, Arthur Specht, general manager of 35 Grant stores in Florida, said he decided to desegregate lunch counters after the peaceful desegregation of lunch counters in Tampa last August. The variety stores involved , were Woolworth, Madison's and W. T. Grant.

In Jackson, Tenn., 47 college students staged sitdown demonstrations at lunch counters in two variety stores. Police said there were no incidents.

At Woolworth's, 35 took seats at the counter which was subsequently closed for the day. At. McLeellan's 12 students participated in the demonstration.

Both stores had reopened their lunch counter Wednesday after leaving them closed during two weeks of holiday shopping.

SIT-IN REVIEW
NBC-TV Dec.22,1960
or
(GENERAL TELECAST)

Birmingham Also Blacks Out Sit-In Review

The Call
Kansas City, Mo
1-6-61

By C.H. OLIVER

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (ANP) — "White Paper", the documentary film of the sit-in demonstrations, was cancelled by station WAPI-TV, Birmingham's NBC-TV outlet Wednesday night, Dec. 22.

In cancelling the program, televised nationally over the NBC network, Birmingham joined the city of New Orleans. In both cases, waves of protests greeted the announcements.

AIMS BLOW AT NAACP

Here in Birmingham, individual citizens, and civic organizations denounced the action. Among these was the Greater Birmingham Council on Human Relations, which termed the action "Nazi-like censorship."

Meanwhile, Charles F. Grisham, general manager of WAPI-TV, was quoted by the Birmingham Post-Herald as saying "Our station is not running a propaganda machine for the NAACP." He also said the sit-in program was too one-sided and controversial.

When station WDSU-TV in New Orleans cancelled the program, A. Louis Read, executive vice-president and general manager, said "it lacked an objective point of view."

Several Negroes were seen on the program, including students from Fisk university who took part in the sit-in demonstrations.

NBC 'Sit-in' telecast nixed in New Orleans

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md
Dec 17-61

NEW ORLEANS — A WDSU-TV official said Tuesday night (20) the station had declined to telecast an NBC program concerning sit-in demonstrations.

A. Louis Read, executive veep and general manager, said the program was not carried here because "it lacked an objective point of view."

In a statement issued Tuesday night, Read said:

* * *

"YESTERDAY (Monday), the National Broadcasting Co. provided its affiliate stations with an opportunity to preview, via closed circuit, the second in 'The White Paper' series entitled 'Sit-in.'

"After careful consideration, it was the judgment of the management of WDSU-TV that the program did not take an objective view, and did not adequately cover the conflicting viewpoints of this very involved issue.

"Therefore the management decided that the best interests of this community would not be served by telecasting the program at this time."

* * *

READ ADDED that TV stations in other southern cities also substituted the program.

WDSU-TV had listed the program on its Tuesday schedule.

NBC's Telecast on 'Sit-Ins' Informative' And Exciting

The Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Dec 17-61

NEW YORK — The NAACP hailed an NBC televised program on the Southern sit-in movement as a 'major contribution to an understanding of the present [illegible] of race relations in our

The Rules for Sit-In Conduct

The Sunday Star
DEC 3 1961
38a
GENERAL
DEC. 3 THE RULES FOR SIT-IN CONDUCT

By WILLIAM DUKE
Star Staff Writer

Racial segregation protests have assumed the formal trappings of a science.

Young, placard-carrying sit-in demonstrators can't, of course, follow an exact formula. But they are guided by strict rules and procedures, the products of 15 years of sit-ins, arrests, rallies and occasionally even violence.

The procedures are set mainly by the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), the national organization which supplies guidance, and sometimes cash to carry-on demonstrations throughout the county.

"Not all sit-ins are sponsored by CORE. of course," said Julius W. Hobson of Washington, "but more and more groups are beginning to realize that CORE's methods have proved to be effective." Mr. Hobson, a Government economist, is the part-time representative of CORE.

CORE's methods range from the all-embracing philosophy of "nonviolence" down to the last detail of what a demonstrator should wear, how much money he should carry, and how he should behave in a cellblock."

Nationally, the organization says it has about 25,000 members, half of them white. About 3,000 are on the active rolls, having pledged to go any where they are needed to lead volunteer demonstrators or to man potentially dangerous Freedom Rides.

Abide by CORE Rules

But the vast majority of the sit-in demonstrators and pickets who draw attention to segregation are volunteers who agree to learn and to abide by CORE's tactics.

Such a group met recently at the All Souls Unitarian Church in Washington to learn the "CORE method" before being assigned to a Freedom Ride on U. S. Route 40 in Maryland. This particular ride later was canceled when many of the restaurants desegregated but the desegregation was considered incomplete by CORE and a further demonstration was set for later this month.

At the Washington meeting—which Mr. Hobson later said is typical of CORE briefing sessions — a tall, young college student spoke to the volunteers like a battle-hardened commander to a company of green troops.

The "veteran" was 19-year-old Henry Thomas, a Howard University student, who served time in a Jackson (Miss.) jail and who was aboard a Freedom Bus burned by a mob near Anniston, Ala., last summer.

Most Are Young

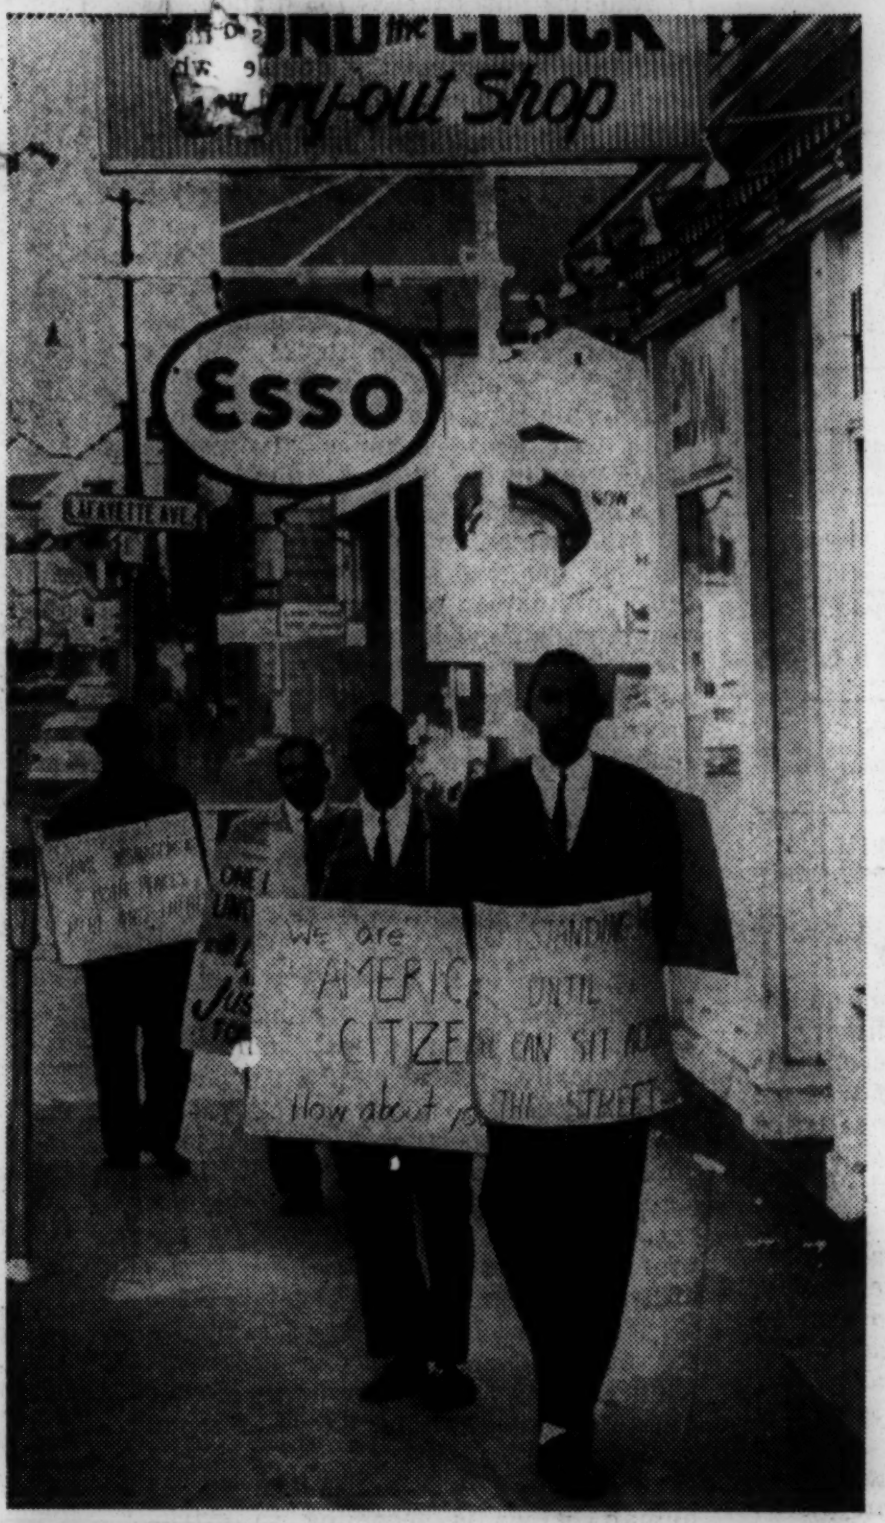
After explaining that CORE didn't expect any violence in Maryland, Mr. Thomas said:

"But no matter what happens to you, you are not to strike back —not with your fists or with words. It may be hard to keep from saying the things you feel deep inside yourself, but we expect to act like COREmen."



Well-dressed pickets in front of a store in a recent Annapolis segregation demonstration.—AP Wirephoto.

Most of the people who listened to Mr. Thomas were under 30, many of them students. Half of them were white. Mr. Hobson said that there are about 400 CORE members in Washington, and about 65 per cent of them are white.

The volunteers were told they were not expected to stay in jail if arrested under Maryland"s trespassing law. The CORE method, Mr. Hobson explained, was to select in advance special people who would agree to remain in jail. All others are expected to call for help and ask to be released on bail.

A CORE-sponsored demonstration is planned as well as a military engagement. Lawyers are reached—and asked to stand by. A list of emergency telephone numbers, where legal help and bail money can be found, is given to each demonstrator.

And bail money is considered just another logistics item. For the proposed Route 40 Freedom ride, for example, Baltimore citizens made available $250,000 in property for bail purposes. They even had the deeds cleared by city hall, and certified by notaries to prove the property was clear of liens.

But the most important ingredient in any demonstration, Mr. Hobson said, are the demonstrators themselves.

"We try to make sure that every one in a CORE sit-in is a mature person who can take the pressure of harassment without blowing-up," he said, "we've been lucky. In all the demonstrations we've had through the years, we've never had a demonstrator strike back."

Through experience CORE fieldmen have learned it is better to turn away potential demonstrators who might not hold up under fire.

Students under 18-years-old are told to stay home. Even the 18-year-olds are not allowed unless they have their parents' consent. "We don't want to be charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor," Mr. Hobson said.

College boys who want to wear cadet uniforms are also banned. "We don't want to look like a police force," Mr. Thomas said.

The rule specifies that demonstrators will be neatly dressed.

"I want the men to wear ties and suit coats, and the women to wear skirts, high heels and stockings," Mr. Thomas told the Washington group. "We don't want the slacks and shorts crowd. What you wear can help demonstrate to the public that we're different from the hoodlums who sometimes come to heckle us."

Demonstrators are told they must carry enough of their own money to pay for a full meal, if allowed to eat in a restaurant, with enough left over to get back home by public transportation if other arrangements fail.

"And carry some of your money in dimes," the experienced Mr. Thomas added. "You might have to make an emergency telephone call from the road or somewhere."

No Weapons Allowed

The Freedom Riders are also warned about what not to carry with them. No unnecessary items is the rule. Particular emphasis is put on pocket knives and nail files. Mr. Thomas explained that sometimes even a nail file can be labeled as a concealed weapon.

Besides the briefing sessions demonstrators are usually given mimeographed lists of do's and don'ts, check lists to indicate their success in their mission, and sheets assigning them to specific projects under specific leaders.

The procedures have evolved since the organization staged its first successful round of sit-ins—demonstrations which opened Chicago restaurants to Negroes in the mid-1940s.

But these same scientific tactics which CORE officials consider so effective in arousing public opinion to their cause, have been called communist-inspired methods by some Mississippi legislators.

Mr. Hobson has said he doesn't consider the tactics scientific nor communist-inspired.

"They are the best means we know of breaking down segregation," he said. "We believe that every individual—even a segregationist—has a conscience that can be appealed to . . . and we try to make that appeal through a planned demonstration."

Federals Enter N. O. School Case, Demonstrations Widespread

The Tuscaloosa News
Wire Items
Tuscaloosa, Ala.
Feb 17-61
Pg 1

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Justice Department responded swiftly to an appeal for help from financially pinched New Orleans school authorities by filing a civil contempt action designed to compel the state of Louisiana to release certain school funds.

It was the first court action by President Kennedy's administration in the troubled New Orleans situation where school funds have been withheld because of a months-long desegregation controversy.

The Orleans Parish School Board said that paychecks for teachers, principals and other school personnel would not be distributed as scheduled because of lack of "sufficient funds caused by the actions of the State Legislature."

The situation led Louis G. Riecke, president of the board, to send a telegram to Kennedy Thursday asking assistance.

Riecke said in the wire that state legislative action "as a result of federal desegregation orders has tied up our funds and effectively impaired our borrowing capacity to such an extent that unless we are able to meet payrolls we may have to close all public schools in New Orleans."

A few hours later Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy announced in Washington that court action was needed in view of the present situation.

The action was brought in U. S. District Court at New Orleans by U. S. Atty. M. Hepburn Many. It was directed against Shelby M. Jackson, the state superintendent of public education.

The Justice Department asked that Jackson be required to turn over to the Orleans Parish School Board about $350,000 withheld since last September.

Jackson also was asked to recognize the credentials and qualifications of teachers hired by the school board since Nov. 14, 1960, the date when two New Orleans schools were desegregated under a federal court order.

Officials at the Justice Department said the action was designed to have Jackson held in contempt unless he released the funds and recognized the teachers' credentials.

The contempt action came on a day marked by Negro student demonstrations protesting segregated lunch counters and motion picture theaters in three Southern states.

About 40 Negroes, all apparently of high school age, tried without success to purchase tickets to three white-only movie theaters in downtown Chattanooga, Tenn. Ten policemen watched the demonstrations along with crowds of white bystanders. No arrests were reported.

An estimated 80 to 100 Negro college students made unsuccessful attempts to enter four movie houses in downtown Nashville, Tenn. Some pushing and shoving was reported but no arrests were made. Several of the Negroes carried cameras but a newsman at the scene said he saw no pictures taken.

At Columbia, S. C. about 150 Negro college students staged sitins at five lunch counters for white persons. The demonstrations lasted about two hours but there were no incidents.

Police posted near three exits to Morris College at Sumter, S. C., prevented Negro students from starting parades into the downtown area. Students were permitted to leave the college grounds a few at a time, however.

The police measures were taken after three Negroes were arrested during sit-in demonstrations Tuesday and five others during a mass demonstration Wednesday. Police said the five scuffled with officers.

In Washington, the Justice Department said it received a telegram from the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) requesting it intervene in what the organization described as "assaults on Negroes" in Sumter County. The request was referred to the Civil Rights division for study.

Three Negro students were arrested during a sit-in at a downtown coffee shop in Atlanta, swelling to 80 the number held in jail on charges of violating the state's anti-tresspass law. All have refused bond as part of a "jail, no bail" plan designed to call attention to sit-ins aimed at segregated eating places.

Jim Aldredge, a fulton County commissioner, asked Negro leaders to call off plans for a mass demonstration at the jail Sunday designed to bolster morale of the student demonstrators. He said the proposed rally was unwise. Sheriff T. Ralph Grimes issued an order that no demonstrators be allowed on jail property.

Lillian Smith asks teens to take part in sit-ins

The Afro-American
Baltimore Md
3-25-61
P. 6.

NEW YORK — Famous southern author Lillian Smith urges the nation's teenagers to take an active part in the sit - in movement.

From her rustic mountaintop home in Clayton, Ga., Miss Smith, author of many books including the controversail "Strange Fruit," pleads with America's young people to answer the challenge of integration.

In an article in the forthcoming issue of Datebook Magazine, a publication for teenagers on sale April 6. Miss Smith states:

"Segregation or apartheid or caste — these are words that just don't fit into the mid-20th century. The sooner we discard them and what they make us believe, the better."

According to Miss Smith, it is up to America's teenagers to take the lead. "It is your obligation to help change things in as non-violent a way as is possible. Your world is in the future."

Theatres New Sit-In Target

By United Press International

Negro students in the South opened a new phase of their integration fight Wednesday on the first anniversary of the lunch counter sit-in movement.

Theatres were the new target.

Negroes at Nashville, Tenn., and Greensboro, N. C. where the first sit-ins occurred, lined up outside segregated theatres and demanded admission. They were turned away, or in some instances, box offices closed.

In Atlanta, an estimated 1500 students marched on the downtown area, but limited their activities to picketing outside department stores with segregated eating facilities. They carried signs demanding an end to Jim Crowism.

At Orangeburg, S. C. at least 10 Negroes were jailed in connection with sit-in demonstrations. Police said the protests were continuing and more arrests were expected.

Edward B. King, jr., administrative secretary of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, said students had been asked to "rededicate themselves" to the desegregation effort.

"We have called for stand-ins at theatres throughout the South as our first move in the second phase of student protest movement," he said.

Students in the North and West, King said, had been asked to conduct limited picketing at theatres belonging to the RKO, Loew's and Paramount chains in support of students in the South.

King said Negro students in the south would attempt to force integration at white theatres by setting up "revolving lines."

He explained that students would queue up at the box offices and as quickly as they were refused admittance they would take up position at the end of the line and make another request.

This, he said, would keep whites from obtaining tickets.

Sitdowners open drive on theatres

HAMPTON, Va. — The emphasis switched from lunch counter sitdowns to demonstrations at theaters, bowling alleys and other places of amusement as students throughout the South marked the first anniversary of the sitdown movement.

Fifteen Hampton Institute students were arrested and charged with trespassing after they staged a stand-in in the orchestra section of Lee Theater. The section is reserved for whites.

Ten of the demonstrators were released on $100 bond and five juveniles were released in custody of Joseph J. Brady, Hampton Institute director of public relations, pending a hearing set for Feb. 8.

Theaters were the target in Winston-Salem, N.C. as picket lines formed in front of three downtown theaters on Friday. The lines were manned by college students. Picketing was orderly.

Managers of the Carolina, Winston and Center theaters had no comment on the demonstrations.

* * *

IN GREENSBORO, N. C. where the sitdown movement began Feb. 1, 1961, the first anniversary was observed by college students who picketed downtown theaters.

Police kept close watch as students sought admittance to the all-white Center Theater and to the orchestra sections of two other movie houses where colored patrons are forced to sit in the balcony.

In Orangeburg, S.C. nine students were charged with trespassing after taking seats at an all-white lunch counter.

The police said J. B. Todd, manager of the S. H. Kress store, twice warned the students not to take seats. When they did, policemen, who had been called, made the arrest.

In Rock Hill, S. C., ten college students were convicted Thursday of trespassing at the white lunch counter of a Rock Hill variety store.

Recorder's Court Judge Billy D. Hayes imposed fines of $100 and 30-day jail sentences on ten Friendship College students arrested in McCrory's variety store Tuesday. They filed notice of appeal and bond was set at $200.

* * *

IN SAVANNAH, GA., the Justice Department ordered a civil rights investigation in the arrest of eight youths for playing basketball on a white playground.

Charles Brown, agent for the FBI, said his office in Savannah had begun the investigation.

In Durham, N.C. the manager of the Center Theater after a picket line formed in front of the establishment, the manager, said:

"In view of the obvious fact that our separate facilities for Negro patrons are no longer acceptable to many, and what we believe a majority, we are closing these facilities."

Ralph Luker, a white Duke University student, said "We're going to keep up picketing until we get them (colored patrons) in."

* * *

IN NASHVILLE, Tenn., several hundred colored persons were denied admission to downtown theaters. Police said the groups were orderly and no disturbances were reported. The theaters are being operated on a segregated basis.

Several Nashville restaurants and lunch counters were integrated several months ago after a series of sitdown demonstrations.

In High Point, N.C. more than 100 high school pupils picketed the Paramount Theater in observance of the first anniversary of sitdown demonstrations.

The line marched in front of the theater, which is operated in a city-owned building, and is the only white theater here with a colored balcony.

The demonstrators carried signs reading:

"Segregation is the scar on American prestige" "We picket for tickets" and "the presence of segregation is the absence of democracy."

No incidents were reported and no arrests made.

* * *

IN. CHARLOTTE, .N. C. demonstrators lined up in front of two downtown movie houses and took turns trying to buy tickets.

Police Chief Jesse James said demonstrations were orderly and there were no incidents.

One person would go to the box office, ask for a ticket and when he was turned down go to the back of the line. The next person in line would then ask for a ticket.

The demonstrators carried no signs and did not picket.

IN PETERSBURG, VA., Central State Hospital's new cafeteria for employees was closed as the result of a dispute over racial segregation. Theodore G. Denton who closed the facility said segregation is "definitely the policy of the State Hospital Board."

The hospital has 1,500 colored employees and 100 white workers. The colored employees boycotted the segregated restaurant and forced its clssing.

"There are simply not enough white employees for the cafeteria to break even," Denton said.

* * *

IN EAST ST. LOUIS trespassing charges against 13 persons who picketed an East St. Louis bowling alley, were dismissed. The bowling alleys contend they are private clubs and thus not covered by a state law prohibiting racial discrimination.

In Washington, D. C. Trinity College students recently adopted a resolution supporting sitdown demonstrations as a means of leading to "nation-wide integration."

The resolution, drafted and voted on by students, deplores discrimination in any facility "allegedly serving the general public."

The resolution said:

"An individual has the right to work peacefully for the recitification of such social injustice through non-violent legal protest."

Students voted 330 to 120 for the resolution. Trinity College has an enrollment of 650.

* * *

INTERVIEWED IN Raleigh, N. C., the Rev. James Lawson said desegregation is proceeding in Nashville, Tenn. but a push to speed the process will begin soon.

The Rev. Mr. Lawson, leader of Nashville's sitdown movement, is now pastor of Scott Chapel Mtrodist Chuch in Shelbyville, Tenn.

In New York James Farmer, pioneer leader of the non-violent struggle against racial discrimination, took office Feb. 1 as national director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE(.

In Atlanta, the Georgia Senate Wednesday approved a bill which would prevent the recurrence of sitdown demonstrations at the Capitol.

By a 20-3 vote, the Senate passed a bill which limits the use of the Capitol Building, outside of its usual functions, to "refreshment stands" for state legislators and their guests.

A NEW LAW to bar mass picketing in Atlanta was proposed in the city council Wednesday after 1,500 university students formed a picket line to celebrate the first anniversary of the sitdowns.

Police Chief Herbert Jenkins told the aldermanic police committee, in asking for the new ordinance, "Some of the picketing today almost paralyzed some businesses.

Six of the studetns were taken to police headquarters and released shortly afterwards. No arrests or incidents were reported.

In Dallas, Texas an ordinance apparently aimed at both sitdown demonstrators and mobs opposing school integration was passed by the city council.

It prohibits congregating or loitering when forbidden by policemen and calls for a $200 maximum fine for violators.

Stand-Ins Continue At Kaufman's And Stewarts

The Louisville Defender
Louisville, Ky.
Feb 21 61

An interracial team composed of members of the Congress of Racial Equality this week continued their stand-in demonstrations at Kaufman's of Kentucky and Stewart's Dry Goods Company.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and CORE announced following the demonstrations that "Negroes would be asked to join their "Nothing new for Easter" buying campaign directed at the downtown area.

The two civil rights organizations proposed the campaign to protest discriminatory practices in hiring and access to public accommodations to Negroes in the downtown area.

Officials of the organizations said the drive would begin February 20 and extend past the Easter holiday. The mass withdrawal of Negro business is planned to coincide with stand-in and sit-in demonstrations conducted by CORE.

Saturday's pickets were conducted during the noon rush hour at the Charl-Mont tea room at Kaufman's 427 S. Fourth and Stewart's Fourth and W. Walnut. The pickets were conducted peachfully with no incidents.

K. D. Kerr, one of the demonstrators, said that a chain was used at both Stewarts and Kaufman's. He said the pickets remained for a hour and a half at each store.

Both stores closed their restaurants following demonstrations by pickets from CORE and the Civil Rights Commission of the AMEZ church. The Charl-Mont tea room and the Stewart restaurant opened for business the following Monday.

Kaufman's and Stewarts have maintained segregated lunch eon facilities despite the continued demonstrations. Kaufman officials have stated that they have not closed the door to integration but would wait until the rest of the Fourth Street stores desegregated.

The majority of Fourth street department and dime stores, however, have desegregated their lunch counters. The list includs the W. T. Grant Department store, McCory's, Kresge's Woolworth dime stores and Walgreen's department store.

Theater Stand-Ins On Lincoln's Day

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.
Feb 17 61

BY PAT CONWAY

AUSTIN, Tex. — (UPI) — Protests against movie theater segregation, sparked by University of Texas students, were held across much of the nation—Sunday—Abraham Lincoln's birthday.

The largest demonstrations were staged at Austin, where the University of Texas is located. Hundreds of students conducted stand-ins in the central Texas city at movie houses.

Reports of protests being filed or stand-ins being held came from Dallas, Tex., Boston, San Antonio, Tex., New York and Chicago.

In the stand-in protests, the demonstrators line up in front of the movie's ticket-seller and, when they reach the window, ask if the theater is segregated. If so, the protestor refuses to buy a ticket—and returns to the end of the line. Both Negroes and whites took part in the stand-ins in Texas.

The only incident reported was a bomb hoax at a San Antonio theater. Police searched the movie house, but did not remove the patrons.

Other students in cities across the nation had promised Chandler Davidson, of El Paso, Tex., chairman of Students for Direct Action, that protests would be made. These cities included Houston, Tex., Shreveport, La., San Francisco and Ann Arbor, Mich.

Davidson said the demonstrations were aimed at Trans-Texas theaters, the Interstate Circuit, Loews, Inc., and RKO theaters.

The demonstrations, which included picketing at some points, lasted anywhere from a few minutes to several hours.

When the protest ended in Austin, Davidson spoke to the demonstrators.

He said: "This has been a great success. This is not our last stand."

At Austin, three students opposed to movie theater integration picketed those who staged pro-integration stand-ins.

In cities where theaters are integrated, students would simply register a protest at the box office that other theaters in the chain are not permitting members of all races.

Stand-Ins Rap Texas Movie Segregation

The Courier
Louisville, Ky.
Feb 25 61

Austin, Dallas Scenes Of Collegiate Action

Austin, Tex., Feb. 12 (UP)—Hundreds of University of Texas students chose Abraham Lincoln's birthday Sunday to stage mass demonstrations against movie-theater segregation.

They got sympathy protests from nearly 100 Southern Methodist University students in Dallas and expected similar demonstrations from students in 11 other cities across the nation.

Mon. 2-13-61

The chairman of Students for Direct Action said he had commitments from students in San Antonio, Dallas, Houston, Shreveport, La., New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cambridge, Mass., Ann Arbor, Mich., Oberlin, Ohio, and Champaigne, Ill., that they would demonstrate in sympathy.

Demonstrate Downtown

The Austin students began stand-ins at the box offices of two theaters bordering the University of Texas campus.

The University of Texas students were joined by students of Huston-Tillotson College, Concordia Lutheran College, and St. Edwards University, and they went to downtown Austin for the first time and demonstrated at theaters there.

They set up pickets as well as stand-ins at the downtown theaters.

One group of students sang a parody of the battle hymn of the republic which went: "We will send Bill Blakley C.O.D. to Stanleyville Glory, Glory, Integration." The reference was to Texas' interim Senator William A. Blakley, who voted against confirmation of Robert Weaver, a Negro, as head of the United States Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Stand-Ins Hit Bias In Chain Theatres, Picket 'Em Up North

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Ill.
Feb 25-Mar 3 61

Lincoln's birthday was selected by students the nation over to spur drive to break bias at theatres where Negroes are not admitted because of their race and color.

Introduction of the "stand-ins" plan arrived in Independance, Mo., home of ex-President Harry Truman, followed by one staged in Chapel Hill, N. C. and later Atlanta, Ga. This was of course all in Dixie where bias maintains at almost every theatre. The particular case of the school in Chapel Hill involved Negroes being banned from house showing the all-Negro film, "Porgy 'N Bess."

Then came Lincoln's birthday and the big push that was national in scope. From many of the colleges about the nation students engaged in picketing against theatre chains like Paramount, Balaban and Katz, to name a few. These are the chains operating theatres in Dixie where Negroes are banned from affiliated theatres.

Northern cities hit by the pickets, most of them interracial, included Chicago, San Francisco and New York. Among the many disgusting situations at the theatres is fact that in states where sudents are integrated the Negroes cannot enter the movie theatres. Richmond and Hampton in Virginia showed signs of relief during the picketing. Hampton, where Hampton Institute is located and Richmond, a short distance away may agree to easing the race ban to avoid future picketing it is predicted.

38a 1961

Nov.

SIT INS
MISS LILLIAN SMITH

GENERAL

'SIT-INS GREATEST FORCE,' SAYS LILLIAN SMITH

p.11 The Bommicle
Defender

CHICAGO—One of the South's most active leaders in the quest for "peaceful integration," Miss Lillian Smith, novelist and author of "Strange Fruit," declared Sunday that the sit-in movement of the South was the "greatest force" ever created in this country to change man.

Wed. 11-22-61

In an off-the-cuff address presented to more than 500 persons at Central Presbyterian Church, on Chicago's Westside, the silvery-haired authoress spoke happily of the great changes and accomplishments which have come to her Southland, and of more than 25 years of her own life spent in helping to bring them about.

Her experiences in the realm of race relations and her efforts to bring dignity to all peoples were revealed in her address which spanned the continents of China and America.

Louisville, Ky.

'SHALLOW REASONS'

In a delightfully quiet voice richly colored with the drawl of her native Georgia, Miss Smith, at one and the same time, emphasized that thousands of white persons, like herself, are fighting for integration in the South, and then apologized for "the shallow reasons" which have caused many white southerners to act favorably for integration.

The noted writer kept asking probing, rhetorical questions:

"Are the hearts and minds of people really being opened?"

"Do Negroes know their purchasing power is the difference between loss and profit?"

And to the sit-inners, themselves, to see if they are really aware of the deeper implications of all they have done, she asked:

"What is going to happen to the sit-in student after he gets the lunch counter opened? Are we working for human dignity, or just to open lunch counters?"

MAGNOLIA ROOM

Although Negroes can now eat in the lavish finery of the "Magnolia Room," in the largest department store in downtown, Atlanta, Miss Smith asked if its owner, Dick Rich, "suddenly got a vision of what the world could be like if we all tried to make it good."

Unhappily, Miss Smith suggested that Dick Rich knew only too well that Negro dollars are the difference between profit and loss."

Perhaps referring to images created in her newest book, "The Mob and the Ghost," this quiet woman who, herself, appeared to be steeped in dignity, challenged mobs of the South to any rightful claim to reality.

'CHASE GHOSTS'

Those mobs chase ghosts, she explained. "There was never a mob that didn't chase a ghost. They don't chase man, they don't know man."

A VIRGINIA STORY

In Richmond, an organization of Negro voters called "Crusade For Voters" put on a blitz campaign with telephone and transportation committee and poll watchers. Most unique feature was the recruiting of a bicycle brigade of teenagers. A few hours before the polls closed, the kids picked up lists of those who had not voted yet, then took off on their wheels to knock on doors and round up the delinquents. It worked beautifully.

OCTOBER
SURVEY TALLIES "SIT-IN" GAINS

Integration Progress

Christian Science Monitor
Wed 10-4-61

Survey Tallies 'Sit-In' Gains

By a Special Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Atlanta

A year and a half ago, four Negro college students in Greensboro, N.C., approached a lunch counter and surprised the white management by asking for service. By this simple gesture they started a movement that has now resulted in the desegregation of at least some restaurants in more than 100 cities in southern and North-South border states.

The rapid spread and success of what became known as the "sit-in" movement was summarized in a study by the Southern Regional Council here, a biracial organization devoted to improving relations between the white and Negro races. It covers in detail the methods, successes, and failures of the movement.

Even observers who have followed the sit-ins closely since their start are amazed by their scope as disclosed in the study. The council estimates that at least 70,000 Negroes and white sympathizers have participated in "sit-ins," picketing, marching, and mass meetings. Of these about 3,600 have been arrested, the council said.

White Sympathy Noted

While virtually all the leaders and most of the participants were Negroes, the council said, the movement aroused national sympathy and some cooperation by white students.

Indeed the council concluded that the sit-ins "aroused American college students more than any issue since New Deal and world peace controversies of the 1930's."

As to the future:

"The enthusiasm generated by the student movement will not die out. Students and adults supporting it will undoubtedly continue their campaign to help the South overcome injustice in public accommodations, in voter registration, in employment, and in churches."

In view of the thousands of students and sympathizers involved in states where racial antipathies are deep, there were relatively few incidents of violence.

In Jacksonville, Fla., one person was killed and 70 injured during a three-day riot. In Houston, Texas, a Negro man was stabbed by a white man in a parking lot, and another Negro was flogged with a chain by three white men. In Portsmouth, Va., Negroes were attacked by white teenagers carrying wrenches and hammers.

The sit-in movement and accompanying boycotts and other demonstrations attracted support from several Negro organizations. Most prominent in them was the Student Non-Violent Co-ordinating Committee, founded in April, 1960, and given permanent form at a conference at Atlanta University Center last fall.

The council's report followed by only a few days one of the greatest victories gained by the Negro student demonstrators—that in Atlanta, where 13 department or chain stores desegregated their restaurants or lunch counters.

An abbreviated summary of the council's state-by-state report on the sit-ins and other demonstrations follows:

Alabama — Movement began Feb. 25, 1960, in Montgomery when 35 students from Alabama State College took seats in the county court house snack shop. The cities of Tuskegee, Montgomery, Mobile, Huntsville, and Birmingham were affected. Some 5,500 demonstrators took part, and 86 were arrested. No desegregation was accomplished, although the later Freedom Rides resulted in availability of service at the Montgomery bus terminal.

Arkansas—Movement started March 10, 1960, in Little Rock, when 50 students from Philande Smith College "sat in" at Woolworth's. The movement spread to Pine Bluff and Fort Smith. Twenty students were arrested. At least one restaurant was desegregated in Fort Smith.

Florida — First sit-ins occurred Feb. 12, 1960, in De Land, spread to Tallahassee, and then to 12 other cities. Some 2,500 demonstrators took part, and 243 were arrested. Some facilities in 15 cities have been desegregated.

Georgia—Beginning in Atlanta March 15, 1960, the sit-in movement spread to Savannah, Macon, Columbus, Augusta, and Marietta. An estimated 7,000 persons took part, and at least 292 were arrested. Some desegregation has taken place in three cities, and Savannah has established a biracial committee.

Kentucky—The movement began Feb. 27, 1960, when 20 Negro students from the University of Kentucky "sat-in" at a variety store in Lexington. The movement spread to Frankfort and Louisville. An estimated 6,000 demonstrators took part, and 374 were arrested. Now nine cities have desegregated some of their eating facilities.

Louisiana — Demonstrations began in New Orleans on March 8, 1960, and spread to Baton Rouge and Shreveport. An estimated 10,000 persons took part, and 71 were arrested. There has been no desegregation.

Mississippi—On March 27, 1961, nine Negro students of Southern Christian College attempted to use facilities of the municipal library in Jackson and were arrested. Other integration attempts were made at Biloxi and Starkville. About 1,600 participated, and 40 were arrested. There has been no desegregation. (Note: The report does not include the Freedom Riders, of whom a large number were arrested in Jackson.)

North Carolina—The sit-in movement began Feb. 1, 1960, in Greensboro when four Negro students from North Carolina A and T College asked for service. The movement spread to 17 other cities in the state. An estimated 4,200 persons were involved in pro-integration demonstrations, and 268 were arrested. Some degree of desegregation has been carried out in 17 cities.

Oklahoma—Actually sit-ins started in Oklahoma City in 1958, long before the 1960-61 student movement. Others have been held in Enid, Tulsa, and Stillwater. The report made no estimate of persons involved but said at least eight had been arrested. In Oklahoma City, 116 eating places have been integrated. Some desegregation has occurred in four other cities.

South Carolina—Sit-in demonstrations began Feb. 12, 1960, in Rock Hill and spread to 11 other cities. About 4,000 persons were involved, and 947 arrested. There has been no desegregation.

Tennessee—The sit-in movement began Feb. 13, 1960, among students from Fisk University, Tennessee A and I, and American Baptist Theological Seminary in Nashville. The movement spread to five other cities. Some 16,000 demonstrators were involved, and 692 arrested. There has been desegregation in seven cities.

Texas—The movement started in Houston March 5, 1960, when 100 students from Texas Southern University staged a sit-in at a supermarket lunch counter. The movement spread to Dallas, San Antonio, and five other cities. About 6,500 students participated, and 317 were arrested. Partial desegregation has been carried out in 10 cities.

Virginia—The movement began with 25 students from Hampton Institute, Hampton, and spread to 18 other cities. An estimated 11,000 demonstrators were involved, and 235 arrested. Desegregation has been carried out in 24 cities.

38a 1961

GENERAL

NOVEMBER

ATTY. THURGOOD MARSHALL

WITHDRAWS AS SIT-IN COUNSEL

Marshall Withdraws As 'Sit-In' Counsel

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — In a brief order issued Monday morning, the United States Supreme Court granted motions filed by Judge Thurgood Marshall for "leave to withdraw" his appearance as counsel for defendants in several cases, including the now famous "Sit-In" appeals.

Non-Violent Principles —

HOW THE NEGRO CHURCH HAS BACKED THE SIT-IN MOVEMENT

The sit-in movement hat the Solid South in a sociological upheaval that has produced a crack in the segregation pattern. Just as important is that is, in essence, a religious movement that has the blessing of the U. S. church. Negro ministers, in particular, who heretofore talked and sermonized about justice, but feared to do anything about it, are now standing squarely behind their young counterparts and refusing to budge.

This might be indicative that the Negro church is coming of age. If the Negro Church is coming of age, so is the Negro minister, who, until recen years was more concerne with fund-raising benefits ttas and socials than in rol ling up his slives and get ting to work on the prob lems that concerned Ne grots. Now he seems to be attempting do do much more than has been traditional. Where he used to shout and criticize on Sundays and remain silent during the week, he is becoming the most persistent leader in the Negro's civil rights struggle—so much so, in fact, that people are now beginning to feel that the Church will produce the most significant Negro leaders of the future.

One reason Negro ministers have seldom been able to assume greater responsibility in the Negro's struggle for equality is that the average Negro minister was educationally unprepared. While many possessed the ability to raise funds and sway huge masses on Sundays, few could offer and put into action programs suitable to correct the situations they condemned.

Coupled with the forceful leadership of the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. and the unussual unity among Negro ministers who supported the successful bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala., the sit-in demonstrations against segregation in southern restaurants have inspired Negro ministers across the nation to act.

The nature of the movement, and the goals of the students who are spearheading the demonstrations are so theologically sound and Christian that religious groups in bothe the North and South are giving them their strongest support.

How Sit-Ins Began

Reflecting impatience over the slow pace of action on civil rights, the demonstrations were sparked February 1, 1960, by the refusal of a Greensboro, N. C. variety store to serve four Negro college students at its lunch counter. Patterned on the slave-day technique of peaceful resistance, the sit-ins spread over 70 communities throughout the South, several communities in the border states and the midwest.

The most notable feature of the demonstrations has been the unexpected extent to which they have been supported by white students and endorsed by religious leaders, both white and Negro.

In Greensboro, itself, two religious groups set a pattern by openly supporting Negro demonstrations against discrimination at lunch counters in the city or anywhree else in the state. They were the Greensboro Ministers Fellowship, made up of Protestant and Jewish clergymen, and the Greensboro Methodist Fellowship.

Earlier, the executive board of the N. Carolina Council of Churches' Department of United Church Women, meeting in Greensboro, recommended that local councils study all aspects of the problems raised by anti-discrimination demonstrations.

Clergy Backs Students

In Raleigh, where Mayor W. G. Enloe had appointed an interracial committee to study the problem, 59 white and Negro ministers issued a joint statement branding unch counter segregation as "only a symbol of the many problems which nted to be faced openly and frankly." Protestant clergymen offered to support any chain stores agreeing to end racial segregation at the lunch counters.

In addition, the Catholic Interracial Council of Raleigh adopted a resolution declaring: "We view with sincere interest and sympathy the efforts of our fellow citizens of the State of North Carolina to obtain recognition of their human rights . .

At Charlotte, clergymen and church groups of both races spoke up for the demonstrators in several North Carolina counties. Support for the movement also came from Dr. Clifford Earle, secretary of the Department of Social Education and Action of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. Some ministerial groups urged the boycotting of establishments practicing segregation, and later participated in picketing them.

One of the worst racial clashes in the city's history took place in Late February at Chattanooga, Tenn., where 32 whites and Negroes were arrested during a two-day series of fights at lunch counters and in the streets. Further trouble was averted when local clergyment intervened and urged people to "go home and pray."

At Nashville, Tenn., faculty members of Vanderbilt University's Divinity School and Liberal Arts College overwhelmingly opposed the action of the university board of trustees in dismissing 32-year-old James Lawson, a seminary student, who led the demonstrations in Nashville stores. Ten Divinity School professors and the Dean turned in their resignations in protests, and a University of Chicago dean turned down the offer to accept an appointment as the dean.

Church bodies in the north also gave strong blessings to students who wished to join in the demonstrations. In a letter to students everywhere in the country, the Central Committee of the National Student Christian Federation in New York said they should not only participate in, but help to organize sit-down demonstrations at lunch counters where discrimination is practiced.

When various elements, both Negro and white, criticized the young people for starting the movement, anl later spreading it to theatres and churches, it was a noted clergyman who came to their defense in a widely cerculated magazine. "There are those who criticize the young people," said Bishop Matthew W. Clair o fthe Central Jurisdiction of the Methodist Church. "Do not criticize them. We may not have the courage to do what they are doing, but we must give them our support."

Sitdown hits bowling lanes

MISS DOROTHY ADAMS, 18, of St. Louis and four youths staged a sit-in demonstration at the Del-Bowl Bowling Lanes in St. Louis Sunday afternoon after the operator of the white recreation center refused to permit them to bowl. The manager called police when the group took seats in the spectators' section. Police questioned to youths, then left. The manager then closed the bowling alleys for the rest of the day.

* * *

ALBERT SAMPSON and ISAAC FOX, two Shaw University students who have appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court 30-day jail sentences meted out to them following lunch counter sitn demonstrations at Raeigh last year, were notified last week that the NAACP will help finance their defense.

* * *

JUDGE JOHN W. CREWS of Richland County Court, Columbia, S.C., last week turned down appeals of sitdown convictions for trespass filed by seven Columbia demonstrators. The students, convicted in March, 1960, are Simon Boule, Talmadge J. Neal, Johnny M. Clark, Milton Bernard Green, David Carter, Richard Counts and Charles Fulton.

Leadership Found Wanting -- Baldwin

Author sees sitdowners 'effective'

By EDWARD PEEKS
WASHINGTON

Author James Baldwin doesn't think much of the general run of colored leaders, because "they show a positive desire to avoid identity with the masses of our people."

This tendency stands out among colored Americans in the middle class who are government employees, teachers, doctors, lawyers and other professionals, the noted 36 - year - old author told the AFRO.

"There is a positive desire to avoid identity and some show real contempt," Mr. Baldwin said. "I think they are afraid of the masses of our people. It's akin to the kind of feeling that the average colored person gets when he sees another drunk on the streetcar."

* * *

THE REVERSAL of this attitude is seen in the new generation of the race as best represented by members of the sitdown movement, said the writer who burned the pages of the New York Times Magazine a few Sundays ago in an article entitled "A Negro Assays the Negro."

He wrote that the recent demonstration at the UN by nationalist groups was symptomatic of resentment among the colored masses over second - class citizenship.

"The colored students in the South have put our leadership on the spot," Mr. Baldwin said during the interview.

And in the background of the new mood among colored Americans is Africa, where "there is no question about the dignity of the colored man," he said.

* * *

ASKED IF he believed there was any danger of colored Americans generally becoming advocates of "black supremacy" as attributed to some nationalist groups, he answered:

"Yes."

Then said, "One of the ways which it can be avoided is for us to make use of our tremendous energy and force to recreate a new vision in this country.

"The theater, for example, would become a more vivid and vital thing if we played a greater part in it. Whites don't like to deal with the level of life we live and know, but real art comes from life.

"An untold story is the way students in the South have begun to move.

"The white world as we have known it no longer exists," he added. "The colored and the white have to deal with this fact."

In the theater and out, whites tend to resist the truth about conditions forced upon colored people, he said. Colored people try to dodge the truth about themselves.

"Whenever you are telling the truth, you touch a nerve in them," Mr. Baldwin said of whites. "They have to provide a defense."

In one of his recent magazine articles, he wrote that it is hard for them to understand that colored Americans want to be treated like men, though many of these whites are "people who have mastered Kant, Hegel, Shakespeare, Marx, Freud and the Bible."

* * *

MR. BALDWIN said defenses on the part of whites include psychological stereotypes ranging from "the noble savage" to the sitdowner.

Members of the majority group take the attitude that "whites can't do this, but colored can."

He said, "Whites could've started the student movement in the South as well as colored. They can recreate something."

There are stereotypes which try to compliment the colored American and there are others like the sex bogies that aim to degrade and praise, he said.

* * *

ANOTHER AREA in which colored Americans can put their energies to work is in their own neighborhoods and communities, he said.

Trials start for 189 nabbed for parade at state capital

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The trials of 189 college, high school and university students arrested here last March are due to start here on Wednesday.

The defendants are represented by a defense counsel headed by Lincoln Jenkins, attorney, who has been active in sitdown cases for the past 18 months.

* * *

MR. JENKINS also represented the seven students whose convictions were sustained, last week, by the Richland County Court.

The lawyer announced that notice of appeal has been filed with the court that the cases will be taken to the South Carolina Supreme Court.

The seven students are enrolled at Allen University and Benedict College.

They are Simon Bouie, Talmadge J. Neal, Johnny M. Clark, Milton B. Green, David Carter, Richard Counts and Charles Fulton.

Nashville moves to end movie bars

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A move to desegregate downtown theatres was started here, last week, with a committee of students and theatre managers cooperating in the effort.

It was agreed that during the first stage of the experiment only patrons screened by the committee would be admitted. The purpose is to avoid friction. Later all theatre-goers are to be admitted without selection.

On another front of the desegregation effort, a suit is being filed in federal court asking that rest rooms in public libraries of the city be desegregated.

Also, a number of organizations are discussing ways and means of eliminating discrimination in employment, hospitals and public facilities.

In Baltimore, Md., picketing for jobs and elimination of racial segregation at suburban theatres continued, last week, with the effort being sponsored by the Civic Interest Group.

One of the theatres being picketed is the Northwood, located in the Northwood Shopping Center.

An interracial group of students was barred from the theatre, according to Leo Burroughs, recruiting chairman.

Lynchburg hears negotiation report

LYNCHBURG, Va.—Plans to eliminate racial segregation from places of public accommodation will be outlined at a massing meeting at Court Street Baptist Church, May 14.

In making the announcement, the Rev. Virgil A. Wood, president of the Lynchburg Improvement Association, said a report would be made on the progress made during the past 60 days in the anti-segregation drive.

THE MEETING also will mark the end of the 60 - day moratorium voted in the sitdown activities to all city authorities and members of the Interracial Committee to negotiate and end to racial segregation.

The guest speaker at the mass meeting, which is open to the public, will be the Rev. Vernon Johns, former president of Virginia Seminary here.

AUGUST
C O R E
TO TEACH SIT-IN TECHNIQUES

CORE Stages 'Socio-Dramas' To Teach Sit-in Techniques

P-A 3 The Washington Post

After the two Negro "actors" were refused restaurant service in a "socio-drama" put on yesterday by the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), audience criticized their performance.

Wed 8-23-61

The mock test of segregation practices was conducted by CORE's "Virginia Action Institute" at the 12-acre hilltop estate of the Mt. Vernon Unitarian Church near the Potomac in Fairfax County.

The 18-day conference is being held for 40 CORE members to train them in nonviolent methods of combatting segregation and to try to "end discrimination in places of public accommodation" in Northern Virginia.

Washington Post

CORE Field Director Gordon R. Carey explained that the "socio-drama" CORE members what to expect when they test the policy of a cafe, bowling alley or movie or when they "negotiate" with owners of such places.

In one "socio-drama" the waitress served two white men but ignored their two Negro companions. When one Negro asked for a hamburger and milk shake, she said, "We don't serve Negroes here."

Finally he asked to see the manager, who said:

"It's the law—we don't serve Negroes. You'd save me a lot of trouble if you'd just go."

After disputing the decision, they went. The manager was played by Rudolph Lombard, a Negro who is former CORE chairman in New Orleans.

After the scene, one CORE member in the audience said the actors who played the Negroes should not have argued with the manager.

Carey said the Institute, which will end Aug. 31, plans "action projects" — sit-ins, stand-ins, picketing—if it fails current negotiations with local business operators. He said CORE began the first of three negotiations yesterday. "We may also go to a segregated beach," he said.

So far, CORE members have visited about 30 Northern Virginia restaurants and have been refused service in 19. Sometimes they were admitted to bowling alleys and drive-in movies which later turned them away. They were refused entry into theaters, pools and skating rinks.

Last Sunday CORE representatives, who are trying to set up a local chapter in Northern Virginia, spoke at 10 churches in Alexandria and Fairfax. They also are writing area political leaders.

P-A 3

The Washington Post Wed. 8-23-61

By Frank Hoy, Staff Photographer

Members of CORE put on a mock demonstration of a sit-in. The four seated at the table have been refused service by the "waitress," at left, and the "manager" with his arms folded stands above them. CORE members are holding an 18-day conference on non-violent methods of combatting segregation at the hilltop estate of the Mt. Vernon Unitarian Church.

SECRET BUDGET TALKS CONTINUE; SIT-INS RESUME

The fiscal future, for teachers, for the state, continued the closed-door concern during the limbo of legislative recess this week.

Sit-ins resumed in Atlanta, and bond-refusing Negro students had the jail nearly full by week's end.

Secret Spending

Every day, the House-Senate Appropriations Committees met in secret, refusing mainly even to make statements on what they were doing. Whatever it was, it was against the backdrop of Gov. Ernest Vandiver's promise to veto an "unrealistic" appropriations bill and his dark assertion that contemplated changes in the budget law looked like a "power grab" to him.

The governor was gone, some said perhaps angrily, on an ordinary vacation visit to Miami. Others speculated he might be job hunting in Washington. Before he left he announced discovery of an incredible "clerical" error of $4.5 million in his budget proposal which would give teachers, he said, a $100 raise.

The committees began the week talking strongly about taking back control for the legislature of state spending, and by week's end were still talking of finding $200 or $300 for the teachers—but within the governor's $406 million spending limit. A side battle still looming, perhaps on House versus Senate lines, was that over whether the appropriations bill should be for one year, or two.

Next week perhaps the suspense may end. Will the teachers get the big raise they want? Will the budget law be changed, with perhaps a ceiling on spending by executive decree from the surplus? Whatever happens, the public who puts up all the money must wait until the legislators they elect decide it's time to tune them in. Secret sessions resume Monday.

Bills in Limbo

With yet another week of recess to go, there were these legislative stirrings:

The state school board came out where it should be, against repeal of compulsory school attendance. . . . Rep. Robert Scoggin claimed Herman Talmadge approval of changing the county unit split this session. Strong indications were still for a study commission, however.

Methodist and Baptists were in full cry about a bill to legalize and thereby get some taxes out of the mixed drink bars they somehow can tolerate operating all over the state outside the law. . . . Fulton Lovell, head of the State Game and Fish Commission, urged a dollar increase in hunting and fishing license fees. . . . A constitutional amendment to put Athens and Clarke County in the beer and liquor business (and incidentally add liquor to legal alcoholic consumption in the classic city and county) was disclosed as moving through the legislature. . . . And Sen. Zell Miller said he liked the recess so much he'd put in a bill to have one every year—that other progressive states do it all the time.

Grant Grab

Other citizens followed the lead of Atlanta attorney Moreton Rolleston Jr., who demanded a grant for children in private schools when the ink was hardly dry on the new tuition grant law. In all, the Atlanta area had nine requests, and one was reported in Macon.

Fulton school board attorney Baxter Jones urged local option on the question, and Sen. Erwin Mitchell urged an amendment to say such grants would be to avoid integration only. Freeman Leverett, who drew the law, said that could kill it, and House Speaker George Smith said it would stay as is.

Without Bail

It started Tuesday with what has become routine procedure in Atlanta, a polite group of Negro students seeking service at an eating place for whites only. But instead of closing shop, Sprayberry's Restaurant had 17 students arrested on the state law against refusing to leave private property—already under court test.

Eleven were bound over to the Fulton Criminal Court. Offered a chance to go free on bond, they refused—as they did last fall—and a pattern was set.

More sat, were arrested and chose jail, not bail, each day through Friday when the total arrests was 85, with a little less than 80 behind bars. Fulton jail officials said mattresses were running out, but that they would accommodate all.

* * *

WHAT DO they hope to accomplish? asked Dan Calbos, whose place, Denny's Grill, along with a parking garage Coffee Shop on Forsyth (both near Rich's), was added to the routine.

He said he sympathized with students' goals but felt it his right to try to stop anyone—black, white, Chinese or "another Greek"—interfering with normal operation of his business. Students, spending their jail time studying, were quoted as saying their cause was worth what they were doing.

The three restaurants hit aren't in the category of dime, drug and department store counters closed by earlier sit-ins. They don't sell other things on an integrated basis. Why were they singled out? Only clues were that the two coffee shops are near Rich's, and Sprayberry's is in a building occupied by some federal government offices.

Meanwhile, the Atlanta Negro Voters League, implying the threat of a more conventional weapon, the ballot, formally requested city government to hire Negroes for better jobs and to upgrade Negroes it now hires.

Personalities

Attorneys for Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., internationally famous passive resistance leader who lives in Atlanta, argued in the Georgia Court of Appeals against a traffic sentence revoked against him (excessive, he said) and against his arrest under the state's trespass law which was the reason the traffic sentence was revoked.

They said it was unconstitutional for the trespass law to be used for state agents (police) to enforce segregation. The case, which observers think helped elect President Kennedy, will be appealed to federal courts if necessary, the Negro arguments indicated.

The Rev. A. D. King, brother of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., meanwhile, was arrested in Fayette County on a more serious traffic charge, drunk driving.

Carl Braden, whose Southern Conference Educational Fund was attacked by a Florida legislative committee as a Communist front and as calling the shots in Southern sit-ins, was linked to the Atlanta-based Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee this way: The council's publication said the SCEF had called in its publication for support, articles and news items for the former.

Mirror

A mirror held over Georgia this week would have picked up these quaint reflections: Charges by two Dalton women that a Whitfield County employe asked them to pay for dope smuggled into the county prison camp to their brother the day before he tried to escape.

Ex-Judge Maylon Clinkscales found guilty of a number of charges of misconduct and ordered disbarred in a Jackson County Superior Court action. He'll appeal the verdict, which came on direction from Judge F. Frederick Kennedy when Mr. Clinkscales offered no defense, but a denial, to testimony brought by a citizens' committee.

Disclosure of how the Coweta County Commission built a half-mile road on the farm of County Atty. Walter Sanders. It led to a 4-H clubhouse, said the commissioners indignantly.

Town and Country

Walter L. Graefe, Griffin pimiento king, and former U.S. Rep. Price Preston died . . . Allen T. Brisendine, 17, of Griffin, was one of 12 Eagle Scouts in the nation chosen to go to Washington to tell scouting's story . . . L. T. Jenks was named executive director of the Atlanta Christian Council, and Dr. Winfred Godwin was named new director of the Southern Regional Education Board . . . The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce proposed a world's fair here in 1965 . . . The Ford plant joined the BOP plant here in plans to shut down next week.

Government

DeKalb County adopted a record $10,972,840, no-tax-raise budget . . . The state put off for a year plans to lease the valuable Henry Grady Hotel property after some said it looked like they were in a mighty hurry . . . Mayor Hartsfield wrote his friend President Kennedy to say national FHA policy encourages suburbs to the detriment of urban renewal . . . And Decatur announced plans for a big new high school (prepared for sex segregation in event of race integration) and an 18-acre education center as part of its Beacon Hill redevelopment project.

Crime

Leland Harvey, famous Georgia bad boy whose last parole came in December, 1959, was arrested in a robbery . . . A fire bomb which could have killed four Negro children, aged 1, 2, 3 and 5 (their father saved them), was tossed into a home near Mableton. No race trouble around here, said Cobb County investigators.

Associated Press Wirephoto
SEN. ERWIN MITCHELL
He enters meeting room of appropriations committee which is studying budget.

Sit-in Gains 'Phenomenal'

The Clark Dispatch
2-16-61

By ENOCH P. WATERS, JR.

CHICAGO.—(ANP)—The United States, indeed the world, has not been the same since four students sat down at a Woolworth lunch counter in Greensboro, N. C., a year ago this month, and asked for coffee.

It was like dropping a match in the confetti at a New Year's party. Before the South knew what had happened, Negro and white students all over were demanding they be served a cup of coffee together.

Some states found they had no laws prohibiting this simple manifestation of the equality of man. They hurriedly called together their lawmakers and corrected the oversight. They even went a step further and ruled that Negroes change their status from customers to trespassers the second they ask for service at "white only" lunch counters.

Kneel-Ins Start

Meanwhile the sit-in technique at the lunch counters became kneel-ins at churches; wade-ins at swiming pools; stand-ins at theatres and play-ins at golf courses.

Northern students adopted the same techniques to demonstrate sympathy for those "on the firing line" in the South.

And before the end of the year, Capetown, South Africa was witnessing sit-ins.

What they accomplished is hard to measure, but the gains were phenomenal. Rocial barriers began to fall like ten pins in a bowling alley.

But accompanying the collapse of old customs and laws were violent outbreaks of whites resentful of the quiet militancy of the Negro students. In many instances the effect, ironically, was to emphasize the dignity and discipline of the Negro demonstrators and to win sympathy and support for their objectives.

Affects Consciences

Another, perhaps more important by-product was the psychological effect the demonstrations had upon the Negro and on the conscience of the white man.

The dramatic demonstrations by the students infused the Negro with a new sense of pride that fostered a unity among the race unknown before. Many who had lost hope because of the slow pace of school desegregation, were encouraged when they saw lunch counters opened to all, swimming pools desegregated and churches practicing Christianity by opening their pews to worshippers of all races.

The sit-ins caused many whites who had lived in segregated communities to realize for the first time that the Negro was unhappy with his position in society.

And the irrefutable logic of a man seeking service at a lunch counter of a store where he was welcomed at all other counters made a dent on all but the fanatical.

Finally, the magnitude of the sporadic movement can be partly realized by the report of the Legal Defense and Educational Fund of the NAACP which disclosed that 40 per cent of its $405,000 budget was used in defending 1,700 cases growing out of the demonstrations. These cases have been the basis of estimates at least 1,700,000 Negroes participated in the sit-in movement in one way or another.

Sit-Ins Not New

Historians, after reading about the fourt A&T college students last February, recalled that Frederick Douglass might have been the father of sit-ins when he refused a request that he refrain from eating at the table in the boarding house where he was the only Negro.

Others suggested that the labor unions might have given birth to the idea when they ordered their striking workers to remain in the factories during the thirties.

Further research disclosed that the late Edgar G. Brown, of Chicago, staged a one-man sit-in at a lunch counter in Washington airport in the forties and that a group of Negro and white students conducted sit-ins in Chicago in 1942.

Oone of these, though, had the electrifying effect of what happened just a year ago this month in Greensboro—and America, indeed the world, hasn't been the same since. Nor will it ever be.

Student Sit-In Demonstrators Praised

The Washington Post
2-13-61

Frank D. Reeves, a special assistant to President Kennedy, had warm praise yesterday for youths involved in sit-in demonstrations against racial segregation.

Washington, D.C.

Reeves, who served as a key attorney for Negro students in Northern Virginia school desegregation suits, was asked on WRC-TV's "Teen Talk" whether the demonstrations involved youth leadership or mere crowd-following.

He replied that students, acting on a "matter of conviction," themselves developed the passive resistance technique, indicating their maturity and awareness. They deserve the fullest support of the community, he added.

In general, he said, American youths have demonstrated increased responsibility in the last few years.

On another subject, the panel asked Reeves whether the Kennedy Administration had any specific program for the youths of the country, including any proposals involving those in economically depressed areas.

Reeves had already pointed out that he had been on the job for only a week and had to rely mainly on the President's statements during the campaign and since the election. But he added:

"I'm sure . . . that (the President) will and does have plans . . . by which our youths will be integrated into the 'New Frontier.'"

In reply to another question, Reeves said a potential office-holder's qualifications are judged less and less by the "state of (his) pocketbook."

Congress seems to be particularly aware of the problem involved in diplomatic posts overseas, he said.

Birth In Motivation —

The Louisville Defender
Louisville, Ky.
2-9-61

Sit-Ins Are Important In U.S. Life

(Special To Defender)

ATLANTA, Ga.—The sit-ins and a new birth in motivation show what is important in the existing order, what is essential for life, Dr. William Banner told an Atlanta University Center Convocation this week.

The Howard University professor of philosophy, analyzing the sense of values in Western society, saw in the student movement a grace and courage which call attention to what is inward in existence.

It is the sad fate of Western History that living well has been equaled with something different, that productive activities have been put first in the order of values. Arts should be placed first on the scale of values, not relegated to a position below political stability and a life of comfort, he said.

The position that the conduct of life without wisdom is a way to prepare for a life of wisdom is a contradiction, according to Dr. Banner. The most dangerous man in the world is the one who disavows philosophy, yet represents a philosophy of his own. The first slave ships, sweat shops, legislation for segregation all reflect a philosophy, he said.

In each person there is an impulse to freedom and self-fulfillment which makes all men equal as persons, as objects of justice, in pursuit of happiness, he stated. These rights have been only partially allowed, sometimes openly denied.

The Center convocation is sponsored by Atlanta University, Clark College, the Interdenominational Theological Center, Morehouse College, Morris Brown College, and Spelman College. President Rufus E. Clement of Atlanta University presided, President Frank Cunningham of Morris Brown College introduced the speaker, President James P B.rawley of Clark College read the scripture, President Harry V. Richardson of ITC offered the prayer and President Benjamin E. Mays of Morehouse College pronounced the benediction.

Music was by the Morris Brown College Choir, the Clark College Female Sextette and the Atlanta-Morehouse-Slepman Chorus, with Mrs. Lilla Joyce Johnson, Spelman College, at the organ.

Sitdown victories

(Detailed Story On Page 2)

BALTIMORE—More than 40 eating establishments in four states, announced this week that hereafter all persons would be accepted as customers due to the continued activity of student sitdowners.

Eating places were desegregated in the following places:— Salisbury, Md., 10; Middleburg, Va., at least 7; Charlotte, N.C., 6, and Louisville, Ky., 17. In Charlotte, seven persons were hired by firms which previously employed only whites.

SIT-IN DRIVES ARE THREATENED IN MISSISSIPPI

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—The Student Nonviolent Co-ordinating Committee plans to fight segregation at swimming pools and beaches this summer, and intensify its sit-in demonstrations in the Deep South.

This was reported Sunday by the administrative secretary, Edward King of Atlanta.

He said the increased lunch counter sit-in and theater stand-in demonstrations would be conducted in South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Students' Demand for Downtown Service Gains Momentum Tl rough Nation

Economic Factor Looms As Major Issue in Sit-In Victories As Movement Keeps Rolling

By Associated Negro Press

Leaders on the sit-in front are inclined to agree that the economic factor, more than any other, is the chief consideration in the breakdown of racial barriers since the student movement started fourteen months ago.

Prejudiced though they may be, the southern merchants are swiftly learning that "black" dollars spend the same as "white" ones. On a larger scale, large industries are slow to enter an area where racial strife is prevalent. Consequently, communities plagued with continusous racial violence suffer in economic growth and industrial development.

NEW YORK CITY—"Segregation doesn't pay: the decline in Woolworth profits for 1960 once again proves what most of us have known for a long time," commented CORE National Director James Farmer on the 1960 Woolworth annual reportx.

"Woolworth profits dropped 2.7 per cent, even with a new method of reporting income, which increases the stated foreign income by approximately half a million dollars as compared with last year."

The 1960 Woolworth annual report states: "A number of influences combined to prevent the Company from realizing its goal . . . among the major factors . . . interruption of normal shopping patterns in some communities as a result of local actions taken in the interest of desegregating eating facilities in certain southern communities.

"A policy of complete integration in every Woolworth store would bring many thousands of customers back to Woolworth. A democratic serving policy would pay better than the present half-way policy," said Farmer.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Negotiations for the integration of downtown businesses took a more optimistic turn last week with the announcement that eight more restaurants have started serving Negroes.

Negro and white leaders, after a closed meeting at City Hall, said in a joint statement that they are both "gratified and optimistic."

Also, 21 more restaurants have agreed to discuss integration, the joint statement said.

In other Louisville events, three downtown movie theatres have integrated as a result of demonstrations by CORE and the NAACP Youth Council. The three theatres have requested that they not be named publicly.

More than 30 0white and Negro young adults have been arrested during the past month in demonstrations aimed at ending discrimination in downtown Louisville movies and restaurants. Kenneth Miller, a CORE leader, has been arrested four times.

Louisville CORE has been standing in at two downtown department stores for months. Arrests at one of these stores and at a movie triggered mass demonstrations and mass arrests. Since then the two department stores—Kauffman's and Stewart's — have agreed to integrate.

Meanwhile in Juvenile Court, attorneys for arrested youths challenged the city's ordinance against disorderly conduct. There have been 272 arrests, mostly on charges of disorderly conduct, in downtown demonstrations.

JACKSON, Miss.—Mayor Allen Thompson employed the medium of television to urge racial peace in this city which has had its first experiences with the student movement. This was Thompson's first public pronouncement regarding several demonstrations which occurred following a sit-in at the main library.

His ten-minute appearance following an afternoon meeting with three Negro ministers in which he assured them city officials would meet with local Negro leaders at least once every three months to discuss race relations.

The Rev. E. A. Mays, one of the trio who visitd City Hall, said "if we intend to continue to live together in peace and harmony, we must clear up certain grievances."

Attorneys for the nine students who staged the library sit-in have served notice of appeal, following conviction of a statutory crime of breaching the peace. Each was fined $100 and given 30-day suspended sentences.

R. Jess Brown and Jack Young, attorneps for the nine, offered no witnesses, but claimed the nine were arrested because they went into the library.

Brown is the lawyer who represented Poplarville lynch victim Mack Charles Parker.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Two Negro youths drew mandatory 30-day jail sentences and $500 fines on conviction in City Court of fighting and engaging in disorderly proceedings during a sit-in demonstration.

City Judge John Rudd freed three white persons who had been arrested on charges of assault.

SAVANNAH.—Six young Negroes were sentenced Friday to pay fines of $25 each or serve 30 days for failing to "move on" when ordered to by police during the St. Patrick's day parade here. The defendants entered a plea of innocent.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—The Nashville Student Nonviolent Movement, a desegregation group, has started a weekly newsletter "to inform the entire community of this organization's functions, purpose and activities."

The newsletter is necessary, said the first edition of "The Voice of the Movement," because of "a lack of adequate and accurate coverage by other means of mass communications."

The two-page, mimeographed letter was distributed by hand this week and last week to a dozen college campuses and some 50 churches in Nashville.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—Juvenile Court Judge Burrell W. Baker found 12 Negro stand-in demonstrators guilty of disorderly conduct and public annoyance charges and declared them delinquent. The judge did not enjoin the youths from further stand-ins.

ATLANTA, Ga.—Fulton Criminal Court Solicitor John I. Kelley said that he will redraw accusations against 26 sit-in demonstrators to include two additional counts.

Kelley said that in addition to trespass charges against Negroes who participated in sit-ins, the accusations will charge disturbing the peace. Kelley said one count will charge that the demonstrators were guilty of "statutory violation of breach of peace."

The other count, according to Kelley, will charge that the Negroes were guilty of disturbing the peace because both property owners and law enforcement officials asked them to leave and they refused.

Trial for the 26 Negroes charged with violations in connection with demonstrations at Sprayberry's

Sit-In Movement Shifts From Lunch Counters To Employment

By ASSOCIATED NEGRO PRESS

Biggest news on the sit-in front was the decision last week of the U.S. Supreme Court to review a group of Louisiana cases next fall. The outcome could have a decisive impact on segregation practices not only in the South but throughout the country.

But while awaiting the court's action of the Baton Rouge cases, students and adults supporting the anti-segregation movement continued demonstrations in various parts of the nation. One noticeable trend was the shift of emphasis from lunch counters to a fight for equal employment in two cities.

In Kansas City, Mo., 100 persons from two civic organizations picketed eight retail stores where it was claimed Negroes have been limited to menial jobs. Picketing was ended after two days when the stores adopted a policy to hire persons on merit.

And in Elkhart, Ind., a group of more than 50 Negroes staged a demonstration in front of the offices of Mayor Frank J. Parmater against job discrimination.

Lloyd Saville, a professor of economics at Duke university, Durham, N. C., spoke out against job discrimination at a conference on national goals.

Elsewhere on the sit-in front:

---

GREENVILLE. — (ANP) — A petition requesting the appeal of a section of the city code regulating serving of meals to whites and Negroes in public places has been presented to Mayor J. Kenneth Cass, with copies sent to managers of three leading variety stores in the city.

The petition, prepared by Attorney Donald Sampson, states that section is a "clear example of police power which may be inconsistent with Constitutional liberties and business ethics."

---

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — (ANP) — Gov. Bert T. Combs entered recent integration talks at city hall as Negro students and adults substituted prayer for demonstrations. After the meeting, the governor told newsmen, "It was a very informative discussion . . . We're going to play it by ear."

In Juvenile court, Judge Triplett overruled a defense motion that he vacate the bench in trials of 17 youths and one adult arrested in demonstrations and postponed trial of their cases.

About 450 Negro students and adults met as usual but instead of marching downtown again, they spent the period singing and praying on the general theme of brotherhood.

---

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—(ANP) A white man slugged a Negro Episcopal priest and an elderly white woman was injured as an aftermath of Chattanooga's latest theater stand-in demonstration.

In addition, nine young Negroes who tried to buy tickets to a white movie theater were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

---

COLUMBIA, S. C. — (ANP) — Thirty-six Negroes, including a minister and a 24-year-old student who was knifed by a white man, were convicted here on breach of the peace charges.

The trials of all including the injured student, Lennie Glover of Adah, Pa., stemmed from an anti-segregation march on the State House March 2. Glover attends Benedict college here.

The minister convicted along with Glover was the Rev. Benjamin Glover, no relation, of Charleston. Both were given fines of $100 or 30 days in jail.

---

ROCK HILL, S. C. — (ANP) — Three Negro girls were found innocent of breach of peace charges stemming from an anti-segregation demonstration. Two other Negroes were convicted in Recorder's court here.

---

CHICAGO. — (ANP) — Student sit-in demonstrations were declared to be one of the most significant movements of this century by Miss Thelma Stevens, a leading Methodist official in an address to the more than 300 delegates and visitors who attended the 18th annual meeting of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Central jurisdiction of the Methodist church.

---

RACINE, Wis. — (ANP) — An attempt to put the Wingspread Assembly on National Goals firmly behind the lunch counter sit-downs of young southern Negroes failed, but touched off the liveliest debate of a session devoted to health and human needs.

The sitdowns are a "positive effort to achieve national goals," argued an eastern representative of an educational group.

But a southern university president called the proposed endorsement a "dangerous and awkward" step for the assembly to take.

---

OKLAHOMA CITY. — (ANP) — Two opponents of segregation differed on the merits of the "squat-in" technique in recent statements issued separately here.

E. Melvin Porter, an attorney and president of the local NAACP chapter, said that although passive sit-in demonstrations will continue here, there would be no more "squat-in" demonstrations like the one that resulted in the arrest of 13 of 75 Negro and white participants.

Differing with Porter was the Rev. Robert G. McDole, who was one of the 12 arrested after the "squat-in" in the lobby of the Cravens building in protest to the Anna Maude cafeteria in the basement that refuses to serve Negroes.

The Catholic priest, arrested once before as a demonstrator, said the NAACP doesn't speak for him and that "squat-in" racial demonstrations will continue here.

---

Cafeteria is scheduled for April 25 in the court of Criminal Court Judge Charles G. Bruce.

In other action in Atlanta, the Negro group, which successfully fought a campaign for equal lunch counter rights here has wired Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett deploring police treatment of demonstrating Negroes in Jackson, Miss.

A telegram from headquarters of the student non-violent coordinating committee called on Barnett to "take bold, forthright action to end this unjustifiable action against Negro citizens of the state of Mississippi."

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Anti-segregation demonstrators could get five years in prison or $5,000 in fines under a bill being considered by the South Carolina legislature.

Rep. George Campsen of Charleston said he wants the law on the books by the time the National Civil War Centennial Commission meets in Charleston ,April 10-12.

ROCK HILL, S. C.—United Nations Mediator Frank P. Graham called sit-in demonstrations for integration "lawful" during a speech heer at Winthrop, the state college for women.

Graham later received a brief going-over from the South Carolina Senate for his defense of sit-ins.

ORANGBURG.—About 25 Negroes carrying anti-segregation signs picketed stores in the Orangeburg business district last week.

Police Chief Harold Hall allowed the picketing to continue but ordered Negroes to remain at least 20 feet apart so that sidewalk traffic would not be disrupted.

DANVILL, Va. — Eight high school students joined four other Negroes in Danville's lunch counter sit-ins as the demonstration spread to a second variety store.

The Negroes were not served at either Woolworth's or Kresgne's stores. There were no incidents or arrests.

When waitresses ignored their requests for service at the Woolworth store, the demonstrators began reading Bibles.

Dr. Bond Calls Negro Colleges:

'The Last Citadels of Freedom'

By BOB QUEEN

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — While several hundred Tennessee students celebrated National Freedom Day, Feb. 1, by marching to jim-crow movie houses where they were denied entry, in Philadelphia, where the holiday was founded 20 years ago, over 400 persons at a National Freedom Day Banquet in the Ben Franklin Hotel, heard Atlanta U's Dr. Horace Mann Bond laud the "Despised Little Negro colleges as the last citadels of freedom in the U.S.A."

In a power-packed speech marking the 20th anniversary of the National Freedom Day celebration in the city of the founder, The late Maj. Richard R. Wright Sr., educator and banker, Dr. Bond praised the "youngsters in a new generation, who have superseded the compromising generation to which I was born."

"These young people didn't ask for the advice from their elders," he said, "They went out with their heads held high, went to jail and seemed to enjoy it."

■

TALKING ON the theme, "The Morning Sun of Freedom," Dr. Bond told his audience that all of the black races of the world has "turned to the morning sun, the leaders of the white South (U.S.A.) have brought our nation to disgrace and discredit, and the United States has come to the perilous edge of the pit."

The dean of the Atlanta U. School of Education, and former president of Lincoln University, charged that "stupidity and discrimination," have spoken for America in other parts of the world, where words rather than deeds have served as the measuring stick.

■

PRAISING THE rising new and independent nations of Africa, Dr. Bond cited his recent trip abroad where he saw 625,000 children enrolled in Ghana Schools, with free, compulsory education about to become a reality, and five million school children in Nigeria.

"Nigeria will soon have five great universities, he stated. He also pointed to the present formation of the Ghana Air Force, with British pilots training Ghana air men in the flying of jet air craft.

The Americans who foster the anti-racial elements, he said, are "endangering the future of their own children," adding that we are now running the risk of having our powerful hold on world trade withdrawn should these growing nations choose to trade elsewhere.

The Philadelphia celebration of "National Freedom Day," a national holiday decreed by Congress in 1948, was founded by the late founder and president of the Citizens and Southern Bank, 20 years ago, and was under the direction of the National Freedom Day Association, Emanuel C. Wright, son of the founder, president.

Spearheading the association's efforts in sponsoring the banquet was Mrs. Harriet Wright Hines, daughter of the founder.

■

OVER 31 states sent proclamations, including one sent by Georgia Governor Vandiver.

Present were the folowing representatives from African nations: Junde Adekoya, city planner, Nigeria; Obadiah Craig, student, Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science, Nigeria; George K. Dunye, NYU, Liberia; and Arunja Abayoni-Cole, Freetown, Sierra Leone.

Sit-Ins Provide Sense Of Values

ATLANTA, Ga. — The sit-ins and a new birth in motivation show what is important in the existing order, what is essential for life, Dr. William Banner told an Atlanta University Center Convocation last week.

The Howard University professor of philosophy, analyzing the sense of values in Western society, saw in the student movement a grace and courage which call attention to what is inward in existence.

It is the sad fate of Western history that living well has been equated with something different, that productive activities have been put first in the order of values. Arts should be placed first on the scale of values, not relegated to a position below political stabilitty and a life of comfort, he said.

DANGEROUS MAN

The position that the conduct of life without wisdom is a way to prepare for a life of wisdom is a contradiction, according to Dr. Banner. The most dangerous man in the world is the one who disavows philosophy, yet represents a philosophy of his own. The first slave ships, sweat shops, legislation for segregation all reflect a philosophy, he said.

In each person there is an impulse to freedom and self-fulfillment which makes all men equal as persons, as objects of justice, in pursuit of happiness, he stated. These rights have been only partially allowed, sometimes openly denied.

The Center convocation is sponsored by Atlanta university, Clark college, the Interdenominational Theological Center, Morehouse college, Morris Brown college and Spelman college.

President Rufus E. Clement of Atlanta university presided. President Frank Cunningham of Morris Brown college introduced the speaker, President James P. Brawley of Clark college read the scripture, President Harry B. Richardson of ITC offered the prayer and President Benjamin E. Mays of Morehouse college pronounced the benediction.

NEGRO JAIL DRIVE PRESSED IN SOUTH

Students Seek to End Bans in Lunch Counters—Deny Plan to Halt Movement

By CLAUDE SITTON

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Feb. 11—Negro students pressed today a week-long drive designed to create sentiment for lunch-counter desegregation by deliberately going to jail.

Some 100 students have been imprisoned in three Southern states as a result of their refusal to post bonds or pay fines on trespass charges stemming from sit-in demonstrations.

A group of Friendship Junior College students reinforced by some forty students from Nashville, Tenn., demonstrated this afternoon outside drug and variety stores in Rock Hill, S. C.

The police in that textile manufacturing city near the North Carolina border stood by to prevent trouble between the demonstrators and groups of whites clustered along Main Street.

The so-called "jail-in" movement began there Monday when four regional student leaders were arrested at a drug store lunch counter. They refused to pay $100 fines and are serving thirty-day terms in the York County Jail along with nine other demonstrators.

Whites Sent to Jail

On the same day, four white students and two Negroes were sent to the Lynchburg, Va., city jail to serve similar terms on trespass charges. They, too, declined to pay fines.

The jailing of the "Rock Hill Four," all members of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, brought a call from the group's headquarters here for South-wide participation in the "jail, no bail" campaign.

The committee is madeup of representatives from various local college groups. It was established last spring to serve as a clearing house for information. While it may offer advice on strategy, its members have said that the local units retain full control of their activities.

Since the committee's call was issued, eighty Negro students have been arrested and imprisoned in Atlanta for taking part in demonstrations at private restaurants. No new arrests were reported late today.

Fulton Jail Crowded

The refusal of students arrested in Atlanta to post $100 bonds on trespassing charges has packed the Fulton County jail. The new jail, which has a capacity of 800 prisoners, held 667 whites and Negroes this morning. Negro cell blocks are overflowing and extra cots have been brought in.

The leader of this city's student protest group denied that it planned to halt the movement.

"We won't have accomplished what we set out to do until we thoroughly eliminate segregation downtown," asserted Lonnie C. King Jr. He is chairman of the Student Committee on Appeal for Human Rights.

Racial barriers have been dropped at lunch counters in more than 100 cities of the upper South and Florida. But segregation remains in effect herer.

Herschelle Sullivan, co-chairman of Atlanta committee, said yesterday that a meeting was being called to discuss whether to suspend the jail movement. She said she and other leaders felt it had accomplished its purpose of arousing concern among Atlantans.

Expansion Discussed

However, Mr. King said today he had conferred with prominent Negro business and civic leaders on the possibility of expanding participation to nclude adults. No decision was reached.

"In this struggle, it would be very helpful if the adults in every community in the South would join in and go to jail," he declared. He said that only through cooperative adult-student action could "the system of segregation be totally eliminated."

There are few indications that the new phase of the student demonstrations has stirred Southern whites to exert pressure for desegregation, the goal of the demonstrators.

Margaret H. Gregg, a member of the faculty at Winthrop College in Rock Hill, has expressed distress over the situation. In a letter to The Evening Herald, she asks other whites there to consider whether the application of the trespassing law "is a violation of democracy?"

Criticism Is Expressed

The movement has aroused criticism in some circles heretofore sympathetic to the Negroes' efforts. Eugene Patterson, editor of The Atlanta Constitution, contended in a column today that it was questionable "whether the gains the Negro has made through the new militance can offset the effect he has lost."

Heretofore, Mr. Patterson wrote, "the Negro has been the offended man," not the offender. He went on: "Now the youthful militants of the sit-in movement are pressing into a realm where the offended do not endure, but rather return the offense; where unarguable pressure to change offending law is displaced by disobedience to the law."

Some white liberals approved the technique of civil disobedience. Marion A. Wright, a Linville Falls, N. C., lawyer and vice president of the Southern Regional Council, has said that it is in the best tradition of the Boston Tea Party.

In the current issue of New South, a council publication, he wrote that civil disobedience "does not mean that a man has a right to disobey any law he doesn't like."

"But he has the right peaceably to protest against laws which offend his religion or conscience or which place upon him burdens from which his fellow citizens are exempt," he said.

Arrests in Charleston

CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 11 (AP) — Fourteen Negroes, ten men and four women, were arrested here today following a sit-in demonstration at a downtown variety store lunch counter.

City Police Chief William F. Kelly said the group was charged with trespassing when they refused to leave the Kress store counter after they were asked to do so by the store manager and were warned by Chief Kelly.

Future Activity for Civil Rights Planned

The Pittsburgh Courier

'Sit-Ins' Are Far From Through

ATLANTA—"Sit-in" activity in five cities of the deep South served notice that Negro youth are not exactly ready to sit tight on their laurels.

A total of five demonstrations last week, keyed by a massive turnout of 1,500 students here set the tune for future activity, the Courier has been told.

In Savannah, Ga., the Justice Department has been moving ahead in its investigation of the arrest of seven Negroes who dared to play basketball on a "white" playgraund. The Justice Department is trying to discover whether or not the Negroes civil rights have been violated.

IN HAMPTON, Va., trespassing charges were placed on 15 Negro students from Hampton Institute after they sat down in a theatre which is usually reserved for "whites only." They were arrested when they sat down in the orchestra secton of the Lee Theatre.

In Orangeburg, S. C. nine youths entered the S. H. Kress Company store, where they were warned by manager J. B. Todd not to take seats. The nine sat down, Todd called policemen, and the nine were charged with trespassing.

Here in Atlanta, pickets marched en masse on the downtown section to mark the first anniversary of the sit-ins at segregated lunch counters.

They marched into the business area from the Morris Brown College campus which is located up on the hilly Southwest section one mile away.

■

PICKET LINES were placed at stores and a rally staged in the school chapel an hour after the demonstration ended.

The sit-in movement began at a Greensboro, N. C. lunch counter in an F. W. Woolworth Store.

(An Editorial)

Jackson Advocate

By PERCY GREENE

In the most recent edition of this paper following the first Negro students sit-in here and the incidents that developed at the trial we asserted that we know more about the communists and their plans and efforts to use the Negro issue to create confusion and tension in the United States than any person, white or Negro now living in the state. How the Communists have with the greatest of skill succeeded in identifying communism as the advocate of every just grievance of the American Negro, and how the Communists have with the same skill invented other grievances for the American Negro in order to give revolutionary drive and favor to their scheme.

Jackson Miss

We would here again point out that our knowledge of the Communist scheme to use the Negro issue to stir up confusion and tension in the United States as a part of the Communist drive for world domination is based on the fact that we were one among a relatively few Negroes in the United States who the Communists sought as being useful to their purpose while the architects of the plan moved in and out unnoticed among the nations leading Negroes and Negro organizations.

From the very beginning the Communists look upon the State of Mississippi as the key to the success of their plan. Looking to the state to furnish the kind of incidents that could be used as Communist propaganda, and thus bring about the rejection of America and American democracy by the colored people, black, yellow, and brown, who make up the vast majority of the world population. Already, too many of the incidents looked for and hoped for by the Communist have occurred in this state.

Sat. 4-29-61

Set in motion at a Civil Rights Mobilization, sponsored by the NAACP, held in Washington in 1950, attended by more than 5000 delegates, more than half of whom were members of non-Negro groups, the greatest aid to the Communist scheme to use the race issue in the United States in its drive for world conquest, was the substitution of the word integration, for the words, equality under the law, as the number one aim of the American Negro in his quest for first-class citizenship.

Here in Mississippi, following exactly the pattern hoped for by the Communist schemers, the rejection of the word integration has been allowed to become the excuse for the purely negative approach, and the do nothing attitude, as regards the Negro issue in this state.

In the words of Abraham Lincoln, "we cannot escape history. The firey trials through which we pass will light us down in honor or dis-honor to the latest generation". The history which we cannot escape has been, and is being observed by the generations yet alive, it includes the abandonment of White Supremacy as a world ideal by the British, who invented it to rationalize British colonial policy and exploitation before the United States became a nation; the rise to power of the Colored nations in the near and middle east: the birth of freedom and independent nations in Africa; the anti-American action lead by Cuba and spreading throughout South America, the vast majority of whom are colored.

Jackson Advocate

The shrill crys being heard in support of States Rights, invented by Calhoun of South Carolina, in order to justify Negro slavery and the right of the state to secede from the union, is nothing more than an effort to escape the history of the civil war.

We submit that the demands of contemporary history, as well as the defeat of the Communist purpose regarding the race issue in this state can be accomplished only by granting the just grievances of the Negro citizens of the state.

Jackson Miss

Having rejected time and again the most flattering offers of the Communists, before a crowd of upward of 20,000 in the Sylvian Theatre in Washington, before a select and exclusive group in New York's famed Waldorf Astoria Hotel; before a group of New York's leading industrialists and financiers in the super-swank Harvard University Club of New York City; from political rostrums in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky speaking in behalf of the 1952 candidacy of Adlai Stevenson and Senator Sparkment for President and Vice-President of the United States, we have asserted that there are thousands of fine white people in Mississippi, and the rest of the South, and that ultimately the white and Negro leaders of the South, and of Mississippi, working together would find the solution to the southern Race Problem.

Sat. 4-29-61

We submit that the time has come for the fine white people of Mississippi, in whose hands rest the real power and authority, to identify themselves with the effort to find a solution for the race problem in this state, if not for love of the Negro, for a greater love for the United States.

Stores in Augusta Shrug Off 'Boycott'

Constitution State News Service

AUGUSTA—A Negro leader of last month's unsuccessful sit-in movement revealed Tuesday local Negroes have launched a "selective buying campaign"—a campaign as yet unnoticed by Augusta merchants.

Silas Norman Jr., Negro student, emphasized that the local chapter of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People is not connected with the boycott.

Norman said the "selective buying" action was launched two weeks ago against all downtown Augusta stores and suburban shopping centers.

A spot check of local stores reported negligible effects of the boycott.

"I haven't heard of it, and there is no indication of it as far as our sales are concerned," said Harry Howard, manager of the downtown Belks Department Store.

Richard Doster, manager of the downtown J. C. Penney Co., reported, "There's been no effect whatsoever."

Charles Embrey, manager of W. T. Grant variety store in Southgate Plaza shopping center, said he hasn't noticed any drop in business.

"But then," he added, "we've never had much Negro business in this shopping center. Looking around the store right now I see six Negroes pushing self-service buggies, though."

Norman, a leader in the lunch counter sit-in campaign that was stopped by the Negroes who charged they were not receiving police protection, said the "selective buying campaign" would continue "indefinitely" or until all segregation policies are stopped by the stores.

Vending Machines Replace Jim Crow Lunch Counters

MARIETTA, Ga. — (ANP) — Food vending machines may help solve a cafeteria integration problem at Lockheed Aircraft, holder of huge government contracts.

A company spokesman disclosed last week that five Negroes unsuccessfully sought service at both of two cafeterias operated for white employes. Both establishments closed temporarily and reopened after they left.

None of the plant's cafeterias has been closed as a result but the spokesman agreed that business was dropping off at a cafeteria for Negroes.

He denied the place was being boycotted, saying that trade at all three cafeterias was falling off with the installation of vending machines for both hot and cold food.

The vending machines are not segregated.

Fulton Grand Jury Condemns Sit-Ins

Makes 7 Recommendations To Promote Urban Renewal

By JACK STRONG

The Fulton Grand Jury in presentments returned Friday condemned the sit-in demonstration as a means "to gain equal rights under the law."

"We are not concerned here with the issues of segregation or integration," read the presentments of the January-February term grand jury, "but rather with the serious consequences inherent in any flagrant and continued violation of law. . . ."

Recognizing the rights of citizens to disagree with law by "peaceful means" the jury rapped violation of private property rights and said that "local dissident groups do a disservice to their cause and reflect upon the maturity and responsibility of their leadership by their encouragement of a disregard for law."

Regarding urban renewal the jury said there are still 50,000 substandard dwelling units in Atlanta and stressed the need for renewal projects in five-times the areas encompassed by Atlanta's present five-year program.

The jury had seven specific urban renewal recommendations:

1. Long range planning: To assure the community of intelligent accomplishment in handling the total job and to avoid "costly and inadequate patchwork of spot jobs."

SPECIAL TAX LEVY

2. Adequate financing: To provide a means for capturing and perpetuating funds derived through savings and increased tax returns from improved areas. The jury suggested that such revolving funds be authorized and maintained by special tax levy and additional bonded indebtedness if necessary.

3 Administration and coordination: To streamline operations and implement enforcement of diverse city, county and other bodies, giving special authority, if necessary, to obtain maximum results and effectiveness.

4. Tax incentive: Revised tax structure and condemnation allowances "so that improvement and maintenance of standard properties will be encouraged rather than penalized—as at present."

NUISANCE PROPERTIES

5. Legislation: To permit demolition of "nuisance" properties in extreme cases, placing the cost of such corrective action as a lien against the property.

6. Commercial and Industrial properties: To establish minimum standards for such properties as has been done for residential structures.

7. Public knowledge and support: To continued dissemination of information on urban renewal through news media—"especially the Atlanta Newspapers"—to keep public informed.

The jury expressed concern that "unjustifiable appointments" of "special" deputies by the Fulton Sheriff's office tend "to lessen respect for our professional law enforcement officers."

MERELY PROFESS NEED

The jury said that some individuals were still being granted appointments because they "merely profess the need to carry a pistol" and suggested these people get a gun-carrying license from the country ordinary.

"The jury suggests that this recurring question (of special deputies) could be best resolved if more specific criteria were established for the granting of deputy sheriff's commissions by law," the presentment concluded.

In other actions the jury recommended that Atlanta and Fulton County enact ordinances calling for revocation of business licenses of dealers who have records of distributing obscene literature.

The jury asked for parking facilities adjacent to the proposed park across Central Avenue from the new courthouse. It also appealed for legislation which would permit trial juries to be furnished the criminal record of each defendant.

Kelly Adds New Charges Against City Sit-Ins

John I. Kelley, Fulton Criminal Court Solicitor, announced Wednesday that two additional charges have been lodged against sit-in demonstrators due to face trial in Criminal Court April 25.

Kelley said that in addition to the trespass charges against the college students who participated in downtown demonstrations, the accusations will include the charges of disburbing the peace, and statutory violation of breach of peace.

The latest charge contends that two or more persons gathered together to violate the law are guilty even though no one asked them to leave the premises.

The other count according to Kelley will charge that the Negroes were guilty of disturbing the peace because both property owners and law enforcement officials asked them to leave and they refused.

Kelley said convictions on either one of the two additonal counts will allow punishment for only one count.

Atlanta Stores T

Chicago Defender

Sit-Ins Pledge To

Chicago, Ill.

Halt Demonstrations

Wk. 23-(8-24)-C

ATLANTA — (UPI) — Atlanta Negro leaders called off sit-in demonstrations and boycotts of segregated stores Tuesday in return for a pledge from leading merchants of future desegregation of lunch counters.

Lunch counters in the city's two leading department stores and in 11 drug and variety chains representing about 75 stores — many of which have been closed by sit-ins—will reopen Thursday on a segregated basis. Desegregation apparently will not begin until the Atlanta public school system is integrated, probably this fall.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce made the announcement. It was subscribed to by officials of the stores involved and by Dr. Martin Luther King sr., father of the well-known integration leader, and by Lonnie C. King, leader of Negro college students who have conducted intensive protests.

OTHERS SIGN

Other leaders also signed and agreed to use their influence to stop all Negro demonstrations.

There was no clear-cut announcement about the date for desegregation.

"We feel that the fine relationship that has existed between the races for a long number of years should be reinstated in Atlanta," the statement said.

"The Negro leadership has stated that every effort will be made to eliminate all boycotts, reprisals, picketing and sit-ins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible," the statement added.

The statement was subscribed to by Rich's and Davison's department stores, by the Walgreens, Jacobs, and Lane's drug chains, and by the Woolworths, McCrory, Grants, S. H. Kress, Kresge, H. L. Green and Newberrys variety chains. Sears Roebuck also signed.

Accurate assessment of the economic damage suffered by the stores has been difficult, but the boycott has at times appeared to be highly effective in a city where about one-third of the population is Negro.

Repudiate Boycott 'Settlement'

The Pittsburgh Courier L2

'You Sold Us Out,' Cry Angry Atlanta 'Sit-Ins'

Pittsburgh Pa. Sat. 3-18-61

By FREZZVANT W. ANDERSON

ATLANTA, Ga.—Approximately 1,000 students and adults gathered Frida. night to hear the negotiating committee "clarify" misleading reports on the Atlanta boycott agreement, and after hearing them—in a definitely hostile mood—decided to continue the downtown boycott until the merchants end desegregation.

Benny Brown, a student leader, was the sparkplug, who united the sentiment against ending the boycott.

Pleas from committee members failed to sway the crowd and not even the silver-tongued oratory of Martin Luther King Jr., who supported the agreement, could turn the tide. Thus the boycott continues.

■

THERE WAS NO indication that the students would resume their sit-ins and picketing but they definitely repudiated the committee's agreement to end the boycott.

Charges of Uncle Tomism and "You Sold Us Out" filled the air at Warren Memorial Church, filled to overflowing.

Meanwhile, trial of the arrested students, who formed a chorus for the jammed-packed meeting, has been postponed until April 25.

An additional charge of disturbing the peace has been added to the anti-trespass law violation. Among the arrested students facing trial is the pretty Nezetta O'Neal, "Miss Clark College of 1960."

Climaxing almost a year of sit-ins, picketing and a highly effective boycott of downtown stores, the meeting had been held as a result of negotiations spearheaded by the veteran elder statesman of Atlanta, Col. Austin T. Walden, attorney-at-law by trade.

The students had asked the retired ex-Army judge advocate to take charge of negotiating.

All previous negotiating efforts had broken down or failed.

■

AS A MATTER of fact, nearest to success achieved in the nearly year-long siege came when Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of the Atlanta University System, arranged a private conference with officials of Rich's—the South's largest department store adn top target of the sit-inners—only to have the conference bog down when word of it was "leaked" to TV, radio and press and a horde of communications media representatives swooped down on what was to have been a secret meeting.

All parties withdrew and the stalemate continued until the astute Co. Walden was called upon to take over.

Boycott By Adults Provides Strong Support For Sit-Ins

The Louisiana Weekly

New Orleans, La. Sat. 3-11-61

ATLANTA (ANP) -- The Negro's fight for human dignity in this city has developed into a full-scale, all-out cold car involving all segments of the Negro community.

Because of their dramatic aspects, the sit-in demonstrations and the decision on the part of young people to remain in jail have been highlighted in the press, radio and TV of the nation.

However, the adult elements of the Negro community are waging a quiet, undramatic struggle along economic lines that is showing remarkable success.

ADULTS PRESS BOYCOTT

It is the boycott of the downtown stores that have enjoyed Negro patronage for many years.

Merchants conceded that the Negro boycott of the downtown area has been almost 100 per cent effective.

Department store sales in the central-city area for the full week period ended Feb. 4 were down 12 per cent from last year, the Federal Reserve Bank reported.

The receipts of some variety stores have shown a far greater drop.

Leading merchants have said that they are willing to desegregate their lunch counters, a move that is considered inevitable. But they argue that they connot do so because Rich's, Inc., the city's largest department store, has refused to go along.

Rich's is a family operation that had an excellent reputation among Negroes prior to the sit-in dispute. This was because of the family's many gifts to Negro educational and charitable causes and the store's courteous treatment of Negro shoppers.

Rich's was the first major store in Atlanta to address Negroes as "Mr." and "Mrs."

ONLY ONE NEGRO CUSTOMER

But on a walk through the spacious first floor recently it was possible to find only two Negroes -- one customer and a candy counter clerk. There were few white customers, too.

Shortly after the sit-in controversy began, Richard H. Rich, president of the store, and Frank H. Neely, the board chairman, were said to be willing to desegregate once the school desegregation problem had been solved.

However, they took no action after Governor Vandiver and the Legislature cleared the way for local communities to comply with Federal court rulings.

Several attempts have been made to reach both Rich and Neely. A subordinate, who declined to permit the use of his name, refused to outline the store's present position.

"WE'RE IN A DILEMMA"

"We'd rather not talk about it," he said. "We're in a dilemma." He also said, "There's not going to be any change in the immediate future."

Other merchants have said that they would lose many white customers to Rich's if they led the way in desegregating lunch counters. Some observers have called this view questionable.

Meanwhile, most agree that every downtown merchant is suffering.

"The most important thing that can be done is to convince the power structure that this situation can ruin the downtown area," one executive said. "The effect is not going to be confined to the retail stores. It will hit the banks, the office supply concerns, the insurance firms, the real estate interests and all the rest."

Sitdowners Win On Two Fronts

The Afro American P.16 Sat. 7-15-61 Baltimore, Md.

Savannah bows, so does Okla. City

Sweeping victories in long, drawn - out campaigns against racial discrimination in places of public accommodation were won, last week, by sitdowners in two cities a thousand miles apart.

The first victory was in Oklahoma City, Okla., where the last of 117 department and variety stores have discontinued racial segregation.

The second break-through was in Savannah, Ga., where a special committee of prominent citizens announced an agreement to end a year-old boycott and desegregate the lunch counters and rest rooms of all downtown department and variety stores.

SPOKESMAN for the group was the Rev. Albert R. Stuart, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Georgia.

Members of the committee included prominent churchmen of the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths, as well as housewives and industrialists.

Bishop Stuart said colored leaders agreed to lift the boycott of Broughton St. stores when the agreement was announced.

* * *

SUNDAY, ministers announced from their pulpits that colored were free to shop where they pleased, and that merchants had agreed to discontinue segregation.

In dissolving the negotiating committee, Bishop Stuart expressed the belief both sides would honor the agreement.

"We believe in the community, colored and white. We feel confident people will say: 'Yes, it's a good thing this was done.'"

* * *

THE SITDOWN victory in Oklahoma City climaxed a 35-month campaign by the city's NAACP Youth Committee.

The drive to desegregate lunch counters and rest rooms of the city's department and variety stores began in May, 1957. Actual sitdown demonstrations started during August, 1958.

The John A. Brown store, largest of the city, was the last holdout. It discontinued segregation on June 23 when the owner, Frank Wade, decided to follow the example of 116 other stores which dropped racial discrimination.

One of the major factors in the victory for the NAACP youngsters was the support they received from adults for the trade boycott launched in 1960. It was estimated to be 78 per cent effective.

* * *

THE NAACP group, which has 3,000 members, was congratulated by Herbert L. Wright of New York City, NAACP youth secretary.

Calvin Luper, 14, is president of the youth group. He succeeded Miss Barbara Posey, who attracted nationwide attention because of the sitdown campaign.

She is now a freshman at the University of Oklahama. Others who supported the campaign are Mrs. Clara Luper, adult adviser; Samuel Cornelius, member of the youth work committee of the adult branch of the NAACP, and Melvin Porter, attorney, president of the adult chapter.

* * *

FROM ROANOKE, Va., last week, Edward B. King, chairman of the Students' Non - violent Coordinating Committee, with headquarters in Atlanta, announced a scheduled Freedom Walk from Baltimore to Washington on July 16.

The purpose of the Walk, King said, is to focus attention of the President and members of Congress on the imprisonment of Freedom Riders in Mississippi.

A graduate of Addison High School in Roanoke, King was among a number of students expelled from Kentucky State College May 1, 1960, for sitdown activities.

He and 12 of those expelled filed a suit in U.S. District Court of Kentucky for a total of $650,000 damages.

* * *

FOUR CONGRESS of Racial Equality members convicted in New Orleans, La., have announced intention to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Louisiana State Supreme Court recently upheld their conviction by Criminal District Judge J. Bernard Cocke.

The judge sentenced the four to 60 days each in prison and levied fines of $350 each.

They were arrested Sept. 17, 1960, for demonstrating at a McCrory's store lunch counter.

They are Sidney Langston Goldfinch, a former student at Tulane University; Rudolph Lombard, former Xavier University student; Miss Oretha M. Castle and Cecil W. Carter Jr.

IN LOUISVILLE, Ky., Juvenile Court Judge Henry A. Triplett ruled that 29 juveniles arrested June 15 and 19 at Fontain Ferry Park "were engaged in blocking entrances."

He placed them on probation and told them that a condition of their probation was that "if you engage in picketing or demonstration you are not to block entrances."

Defense lawyers said they plan to appeal the court's action to Jefferson Circuit Court.

Judge Triplett dismissed charges of contributing to delinquency of juveniles brought against two adults. He also exonerated three other juveniles.

The 34 cases cleared the docket of all charges against adults growing out of desegregation demonstrations.

Earlier he had dismissed 595 charges against 397 youngsters.

* * *

THE JUDGE described the city ordinance under which the arrests were made as "loathsome," in that it does not specify what disorderly conduct is.

In Fort Lauderdale, Fla., a group of six youngsters led by Dr. Von D. Mizell, secretary of the county NAACP, staged a swim-in at the public beach.

The group was composed of two males and five females. All went into the water excepting Dr. Mizell.

IN ATLANTA
Atlanta Journal

Biracial Group Works To End Sit-In Tension

Jun 1934

ATLANTA (UPI) — A biracial committee is hard at work here in an effort to bring about lunch counter integration as peaceful as last week's desegregation of four high schools.

Montgomery Adv.

A committee spokesman said the group had agreed to reach a settlement on the start of lunch counter integration here with the consent of restaurant and snack bar owners by Oct. 15 at the latest.

If it comes off peacefully, Atlanta will have achieved two milestones in transquil racial relations unequalled in the Deep South. Last Wednesday, nine Negro students integrated four white high schools without so much as an abusive shout or a jeer. There were no crowds and only six arrests.

FOLLOWS PRESSURE

Last March, major Atlanta department and variety stores agreed to gradually desegregate their eating facilities. The agreement was reached between sit-in leaders and the city's merchants. No deadline for the start was agreed upon except that lunch counter desegregation would begin after the city's schools were desegregated. In the meantime, the Negroes agreed to call off their sit-ins.

The settlement was reached following sustained pressure by Negroes in the form of sit-ins, picketing and boycotts at department and variety stores that had segregated eating places.

Many downtown stores, including the big Rich's and Davison's department stores and most dime stores, closed tea rooms, snack bars and lunch counters during the sit-in effort which began here during Thanksgiving weekend of 1960.

Charles Black, head of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee which backed the sit-in movement, said agreement to end the sit-ins in exchange for a promise from the merchants to begin desegregation this fall was not connected in any way with school integration.

COMMITTEE SET

He said the biracial group that reached agreement on ending the sit-ins appointed a three-man committee to come up with a mutually agreeable date on which lunch counter integration would begin. Members of the committee are Opie Shelton, executive vice president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Negro attorney A. T. Walden; and attorney Robert Troutman Sr.

Black said the committee has met several times but as yet has not reported to the full biracial committee.

Shelton said the committee would hold future meetings but he did not know when the next one would be. He added that Oct. 15 has been suggested as the deadline for reaching agreement on getting lunch counter integration started.

He said the committee had agreed there would be no news releases on the group's negotiations with the merchants and the sit-in leaders.

"The less said about it, the better," he said.

Arrested Medics Are Bound Over

Atlanta Daily News

Atlanta Jour.

By STANLEY S. SCOTT

After paying a registration fee of $15 to attend the Atlanta Graduate Medical Assembly at the Biltmore Hotel Monday eight doctors were arrested after being refused cafeteria service at the hotel.

Jour. 2-21-61

The doctors were arrested and charged with violating Georgia's anti - trespass law after being invited by the medical group to attend their convention.

P. 1

Dr. Clinton Warner, 36, of 2491 Dale Creek Dr., spokesman for the the doctors stated that, "This was not an organized effort or official effort except by virtue of individual action to be accorded service."

He further said that doctors have been invited to attend these meetings in the past as guests, but that they attended this time as paying doctors."

Dr Warner told Judge James Webb in a 2:30 court hearing Monday afternoon that, "In the general area of the meeting I had been served coffee and doughnuts by hotel personnel, during the morning break. When we went to the cafeteria the hostess smiled and invited us in and showed us to the eating area." Dr. Warner said that a white doctor decided to leave the cafeteria when he discovered the Negro doctors were being denied service.

Dr. F. Earl McLendon, scheduled to appear on an afternoon panel discussion at the convention stated to the judge that he had inquired about the possibility of eating in the cafetera from a white doctor and was informed that it would be alright to do so.

Diedrich O. Beusse, manager of the hotel, told Judge Webb that he asked the doctors to leave, and one stated, "If I leave can I get my $15. back." Beusse stated that one of the doctors went upstairs and got his money back.

Beusse told the court that, "The nigras" have never been given the use of the eating facilities. For many years the agreement that they could attend the technical part of the meeting." He further said, "All that I want to make clear is that they cannot eat in the dining room."

P. 6

Dr. J. T. Blasingame, Jr., of 1651 West Lake Ct., N. W., was identified as the physician that had his registration fee refunded after being denied service.

Atlanta Jour.

He stated in a telephone conversation that, "After being informed that I could not eat and that I would be required to leave the hotel premises, I demanded my money be returned. The manager was very cordial about the matter, and carried me upstairs to the secretary's desk, telling her, "This gentleman would like a refund and does not wish to attend the convention."

Dr. Blasingame said that the manager stated, "I was a medical student once myself and I feel that since they have to train so long in school they should be recognized."

Judge Webb, after hearing testimony in the case, bound the doctors over to the Fulton County Criminal Court on $100. bonds. The doctors were allowed to sign their own bonds.

The arrested doctors included: Dr. F. Earl McLendon, 54, of 1370 Sharon St., N. W.; Dr. Louis V. Reese, 37, of 214 Simons Terrace, N. W.; Dr. John T. Gill, Jr., 42, of 1508 Mozley Dr., S. W.; Dr. Albert M Davis, 42, of 592 Waterford Rd., N. W.; Dr. George C. Lawrence, 41, of 2856 Collier Dr., N. W.; Dr. James Bertram Ellison, 43, of 2724 Hedgewood Dr., N. W ; Roosevelt P. Jackson, 40, of 50 Linkwood Rd., S. W ; Dr. Clinton Warner, 36, of 2491 Dale Creek, Dr. N. W.

8 Doctors Arrested in Hotel Sit-In

The Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta Jour.

By KEELER McCARTNEY

Eight Negro physicians were arrested Monday at the Biltmore Hotel cafeteria while attending the Atlanta Graduate Medical Assembly and were placed under $100 bonds each on charges of violating the Georgia anti-trespass law.

Jour. 2-21-61

They were permitted to sign their own bonds, and the Fulton County Medical Society, sponsor of the assembly, and the hotel management both said they would be welcomed back to attend the remaining two-day meeting.

MANAGER EXPLAINS

P. 15

Diedrich O. Beusse, vice president and general manager of the Atlanta Biltmore Hotel Corp., said food facilities in the hotel would not be available to them but they would be free to attend technical meetings and exhibits as they had in the past.

Beusse said he requested the eight to leave the premises when they appeared in the hotel cafeteria line, explaining that was the requirement of the state anti-trespass law as he understood it.

SOCIETY NOT INVOLVED

A spokesman for the Fulton County Medical Society stressed two points:

1. The society sponsors the assembly as a three-day educational forum for physicians from all over the Southeast and that all qualified physicians are invited to attend.

2. The request for Negro physicians to leave the cafeteria was made by the hotel management and did not involve the society.

REFUND PROMISED

Beusse said he informed one of the physicians that his $15 registration fee would be returned to him and the physician left. Cross-examined by attorney D. L. Hollowell, Beusse said the fee had been paid to the society and that the hotel had "an understanding" with the society that Negroes could attend but could not have use of food facilities or rest rooms.

Dr. Albert M. Davis, 42, of 529 Waterford Rd., NW; Dr. Louis V. Reese, 37, of 214 Simons Ter., NW; Dr. John T. Gill Jr., 42, of 1508 Mosley Dr., SW; Dr. James Bertram Ellison, 43 of 2724 Hedgewood Dr., NW; Dr. Roosevelt P. Jackson, 40, or 50 Lindwood Rd., SW, and Dr. George C. Lawrence, 41, of 2856 Collier Dr., NW; Dr. F. Earl McLendon, 54, of 1370 Sharon St., NW, and Dr. Clinton Warner, 36, of 2491 Dale Creek Dr., NW.

8 NEGROE PHYSICIANS SEIZED IN ATLANTA

The New York Times

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Feb. 20—Eight Negro physicians attending a medical society meeting today at the Biltmore Hotel were arrested after they demanded service in a white cafeteria.

New York

Two policemen removed them at the request of D. O. Beusse, vice president and general manager of the Biltmore. He said they had refused to leave the cafeteria in the hotel lobby.

They were charged with violating a state trespass law and bound over for trial in Fulton County Court under $100 bonds following a hearing in Municipal Court. Judge James Webb allowed them to sign their own bonds.

Jour. 2-21-61

The doctors contended that payment of $15 registration fees for the three-day session of the Atlanta Graduate Medical Assembly entitled them to lunch.

Dr. David Henry Roar, acting chairman of the assembly, denied this. He said that only those members who had bought tickets to three luncheon seminars were entitled to eat.

Dr. King Says 'Segregation Is Dead'

He Asks Nonviolence In Sit-Ins Here

By ORA SPAID

Dr. Martin Luther King, the man who has had the most to do with setting the spirit of the current Negro movement against segregation, spent yesterday in Louisville.

In five speeches, before various groups, he was, in turn, insistent that segregation is morally wrong, vigilant in demanding that desegregation move ahead rapidly, and firm in the resolution that the campaign against segregation be nonviolent.

The young Atlanta pastor came at the invitation of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, where he spoke to 1,400 in a chapel service, to another 500 students at a question-and-answer session, and before a faculty meeting.

Gets Standing Ovation

At the close of his question period with students, he was given a standing ovation. Seminary officials said it was the first time such a thing had happened in the chapel there.

Dr. King met later with the Mayor's committee on integration and the steering committee leading the Negro campaign for desegregation in downtown Louisville. That meeting was in the Plantation Room of the Sheraton Hotel.

In the afternoon, he addressed a standing-in-the-aisles crowd of more than 1,000 at Quinn Chapel A.M.E., 912 W. Chestnut. He was there to speak to the high-school students who have conducted sit-ins and demonstrations here, but the crowd included many of their parents, pastors, and a number of white persons.

Professors Impressed

In all appearances, Dr. King was forceful but quiet-voiced. He wore a dapper black suit with a gray striped tie and was taken from place to place in an undertaker's limousine with a police escort.

Accompanying him part of the time was Dr. Nolan P. Howington, professor at the seminary and former pastor of First Baptist Church, Little Rock, where Arkansas Governor Orval Faubus and former Congressman Brooks Hays were members.

Seminary professors particularly were impressed by Dr. King. "That was the gospel," commented several after hearing him.

And at Quinn Chapel, he was often interrupted with cheers and applause and stamping.

'Negroes Aren't Hungry'

This came, for example, when he said, "Segregation is as dead as a doornail and the only thing uncertain is the day it will be buried."

There was applause, too, when he said of sit-ins, "This is not a lot of noise over a hamburger. Negroes aren't hungry. This is a demand for respect."

Applause was at its highest point whenever he mentioned the suffering that Negroes would endure to destroy segregation, such as "We will die, if necessary."

He cautioned Negro leaders that "This is no time for ego battles" and warned against any race for publicity. "This is a time for everybody to get together."

Some of his remarks of the day:

"In seeking first-class citizenship, the Negro must never use second-class methods.

"We do not seek to defeat the white man, but to win his friendship and understanding. If segregation were to end at 9 o'clock tonight, at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning we will have to live with these people."

At the seminary, he drew on the Greek derivatives of the word "love" to point out the "levels of love." He said that the nonviolent movement drew from the "agape" concept of love rather that the "eros" concept, which is romantic love. He said agape meant that "you can love a man you cannot like. . . . Jesus said you should love your enemies; He did not say you should like them. . . . You can love the person while hating the deed."

It is necessary also, he said, "to avoid the internal violence of the spirit." Nonviolence follows 'the spirit of Christ and the operational technique of Gandhi."

Dr. King repeatedly warned against use of physical violence as a technique, admitting that while force may bring victory, it is only temporary victory, never permanent peace.

He said the Negro must "not seek to rise from disadvantage to advantage. Black supremacy is as dangerous as white supremacy. We do not wish to trade one tyranny for another."

Muslims Condemned

Speaking of the Black Muslims, a fanatic movement for Negro supremacy, Dr. King said, "All Negro leaders must condemn Negro nationalist movements, and all do."

He noted that estimates of the Muslim movement's size vary from 60,000 to 100,000 and added, "I can name 10 Negro churches that have a total membership of more than 100,000."

The Muslim movement is minor among the 19,000,000 Negroes in the United States, he said, and "I don't believe it will ever have any great growth or gain although it will continue to exist and appeal to certain people."

He pointed out that sit-ins offer "a moderating influence, a way out for the Negro that says, 'You don't have to hate to get free.'"

He told the Mayors committee that one of the primary principles in racial negotiations is "be honest. I say the same thing to the white people that I say to Negroes."

In line with this, he was just as adamant before that committee in calling for "moving toward desegregation in Louisville at a forthright pace" as he was at Quinn Chapel. But he tempered his remarks by saying, "I am realistic enough to know that the border states can move along with a firmness and forthrightness that we can't get in the Deep South."

He pictured the Negro drive for integration as "not merely to get 19,000,000 Negroes free, not merely the tension between Negro and white, but tension between justice and injustice. The shape of the world today doesn't permit us the luxury of an anemic democracy."

He mentioned the "inspiring example" of school integration in Louisville and said "there is enough good will in your community to move now at a forthright pace."

Throughout the day, he often quoted from poets, prophets, scholars—Bryon, Carlyle, Lowell, Langston Hughes, Plato, Hugo, Aristotle.

He closed his remarks to the Mayor's committee with a prayer by a slave preacher:

Lord, we ain't what we ought to be,
Lord, we ain't what we want to be,
Lord, we ain't what we're gonna be,
But than God, we ain't what we wuz.

Staff Photo

COFFEE BREAK for Dr. Martin Luther King, left, came yesterday during his visit to Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. With the Atlanta pastor are, from left, Dr. John R. Claypool, pastor of Crescent Hill Baptist Church; Dr. Nolan P. Howington, seminary professor, and Frank Stanley, Jr., member of the Louisville Negroes' steering committee.

SIT- INS
REV. MARTIN LUTHER KING

38a 1961

Negro Youths 'Used'? Quiz Set

The Courier-Journal
Louisville Ky.

Judge To See If Demonstrators 'Being Exploited'; Bishop Denies It

Mon. 3-13-61

Juvenile Court Judge Henry A. Triplett said yesterday that he would investigate the possibility that Negro youths involved in downtown antisegregation demonstrations here "are being exploited."

Triplett issued a 300-word statement after conferring with Chief Probation Officer Charles C. Dibowski and Assistant County Attorney Edward T. Ewen.

In his statement Triplett said:

"It is the fervent hope of this court that the responsible leaders of this community will resolve the issues involved in a dispassionate atmosphere either by negotiations or appropriate legal proceedings and not by the use of children as a substitute."

Triplett declined to elaborate on any possible action he might take. The investigation would be made under normal court procedure, he said.

'They Are The Leaders'

The steering committee of Negro leaders seeking integration of all downtown businesses said it would withhold comment on Triplett's statement until after a meeting scheduled for later last night.

But Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker, a member of the steering committee, said:

"Nobody is exploiting those teen-agers. They are the leaders. They unanimously wanted to demonstrate. And keep in mind, this follows the pattern of what's going on across the country."

Six youths who were arrested Saturday during demonstrations were released yesterday from Children's Center after Jefferson County Circuit Court Judge Blakey Helm issued a writ of habeas corpus.

Other Youths Released

They were detained after other arrested youths were released, juvenile authorities said, because they "were arrested twice within a short period of time and identical charges (deliquency and disorderly conduct) placed against them."

Two 18-year-old youths were charged with disorderly conduct and loitering and released under $100 bond.

Official records disagree as to the total number of juveniles arrested. Police first announced that 24 had been arrested, but records in the Crime Prevention Bureau indicate that 27 juveniles were detained. Juvenile Court figures listed 23 arrested juveniles.

All the juveniles were paroled to their parents, except the six detained in the Children's Center.

No Holding Order Issued

Judge Helm said he released those six because Judge Triplett had issued no order holding them in Children's Center.

"Further." he said, "the charge is a misdemeanor. Although they've been arrested before, they've never been tried. There is no justification for classifying these six youths differently from the others who were arrested."

A petition for the release of the youths was filed with Judge Helm Saturday night. Appearing before him yesterday when he made his decision were Dibowski and Ewen representing the County and attorneys J. Earl Dearing, Alfred Carroll, and Charles J. Lunderman and Bishop Tucker representing the six youths.

Dual Role Is Claimed

In his statement, Triplett maintained that the Juvenile Court has a dual role in the community—that of concerning itself equally with the welfare of children and the community.

He said usual procedures for such charges had been followed in holding the six juveniles Saturday night.

Louisville Ky.

He also pointed out:

"At the request of Negro adult leaders 17 cases with identical charges have been scheduled for trial this Thursday, March 16, 1961.

Heretofore, the court and its staff have requested the Negro leaders and the children involved to exercise judgment and restraint pending the trial on the merits of these charges.

'Proclaimed Intentions'

"Although this request was made by the court, adult Negro leaders have publicly proclaimed their intentions to continue the use of children in demonstrations.

"It is significant that no application has been made to either a State or Federal court for an adjudication of the questions involved.

"Under these circumstances, the Juvenile Court cannot and will not close its eyes to the possibility that children are being exploited."

Nothing New For Easter Campaign Still In Effect

The Louisville Defender
Louisville Ky.

Negro leaders here temporarily suspended demonstrations against segregated public accommodations as negotions resumed with the Mayor's Bruce Hoblitzell emergency integration committee but said that they would resume "unless progress is made."

The Rev. W. J. Hodge, president of the Louisville branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), added that "the nothing new for Easter selective buying cammpaign was still in effect."

Thurs. 3-23-61

"The negotiations with the Mayor's committee," said Rev. Hodge, "have not progressed in any direction to warrant any comment at this time. If no progress is made, the demonstrations will resume," he said.

Rev. Hodge, Frank L. Stanley, Jr., assistant to the publisher, Defender, and African Methodist Episcopal Zion Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker are co-chairman of the steering Committee of Negro leaders coordinating the integration movement. Rev. Hodge, Bishop Tucker and Stanley have been the chief negotiators.

Stanley and Rev. Hodge agreed that progress was being made after Tuesday's meeting with the Mayor's Committee. They sai dseveral establishments have begun to desegregate. The Negro leaders had visited Frankfort and talked with the Governor last Wednesday following wholesale arrest of 178 adults and students during stand-in and picketing demonstrations at Fourth street theaters and restaurants.

Stanley said earlier that "we prefer negotiations to produce progress. But if negotiations do not, then we will have to depend on a resumption of demonstration to produce progress in this area.

"The downtown merchants, "stated Stanley, "are slow and stubborn in thier response to request for desegregation. Louisville's move is not totally unique since similar anti-segregation protests are being urged in 32 other southern cities. This has reulted in the arest of 3.014 students throughout the South," he said.

Over 3,000 persons attended a mass rally Sunday at West Chestnut Street Baptist Church to contribute $2,104 to the student protest movement to eliminate racial segregation in public accommodations. The money will be used to defend adults and students arrested in connection with the demonstrations. Negroes have now contribute $4,500 in three previous meetings.

Dr. Grace M. Jamse, chairman of the Finance Committee, said her committee was encourage and thankful for the support and contributions given by the community. She cautioned, however, that more funds were needed to carry on the fight for "equality."

Louisville Ky.

Dr. James said that those wishing to contribute to the fund may contact Rev. W. J. Hodge, Fifth Street Baptist Church, or mail proceeds to the Louisville NAACP in care of the minister.

Another mass rally is scheduled for tonight at 8:00 P. M. at the Greater Good Hope Baptist Church, 26th and Grand Aves Speakers will include Frank L. Stanley, Jr., Rev. Hodge, Bishop Tucker and Rev. Sampson.

The "Let's Meet for Freedom" rally at West Chestnut Street was the largest turnout since the initial rally at Zion Baptist Church two weeks ago. There was a standing-room-only crowd inside the West Chestnut Street auditorium while others listened in the basement and from loud speakers outside.

Herbert Wright, national director of Youth and College activities for the NAACP, told the audience that the National office was ready to give full support, including financial aid, to the anti-discrimination movement here.

Rev. Hodge, however, said that the local organization had no plans to accept aid from the parent body in the demonstrations here. The minister added that the "encouraged by the size and enthusiasm of the overflow crowd."

Minister's Conference

Bishop Ernest L. Hickman of the African Methodist Episcopal Districts of Kentucky and Western Tennessee has invited all ministers in Louisville and adjacent areas to meet at Quinn Chapel Church, 912 W. Chestnut, Friday, March 24 at 12:00 noon.

The Bishop stressed that the invitation was open to "all" ministers irrespective of denomination, race, color or creed. The meeting will be in the form of a luncheon conference.

Negroes Call Off Buying Boycott, Rule Out Derby Demonstrations

Mayor Thanks Businesses, Committee

Negro leaders yesterday called off the no-buying campaign in downtown Louisville and announced there would be no Derby-weekend desegregation demonstrations.

Mayor Hoblitzell extended his personal thanks to members of the Negro steering committee and expressed the hope that demonstrations would not be resumed.

He also thanked restaurant operators and other businessmen who have co-operated with him and his emergency committee.

Results Are Cheered

Frank Stanley, Jr., one of the three cochairmen of the Negro steering committee, told a cheering crowd at Quinn Chapel that 88 restaurants and two movie theaters have desegregated.

Noting that "we have the force to shame Louisville before the world this weekend," Stanley said the steering committee made "a most crucial decision" not to use that force in demonstrations.

"Our purpose," he said, "is not demonstrations but integration, not publicity but desegregation."

Stanley said three factors contributed to the decision:

1. The presence of "conservatives" in Louisville who might use violence against demonstrators.

Court Volume Cited

2. The police will be spread thin over Derby weekend and might be unable to provide proper protection for demonstrators.

3. If arrests of demonstrators took place, the release procedure might be delayed because of the large volume of court business expected on Derby weekend.

Stanley added, "What we do for Derby weekend is not indicative of our actions for Monday. We shall return."

He noted that talks are continuing with four movie thaters that have agreed to desegregate by June 25. The steering committee is seeking an earlier date, he said.

Check To Be Made

A check will be made, Stanley added, to see that places agreeing to desegregate do not revert to segregation. If they do, he warned, they can expect new demonstrations next week.

The Rev. W. J. Hodge, another member of the Negro steering committee, announced the end of the economic boycott, which began February 23.

He noted that it was first designed for the period preceding Easter but was extended when Negroes did not achieve the desired results.

His announcement that the boycott is now officially over brought cheers from the crowd, but Mr. Hodge warned that the boycott may be resumed.

Mentions Employment

Among goals sought he mentioned the hiring by downtown firms of Negroes to "dignified" positions.

Laughter and tears blended as the announcements were made. The crowded room was filled with students who have marched in demonstrations and gone to jail. Also present were about 12 white adults.

Lists containing the names of restaurants that have desegregated were handed out at the door as the crowd dispersed. They proved to contain 92 names instead of the 88 originally announced.

Says 80 Pct. Integrated

Mayor Hoblitzell's statement said a survey by his committee on integration indicates that more than 80 per cent of the seating capacity of all public eating places in the downtown district are now integrated. This figure, he said, is exclusive of bars and establishments that serve food incidentally to their main business.

Here is the text of the Mayor's statement:

"On April 25, on the recommendation of my committee on integration, I requested all downtown restaurants to voluntarily desegregate on or before Monday, May 1. We also requested that in the interim no further demonstrations be held and that the steering committee set up procedures for checking all downtown restaurants to determine the extent to which the request for desegregation had been honored.

Congratulate Businessmen

"At the outset, I would like to congratulate and personally thank those restaurant owners and operators who have honored this request. The community owes them a debt of gratitude for their public-spiritedness in effecting desegregation in an orderly manner. I also would like to personally thank the members of the steering committee for their co-operation in calling off downtown demonstrations and conducting their investigations in an orderly manner and reporting the results to the Mayor's office.

"Results of our survey indicate that more than 80 per cent of the total seating capacity of all public eating facilities in the downtown district are now integrated. The figures on which this estimate is based are exclusive of bars and similar establishments that serve food only incidentally to their main business, which the steering committee itself had dropped from its lists.

Notes Test Results

"As of yesterday, the steering committee reported to the Mayor's committee that there are only 32 segregated restaurants left in the downtown area based on tests made on Monday and Tuesday of this week. Upon the recommendation of the Mayor's committee and the steering committee, I have sent the following telegram to all 32 of these public eating facilities

"My emergency committee joins me in requesting that you agree to desegregate your restaurant facilities by this coming Saturday in view of the many establishments which have acceded to my previous request. If you have already taken this step and the information has not reached me, please communicate the facts to me at your earliest convenience. If you find some unusual or peculiarly difficult problem affecting your decision, I request that you meet with my emergency committee for further discussion next Tuesday at 4 p.m. at City Hall."

'Proud Of Progress'

"I am proud, and I think we can all be proud, of the progress that has been made toward integration of our downtown establishments in the past few weeks. The results have been more successful than probably any of us, or the general public, fully realizes. I consider it truly marvelous.

"Under the circumstances, the Mayor's committee and I would strongly urge that there be no more mass demonstrations as we feel that this very probably would hurt rather than help the cause of integration by creating resentment and by tending to alienate some of those who to date have been strong supporters of the local integration movement. The committee's objective, and my objective, as Mayor, is to have a community of free citizens conducting their lives and businesses successfully and harmoniously—one with another."

List Is Given

Here is the list of desegregated business establishments released by the Negro steering committee:

A & B Restaurant, 105 W. Oak; Akins Restaurant, 832 W. Main; Arnold's Restaurant, 111 W. Broadway; Bar-B-Que Heaven, 514 S. Fifth; Blue Boaor on Fourth and Blue oar on Walnut; Bright Spot Hamburger, 915 S. Fifth; Brown Theatre, 315 W. Broadway; Burger Boy, Third and Chestnut; Boone, 460 S. Fifth; California Orange Bar, 310 S. Fourth; Cardinal Inn, 101 Shipp; Chili Bowl, 616 W. Broadway; Chick's Grill, 601 S. Third; Chuck Wagon, 111 W. Broadway; Clark's Snack Bar, 538 W. Jefferson; Cole's Cafe, 236 W. Jefferson; Coffee Pot No. 1, 429 W. Broadway.

Colonade Cafeteria, Starks Building; Country House, 744 S. Fifth; Country Kitchen, 333 W. Oak; Country Kitchen, 621 S. Second; Cunningham's, Fifth and Breckinridge; Dandee Hamburgers, 417 W. Chestnut; Dandee Hamburgers, 454 S. Fifth; Derby Restaurant, 643 S. Third; DeCamillis Restaurant, 451 S. Third; Dizzy-Whiz, 217 W. Broadway; Embry's Restaurant, 528 W. Jefferson; Family Fair, all locations; Florida Orange Bowl, 202 W. Market; Florida Orange Bar, Fourth Street; Frisch's Big BoyZ all locations; Franklin Way, 663 Armory Place; Glenn's Grill, 822 S. First; Glenn's Grill, 125 W. Oak; W. T. Grant Company, 539 S. Fourth.

H. L. Green Company, 544 S. Fourth; Greyhound Bus Cafeteria, 434 W. Broadway; Hathaway, Commonwealth Building; Harley's Sandwich Shop, 432 W. Chestnut; Henry Clay Hotel, 604 S. Third; Hollywood Steak House, 1830 S. Third; J & P Diner, 421 S. Third; Jean's Restaurant, 411 W. Market; Jenn's Bar & Grill, 943 S. Third; Kaufman's, 427 S. Fourth; Knotty Pine Restaurant, 434 W. Chestnut; Kelly's, First and Chestnut; Kentucky Hotel, 430 W. Walnut; Key's Restaurant & Bar, 305 W. Walnut; S. S. Kresge Company, 412 S. Fourth; Kunz's, The Dutchman, 619 S. Fourth.

Other Places Named

Leo's Hideaway, 115 W. Jefferson; Leo's Twinburger, 412 W. Chestnut; Leo's Twinburger, Fourth and Liberty; Lucille's Restaurant, 621 S. Second; Luvisi's Restaurant, 448 S. Fifth; Margaret's Place, 115 S. First; Mazzoni's, 208 S. Third; McCrory, 428 S. Fourth; Miller's Cafe, 429 S. Second; O'Bryant's, 101 W. Liberty; Odell's, Starks Building; Old House, 432 S. Fifth; Pott's Restaurant, 305 W. Jefferson; Red Band Restaurant, 303 W. Market; Rockie's, 408 Market; Rialto Theater; Sears & Roebuck, Eighth and Broadway.

Sheraton Hotel; Sheraton Watterson Hotel; Star Five and Ten, 1155 S. Fourth; Stewart Dry Goods, 501 S. Fourth; Swizzle Bar, 420 W. Chestnut; Taylor Drug Stores, all locations; Thompson's Restaurant, 312 W. Jefferson; Times Restaurant, 307 W. Liberty; Topaz Emporium, 971½ Baxter Avenue; University Pharmacy, 1933 S. Third; Walgreen's Drug Stores, all locations; White Castles, all locations; Whizz Burger, 738 S. Fifth; Whizz Hamburger, 427½ S. Fifth; Whizz Restaurant, 421 W. Chestnut; Williams Food Shop, 303 W. Chestnut; Williams Food Shop, 930 W. Broadway; F. W. Woolworth Company, 440 S. Fourth. and Y.M.C.A. Restaurant, Third and Broadway.

Call Off Louisville Boycott On Derby Eve

LOUISVILLE. — (ANP) — A demonstration by Negroes at restaurants and theaters refusing to serve Negroes in downtown Louisville was called off just prior to the big weekend of the 87th running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs. The derby annually attracts a large volume of business from out-of-town racing fans.

The boycott was called off after a Steering committee composed of Negroes and headed by Frank Stanley Jr., editor of the Louisville Defender, conducted a survey which disclosed that some 88 restaurants and theaters had desegregated and decided to serve Negro patrons.

Stanley thus indicated that the conditions set by the committee for ending the boycott had been met. He stated, however, that if the restauranters and theater owners welched on their promise, the boycott would be reinstituted.

Stanley announced the decision at a meeting at Quinn Chapel, attended by both Negroes and whites Friday. He said all the committee wanted in the first place was desegregation and the hiring of Negroes in "dignified" positions at downtown establishments.

The action followed an appeal by Mayor Hoblitzell to both sides, and to the businessmen in particular to heed the desegregation request. Afterwards the mayor extended his thanks, obviously not without relief at what he must have perceived might have been disaster at derby time had the boycott continued.

Court Order Limits Pickets To 2 At Each Of 22 Eating Places

The Courier-Journal p. 1
Louisville Ky. Fri. 5-5-61

Also Bars Interference With Firms

Circuit Court yesterday limited antisegregation pickets to two at each of 22 eating places here.

In a restraining order signed by Judge Blakey Helm, the court also prohibited interference with the firms or their customers.

Judge Helm signed the restraining order about 2 hours after an injunction suit had been filed by attorneys Jack M. Lowery, Jr., and Wilton R. Long, Jr., representing the newly formed Committee for Business Freedom.

It was the first resort to the injunctive powers of Circuit Court in the weeks-long efforts by Negroes toward racial integration of places where food is served.

Will Ask For Dismissal

Under court rules, the restraining order will remain in effect until the defendants come into court and get it dissolved.

J. Earl Dearing, attorney and member of the Negro steering committee, said a motion will be filed this morning asking that the restraining order be dismissed.

He and other members of the steering committee denied that demonstrators are doing the things prohibited by the court. Also, they noted that some of the 22 firms filing the suit have never been involved in the demonstrations.

Firms granted the restraining order are:

Kupie Double Burger, 456 S. Fifth; Carlisle's Cafe, 1918 Colgan; Tropical Orange Bar, 647 S. Fourth; Spa Bar, 218 W. Breckinridge; Chuck Wagon Cafe, 111 W. Broadway; Turner House Restaurant, 970 S. Third; Teek's New York Bar, 517 W. Broadway; M. and S. Grill, 1726 W. Market; Gardner's Restaurant, 6281 Strawberry Lane; Casa Grisanti, 1000 Fehr; Bill Boland's Dining Room, 3708 Bardstown Road; Ideal Cafe, Fifth and Broadway; Dinner Bell Restaurant, 303 W. Kentucky.

Also, Williams Food Shop, 440 W. Market; White Swan Restaurant, 566 S. Fifth; W. and F. Coffee Shop, 504 S. Third; Dubb's Oyster Shop, 4532 W. Broadway; East End Cafe, 1605 Story; The 127 Bar, 127 S. Preston; Sandy's Pub, 2203 Garland; Hasenour's Restaurant, 1028 Barret and 300 E. Breckinridge; Music Man's Grill, 511 W. Walnut.

2 Groups Defendants

Defendants are the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People and the Louisville Chapter of The Congress on Racial Equality. Eleven individuals were named codefendants.

The court restrained the defendants and anyone acting with or for them from:

1. Forcing entrance into, interfering with the business of, or refusing to obey requests to leave the business establishments of the plaintiffs.

2. Addressing the owners or employees in offensive or abusive language.

3. Harassing the plaintiffs' establishments or customers with chants or yells of an inflammatory or disorderly nature.

Louisville Ky

Blocking Prohibited

4. Blocking entrances or waiting areas of the businesses.

5. Blocking sidewalks in front of the places or squatting on the sidewalks there.

6. Using more than two pickets at each place of business, the two pickets to come no nearer than eight feet from the place of business.

7. Soliciting other persons to do these acts.

8. Soliciting persons under 21 years of age to commit any of the acts.

9. Threatening, cursing, insulting, or molesting owners, employees, or customers of the places.

10. Attempting by any means to coerce the plaintiffs into serving the defendants as customers.

Order Cites Emergency

After reading the complaint and eight affidavits, the judge signed the order, which said there appears to be a state of immediate emergency at the plaintiffs' places and that a danger exists to the peace and safety of the community.

The order also said that the firms stand to lose substantial amounts during the Kentucky Derby weekend as a result of any "mass disturbances or disorders" at the places. Local police protection will be inadequate to protect against an emergency, the judge said.

The suit alleged that defendants have announced plans to increase their demonstrations at a time when local residents and Derby visitors frequently partake of alcoholic beverages and when policemen are engaged in directing traffic to and from Churchill Downs.

Suit Asks $2,000 Damages

The suit asked $1,000 damages plus $1,000 punitive damages. In issuing the restraining order, Judge Helm required the plaintiffs to post $5,000 bond for protection of the defendants pending any further action.

The 11 individual defendants, members of the Negro steering committee are:

J. Earl Dearing, the Rev. Sam R. Gilliam, the Rev. W. J. Hodge, the Rev. F. G. Sampson, the Rev. D. E. King, Beverly Neal, the Rev. Joseph B. Reid, Arthur Smith, Frank L. Stanley, Jr., Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker, and Neville Tucker.

Notified of the suit, the steering committee issued a statement saying:

"It is our opinion that this is a group of frustrated, misguided businessmen. They have failed to grasp the basic issues . . . . They cannot restrain or enjoin the Negro community. An injunction action will simply accelerate the (desegregation) movement."

Will Try To Oust Lowery

One of the plaintiffs' attorneys, Lowrey, is an assistant Commonwealth's attorney. The steeirng committee said it would seek his resignation, asserting, "He cannot represent the State, which is promulgated to a policy of desegregation, on the one hand, and represent a group of segregationists on the other."

Commonwealth's Attorney Laurence E. Higgins said he would investigate to see if the State is "promulgated to a policy of desegregation" as the committee says.

Higgins Lays Down Rules

Meanwhile, he had this to say about Lowery's position:

1. It must not interfere with his work at the Commonwealth's attorney's office.

2. His clients must not call on him to discuss business with him at his office in the Commonwealth's attorney's office.

3. He must not use his position as an assistant Commonwealth's attorney to aid his clients.

4. He must not give the impression that the Commonwealth's attorney's office has anything to do with the case.

Higgins said he would ask Carl Ousley, first assistant Commonwealth's attorney, to get a report from Lowery on his absence from his office yesterday morning.

'Receipts Cut In Half'

Extracts from some of the affidavits filed with the suit:

Lowery—At a meeting with members of the Negro steering committee Monday, members said "their unalterable purpose was to integrate all businesses in Jefferson County and they would permit nothing to stand in their way. They stated that their people were excited to such a pitch of frenzy that no fear of arrest, authority, or other considerations would stop them . . ."

Mrs. Gladys Seger, Music Man's Grill, 511 W. Walnut—Since demonstrations began at her place "my business receipts have been cut in half."

Ralph F. Grove, Kupie Doubleburger, 456 S. Fifth—"Negro minors took my containers of sugar and poured them out behind the booths. They put salt into the sugar and vice versa. They poured ketchup and mustard out over the booths and tables. The place was a complete bedlam and I was helpless to do anything to control it. Finally the police arrived and made approximately 40 arrests."

Sherry Williams, Williams Food Shop, 440 W. Market—"Even with the officers of the Louisville Police in my business we were unable to get out the front door. . . ."

Several complained that the demonstrators used vulgar language.

Lowery told Judge Helm that Louisville Police Chief William E. Bindner "will tell you the situation at this moment is critical."

Race Issue Downtown Held Easing

The Courier-Journal
Louisville Ky.

More Firms Reported Set To Integrate

Wed. 3-22-61

Tension over the drive for racial integration of downtown businesses appeared to ease yesterday with the announcement that "several additional" establishments have desegregated and negotiations are under way with others.

The announcement was made jointly by Mayor Hoblitzell's emergency integration committee and the steering committee representing Negroes and others who are advocating the end of segregation in downtown restaurants and theaters here.

No one attending the joint conference at City Hall would identify any of the firms involved.

No Demonstrations Held

There were no demonstrations yesterday. Negro students, who have been assembling daily at Quinn Chapel A.M.E. Church, 912 W. Chestnut, were told they would not meet again until next Tuesday.

The Mayor's committee and the steering committee also will not meet again until Tuesday.

The joint statement read:

"We had a constructive meeting. The situation at this point looks hopeful. Several additional business establishments have desegregated. Negotiation with several other business executives are now in progress. Other leading businessmen have agreed to negotiate with Negro representatives."

Comments Optimistic

Release of the committees' statement was accompanied by optimistic comments from several Negro leaders attending the meeting.

"The situation is looking much brighter," attorney J. Earl Dearing said.

"The atmosphere is more congenial," the Rev. C. Ewbank Tucker, bishop of the Kentucky conference of the A.M.E. Zion Church, commented.

Negro leaders were also optimistic when they reported after the meeting to students at Quinn Chapel.

"We had a constructive meeting that has given us some signs of hope," Frank Stanley, Jr., said.

Stanley said that the weekly "community informational meeting" sponsored by the steering committee would be at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Greater Good Hope Baptist Church, 1100 S. 26th.

Resolutions Adopted

Two resolutions, one endorsing integration of businesses and the other praising the Mayor's committee, were adopted by other groups yesterday.

A resolution of the executive board of the Kentucky Council of Churches said, in part:

"(The board) urges downtown Louisville businesses to put into effect policies which admit all persons to their services and facilities."

Directors of Louisville Central Areas, Inc., adopted a resolution "supporting the Mayor's committee in its work and its attitude . . . and furthermore expresses the board's full confidence in the committee."

Ninety-Two Restaurants Integrated

The Louisville Defender
Louisville Ky.

Negro leaders hinted today that integration efforts now aimed at segregated downtown eating establishments and theaters would move into other areas were discrimination based upon race or color exists.

Frank L. Stanley, Jr., Co-Chairman of the Steering Committee of Negro leaders, said the Committee was now studying plans for a proposed "Selective Buying" campaign to be directed only toward those businesses that refuse to hire qualified Negroes as clreks or in other capacities than menial.

The Rev. W. J. Hodge also a Co-Chairman of the Committee, said earlier that the committee would take under consideration a boycott against the Louisville Transit Company to hire Negro bus drivers. The ministers remarks came after he observed Negro drivers of city buses in St. Louis.

"Employment", said Stanley, "is still of paramount importance to members of the committee and the Negro public." He cited several figures showing that the Negro percentage wise occupy the least amount of jobs with few in white collar capacities.

The Committee and the Louisville NAACP ended its 3-month boycott of the downtown area last Saturday. The boycott, orignally intended to end at Easter time, was extended through Derby day two days prior to Easter.

Stanley cited the fact that 92 restaurants had desegregated their facilties through their own volition, sit-ins or through request of Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell as reasons for the ending of the boycott of the area. He added that although all theaters and restaurants were not integrated, a measure of accomplishment in the area was achieve to warrant the calling off of the boycott.

Demonstrations against the remaining segregated establishments were suspended a week prior to Derby Day at Mayor Hoblitzell' request to allow for peaceful desegregation by restaurant proprietors upon their own decision.

A day prior to Derby, when a resumption of sit-ins seemed imminent, 22, segregated businesses filed suit against the Steering Committee. CORE and the NAACP seeking a permanent injunction against sit-in or stand-in demonstrations.

Judge Blakey Helm signed an order granting a temporary injunction but lifted the ban on the number of pickets Saturday afternoon. The temporary injunction had limited 2 pickets to each establishment.

Attorney J. Earl Dearing, who represents integration leaders and organizations with attorneys James A. Crumlin, Neville M. Tucker and Charles J. Lunderman, has decided not to appeal the temporary injunction. The temporary order will remain in effect until a hearing is set for a permanent injunction.

Dearing emphasized that demonstration could be resumed if they stayed within the confines of the injunction. These are against forcible entry, disruption or interference with a business, using abusive language, blocking entrances or exists, refusing to leave premises when asked or encouraging others to commit any of the acts.

Stanley said that demonstration have definitely not been ruled out by student and adult leaders. "In fact," said Stanley, "demonstrations are highly probable at this time. He said that meeting with proprietors of for today at Quinn Chapel AME Church, 912 W. Chestnut.

Mayor Hoblitzell has set meetings with students were set segregating restaurants during the first part of the week. Two resaurants of the original 32 remaining desegregated, integrated Monday.

118 Restaurants, Six Theaters Are Segregated

The Defender
Louisville Ky.

A committee composed of white and Negro city leaders, called at the request of Governor Bert T. Combs and Lt. Governor Wilson Wyatt have reportedly set April 1 as a deadline for complete desegregation of downtown Louisville.

Courier 3-25-61

The committee was hurriedly called together by Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell after an upheaval of student conducted stand-ins protesting segregated practices of downtown department store lunch counters, restaurants, hotels and theaters and the announcement of a Easter "non-buying" campaign by the NAACP.

Kaufman's of Kentucky, 427 S. Fourth, and Stewart's Dry Goods Company, 501 S. Fourth, reportedly were chosen to be the first to lower racial bars at restaurants within the stores. Kenneth Williams, Stewart's president; and Robert Milius, president of Kaufman's, were both present at the meetings.

118 Still Segregate

Frank L. Stanley Jr., assistant to the publisher, Louisville Defender and a co-chairman of the Non-Partisan Registration Committee, said that a report he had prepared and presented to Mayor Hoblitzell, showed 118 restaurants, six theaters and 2 hotels remain segregated in the downtown area.

Stanley, Rev. W. J. Hodge, president of the Louisville NAACP, Atty. J. Earl Dearing, president of Kentucky Conference, NAACP, Charles T. Steele, Executive Director of the Urban League; The Rev. Philip Smith, pastor First Unitarian Church The Rev. F. G. Sampson, NAACP vice president; and Dr. George A. Kimbrough, a physician and chairman of the Louisvillian Unitarians for Social Action, represented those asking for complete integration of Louisville facilities.

Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell issued a statement after meetings of the Committee last Friday stating that integration leaders had agreed to a "60-day stay and in-

Courier 3-26-61

Stanley, speaking at the Non-Partisan Awards Banquet, branded the Mayor's statement as "erroneous". "We," said Stanley, "did not agree to this but stated we must have something concrete by tomorrow morning (Saturday) for the students will be waiting."

Not Sell Students Cheap

"Negroes," said Stanley, "are tired of seeing their leadership divided in a series of meetings. We have met in conferences and received promises—but to no avail. We will not go behind closed doors and sell these youngsters cheap," he said.

Rev. Hodge said that the "nothing new for Easter" campaign was still in effect. The shoppers holiday plan calls for Negroes to refrain from shopping in the area bounded by Oak Street To Main and First to Ninth. Rev. Hodge said that the campaign began Monday and would extend through April 3.

Integration leaders made it plain that continuation of the student protests depend upon the day to day progress of negotiations by the Mayor's Committee. The Committee have meetings set for each day this week with Negro leaders and store owners, restaurant and hotel heads.

Stanley said that although some progress has been made toward completely desegregation of downtonw Louisville, we shall not permit it to be "empty progress."

Integration Now

"We," said Stanley," are demanding desegregation now. Time breeds only delay and delay in turn breeds chaos," he said. He also emphasized Hodge's comment that the "shoppers vacation" had not been withdraw and urged full support of the campaign.

Other members of the Committee are Dilman Rash, chairman, president of the Louisville Title Company; Thomas Ballantine, vice-president of Glenmore Distillers; William Harrison, chairman of Louisville Central Area, Inc., and head of Taylor Drug Stores; George W. Norton, president of WAVE, Inc.; Barry Bingham, president of the Courier-Journal, The Louisville Times and WHAS; John M. Hennessy, Jefferson Circuit Court Clerk;

Henning Hilliard, a broker; John Acree, Jr., president of Lincoln Income Life Insurance Company; Archibald P. Cochran, president of Anaconda Aluminum Company and Henry Offut, president of Kentucky Trust Company.

Negroes Request Appeal By Mayor

The Courier-Journal
Louisville Ky.
Thurs, 5-4-61

Want Holdout Restaurants To Integrate By Tomorrow

Negro leaders yesterday requested Mayor Hoblitzell to urge the remaining segregated restaurants and theaters in downtown Louisville to integrate by noon tomorrow.

Negro spokesmen denied the request constituted an ultimatum posing the threat of renewed demonstrations on the eve of the Kentucky Derby.

But two of the three designated spokesmen for the steering committee guiding Negro integration efforts said they personally would favor a resumption of demonstrations if the committee's requests are not met.

Ask Immediate Meeting

The steering committee's proposals were delivered to Hoblitzell in midafternoon along with a request for an immediate meeting with the Mayor's emergency integration committee.

Hoblitzell declined to convene his committee, noting that it had met earlier in the day and is scheduled to meet again at 2:30 p.m. today. He said he would submit the steering committee's proposals to the Mayor's committee at today's meeting, to which the steering committee also will be invited.

Frank Stanley, Jr., and Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker, two of the three designated spokesmen for the steering committee, said the group's proposals to the Mayor were adopted at a meeting Tuesday night. The proposals were for Hoblitzell to:

1. Issue a public statement "calling on the restaurants and theaters that are continuing to refuse service to Negroes to desegregate by 12 o'clock Friday."

2. "Send a personal letter on official stationery over the Mayor's signature to the restaurants and theaters who have refused admittance to Negroes on Monday and Tuesday, urging them to desegregate by 12 p.m. Friday."

3. "This statement should include that the City police force would not be a party to maintaining discrimination and the segregative policies of proprietors of public establishments."

Testing Completed

Hoblitzell already has issued one public statement, a week ago, requesting segregated restaurants to integrate by this past Monday. As a result, the Negro steering committee called off mass demonstrations and set out on a program of testing the places to see how many complied.

Stanley said the testing—which was extended to cover downtown theaters—was completed Tuesday. The tests showed 31 eating places and four theaters still refusing to admit Negroes, according to Stanley.

Stanley and Bishop Tucker said the reason for asking for an immediate meeting of the Mayor's committee was to clear the way for a new round of testing of the reaction of the remaining segregated establishments to the proposed new request for integration.

Reporters Excluded

Reporters were excluded as Stanley and Bishop Tucker delivered the steering committee's proposals to Hoblitzell.

Afterwards, Hoblitzell told reporters that he already had planned to issue a new public statement or send letters or telegrams to all downtown restaurants, "reporting what has been accomplished and complimenting the progress that has been made."

The Mayor declined to say whether the new statement would include another plea for segregated establishments to integrate. "You know we are going to be on this to try to finish it up," he said.

'Too Ridiculous'

As for the request that his statement or letter pledge that police "would not be a party to maintaining discrimination and the segregative policies of proprietors," Hoblitzell declared:

"That is too ridiculous to even talk about. The Police Department has never made an arrest (during integration demonstrations) for inside sit-ins or sit-downs, or for peaceful picketing. They have arrested only to preserve order, and to prevent the blocking of entrances and public ways."

Stanley, reporting on the conference with Hoblitzell, said, "The Mayor did not agree to include the theaters (in any new letter or statement). Nor did he agree to the time being set for noon Friday, or with the wording or thinking of the steering committee's proposal regarding the use of police."

Louisville Ky.

'Not An Ultimatum, But'

Both Stanley and Bishop Tucker said the proposals do not constitute an ultimatum. "But personally, and not speaking for the steering committee, I would favor a resumption of the demonstrations if our requests are not met," Bishop Tucker said. "I agree with that," Stanley added.

The third designated spokesman for the steering committee was not present. The two attending said the Rev. W. J. Hodge was "otherwise occupied in negotiations with representatives of some of the larger downtown restaurants."

Stanley said the decision on whether demonstrations are to be resumed will be made tomorrow by the steering committee and announced at a 3 p.m. meeting of students and adults—"Negroes and whites—anyone interested"—at Quinn Chapel, 912 W. Chestnut.

Sponsorship Denied

In another development, Fred K. Latham, president of the Louisville Restaurant Association, issued a statement denying that group is sponsoring the newly formed Committee for Business Freedom.

Formation of the committee was announced Saturday by attorney Jack Lowery, Jr., who said he and attorney Wilton Long had been hired to represent it.

Latham noted that news stories have said the new committee's members is made up largely of downtown restaurants. Said Latham:

"According to my information the Committee for Business Freedom's membership consists mainly of outlying taverns and some restaurant operations. Certainly the downtown area as such is not predominantly represented on the committee. It should be clearly understood that the Louisville Restaurant Association is not sponsoring the committee."

Staff Photo

PRAYERFUL DEMONSTRATION . . . Negro students and adults, who have been demonstrating against segregation in downtown restaurants and theaters, yesterday turned to a prayer-singing meeting at Quinn Chapel A.M.E. Church. About 450 persons attended.

Combs Joins Integration Talks As Committee Meets In Secret

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.
4-1, 3-17-61

Negroes Hold Prayer Session

Governor Combs entered integration talks at City Hall yesterday as Negroes substituted prayer for demonstrations.

The Governor was closeted for 2½ hours with Mayor Hoblitzell's emergency integration committee and two officials of the State Commission on Human Rights.

Afterward, Combs said: "It a very informative discussion. . . . We're going to play it by ear."

'Mutually Requested'

Negro integration leaders called on Combs in Frankfort Wednesday. Asked if either they or the Mayor's committee had requested his presence here, Combs said only, "It was mutually requested."

In Juvenile Court, Judge Henry Triplett overruled a defense motion that he vacate the bench in trials of 17 youths and one adult arrested in demonstrations and postponed trialers of their cases.

About 450 Negro students and adults met as usual at Quinn Chapel A.M.E. Church, 912 W. Chestnut, yesterday afternoon. But instead of marching downtown again, they spent the period singing and praying on the general theme of brotherhood.

Whites Join Group

Three white ministers, 15 white students from Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, and two professors from the seminary joined them.

One of the integration leaders asked if the demonstrations were called off because of the Mayor's - committee meeting. He replied: "I would simply say that we felt that this is the day a large amount of religious emphasis should be placed by local ministers to the students and adults who have been demonstrating."

Later he added, "We are prayerfully hoping for positive results from the Mayor's committee and the downtown merchants."

To Report This Afternoon

There was no indication whether demonstrations would resume today. Those attending were told to report to the church again this afternoon.

White ministers attending yesterday are the Rev. Dalton Love of Flora Heights-Parkland Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Ivan Shelburne, Jr., of Shawnee Christian Church, and the Rev. Olof Anderson, Jr., executive secretary of the Louisville presbytery. The two professors are Dr. L. C. Rudolph and Dr. A. C. Winn.

Shortly after the Mayor's committee went into a closed meeting at 2 p.m., the group was joined by Galen Martin, executive director of the State Commission on Human Rights, and Jesse Dukeminier, Lexington, vice-chairman of the commission.

Joyner With Governor

Combs and Felix Joyner soon appeared and joined the meeting. Joyner is the head of a State Government-reorganization study and executive director of the Kentucky Turnpike Authority. His presence was not explained.

When Combs was asked afterward about the possibility of future meetings between him and the committee, he said, "We're going to play it by ear."

Hoblitzell explained that Martin and the State commission's chairman, the Rev. Robert W. Estill, Lexington, called on him at his home last Friday night and asked that "certain things be done." He said he told them they would have to take that up with the committee and he would call a meeting.

P 20

None Give A Hint

None of the participants would give any hint about what went on in the meeting. Asked if any further meetings were scheduled, Hoblitzell said: "Not as far as I know now. We are going to let things sit for a while. It's pretty evident that with all this excitement you can't get things done."

Hoblitzell said the committee was ready to meet "anytime, anywhere," but that Negro leaders had not requested any meeting with it.

Talks between representatives of the Negroes' steering committee and the Mayor's committee broke down March 9 after a report of the Mayor's committee on its progress in opening downtown businesses to Negroes did not satisfy the Negro leaders.

Protests Were Resumed

The Negroes then resumed downtown demonstrations, stand-ins, and picketing. More than 200 Negroes have been arrested since then.

A star football player from Louisville, Leonard Lyles, added his voice to the demands for integration yesterday. He wrote Governor Combs, he said, that "to be a Negro citizen of Louisville is to be ashamed of my city."

Lyles, who played here while a student at the University of Louisville and now is a halfback with the San Francisco Forty-Niners professional team, wrote: "Many of my friends will not come to see me for the simple reason that they feel Louisville is backward segregated place and has nothing to offer Negroes. . . .

Individual Trials Granted

"Regardless of personal achievements, I can never escape being a native of Louisville, Ky. I hope Louisville is proud of me and I sure want to be proud of Louisville. It makes a man feel very good to be able to go any place that he would like to go."

While rejecting a motion that he disqualify himself from hearing the integration cases, Juvenile Court Judge Triplett did grant individual trials to the 18 persons before him yesterday.

Defense attorney James A. Crumlin said individual trials provide "the only way we can safeguard their rights. They are charged with an offense (disorderly conduct) we do not think it was possible for them to have committed under the circumstances."

Dates Are Set

The cases of five youths arrested February 20 inside Stewart Dry Goods Company will be heard at 1 p.m. April 8. The trials for Kerwin D. Kerr, 39, and 12 youths arrested in sidewalk demonstrations February 23 will be at 10 a.m. March 30.

The motion to continue the cases was made by Assistant County Attorney James Thornberry, who said that one of the prosecution witnesses could not appear yesterday because of illness.

Crumlin, former state chairman of the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People, said his motion that Triplett vacate the bench was made on the basis of Triplett's published statements on the situation in Monday's Courier-Journal.

Had Pledged Probe

Triplett had said he would investigate the possibility that Negro teen-agers taking part in downtown demonstrations were being "exploited."

Triplett's statements had definite overtones of prejudice in a case pending before the court, Crumlin said.

Thornberry said Triplett overruled the motion on the grounds that it was made too late and that it does not have sufficient legal grounds.

Crumlin said defense attorneys today will ask County Judge B. C. Van Arsdale to appoint another trial commissioner for the demonstrators' cases. If the request is denied, then attorneys have the right of appeal to Circuit Court, Crumlin said.

Defendants Wait Outside

Triplett heard the motion and made his rulings in a closed hearing. The defendants and their parents and witnesses waited in an anteroom outside the courtroom. The young people have been paroled to their parents. Five other youths arrested in demonstrations Tuesday and held in Children's Center were paroled to their parents Wednesday.

Kerr, 6303 Camp Ground Road, a member of the Congress of Racial Equality, was arrested on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Report Received

Mayor Hoblitzell acknowledged he had received a report that "outsiders"—that is nonresidents—have been helping to oragnize and direct the demonstrations.

"But I told the man who called to tell me this that the only one I was aware of was Reverend Sampson, who I have heard tell about demonstrations in other cities where he has been. However, Reverend Sampson now lives here and has a church."

The Rev. Frederick G. Sampson is pastor of Mount Lebanon Baptist Church, 2224 W. Chestnut, having taken the post in December. He is member of the steering committee representing groups advocating integration.

Mayor Asks Integration By May 1

Louisville Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell, in his strongest statement todate on integraion here, yesterday called for the desegregation of downtown places of public accommodations by Monday, May 1.

Hoblitzell issued the statement following a closed meeting between he, the Mayor's emergency integration committee and the Steering Committee of Negro leaders Tuesday afternoon at City Hall.

Representatives of the Steering and integration committee with Mayor Hoblitzell returned Monday night from an all-day conference with Mayor Tucker of St. Louis to study that city's progress in integration which has desegregated over 200 establishments in 3 weeks.

Hoblitzell statement read:

"We are faced with an extremely serious situation which needs an immediate solution. As I have said before with the full approval of the Mayor Committee, integration of downtown public accommodations is not only morally right and economically feasible but is also inevitable.

"We must have the cooperation of all the involved groups, including the patrons, in order that integration can be accomplished in an orderly fashion. This we do not have today.

"Under these circumstances, after consultation with an upon the recommendation of the Mayor's Committee, I am hereby requesting that no later than Monday, May 1 the operators of all downtown public eating facilities integrate.

"Meantime, I am asking that groups of three or four Negroes each, under the supervision of the Steering Committee, check all downtown facilities to determine whether his request to desegregate has been honored.

"I also am asking the Negro checking committees to report to the Mayor's office full results of their investigations.

Call O Demonstrations

"I request that there be no further demonstrations during this testing period, and in no event prior to May 3."

Negro leaders indicated that they would cooperate with the Mayor's plan. It means that demonstrations will be curtailed until after May 3.

The Steering Committee had previously insisted that the reason the St. Louis plan had worked successfully was because of the strong leadership of Mayor Tucker.

They insisted that Mayor Hoblitzell declare as Mayor Tucker that "the city government may not use its authority as an arm of the state to enforce discrimination against its citizens within the meaning of the Federal Constitution.

The Mayor reportedly refuse to issue this statement called for by the Negro leaders.

Lexington Youths Resume Pickets; Injunction Set

Lexington, Ky. — Attorneys representing the Congress of Racial Equality here have asked that the Fayette Circuit Court to dismiss an injunction against stand-ins sought by the management of the Kentuckv Theater.

Attorney James A. Crumlin, of Louisville, asked the removal of the injunction on the grounds that the complaint bought by the theater did not state a cause of action upon which relief could be granted.

The injunction was sought against CORE after 11 adults were arrested conducting demonstrations in front of the theater earlier his month. The management of the Strand theater had sought a similiar injunction which is still pending before the courts.

The Stand is operated by the Phtoenix Amusement Company of Lexington. The Kentucky is under the management of M. Switow and Sons Enterprises, Inc.

The 11 adults arrested at the Kentucky are slated to appear for arraignment on charges of breach of the peace this week. The hearing on the injunction will be heard on May 4 before Circuit Judge Joseph J. Bradley.

CORE resumed picketing of the theater last Friday. The Kentucky managemnet stated that he had advised CORE to rseume the demonstrations since the theater last Friday. Atty. Crumlin said that he had advised CORE to resume the demonstrations since the theater operator violated his part of the agreement upon which hinged the discontinue of the of the pickets and in effect there was no ggreement.

22 Arrested In Lexington Demonstrations

Lexington, Ky. — Twenty-two Negro and white demonstrators protesting segregation were arrested and charged by police with breach of the peace outside a movie theatre Monday.

Those arrested belonged to the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) who have been conducting sit-in and stand-in demonstrations in the Bluegrass for several months. Monday's demonstrators were arrested participating in a stand-in in front of the Kentucky Theater.

Police Lt. Morris Carter said that 11 adults and 11 juveniles were included in those arrested inclhding two white persons. Police were summoned to the theater to investigate "a riot in progress".

Owners of the Stand Theater here filed suit on February 21 to restrain members of CORE from conducting stand-ins a tthe mofie house.

Named in the suit was Miss Julia Lewis, president of Lexington CORE; Dr. Abby Marlatt, head of the University of Kentuck School of Home Economics; Daniel S. Claster, U. of K. sociology instructor; and seven members of the organization.

Breach of the peace charges had been filed against six CORE members earlier during a stand-in at the Strand. The charges against the members, including Miss Lewis, were dismissed in Police Court hearings.

Carter said that Frank Petro. 66. a theater employee, was struck during the demonstrations. He complained of pains but was treated and released from the hospital.

Police said that demonstrators had "blocked" the entrance to the theater shouting and singing "loudly". Carter said that a crowd soon gathered in front of the Kentucky blocking traffic on E. Main St.

Those arrested continued to sing while being carted off to jail. The juveniles werer eleased in custody of their parents. Police said the arrests were made in an attempt to prevent violence, personal injury or property damage.

Ministers Condemn Mass Arrests

The Louisville Ministers and Deacons Conference have unanimously approved a resolution condemning the mass arrests by police of 510 juveniles and adults in the last two months, protesting racial discrimination at downtown restaurants and theaters through peaceful pickets and stand-in demonstrations.

The resolution was submitted by the Rev. M. M. D. Perdue, pastorl of Emmanuel Baptist Church, and chairman of the groups public relations committee, before a joint monthly meeting of the organization with the Louisville Pastor's Conference which is composed of white clergymen.

The Pastors Conference voted to delay action on the resolution until their regular meeting next Monday.

The resolution stated that the "good and fair name of our city and the character of our citizens and the world wide reputation we hove gained as a community of racial tolerance has been so grossly misrepresented" by the mass arrests.

"Such demonstrations have received the oral support of practicolly all the major religious bodies of the United States of America, the major political conventions of our country and many other representative bodies of public opinion".

The resolution also stated that the demonstrations are a results of "new motivations" and the methods of picketing is "growing, spreading pattern which will not stop at hamburger stands, but will move into new areas where racial segregation exists".

The religious group soid that the Louisville arests are more than in any other city of the nation in dealing in like situations. They referred to the arrests as being similar to those described by President Kennedy in his oddress on Cuba as "police state methods".

The Baptist group called for police and city officials to reexamine their "strategy in dealing with the current situation without resorting to their present tactic of moss arrest.

The joint conference, which represented ministers of the Long Run and Central Association of Baptists of the Louisville Area, was held at the Walnut Sttreet Baptist Church, 1101 S. 3rd St.

Negroes Demonstrate Here; 14 Arrested

N.A.A.C.P. Chapter Announces Plans For 'Shopping Vacation' Downtown

The campaign by Negroes here against discrimination brought two developments yesterday.

1. Fourteen Negro youths were arrested during a series of "demonstrations" against downtown stores and theaters.

2. Plans for a Negro "shopping vacation" in the downtown area during the Easter season were announced by the Louisville chapter of the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People.

The demonstrations began in midafternoon. Groups of from 10 to 15 Negroes and a few whites paraded or stood in front of department stores and theaters on Fourth Street.

Cafeterias Are Targets

The Blue Boar Cafeterias on Fourth and Walnut were also targets.

Police patrolled the area. Five youths were arrested when they allegedly blocked the entrance to the Mary Anderson Theater and were charged with disorderly conduct and delinquency.

Four were juveniles. The fifth was 18. The juveniles were sent to the Children's Center.

Six More Arrested

About an hour after the first incident, six more teen-agers were arrested at the Mary Anderson Theater and charged with disorderly conduct and delinquency. Two others were arrested at the Kentucky Theater, and a 17-year-old girl was arrested at the Ohio Theater.

The girl was turned over to her parents. The other youths, ages 16 and 17, were sent to the Children's Center.

The Rialto Theater closed its box office for awhile, and the Ohio Theater moved its box office into the lobby.

The demonstrators were all young. A spokesman said they represented all schools in the city and the University of Louisville. They were refused admission to restaurants, at Stewart Dry Goods Company and Kaufman's of Kentucky, as well as the Blue Boars and the theaters.

Will Begin Monday

The Rev. W. J. Hodge, president of the local chapter of N.A.A.C.P. and pastor of Fifth Street Baptist Church, announced plans for the "holiday."

Negroes are being asked, he said, to stop shopping in an area between First and Ninth and Oak and Main. The "vacation" is scheduled to begin Monday and continue through April 3.

The N.A.A.C.P. president said the "vacation" would not be a boycott but a protest against racial discrimination in stores, restaurants, and theaters.

It has been discussed, he explained, for about a month. A final decision came, he said, after five juveniles were arrested Monday in a "stand-in" at Stewart's basement tearoom.

The N.A.A.C.P. estimates that there are more than 75,000 Negroes in the Louisville area and that they do about $18,000,000 of business annually in the downtown area.

Robert L. Milius, president of Kaufman's of Kentucky and vice-president of the Louisville Retail Merchants Association, said the association will have no comment for the present.

Milius said the tearoom at Kaufman's, closed once before because of Negro demonstrations, was closed again Saturday.

The N.A.A.C.P. leader said Negroes here were inspired by the success of a similar protest movement in Richmond, Va., recently. There, he said, big stores ceased to discriminate against Negroes.

'So Ineffective'

Mayor Hoblitzell's Civic and Religious Advisory Committee seemed "so ineffective," he said, that the N.A.A.C.P decided "not to bother it any more."

He claimed evidence of widespread support from Negro leaders for the "shopping vacation," but said that during the period the N.A.A.C.P. will attempt to talk to business leaders in an effort to reach an acceptable agreement.

The Congress of Racial Equality is co-operating with the movement, the N.A.A.C.P. president said, but is confining itself largely to demonstrations. Both C.O.R.E. and N.A.A.C.P. members have taken part in recent demonstrations, he said, including the one which caused the Blue Boar Cafeteria on Walnut Street to close Wednesday evening.

Some members of the group also paraded before the Fourth Street Blue Boar, but it was not closed. The Walnut Street Blue Boar reopened yesterday.

Staff Photo

DEMONSTRATORS MARCH in front of the Walnut Street Blue Boar Cafeteria as part of their campaign to end alleged discrimination against Negroes. The Blue Boar was one of many targets in the downtown area yesterday. Theaters and department stores were also picketed.

Business-Integration Action At Standstill

Silence surrounded yesterday's activities concerning integration of downtown businesses and theaters.

Members of the Mayor's emergency committee on integration and a Negro steering committee met for more than 2 hours at City Hall. No statement was issued after the private session and participants generally declined comment.

At Quinn Chapel A.M.E Church, where an estimated 350 Negro students gathered the Rev. W. J. Hodge said the meeting was "very discouraging." Mr. Hodge, one of the steering-committee spokesmen, did not elaborate, and other Negro leaders declined comment.

Students Hear Stanley

Frank Stanley, Jr., another steering-committee spokesman, addressed the students in a session closed to reporters. Previous meetings of the students were open.

City Consultant Roy Owsley, who presided at the City Hall session in the absence of vacationing Mayor Hoblitzell, said only that the two groups had a regularly scheduled meeting set for Tuesday.

The Negro groups have also scheduled an "Easter Prayer Pilgrimage" for 2 p.m. Sunday at Jefferson County Courthouse. A spokesman said City and County officials have been contacted about the meeting, which is slated as a religious observance.

Liberties Union Acts

In other action yesterday, the executive board of the Kentucky Civil Liberties Union urged an end to "racial segregation in theaters, restaurants, and other places of public accommodation."

The board, in a letter signed by its chairman, Edgar A. Zingman, also urged it be remembered that antisegregation demonstrators "are not common miscreants and, even when arrested, should not be treated as such."

The K.C.L.U. letter went to the Kentucky Commission on Human Rights, with copies to Mayor Hoblitzell, Juvenile Court Judge Henry Triplett, and newspaper executives.

Four Points Made

The group backed up its plea with four points, the first that "in all of its forms, racial segregation is opposed to the spirit of a clearly stated constitutional principle."

The K.C.L.U. also said that segregation "denies the dignity and worth of individual human beings (and) disturbs the peace and harmony of communities where it is practiced."

Also, according to the letter, segregation "causes colored people all over the world to look askance at American democracy and tends to advance the cause of communism in Asia and Africa."

Associated Press Wirephoto

TWO CHECKED OUT . . . A Jackson, Miss., policeman escorts two Negro students from the main public library building used only by whites. Nine Negroes were arrested yesterday when they ignored police orders to leave.

Ministers Back CORE, NAACP, "Non-Buying"

The Louisville Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance issued a statement today giving their "unequivocal support" to Negro leaders in the integration crisis and the non-buying campaign.

The statement came on the heels of remarks Monday by the Rt. Reverend C. Ewbank Tucker, Bishop of the Kentucky Conference, African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church attacking the shoppers holiday plan.

However, Bishop Tucker, who represents 6,000 Negroes in Kentucky, said in a statement today that "he was supporting the NAACP's shopping vacation" from the entire area as specified by the civil rights organization.

"Although some downtown businesses," said the Bishop, "have served Negroes, we have been the friend to them by spending our money and having hardly any return to our community through jobs.

"We owe no debt or obligation to them," he said, "We have done them a favor. Downtown stores have not done us a favor."

Speaking at Quinn Chapel Church, Tucker said earlier that "he was not in complete accord with the plans. "I don't think," said Tucker, "that we should boycott our friends who have previously desegregated."

Bishop Tucker, who had previously joined the stand-ins at Kaufman's of Kentucky, Stewart's Dry Goods Company and Ben Snyder department stores, said he favored an alternate plan that would imposed selective buying curbs against those businesses that refused Negro patronage.

The minister's statement said, "we support wholly the program offered by Frank Stanley, Jr., the NAACP and CORE. We further support the downtown boycott and the student picketing demonstrations."

"We stand by all hese efforts," continued the statement, "unequivocally and have no desire to see any of them altered."

The statement was signed by Rev. Joseph R. Reid, President, Rev. H. M. Greene, Chairman and the Revs. R. E. Lee, and D. G. Smith, Committeement.

Man Fined In Demonstration Protest

Says He Will Appeal Verdict

The Courier-Journal

A man accused of trying to "break up" an integration demonstration on Fourth Street March 15 was fined $25 in Police Court yesterday for disorderly conduct.

The defendant, George K. McCormick, 62, of 1730 S. Third, said he will appeal the fine to Criminal Court.

Police told Judge Hugo Taustine that McCormick walked through a line of Negro marchers in front of the Ohio Theater, waving his arms and shoving people out of the way. McCormic also cursed the paraders and police, according to testimony.

McCormick testified he was only trying to make his way through the demonstrators, whose "game of ring-around-the-rosie" blocked his progress on the sidewalk. He described the parade as "illegal according to the Supreme Court of the United States."

Seven adult demonstrators were arrested along with more than 100 juveniles during the parade and picketing of theaters. Charges against the seven adults were continued to April 11.

C.O.R.E. Unit Promises Halt To Picketing

11 Members Face Lexington Trial Soon

Lexington, Ky., April 4 (AP)— The Congress of Racial Equality agreed Tuesday not to picket or demonstrate at the Kentucky Theater here until after 11 C.O.R.E. members are tried April 26.

However, a dozen or so young Negroes lined up at the theater"s ticket window Tuesday night. They were orderly and left before Lexington police could determine whether they were C.O.R.E. members.

Charged with breach of peace, the 11 were released on $100 bond each after appearance in Police Court.

Doorman Slightly Hurt

They and 11 juveniles were arrested Monday night at a stand-in demonstration during which a demonstrator allegedly struck and injured slightly a 66-year-old doorman, Frank B. Petro.

Police moved in when bystanders began yelling at the milling, singing demonstrators after the incident.

Previous C.O.R.E. demonstrations at the Strand Theater ended in late February when a still-pending Fayette Circuit Court injunction against them was obtained by the theater's owners.

Tell Louisville Stores To Mix

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The Mayor's committee on integration has urged Louisville businesses to 'desegrate all public accommodations."

As the committee met, the management of two major department stores — Kaufman's and Stewarts — announced that they would integrate their restaurant facilities. Louisville CORE had conducted stand-ins and had continued negotiations at these stores for more than six months.

In its first major statement since the committee was formed Feb. 24 following the arrest of more than 70 CORE and NAACP Youth Council members, it said, "It is desirable that the inevitable action take place before the generally good atmosphere of the Louisville community deteriorates."

The statement was issued after a three-hour closed meeting at city hall. The committee is expected to report "definite progress" to integration leaders.

The statement said in part: "The Mayor's committee urges business establishments in Louisville to desegregate all public accommodations. The Mayor committee bcllives that desegregation is morally right and economically expedient, and that it is desirable that the inevitable action take place before the generally good atmosphere of the Louisvillel community deteriorates."

Downtown Facilities Desegregating

Louisville, Ky., Sit-Ins Pay Off

The Courier (Courier Press Service)

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—Perseverance is finally beginning to pay dividends for militant crusaders who haven't allowed 289 arrests to halt their concerted drive for integration of downtown facilities here.

• Bishop S. Ewbank Tucker told The Courier Saturday that "a number of restaurants and theatres are in the process of being desegregated. Within the next 30 days the whole problem will probably be solved."

The statement was issued on the heels of an emergency meeting called at 6 P.M. Friday evening between Negro leaders and the Mayor's committee. Police authorities had warned of threatened violence by white high school youths.

Sat. 4-1-61

NEGRO LEADERS declared, "We feel that it is the primary responsibility of the school administration to maintain order and decorum. Disciplinary procedures should be adopted. If the situation gets out of hand, then you've got the police."

Partial success came last week, when several unidentified establishments agreed to bow to the relentless force of integration.

This encouraging news came in a joint announcement by Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell's Emergency Integration Committee, composed of businessmen, and the steering committee of the crusading organizations — CORE, the local NAACP, and the Non-Partisan Registration Committee.

■

THE STATEMENT, which followed a city hall conference of leaders of both factions, read:

"We had a constructive meeting. The situation at this point looks hopeful. Several additional business establishments have desegregated. Negotiations with several other business executives are now in progress. Other leading businessmen have agreed to negotiate with Negro representatives."

Though things are looking up, the crusaders are maintaining unity and enthusiasm with a series of mass rallies at local churches.

Last Sunday, 2,100 Negroes and a few whites, packed the auditorium, basement and area surrounding Chestnut Street Baptist Church, to hear a speech by Herbert Wright, national director of Youth and College Activities for the NAACP.

■

SO FAR, NEGROES have contributed more than $6,000, which will be used to defend the students and adults arrested in connection with integration demonstrations, Dr. Grace M. James, chairman of the Finance Committee, reported at the last rally.

Meanwhile, the protest has received open support from the Kentucky Council of Churches. In a resolution, the council said:

• The board urged downtown Louisville businesses to put into effect policies which admit all persons to their services and facilities."

The optimism of the determined protestors was expressed by AME Zion Bishop S. Ewbank Tucker, Frank Stanley Jr., and the committee's attorney, Earl Dearing, all leaders in the crusade. "The atmosphere is more congenial . . . there are signs of hope . . . the situation is looking much brighter," they said.

LOUISVILLE PROTEST LEADERS — Vital figures in the fight to integrate downtown Louisville, Ky., facilities are, left to right: The Rev. W. J. Hodge, president of the local NAACP; Frank L. Stanley Jr., chairman of the Non-partisan Registration Committee, and Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker, vice chairman of CORE.

Bishop Tucker Leader in Fight

The Pittsburgh Courier P. 2

Louisville Arrests Reach Total of 289

Pittsburgh Post Dat: 3-25-61

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—With the arrest of 175 more juveniles and adults during a quiet demonstration here last Tuesday, the total number of arrests in the dramatic fight to end segregation of downtown facilities, reached the staggering figure of 289.

Among those taken into custody today by police were crusade leaders Rev. W. J. Hodge, president of the Louisville NAACP and pastor of the 50th Street Baptist Church; Rev. S. S. Sampson, vice president of the NAACP and pastor of Mt. Lebanon Church, and Frank C. Stanley Jr., co-chairman of the Non-partisan Registration Committee.

During a court hearing on the cases last week, action was postponed until March 30 and April 8. All the defendents, most of whom are teen-agers, are presently out on bond supplied by the three sponsoring organizations.

Following the latest arrests, a delegation of protest leaders representing the NAACP, CORE and the Non-partisan Registration Committee, met with Kentucky Gov. Fert T. Combs, who vowed to use the influence of his office to effect a satisfactory settlement between Negroes and Louisville businessmen.

Governor Combs came to Louisville the following Thursday, where he helped resume negotiations between the crusaders and Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell's Emergency Integration Committee, composed of ten store owners.

■

PREVIOUSLY, similar negotiations with the Mayor's Committee had been broker off due to a failure of the committee to set a definite date when desegregation would take place.

Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker of the AME Zion Church, vice chairman of CORE, informed The Courier that the interest shown by Governor Combs has raised the hopes of all that a setlement will soon be reached.

BISHOP C. E. TUCKER
. . . "we intend to see this thing through"

According to Bishop Tucker, the Governor said he believed the situation was not a hopeless one and that it could be resolved.

In spite of the arrests, crusade leaders have temporarily called off the demonstrations in an attempt to reach an agreement around the conference table.

Last Thursday's scheduled demonstration was cancelled. Instead an inspiring religious service was held at Quinn Chapel Church. It was attended by more than a thousand area Negroes, and 15 white student ministers and professors from near-by Presbyterian Theological Seminary. Rev. Z. E. King of Zion Baptist Church was in charge.

■

AS A FOLLOW-UP, a mass meeting was held Sunday evening at Chestnut Street Baptist Church, where the protestors pledged that they would not back down, even if current negotiations failed.

Bishop Tucker voiced the opinion of most Louisville Negroes, when he said, "We intend to see this thing through all the way, even if it takes a year or two or more!"

38a 1961

KENTUCKY

SIT-INS
JUDGE HENRY A. TRIPLETT

Attys. Urge Triplett To Vacate Bench

Attorneys for Negro students arrested in connection with anti-segregation pickets and stand-ins in the dowtown area over a two-week period have made a motion that Juvenile Court Judge Henry A. Triplett disqualify himself in the hearings for his remarks that the students "may be exploited" by adults.

Atty. James Crumlin made the motion Monday at a hearing of 6 juveniles in Judge Triplett's court room. Judge Triplett overruled the moition "without prejudice" on the grounds that it was "not in writing" and did not state a complaint.

Crumlin is co-counsel for the students with Attys. J. Early Dearing, Charles J. Lunderman, Neville M. Tucker and Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker, also an attorney who has been acting in an advisory capacity.

A new motion drawn up by the attornyes filed yesterday before the court reportedly stated hat "no case, civil or criminal, should be tried in the public media of newspapers or radio."

The attorneys reportedly felt that Judge Triplett's remarks in the newspapers were a "breach of judicial ethics" and he should therefore vacate the bench in the students's trials.

The cases of the six juveniles, who appeared before Judge Triplett with thir parents, were continued until April 1. Hearings on 21 other cases are slated for hearing this afternoon also in Juvenile Court. One adult will face charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Exploit Youths

Judge Triplett said after the hearing that "he personally did not plan an investigation" into the possibility of the students being exploited by adult Negroes of the Community. He added that any inquiries would be under normal procedure.

Earlier, Judge Triplett issued a statement which read in part — "It is the fervent hope of this court that the responsible leaders of this community will resolve the issues involved in a dispassionate atmosphere either by negotiations or appropriate legal proceedings and not be the use of children as a substitute."

A Steering Committee of Negor integration leaders attacked Judge Triplett's comments stating that "Juvenile Court was being used as an instrumentality of segregationists".

"This is a student movement, as evidenced by the arrest of some 2,500 studnets over the country. Adults would be derelict in their duties not to furnish advise and guidance to these students," said a statement signed by Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker, Frank L. Stanley, Jr., and Rev. W. J. Hodge, co-chairman of the steering committee.

Rev. Hodge further stated that "an investigation by Juvenile would be welcomed for we are sure that it would bear out what we have been saying over and over that this is a student movement."

The Rev. D. E. King, pastor of Zion Baptist Church, and a member of the steering committee added that "Judge Triplett was not wholly informed" of the student protest movement.

"He," said Rev. King," revealed his lack of information regarding the sociological pattern of sit-ins across the nation. His comments have inspired adult Negroes to greater participation in the demonstrations."

Louisville Fight Continues Despite Integration Gains

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
4-8-61

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—Though the trend toward integration is gathering steam here, with eight more restaurants serving Negroes and 21 others negotiating with crusade leaders, attorneys for the protesting group are carrying the battle to a legal level.

• In court last week, the astute lawyers sought to clear the 272 demonstrators, mostly juveniles, who were arrested during the past two months, by attacking the constitutionality of Louisville's disorderly conduct ordinance, which they were accused of violating.

The ordinance, which fails to define disorderly conduct, and merely sets the penalty for it, was renounced by Judge Henry Triplett, who heard the case. He said, "I have had considerable concern; I've never liked that ordinance, but I'm not prepared to say it is unconstitutional until I see some law on it."

• As a result of the hearing, charges against 12 young demonstrators were dismissed in Juvenile Court, at least until the matter of constitutionality is decided. Two other cases, which were postponed to a later date, are significant in that they will affect the outcome of 25 other cases, all involving teen-agers.

Lawyers in the case were Attys. Neville M. Tucker, J. Earl Dearing, C. J. Ludeman and James A. Crumlin.

■

WITH THE UPTURN in events no more anti-segregation demonstrations have been held in the past two weeks.

They have been replaced by inspirational meetings, and climaxed on Easter Sunday with a Prayer Pilgrimage in which several thousand protestors marched quietly to the Jefferson County Court House.

Meanwhile negotiations are continuing between the mayor's all-white Emergency Integration Committee and the steering committee representing the relentless Negro desegregation movement.

■

REV. C. EWBANK Tucker, Bishop of the AME Zion Church, and one of the leaders, issued the following statement after one of these conferences.

"I am more optimistic as a result of the joint meeting . . . the gloom and disappointment of the leaders have been resolved, and with a continuation of the present progress, we feel that the problem of desegregation in public establishments will be satisfactorily resolved."

D. C. Ordinance Under Fire In Sit-In Cases

The Louisville Defender
Louisville, Ky.

Disorderly conduct and delinquency charges against 12 students arrested during stand-in demonstrations at Fourth Street theaters and restaurants. were dismissed in Juvenile Court this week but others were delayed pending a hearing on the constitutionality of the ordinance.

The cases of 15 adults arrested during the demonstrations will be heard in Police Court on April 11. Included are those of the Rev. W. J. Hodge and Frank L. Stanley, Jr., co-chairmen of the Steering Committee of Negro leaders; and the Rev. F. G. Sampson, a member of the Steering Committee.

The students and adults are represented by Attys. Charles J. Lunderman, Neville M. Tucker, J. Earl Dearing, and James T. Crumlin.

Judge Henry Triplett sustained a motion by attorneys for the students to "quash" the charges "on the grounds that the warrants did not state a public offense".

Atty. Lunderman said that two of the cases were delayed until a ruling is made on the motion brought by the defense attorneys. He said that Judge Triplett had taken the motion under submission.

Attorneys argued that the city disorderly conduct ordinance was unconstitntional, because "it set no standard that would enable a person to determine conduct that is prohibited."

"Under the present ordinance," said Lunderman, "it would be up to the Judge and prosecutor to determine what conduct is construed as disorderly".

Lunderman said that the remaining cases involving the students were re-assigned because all were contingent upon the legality of the ordinance and motion before the court.

272 Arrested In Louisville Easter Boycott

Louisville Defender
Louisville, Ky.
Courier-Associate
Jackson, Miss.
Sat. 4/8/61

Louisville, Ky., April 1—272 arrests have been made here to date in connection with the NAACP-sponsored withholding of patronage campaign against the downtown shopping area.

The arrests stem from the NAACP's "Nothing New For Easter" drive against segregation and involves the city's 75,000 Negroes.

Local NAACP President, the Rev. W. J. Hodge, estimates that Negroes spend $18 million annually here.

NAACP Board Backs Steering Committee

The Louisville Defender
Louisville, Ky.

Integration leaders urged a crowd numbering four thousands persons attending an Easter afternoon Prayer Pilgrimage, to continue a "non-buying" campaign directed at downtown stores until merchants agree to desegregate public facilities and hire Negroes in clerical and sales positions.

The "nothing new for Easter" selective buying campaign originally was intended to withhold Negro patronage from the downtown area until after the holiday. Negro leaders cited the slow progress of desegregation in restaurants and department store lunch counters as reasons to continue the program.

Frank L. Stanley, Jr., a co-chairman of the Steering Committee of Negro Leaders, sponsors of the Pilgrimage, warned that "If no continuing progress is made with Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell's Emergency Integration Committee, we are going to demonstrate again".

The Rev. W. J. Hodge said that Negroes will now be asked to support the organization's "Nothing New for Derby" campaign. Boundaries of the extended campaign are same as in the "Nothing New for Easter" campaign. These are: From Main to W. Oak and First to 9th Sts.

The Pilgrimage was held on the steps of the Jefferson County Court House, Armory Place and W. Jefferson. The crowd, with a sprinkling of white persons in attendance, heard alternate speeches from Negro leaders, prayers and singing. Integration leaders emphasized that the Pilgrimage was not a "demonstration".

The actual number of those attending the Pilgrimage was deceptive because of many persons listening from parked cars in nearby parking lots and Armory Place. Despite the presence of police, segments of the crowd spilled into W. Jefferson.

The Rev. W. J. Hodge, president of the Louisville NAACP, and another co-chairman of the Steering Committee of Negro leaders, reassured those present that Negro leaders were not seeking personal acclaim or positions in state or city governments in the integration movement.

"The Normal Life — Hell"

Rev. Hodge described the movement as having the undertones of a great spiritual and moral crusade. The pastor of Fifth Street Baptist Church, Rev. Hodge said that the quest for Negro rights was merely an effort to bring into reality "the revelations of God".

Arthur Smith, a Central High School senior and president of the NAACP Youth Council, asked that the non-buying campaign be continued and urged further adult support of students.

"Many people have said that they had to have something new and wanted to go back to the normal life," said Smith, "but what is the normal life? If it is going through the back door for service and suffering other indignities, then life here is hell and we may as well make a sacrifice and go on to the promise land".

Stanley said that of the 125 segregated downtown establishments, only 15 have agreed to integrate and not one store has agreed with the Steering Committee to promote present Negro employees to a clerical or sales position.

Stanley, executive assistant to the Publisher of The Louisville Defender, urged the group "not to ask what the integration movement can do for you but what they can do for the movement".

Not Give Up

He emphasized that the one thing Negroes could do was to withhold their patronage from downtown stores until the desegregation process is accomplished.

"Dr. Martin Luthtr King, Jr., said to Louisville," said Stanley, 'If 50,000 Negroes in Montgomery can walk in dignity, 75,000 Negroes in Louisville can stop buying in protest'."

Stanley asked if the Negro community would be "so weak" as to quit the fight in spite of the fact that Africans are dying daily for freedom and in America 3,014 students have gone to jail. 21 of whom are on chain gangs?

The crowd shouted emphatic "No's" to Stanley's remarks. He said that Louisville Negroes will show that they have the courage and determination of their convictions".

The Rev. D. E. King, a member of the Steering Committee, presided at the Pilgrimage. Another speaker was the Rev. F. G. Sampson, also a member of the Steering Committee.

The Executive Board of the Louisville Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People voted unanimously to back the Steering Committee in the extension of the Non-Buying Campaign in the downtown area.

Louisiana Jails German 'Rider'

Washington Post

HAMMOND, La., Sept. 2 (AP) — An elementary school teacher from West Germany with almost no knowledge of English remained in jail today after his arrest for disturbing the peace.

Willie Heinrich Hoever, 30, of Issum, Germany, was arrested yesterday after he was refused service at the Negro lunch counter of the Greyhound bus terminal here.

Police made the arrest after he refused to move to a white counter at the request of a waitress.

Hoever will be arraingec Tuesday in city court. He is be held on $500 bond.

Heather Fraser, 34, of Mid delsbrough, Yorkshire, Eng land, a spokesman for the group of 24 foreign students touring the country, said in Memphis, Tenn., "It was just a language barrier mistake. A waitress told him to move but he doesn't understand much English and he sat there. The police came. Some Negroes in the cafe were crowding around If they hadn't carried him away there might have been trouble."

The other 23 foreign students arrived in Memphis last last night, confused and tired. They said Hoever was simply trying to buy some breakfast.

Hammond City Attorney Gordon Causey said Hoever had "No identification, no passport and no visa" when arrested. The German said his papers were in his luggage which had left Hammond on the bus.

Mayor John C. Morrison said "The man could easily have been confused." He had no other comment.

Miss Fraser said the group arrived in McComb, Miss., after leaving Hammond, and a newsman asked if they were Freedom Riders. "Some of our group didn't even know what a Fredom Rider is," she said.

Hoever is touring the United States after serving as a counselor at a New Hampshire camp under the sponsorship of the Committee on Friendly Relations with Foreign Students.

West German Teacher Held In Race Case

Atlanta Journal and Constitution

HAMMOND, La., Sept. 2 (AP)—An elementary school teacher from West Germany with almost no knowledge of English remained in jail Saturday after his arrest for disturbing the peace.

Willie Heinrich Hoever, 30, of Issum, Germany, Friday was arrested after he was refused service at the Negro lunch counter of the Greyhound bus terminal here.

Police made the arrest after he refused to move to a white counter at the request of a waitress.

Hoever will be arraigned Tuesday in City Court. He is being held on $500 bond.

Sept. 3, 1961

MISS HEATHER FRASER, 34, of Middlesbrough, Yorkshire, England, a spokesman for the group of 24 foreign students touring the country, said in Memphis, Tenn., "It was just a language barrier mistake.

"A waitress told him to move but he doesn't understand much English and he sat there. The police came. Some Negroes in the cafe were crowding around. If they hadn't carried him away there might have been trouble."

Atlanta, Ga.

The other 23 foreign students arrived in Memphis late Friday night, confused and tired. They said Hoever was simply trying to buy some breakfast.

Hammond City Attorney Gordon Causey said Hoever had "no identification, no passport and no visa" when arrested. The German said his papers were in his luggage which he had left on the bus.

MAJOR JOHN C. MORRISON said "the man could easily have been confused." He had no other comment.

Miss Fraser said the group arrived in McComb, Miss., after leaving Hammond, and a newsman asked if they were "freedom riders." "Some of our group didn't know what a freedom rider is," she said.

Hoever is touring the United States after serving as a camp counselor at a New Hampshire camp under the sponsorship of the Committee on Friendly Relations with Foreign Students.

Foreign Student Arrested In La. As A 'Sit-In'

Atlanta Daily World 9-8

Wed. 9-6-61

(NEW ORLEANS — (UPI) — A foreign student, arrested as a "freedom rider" in nearby Hammond La., said here Monday he meant to cause no trouble when he tried to eat in the Negro section of a bus station restaurant.

Atlanta, Ga.

Hammond officials reported Willi Heinrich Hoever, 30, of Issum, Germany, was arrested Friday and charged with peace disturbance after refusing to leave the Negro lunch room.

"It was not my intention to cause any trouble," Hoever told United Press International here.

"I am a guest in this country. I did not know I was breaking the law."

But Hammond Police Chief Robert W. Smith said Monday, "we didn't arrest him until he made it clear that he knew what he was doing."

Hoever was part of a group of foreign students touring the South He said the group continued without him to Memphis and Nashville Tenn. after his arrest in Hammond.

Smith said Hoever was released to Richard Pauliz of the German consulate in New Orleans pending his trail, which was set for 2 p.m. Tuesday in Hammond.

"I want only to get back with my group," Hoever said in a thick German accent. "I think they are in Nashville."

La. Supreme Court Upholds Convictions Of 4 Sit-Ins

The Louisiana State Supreme Court last Thursday upheld the conviction and sentence of four Congress of Racial Equality members for a sit-in demonstration September 17, 1960, at the lunch counter of McCrory's Store, 1005 Canal Street.

The high court, in an opinion by Associate Justice Frank W. Summers, upheld Criminal District Court Judge J. Bernard Cocke in convicting Sydney Langston Goldfinch, a former Tulane University student; Rudolph Lombard, CORE leader and former Xavier University student, Miss Oretha M. Castle, a student; and Cecil W. Carter, Jr., a student.

Each was fined $350 and sentenced to serve 60 days in the Parish Prison.

Their case will be appealed to higher courts, The Louisiana Weekly learned.

BULLETIN

An early appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court is plannned in the case of four CORE members whose conviction in the New Orleans Criminal Court was upheld last week by the Louisiana Supreme Court. The announcement was made Monday by Attorneys Robert Collins, Llois Elie, Nils Douglas and John P. Nelson, who represented the four.

PROTESTED "JIM CROW"

The charges grew out of the students' sit-in demonstration in protest against racially-segregated lunch counters in the Canal Street department store. The racially mixed group was refused service as they sat together, the "white" lunch counter was closed, and the manager ordered them to leave. Police arrived and arrested them.

Justice Summers' opionion said that the pertinent part of the 1960 state law they were charged with violating dealt with taking temporary possession of any parts of a place of business after the person in charge ordered them to leave.

DENIES "RACE" ISSUE

ORETHA CASTLE

The opinion said, in part: "We are, therefore, called upon to determine whether the enactment of the questioned statute is such action by the state as is prohibited by the 14th Amendment...A reading of the statute readily discloses that it makes no reference to any class, race or group and applies to all persons alike regardless of race.

"The right to prevent a disturbance on one's private property and the right to summon enforcement officers to protect that right are rights which every proprietor has whenever he refuses to deal with a customer for any reason, and the exercise of these rights does not render his action to be a conspiracy between the proprietor and the peace officer.

"NO JIM CROW LAW"

"There is presently no anti-discrimination statute in Louisiana nor is there any legislation compelling the segregation of races in restaurants or places where food is served.

"...There being no law of this state, statutory or decisional, requiring segregation of races in restaurants or places where food is served, the contention that the action of the officials here is discriminatory is not well-founded for that action is not authorized by state law..."

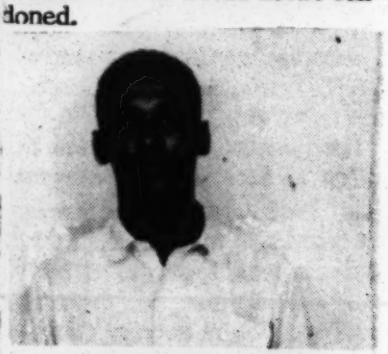
BOYCOTT STILL ON

The opinion, therefore, places the sole responsibility for the segregation of races on lunch counters upon the various stores since it points out that state law does not require such separation.

The boycott of the McCrory and Woolworth Stores which maintain segregated eating facilities has been in effect since last September.

National offices of the stores, however, were quoted early this year as saying racial segregation at lunch counters in their branch stores would not be condoned.

CECIL W. CARTER, JR.



RUDOLPH LOMBARD

SYDNEY GOLDFINCH

Petition Is Addressed To Top Officials

The Louisiana Weekly New Orleans, La.

Two local groups which have been involved in picketing and sit-ins at white businesses in the New Orleans area have petitioned the mayor and governor of Louisiana to refrain from arresting demonstrators until the recently passed state laws can be interpreted.

The joint resolution Tuesday was released by the Consumers League of Greater New Orleans and the Congress on Racial Equality. The action followed a mass-protest demonstration staged by the two organizations on last Saturday when members picketed a St. Claude street super market, later marched on the City Hall and Louisiana Supreme Court buildings' doorsteps where petitions were read.

New Orleans, La.

According to Rev. Avery Alexander, CLOGNO's president, copies of the resolution were sent in addition to Mayor deLesseps Morrison and Gov. Jimmie Davis, to the President of the United States, Senators Ellender and Long, the attorney general of the United States, the majority and minority leaders of both the House of Representatives and Senate.

The resolution pointed out that the U. S. Supreme Court has declared that "any laws which supress peaceful and non-violent picketing are contrary to the constitution of the United States," in a direct action on acts 60, 70 and 80 passed during the regular session of the state legislature in 1960.

According to the resolution many New Orleans' citizens have been arrested and jailed by the authority contained in the statutes which makes picketing "illegal by groups other than labor unions."

The resolution further demands that all be done to prevent police abuse and that arresting be halted until the laws can be interpreted by the courts.

An earlier announced picketing again of Puglia's super market on St. Claude street Saturday was successfully carried out without a recurrence of the previous week's action when nine members of the Consumers League were arrested by state police.

Rev. Alexander stated that the police were very helpful to the group and that Major McNamara and Capt. Trosclair of the New Orleans Police Department, gave instructions to the group on "how to lawfully picket."

New Orleans, La.

"The following steps were given us," said Rev. Alexander, then naming them as, to keep marching and moving; refrain from conversing with anyone; to walk on the strip side of the sidewalk; do not block driveways; not to molest the customers and to keep the number of spectators down to a minimum.

Rev. Alexander retraced last Saturday's actions stating that a protest prayer service was conducted first on the stairs approaching the City Hall in the Civic Center. Rudolph Lombard, president of CORE, presided and prayer was asked by Rev. Alexander. Lombard read the petition, and the marchers moved to the State Supreme Court building where a like ceremony was conducted, with prayer being offered by the Rev. John B. Morris, pastor, First Free Mission Baptist Church. Rev. Louis Landrum dismissed the group.

Some 200 participated in the several protest demonstrations. A pre-screening and orientation meeting was held at St. James African Methodist Episcopal Church, 222 No. Roman Street and the group marched, while being escorted and shadowed continuously by policemen, to the Civic Center area. On completion of reading of the petition the band of freedom seeking men and women moved in procession to Canal Street, marching in protest around the square of Canal, No. Rampart, Iberville and Burgundy streets.

ELEVEN CORE MEMBERS QUESTIONED

Some eleven members of CORE engaged in picketing Saturday on Canal Street, Woolsworth and McCrory's stores, were apprehended and taken to the First District headquarters for questioning. Arrested were four whites, including Sydney Goldfinch who was questioned for several hours and released, Jill Finsten, Coral Gables, Fla., a Newcomb College freshman; Barbara Brent and Bob Heller, a Tulane University student.

Jerome Smith, Nathaniel Harry, David Dennis, Clarence McCall, A. D. Moore, Jr., Oscar Jones and Patricia Adams were the seven Negro students arrested. All were questioned and later released.

The Sit-Ins: Court to Rule

The Sunday Star
Washington, D.C.

The Supreme Court on Monday agreed to review Baton Rouge sit-in convictions and ruled invalid a series of Louisiana school segregation laws.

Jan 3-26-61

In fighting against discrimination and for what he believed were his rights, the Negro last year came upon a new tactic. Some saw in it shades of Gandhi's "passive resistance."

This, of course, was the lunch-counter sit-in. A group of Negroes, often college students, walk into a drugstore, for example, sit down at a whites-only lunch counter and refuse to budge unless they are served.

In many cases, the proprietors or managers simply closed down the food service. In some cases, they called the police who arrested the demonstrators.

The tactic has proved surprisingly effective in some areas. It has won agreements from many establishments which ended discrimination. It has spurred peaceful interracial talks which obtained the same results.

Legal Questions

But leaving aside the moral question, are the sit-ins legal? What about the question of property rights and the matters of trespassing and disturbing the peace?

Last Monday, the Supreme Court decided to review three cases involving 15 or more Negro lunch-counter demonstrators who refused to leave a Baton Rouge store and were arrested and convicted of disturbing the peace.

The court, which in recent years has rarely ruled against Negroes in racial cases, may shed some light on the above questions before it adjourns for the summer.

The invalidation of laws enacted by the State of Louisiana in its efforts to bar integration of the public schools in New Orleans was expected.

The decision was foreshadowed by the court when, last December 12, it denied a request that it stay a ruling by a three-judge Federal Court which knocked out the State statutes.

It appears that integration of Louisiana public schools is legally assured. But it may be a long, long time before the actual accomplishment on a State-wide basis.

SEPTEMBER
ALEXANDRIA- SIT -IN C O R E PICKETS

CAUSE POLICE SIT-IN—Some 19 Negro members of the Congress of Racial Equality staged a sit-in outside the office of New Orleans Superintendent of Police Joseph Giariusso, to protest the beating, by police, of the above three white CORE members. The three white "Freedom Riders" were beaten by New Orleans police after they bucked the "traditional way of life" in the South. The 19 Negro CORE members then staged a sit-down strike at the superintendent's office. Four left, but the remaining 15 were arrested and booked with refusing to move on, holding an unlawful assembly, and vagrancy by loitering in a public place.

CORE Pickets 5 Restaurants In Alexandria

Alexandria, which narrowly averted sit-in demonstrations last year, saw its first racial demonstrations yesterday as 15 Negro and white members of the Congress of Racial Equality picketed five downtown restaurants.

Police said only two incidents occurred, when passers-by attempted to wrest a placard from one of the demonstrators, and when an onlooker loudly protested the pickets.

No arrests were made, police said.

Mayor Frank Mann said representatives of CORE met Friday with city officials to discuss the Alexandria law governing picketing. He said the demonstrators had notified police of the time and place of the picketing.

"Picketing Workshop"

The demonstrations were described as "a picketing workshop" by spokesmen for the CORE-sponsored Northern Virginia Action Institute.

The institute for the past two weeks has been holding instruction sessions for 35 students who paid $150 each to learn what was described as methods of non-violent action against racial discrimination.

Edward N. Blankenheim, 28, a CORE field secretary, said the picketing followed attempts at negotiations with each of the restaurants to lower race bars.

The city last year averted sit-in demonstrations when a mayor's bi-racial committee persuaded some restaurants and lunch counters to desegregate.

Where Pickets Were

The restaurants picketed yesterday were the 403, at 403 King street; the Feed Bag, at 429 King street; Shumans, at 516 King street, and the two Tom Thumb restaurants, at 524 and 724 King street.

Meanwhile, trustees of the Mount Vernon Unitarian Church, 1275 Fort Hunt road where CORE is holding its institute, have asked Fairfax County to delay enforcement of a zoning violation complaint.

Joseph J. Remington, chairman of the board of trustees, said he has asked the county to discuss the complaint that the church is violating the occupany provision of the zoning code.

The church trustees wrote to County Zoning Administrator William T. Mooreland: "We believe (your) concern with our activities raises the fundamental question of religious liberty. The logical extension of (your) action in our case would tend to restrict the freedom of all churches in Fairfax County."

In notifying the church of the zoning violations, Mr. Mooreland set a deadline for stopping the institute activities by 8 a.m. tomorrow.

38a 1961

LOUISIANA

AUGUST
NEW ORLEANS- SIT-INS
15 NEGROES ARRESTED ($100 BONDS)

Sitdown' Charge Nets $100 Bond For 15

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Municipal Judge Paul Garafalo Wednesday set $100 bonds for 15 Negroes who were arrested shortly after midnight for holding a "sitdown" demonstration outside Police Supt. Joseph Giarrusso's office.

But the 15 remained in jail pending disposition of three state charges which will be heard in criminal district court.

The demonstrators were arraigned in Judge Garafalo's court on charges of refusing to move on. The state charges consist of unlawful assembly, vagrancy by loitering in a public place and remaining in a place after being forbidden to stay.

Judge Garafalo continued the cases until the state charges are disposed of.

The demonstrators, who said they were members of the Congress of Racial Equality, said they were protesting the alleged beating of three "Freedom Riders" by New Orleans police prior to returning to Jackson, Miss., for appeal trials, were arrested in the predawn hours Aug. 13 after a disturbance was reported in the house where they stayed.

They were booked on vagrancy charges but the cases were tossed out in Municipal Court.

The three riders afterwards charged they had been beaten while in jail. Giarrusso denied the charges.

The CORE members gathered outside Giarrusso's office shortly before midnight and began singing hymns. Police told them the singing was interfering with operations of the nearby communications center and they were warned they would be arrested if they stayed.

Four Negroes left and after another warning, police arrested the 15.

38a 1961

LOUISIANA

SUPREME COURT
SIT-INS

Sit-Ins Reaching Supreme Court

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.
Sun. 3-26-61
p4

Appeals To Be Heard Next Fall In Conviction Of 16 In Louisiana

From Wire Dispatches

Washington, March 20.—The Supreme Court agreed Monday to consider its first cases arising from the Negro sit-in campaign in the South.

The court granted review of the convictions of 16 Negro students for sitting at "white" lunch counters in Baton Rouge, La. All drew sentences of four months in jail, with three months to be suspended on payment of $100 fines and costs.

According to the evidence, the proprietors did not seek to have the demonstrators prosecuted as trespassers. The police had the idea of arresting them, and they were prosecuted for breach of the peace.

Say Freedoms Violated

The students were convicted of violating a Louisiana statute that makes it a crime to act "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public." The state courts found that the continued presence of the Negroes at the lunch counters might have led to such a disturbance.

In their Supreme Court petition, the students said their convictions unconstitutionally violated their right to freedom of expression and were not supported by any actual evidence of breach of the peace.

The State, responding, said there was no doubt that the managers and owners of the concerns did not want the demonstrators there and that the demonstration could have led to violence.

Refused Earlier Appeal

As for freedom of expression, the State said the students could have expressed themselves in newspapers, radio or television, but had no right to do so by going on private property where they were not wanted.

Only two weeks ago, the Supreme Court refused to hear a sit-in-case appeal filed by eight Negroes and four white persons arrested during sit-in demonstrations in Tallahassee, Fla.

Rejects Integration Delay

The court gave no explanation, but some observers speculated it may have been because the 12 had not carried their case to Florida's highest courts before appealing to the Supreme Court.

In another case, Louisiana's various efforts to block the desegregation of schools in New Orleans were held unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court issued a court two-line order that said simply that lower-court decisions were affirmed. There was no dissent.

The main effect Monday's decision may have is to end some of the difficulties the New Orleans School Board has been having in borrowing money until tax receipts come in.

The New Orleans banks have taken the position that they cannot risk extending credit to the School Board until the State's several attempts to put the board out of business have been brought to a legal dead end. Apparently that happened Monday.

The Supreme Court action Monday affirmed three separate decisions of a three-judge Federal District Court in New Orleans.

Rejects Reporter's Appeal

The first, made August 27, enjoined Governor Jimmie H. Davis from taking control of the New Orleans schools away from the School Board. The decision also struck down State laws making it a crime to supply public funds to integrated schools and empowering the governor to close integrated schools.

The second decision, made November 30, and the third, on December 21, dealt with a long series of statutes passed by the Louisiana Legislature in two special sessions. They, too, were enjoined as unconstitutional.

In another action Monday, the court rejected an appeal by Mrs. Vi Murphy, a reporter for the Colorado Springs Gazette-Telegram, who received a 30-day contempt sentence for refusing to disclose a news source to the Colorado Supreme Court.

Louisiana Sit-In Case Could Be Most Decisive

The Louisianr Weekly
New Orleans, La.
Sat. 3-18-61

WASHINGTON (ANP) - Court observers interested in a Supreme Court reaction in the sit-in demonstrations are anxiously awaiting the outcome of a sit-in case now before the high tribunal involving 17 Louisiana Negroes.

This case, unlike the Florida sit-in appeal denied by the high court last week, has run the full course in state courts. The Supreme Court has not yet said whether it will hear arguments in the Louisiana case.

The two-pronged issue involved -- which has been widely debated by lawyers across the nation in addition to those for and against sit-ons -- is chiefly this: Does the law dealing with trespass of "private" property outweigh the rights of one who enters a "public" facility as an invitee who may make purchases in one department but is denied service in another, in this case at the lunch counter.

Some southern store operators contend their businesses are private. Sit-in supporters, on the other hand, declare that these stores are open to transact business with the public and accept Negro patronage in all departments except the lunch counters.

The import of the action by the Supreme Court last week was not made clear. The court merely said it would not hear the appeal. Observers speculated the refusal may have been based, at least partially, on the fact that the case had not gone through Florida's highest courts. The appeal came to Washington from the circuit court for Leon county, which affirmed the municipal court.

The Tallahassee demonstrators were convicted under a city ordinance proscribing acts of disorderly conduct, breaches of the peace, and unlawful assembly.

They were convicted in Municipal Court in Tallahassee in connection with sit-in demonstrations at a Woolworth store Feb. 20 and March 12, last year. Each received a sentence of 60 days in jail or a $300 fine.

In New York, James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said he hoped the decision does not mean the court intends to avoid the issues raised by the sit-ins. Farmer's group organized the Tallahassee demonstrations.

On the negative side of the issue, as far as sit-in supporters are concerned, is the view by other observers that refusal to hear the Florida case by the Supreme Court could mean, in effect, that no important constitutional of civil rights was involved.

In their brief to the tribunal, the defendants asserted that their arrest was a violation of their right of free speech and their right of contract, meaning their liberty to do business with the restaurant. It is still uncertain at this point exactly why the court refused the appeal.

LOUISIANA SIT-IN CASE BEFORE COURT

Birmingham World p. 3

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Court observers interested in a Supreme Court reaction to the sit-in demonstrations are anxiously awaiting the outcome of a sit-in case now before the high tribunal involving 17 Louisiana Negroes.

This case, unlike the Florida sit-in appeal denied by the high court last week, has run the full course in state courts. The Supreme Court has not yet said whether it will hear arguments in the Louisiana case.

Birmingham, Ala.

The two-pronged issue involved—which has been widely debated by lawyers across the nation in addition to those for and against sit-ins—is chiefly this: Does the law dealing with trespass of "private" property outweigh the rights of one who enters a "public" facility as an invitee who may make purchases in one department but is denied service in another, in this case at the lunch counter.

Oct. 3-18-61

Some southern store operators contend their businesses are private. Sit-in supporters, on the other hand ,declare that these stores are open to transact business with the public and accept Negro patronage in all departments except the lunch counters.

The import of the action by the Supreme Court last week was not made clear. The court merely said it would not hear the appeal. Observers speculated the refusal may have been based, at least partially, on the fact that the case had not gone through Florida's highest courts. The appeal came to Washington from the circuit court for Leon county, which affirmed the municipal court.

The Tallahassee demonstrators were convicted under a city ordnance proscribing acts of disorderly conduct, breaches of the peace, and unlawful assembly.

They were convicted in Municipal Court in Tallahassee in connection with sit-in demonstration at a Woolworth store Feb. 20, and March 12, last year. Each received a sentence of 60 days in jail or a $300 fine.

In New York, James Farmer, natinoal director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said he hoped the decision does not mean the court intends to avoid the issues raised by the sit-ins. Farmer's group organized the Tallahassee demonstrations.

On the negative side of the issue, as far as sit-in supporters are concerned, is the view by other observers that refusal to hear the Florida case by the Supreme Court could mean, in effect, that no important constitutional of civil rights was involved.

In their brief to the tribunal, the defendants asserted that their arrest was a violation of their right of free speech and their right of contract, meaning their liberty to do business with the restaurant. It is still uncertain at this point exactly why the court refused the appeal.

At Hearing of Route 40 'Sit-ins'

Diner Owner Curses Negro

(Courier Press Service)

BALTIMORE — "Black bastard, just try and eat in my place."

These words spouted from the mouth of Thomas Doxanos, owner of the Double T Diner, as Percy Sutton, New York Branch President sauntered past during preliminary hearings involving the U. S. Route 40 "sit-ins" of four NAACP officials and Courier reporter Evelyn Cunningham.

All five pleaded "not guilty," and requested a jury trial at the hearings which were continued.

● The case came about a week ago last Friday, when Mr. Sutton, Miss Cunningham, Rev. Robert Sherard, pastor of the Congregational Church and president of the Corona-East Elmhurst, (N. Y.) NAACP branch; Paul Dennis of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Dr. Eugene Reed, president of the New York State Conferences of Branches sought service at Brooks' Williamsburg Inn Restaurant and Motel in the White Marsh area along U. S. Route 40.

Present at the hearings into the case were Atty. David Jaffe, personal observer of the New York State Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz and Miss Cunningham's personal lawyer; Atty. Gloris E. A. Toote, assistant counsel of the Workmen's Conpensation Board at Fullerton Magistrates Court.

BALTIMORE NAACP lawyers Juanita Jackson Mitchell and Paul Cockrell wired Mr. Lefkowitz, thanking him for his support and welcoming "any assistance from New York State in protecting a New York resident."

● Miss Cunningham also wired Gov. Nelson Rockefeller seeking his "aid and cooperation as a New York resident."

When arrested last week, Miss Cunningham wrote, "When they fingerprinted me. I think I died a little. From here on out, dying a little will be easy."

SITTIN' IN—Four of the five "Freedom Riders" who attempted a sit-in demonstration at a diner, outside Baltimore on Route 40, are shown being escorted to jail. Courier columnist Evelyn Cunningham (not shown), was among those arrested. They were testing restaurant segregation policies along the controversial route.

At the church, a meeting in Baltimore's cornerstone, Julius W. Hobson, eastern director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), told those who were going to demonstrate for integration "Your demonstration in Baltimore today is timely."

Rev. Logan Kearse, leader of the demonstrators, said the NAACP had 22 lawyers to provide legal service. He added cash and property had been pledged for bonds, if necessary.

About a third of the persons assembled in the church were white. They came from Howard and Catholic universities in Washington, and Morgan State and Goucher colleges in Baltimore. There appeared to be a scattering of others from Pennsylvania and New York.

* * *

JUST BEFORE the meeting ended, Kearse read from a telegram which he said was being sent to Gov. J. Millard Tawes:

"We recognize and appreciate the promised integration of some of the public facilities on U. S. route 40. However, we cannot be satisfied with anything less than the total elimination of all racial injustice in our society."

Friday, CORE's Hobson said every effort would be made to prevent sit-ins Saturday along U.S. 40 or "anywhere in Maryland, because we have a commitment to the state."

* * *

THE ANTI-INTEGRATION group is going ahead with plans to have a caravan of more than 100 automobiles carry signs along U.S. 40 proclaiming the right of restaurant owners to serve whomever they please.

U.S. 40 Sit-Ins Off; Baltimore Is Aim

Anti-Integration Group Counters With Right-of-Choice Demonstration

BALTIMORE, Nov. 11 (AP)—More than 200 white and Negro students Saturday called off plans for sit-in demonstrations along U.S. 40, and determined instead to cover the city of Baltimore in protesting segregation in public places.

Meanwhile, a group of segregationists—the Maryland Petition Committee — assembled on the highway just outside Baltimore for a projected peaceful parade upholding the right of restaurant owners to serve only those they pleased.

500 Riders hit Route 40 diners

BALTIMORE

Below freezing temperatures failed on Saturday to dim the ardor of an estimated 500 Freedom Riders who staged a series of anti-discrimination demonstrations along Route 40.

Fourteen persons were arrested as a result of the demmonstrations which were staged at both Maryland and Delaware restaurants along the highway.

The demonstrations were backed by the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) and among the persons arrested was the editor of the CORE magazine, James Peck.

Mr. Peck is one of the original Freedom Riders. In May he was brutally beaten in Birmingham, Ala. Fifty-seven stitches were required to close his wounds.

THE SATURDAY demonstrations got underway late in the morning, after the protestors attended a briefing session at Baltimore's Enon Baptist Church.

There they were told to remain seated in the places visited until the trepass law was read to them, and then to leave and picket the establishment.

In Maryland, police have evolved a technique for handing sit-in demonstrations that calls for the reading of a law against trepassing, as a prelude to arrest.

If the person does not leave a place after the law is read, then the owner may swear out a warrant for that person's arrest.

AFTER THE SATURDAY briefing session, the riders left the church in cars with about five persons to each car.

Meanwhile, other demonstrators gathered at the southern end of the New Jersey Turnpike, for the ride on the highway leading from the Delaware Memorial Bridge to Baltimore.

At most of the places visited in Delaware, the demonstrators were served, even though several of the managers admitted that they would resume their policy of segregation as soon as the demonstrators left.

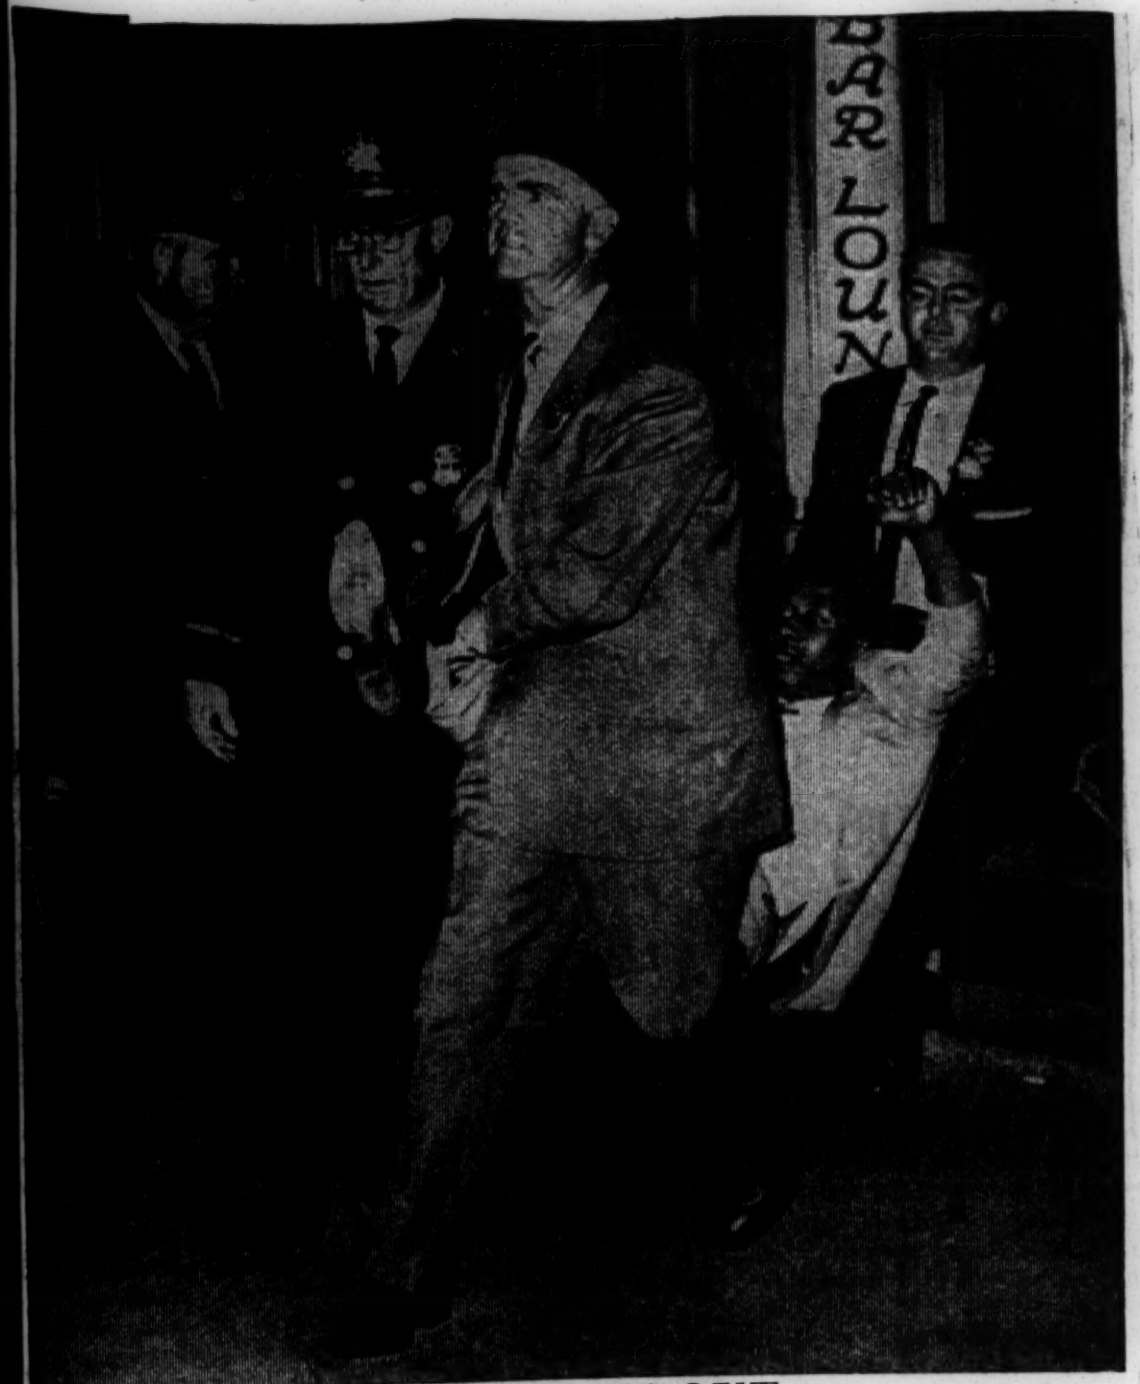
Even on the northern part of the highway in Maryland, restaurant owners served the groups, but it was in the southern part of the highway that discrimination took over.

TROUBLE ERUPTED at Aberdeen, a small town, which depends for its existance on the nearby Aberdeen Proving Ground, a military establishment.

NOVEMBER
SIT-INS



THIS WAY OUT

An unidentified demonstrator is helped from Hooper's Restaurant in Baltimore by police detectives. The man was one of 38 persons arrested as several hundred persons staged "sit-ins" throughout the city in protest to racial segregation by restaurants. All but nine of those arrested were freed Sunday after posting collateral.—AP Wirephoto

9 Desegregation Leaders Arrested After 'Sit-Down'

BALTIMORE (AP) — Nine desegregation leaders, deliberately courting arrest, were taken into custody Saturday in a downtown restaurant which does not serve Negroes.

All were charged with violating Maryland's trespass law.

The nine pushed their way through revolving doors of Hooper's Restaurant on West Fayette Street and sat down. Others did not make it and stood outside with picket signs.

Police at Annapolis disclosed the arrest of 10 others, both white and Negro, late in the day after they attempted to enter a restaurant near the state capitol. The sergeant on duty identified them as one from Ohio, one from Illinois and the others from Philadelphia.

PASTOR HELD

Among those held was the Rev. Logan Kearse, pastor of the Cornerstone Baptist Church and chairman of a group of more than 300 persons who spread all over the city seeking admission to restaurants.

The others held were William Hanson, White, of Cincinnati, Ohio, a veteran of "freedom rides" in Mississippi where he served a jail term; Miss Barbara Jacobs, 23, white, employe of the city welfare department; William Shaw, Baltimore real estate man; Miss Felice Loveless, 19, of Howard University, Washington; chairman of the Student Non-Violent Committee at Howard University; George A. Hacklay, Rockville, Md. and Carol Louise Johnson, Baltimore.

The arrests came after assistant manager John Richardsn read the trespass law. He and manager Robert Harper had tried to hold the revolving doors but were unable to do so.

The manager offered to serve the white demonstrators but Hanson said: "We don't feel in conscience we can eat if these others are not served."

'LITTLE ITALY'

Others of the demonstrating group contented themselves with merely picketing establishments where they were denied service.

There were no serious disturbances at any of the 40 establishments visited by squads of five or six whites and Negroes.

The biggest gathering was in the "Little Italy" section, where a crowd of between 300 and 400 stood around for awhile watching the picketing.

The demonstration was in place of a possible parade along U.S. Route 40, a Washington-New York highway frequently used by African diplomats.

The Congress of Racial Equality two days ago called off a mass "freedom ride" because about 35 restaurants along the highway had agreed to desegregate. Some of Saturday's demonstrators were members of CORE, but acting as individuals.

The groups mainly came from Maryland and the District of Columbia. They were joined after noon by about 60 from New York and Philadelphia.

Hagerstown Eyed As Target for Sit-In

Washington Post D 2B
Wed 11-15-61

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14 (AP) Leaders of a massive demonstration scheduled for next Saturday against segregated Maryland restaurants say the sit-ins "may extend as far away as Hagerstown."

A committee planning the antisegregation drive met in Baltimore last night and afterward scheduled another meeting for Wednesday ngiht. A final, general meeting of demonstrators was set for Saturday morning.

Washington, D.C.

The Rev. Logan Kearse, leader of the group, said, "We intend to cover equally as many restaurants as last Saturday and possible many more."

Last Saturday, hundreds of Negroes and whites staged demonstrations in Baltimore and Annapolis. Thirty-three were arrested.

Three, all women from Philadelphia, declined bond and were jailed.

As a result of last week's demonstrations and with the threat o fan even larger turnout this week, officers of the Maryland Restaurant Association announced a special meeting of the board for Thursday to consider withdrawing support of a State-wide equal accommodations bill. The meeting was called Monday night afte ra general membership meeting. The board announced last Oct. 17 it would support passage of the equal accommodatilnoges —fil5ssasli hipE dations legislation.

There was no mention of the demonstration during the association meeting, though several restaurateurs complained that they were being "walked on" by the demonstrators. .

Gordon Carey, field director for the Congress of Racial Equality, said the national organization would give its full support to the Saturday demonstration.

Mr. Kearse asid his group would not demonstrate on Rte. 40 northeast of Baltimore, in accordance with a previous announcement by CORE to stay off that highway until at least Nov. 22.

Five Freed on Bail After Maryland Sit-In

The Christian Science Monitor p. 6 Sat 10-28-61

By the Ass

Baltimore

Five New York Negroes were arrested Friday night after staging a sit-in demonstration at a U.S. Route 40 restaurant about seven miles from downtown Baltimore.

Baltimore county police charged four men and a woman with trespassing at the Double-T Diner. The accused were released in $103 bond each and a hearing was scheduled in magistrate's court at Fullerton for 7 p.m. next Friday.

The Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) had previously announced that a "freedom ride" would be held Nov. 11 at the heavily traveled highway which runs northeast of the city toward the Delaware line.

But a man who telephoned the Associated Press after the incident, and described himself as a spokesman for the demonstrators, said Friday night's sit-in was not connected with CORE.

The caller, who identified himself as Louis Lomax, an author from Jamaica, N.Y., said he and his wife and the five arrested were in the party which entered the Double-T and took seats at the counter.

Trespass Law Read

Mr. and Mrs. Lomax left after diner owner Thomas Doxanos read them the trespass law, but the other five remained and were arrested.

Police identified those arrested as Paul Dennis, New Rochelle, N.Y.; The Rev. Robert D. Sherrard, East Elmhurst, N.Y.; Percy E. Sutton, New York City; Dr. Eugene Reed, Amityville, N.Y., and Mrs. Evelyn Haynes, New York City.

Mr. Lomax said the group earlier tried to stop at the Williamsburg Inn, several miles farther to the northeast, but the owner had closed the restaurant.

"He apparently had been tipped that we were on the way," Mr. Lomax said.

Mr. Lomax said the group was on the way to Washington, D.C., to attend a human rights conference, and had told cameramen and newsmen in New York that "if we get hungry along the way, we'll stop for food."

Newsmen on Hand

Newsmen apparently trailed the demonstrators, and a waitress at the Double-T said cameramen took photographs as the demonstrators entered.

Mr. Lomax said it was agreed in advance that if there was any likelihood of arrest, only five would remain on the scene. Mr. Lomax was to leave and "give the story to the press."

He commended the arresting officers as being "kind, working with great dispatch, and models of law and order."

Mr. Lomax said all those in the party were members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, but that the sit-in was not promoted by the NAACP. He described Dr. Reed as president of the New York State Conference of NAACP Branches.

Bail was arranged, Mr. Lomax said, through Mrs. Juanita Jackson Mitchell of the Baltimore NAACP.

Maryland state police, county police, and town police as far away as Aberdeen, about 30 miles northeast of Baltimore, had been alerted several hours before the demonstration occurred.

Five Negroes Arrested In Sit-In at U.S. 40 Cafe

The Evening Star Washington D.C. Sat 10-28-61

BALTIMORE, Oct. 28 (AP).—Five New York Negroes were arrested last night after staging a sit-in demonstration at a U. S. 40 restaurant about seven miles from downtown Baltimore.

Baltimore County police charged four men and a woman with trespassing at the Double-T Diner. The accused were released in $103 bond each and a hearing was scheduled in Magistrate's Court at Fullerton for 7 p.m. next Friday.

The Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) had previously announced that a freedom ride would be held November 11 along the heavily traveled highway which runs northeast of the city toward the Delaware line.

But a man who telephoned the Associated Press after the incident, and described himself as a spokesman for the demonstrators, said last night's sit-in was not connected with CORE.

Jamaica Author

The caller, who identified himself as Louis Lomax, an author from Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y., said he and his wife and the five arrested were in the party which entered the Double-T and took seats at the counter.

Mr. and Mrs. Lomax left after diner owner Thomas Doxanos read them the trespass law, but the other five remained and were arrested.

Police identified those arrested as Paul Dennis, 40, New Rochell, N. Y.; the Rev. Robert D. Sherrard, 39, East Elmhurst, N. Y.; Percy E. Sutton, 40, New York City; Dr. Eugene Reed, 38, Amityville, N. Y., and Mrs. Evelyn Haynes, 44, New York City.

Mr. Lomax said the group earlier tried to stop at another inn, several miles further to the northeast, but the owner had closed the restaurant.

"He apparently had been tipped that we were on the way," Mr. Lomax said.

Mr. Lomax said the group was on the way to Washington to attend a human rights conference today, and had told cameramen and newsmen in New York "if we get hungry along the way, we'll stop for food."

Trailed by Newsmen

Newsmen apparently trailed the demonstrators, and a waitress at the Double-T said cameramen took photographs as the demonstrators entered.

Mr. Lomax said it was agreed in advance that if there was any likelihood of arrest, only five would remain on the scene.

He commended the arresting officers as being "kind, working with great dispatch, and models of law and order."

Mr. Lomax said all those in the party were members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, but that the sit-in was not promoted by the NAACP. He described Dr. Reed as president of the New York State conference of NAACP branches.

Bail was arranged, Mr. Lomax said, through Mrs. Juanita Jackson Mitchell, of the Baltimore NAACP.

Negroes told to call off ride plan Nov. 11

The Baltimore News Sun 10-29-61

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 28 (AP)—Gov. J. Millard Tawes sternly advised leaders of a scheduled "freedom ride" demonstration today that he will not yield to their ultimatum and "the people of this state are going to resent" it.

The governor spoke out in response to a statement earlier this week that the Nov. 11 demonstration along Route 40 would be canceled only if the Maryland Legislature was called into special session beforehand to consider a statewide law against restaurant discrimination.

"In effect, they have offered me and members of the General Assembly an alternative," the governor stated.

"Call a special session in November or face the consequences. Under no circumstances can the governor of Maryland or the General Assembly yield to such an ultimatum."

Baltimore News

Call off urged

THE GOVERNOR'S second statement directed to the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) to call off the Veterans' Day demonstration was distributed in advance of another incident in which five Negroes were refused food in a Route 40 restaurant.

Sun 10-29-61

Five members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People were arrested Friday night at a diner outside of Baltimore.

Leaders of CORE have announced between 750 and 1,000 persons will participate in the demonstration two weeks from today.

Tawes asserted he does not "question the right of this organization to embark on such a program. I do question the wisdom of such action."

He said he has endorsed the principle of open public accommodations throughout Maryland and added, "We are nearing a solution to this problem."

"Thus, the entrance of the freedom riders can serve no other purpose but disrupt an already delicate situation," Tawes stated.

Representatives of the State Department, with the announced support of President Kennedy, have been trying for weeks to quietly convince owners of restaurants on Route 40 to discontinue discrimination.

Negroes Ask High Court Rule On Maryland Sit-In Decision

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Five Negroes who conducted a carousel "sit-in" at an amusement park near Washington, D.C. plan to ask the Supreme Court to review their trespassing convictions, upheld by the Maryland Court of Appeals.

Claude B. Kahn of Chevy Chase, Md., counsel for the defendants, said Wednesday he is preparing a petition to take the case before the Supreme Court.

"We feel that this case presents as good a pattern of facts as any of the sit-in cases," Kahn said.

FIVE ARRESTED

The Negroes — William L. Griffin, Marvous Saunders, Michael Proctor, Cecil T. Washington Jr. and Gwendolyn Green — were arrested at the privately-operated Glen Echo amusement park in Montgomery County, Md. June 20, 1959. They refused to leave a carousel ride after being ordered to do so by a park guard.

The park was later opened to Negroes.

The Maryland court held last June 8 that they deliberately violated "a lawful policy of segregation" in the park.

At the same time, the high court reversed the convictions of three Negroes and two white persons arrested in a separate demonstration in a restaurant at the park. The court said the park policeman had no right to order them out of the restaurant, which was under separate lease. The demonstrators had not been ordered out by restaurant operators, although they had been refused service.

COURT APPEAL

That case is not involved in the appeal to the Supreme court.

Kahn said the appeal would be based primarily on constitutional issues, including the question of whether the state can assist the owner of a public establishment in enforcing a segregation policy.

The defendants were convicted of trespassing under a 1900 statute. The high court said the park owner "had a right to contract only with those persons it chose o deal with."

Rink arrests may set off 2nd sit-in conflagration in Montgomery County

The Afro-American p. 20 Sat. 10-28-61

Baltimore, Md.

By FRANK HUNT
WASHINGTON

"I think the whole thing is ridiculous. And unless the county council acts on behalf of all the citizens, this sort of absurdity will continue."

Mrs. Mary Williams, president of the Montgomery County branch of the NAACP bitterly deplored the arrest of five youths and a Rockville minister at a Rockville roller skating rink last week.

She noted that colored persons are allowed in the Congressional Plaza Rink only if they are with a white group.

"This is the sort of hypocrisy which marks race relations in this country," she added.

"Our county officials are crowing that race relations are good here, and everything is fine. And yet we run into discrimination at every turn," she decried.

* * *

THE DEMONSTRATION was in protest to the county council's inaction on appeals to passing a public accommodations law which would rule out segregation in places which cater to the public, according to Mrs. Williams. Montgomery County civil rights groups have been lobbying for such a law over the past year in a campaign largely marked by a rash of demonstrations during the summer of 1960 which resulted in the desegregation of Glen Echo Amusement Park and several restaurants and movie theatres in the area.

The County's Human Relations Council, set up at the height of the racial disturbances recently recommended that the County Council pass the much desired anti-discrimination law.

"THE COUNCIL maintains that it does not have the power to enforce an anti-discrimination order but they do have the power to be undemocratic," Mrs. Williams asserted, apparently referring to the county's power to arrest anti-discrimination demonstrators.

* * *

THE SKATING rink demonstration may spark a renewed campaign similar to the summer of '60, with repeated demonstrations against segregated public facilities in Montgomery County, according to informed sources.

THE DEMONSTRATORS arrested last week were Andell Gaunt, 18, 605 Douglas Ave., George Hackley, 26, 13 Martins Lane Rev. John D. Murdock, 42, pastor of the Clinton A.M.E. Zion Church, and three juvenile girls, all of Lincoln Park, Rockville, Md.

The juveniles were released in their parents' custody pending juvenile court action, while the three adults were released on $200 bond, pending a trial Monday, Oct. 23.

Rev. Murdock said when the group approached appeared at the entrance, the man in the enclosed ticket booth was apparently about to sell them tickets, when the manager of the place, Mrs. June Hutchinson appeared.

* * *

"NOW YOU folks had better get out and get out now because you are not going to enter this rink. We operate on a segregated policy," Rev. Murdock quoted Mrs. Hutchinson.

* * *

WHEN THE group refused to budge, a side door was opened to let in white patrons until county police arrived ten minutes later.

While they waited, Mrs. Hutchinson expressed sympathy for the demonstrators' cause, but maintained that "I have other people's money tied up in this business and I can't afford to lose it", the minister said.

Juries to Try 3 Negroes

The Washington Post

Three Negroes charged with trespassing at the Congressional Plaza Shopping Center skating rink chose yesterday to be tried by jury when they appeared in Montgomery County People's Court.

The three declined to leave the roller rink after they were refused tickets and were arrested.

Thurs. 10-24-61

They are: Andell Gaunt, 18, of 605 Douglas ave.; George Hackley, 26, of 13 Martins la., and the Rev. John D. Murdock, 42, rector of the Clinton A. M. E. Zion Church.

Three 16-year-old girls were also arrested. They will appear in Juvenile Court.

Washington Pc

The $200 bonds on each of the adults were continued pending their trial in Circuit Court.

County NAACP Plans Sit-Ins to Wipe Out Racial Barriers

By Alan L. Dessoff
Staff Reporter

Picketing and sit-in demonstrations are being considered by the Montgomery County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in its drive for a County anti-discrimination law.

Mary Y. Williams, chapter president, said she has seen no progress in the move to eliminate the racial barrier in public places.

"If nothing is done, picketing would be our only alternative. I'm very anxious to picket," she said.

In the meantime, she continued, the NAACP will meet Thursday night with the County's Human Relations Commission to discuss the problems of racial discrimination.

Under way now is a drive to collect petition signatures to present to the County Council in a call for action, Mrs. Williams said. She said the Council has not answered her request for a public hearing on an anti-discrimination ordinance.

4 Baltimore White Coeds Arrested On Sit-In Charge

BALTIMORE (AP)—Four Goucher College students and a companion who psent part of Friday night in jail on trespass charges stemming from a sit-in demonstration said Saturday that the restaurant manager never read them the prescribed trespass ordinance before their arrest.

All five of the demonstrators are white.

A spokesman for the coeds from the all-girl college said three of their companions were read the trespass ordinance and left the restaurant. The four arrested, however, were not read the ordinance, the spokesman said.

In a statement, the girls contended that the restaurant manager, David Klitenic, barred the entrance of the group until police arrived, at which time he allowed them to enter the Baltimore Country Restaurant, peaceably.

RAD ORDINANCE

Klitenic then read the trespass ordinance to a Negro companion with the girls,a nd he immediately left, the statement said. Another Negro and a white student at a separate table also were read the ordinance and

The restaurant manager then approached the table where three of the Goucher students were siting with a male companion and asked police to place them under arrest, the statement said.

The four asked that the respass ordinance be read to them, but Klitenic refused, according to the statement.

Another Goucher student was arrested as she approached the table where the four were sitting.

All were charged with disorderly conduct and released after posting collateral. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Monday.

Rockville Sit-in Case Dismissed

A tresspass charge against a Rockville Negro who staged a one man sit-in demonstration after he was ordered to leave a diner was dismissed yesterday by Montgomery County State's Attorney Leonard T. Kardy.

Edward A. Johnson, a bondsman of 900 North Stonestreet ave., was arrested April 5 at Stanley's Diner in Rockville. Police said he was denied service at the establishment and was asked to leave but remained at the counter.

Kardy said he discussed the matter with Johnson, his attorney, and Stanley Carver, owner of the diner, and all agreed to the dismissal of the charges.

The Montgomery County branch of the NAACP has referred to the incident in its campaign for a County anti-discrimination ordinance. The NAACP also has asked Rockville to adopt such a law.

Stage 'Sit-In' At Mich. Rink

Chicago Defender

BAY CITY, Mich. — (UPI) — A group of Negro youths is staging a "stand-in" demonstration at a roller skating rink here.

Chicago Sun-Times

1-(21-27)-61

The youths said the demonstration is to protest Monday night closing of the rink, Skateland.

P. 12

A year ago, a suit was filed in Circuit court charging Skateland with racial discrimination.

The suit was dropped when Skateland agreed to let Negroes use the rink on Monday nights.

The Rev. Obie Mathews said the rink now claims to be a private club and has been closed on Monday nights. Mathews, a Negro minister, said the "private club" claim is not substantiated.

38a 1961

MISSISSIPPI

AUGUST
JACKSON-
TEN NEGROES-SENTENCED TO FOUR MONTHS IN JAIL AND FINED $200 . .PARK SIT-INS

10 SENTENCED

Mixers Fined In Park Sit-In

Jackson News 8J
Sues 8-22-61
Jackson Miss

Municipal Judge James L. Spencer yesterday sentenced 10 Jackson Negroes to four months in jail and fined them $200 each as the result of three park sit-ins which he said they conducted to have "other people become irritated" and create an incident.

The 10 were arrested in three different groups at the municipal zoo and Livingston Park earlier this summer.

All were convicted of breach of the peace, the same law under which nearly 300 "freedom riders" have gone to jail here this summer.

Their attorney, Jack Young, immediately appealed the convictions to Hinds County court.

On trial in municipal court today were James M. Hopkins Jr., and Amos C. Brown, arrested June 9 in the zoo; Elihu Osby Jr., Maxine Jewell Gardner, Jimmie Dell Knight, and Charles Wesley Purnell, arrested in the zoo June 22; and Eddie Jean Thomas, Percy D. Thornton, Charles D. Brice, and Mary Lou Bell, arrested in a picnic area of Livington Park July 5.

All are Negro youths.

SOUGHT INCIDENT

Spencer said that testimony given by Police Capt. J. L. Ray concerning the arrests convinced him the Negroes went to the Park and the zoo "for the purpose of having other people become irritated and for the purpose, apparently, of creating an incident."

"To my knowledge the zoo has been used together by colored and white people for many years, apparently without incident."

Ray testified he arrested the 10, along with three juveniles, when they refused police orders to "move on" from officers who felt their presence "under the circumstances", would create a breach of peace. He said he arrested the first two groups while officers working under his supervision arrested the third.

He said he was sent to the park after the first group appeared in answer to a complaint to police. Another person in the zoo told a park policeman that if you can't move them we can," Ray said.

The second time, he testified, he told the group to leave the area and eight left.

MISCONDUCT REPORTED

Among those who refused, Ray continued, was one who shoved another child away from a water fountain and another couple who embraced as they sat on a park bench.

The third group was arrested in a picnic area of the adjacent Livingston Park, Ray testified.

38a 1961

MISSISSIPPI

SIT-IN
JACKSON, MISS.

STILL SUFFERING — W. R. Wren, left, 81, last week showed NAACP Field Secretary Medgar Evers his arm which was broken by Jackson, Miss., police. Mr. Wren was among a group peacefully assembled outside Jackson [illegible]se on March 29, awaiting outcome of trial of NAACP sit - in students. Police used clubs, blackjacks and attack dogs to disperse group. NAACP is sponsoring "Operation Mississippi" in an all out drive to end Mississippi bigotry.

38a 1961

MISSISSIPPI

JULY

JACKSON- SIT-IN

Promoting Sit-In Sends 2 To Jail

Negro Leaders Convicted Of Contributing To Delinquency Of Minor

By United Press International

JACKSON, Miss., July 18. — Two Negroes were found guilty Tuesday of contributing to the delinquency of a minor by persuading him to stage a lunch counter sit-in.

City Judge James Spencer gave James Luther Bevel, 24, and Bernard Lafayette, 20, the maximum penalty — six months in jail and $500 fines.

Their attorney, Jack Young, said no appeal bond would be posted pending their trial Wednesday on the same charge involving other minors.

Both College Students

Lafayette and Bevel, both college students at Nashville, were among the first group of so-called "Freedom Riders" to come here May 24. They served time in jail for breaching the peace and, after being freed on bond, went to work organizing demonstrations among local Negroes.

Bevel is a field director for the Congress of Racial Equality and Lafayette is a leader of the Jackson Non-Violent Movement.

Luvon Brown, 16-year-old Negro, testified that Lafayette and Bevel drove him on July 12 to Walgreen's drug store, where he was arrested for breach of the peace after he sat at a lunch counter and refused a police order to move on. He was convicted of a misdemeanor.

Spencer said Brown's testimony showed the defendants were instrumental in causing Brown to be arrested and convicted. The defendants did not testify.

Police Capt. J. L. Ray read a statement the boy made to police saying Lafayette and Bevel instructed hi mto refuse to move away from the lunch counter when ordered to do so by officers. But the boy refused to sign the statement.

Boy Testifies

In halting testimony, the boy said he first met the defendants at a meeting at Tougaloo College, where they were organizing a non-violence movement. He later agreed to participate.

On the day of his arrest, Brown said, Lafayette and Bevel first took him to the State Office Building, where he tried to buy a hamburger at a white-only concession stand. But the clerk told him, "It will be a long time before you get your hamburger," and ignored him.

He said they then took him and another boy to Walgreen's after giving him $1 to buy a tooth brush for use in jail. He bought the tooth brush and then sat at the counter.

TWO CONVICTED IN MISS. SIT-INS

Jackson Pair Is Fined, Sentenced to Jail

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — City Judge James Spencer convicted two Jackson Negroes Wednesday for breach of the peace in the city's first lunch counter sit-in.

Spencer fined them $200 and sentenced them to four months in jail.

The two were Luvaghn Brown, 16, and Jimmie Travis, 18.

In the sit-in trial, policeman L. D. Holiday testified he found the two Negroes seated at the white lunch counter of Walgreen's Drug Store Tuesday and ordered them to move. He said a crowd of people was gathering around the two and he felt it best to tell the Negroes to move on.

Holliday said he arrested the Negroes after they refused to obey a second order.

DO NOT TESTIFY

The two Negroes did not testify and their attorney, Carsie Hall, cross examined only briefly.

Meanwhile, 17 Los Angeles riders left by Greyhound bus and were expected to arrive in New Orleans Friday. Their trip to Jackson will be arranged by the sponsoring Congress of Racial Equality.

Meanwhile, Hinds county Sheriff J. R. Gilfoy clamped down on visitors to jailed riders, saying he would screen them carefully. In addition, he forbade the sending of medicines to rider prisoners on grounds they might contain harmful ingredients. Gilfoy said medical attention and medicines were available from the jail physician.

In New Orleans, Judge John Minor Wisdom of the United States fifth circuit court of appeals authorized rider Elizabeth Wyckoff of New York to appeal her case to his court.

ACCORD REACHED

Miss Wyckoff, 46-year-old free-lance writer, has attacked the constitutionality of the application of the breach of peace laws against riders seeking to desegregate transportation facilities.

Federal district Judge Sidney Mize of Gulfport refused to hear her appeal, saying she should have gone through the state courts first.

At Little Rock, Ark., "freedom riders" agreed Wednesday to stop their bus-riding assault through the South in exchange for suspended fines and jail sentences.

Municipal Judge Quinn Glover convicted the four on breach of peace charges and fined each $500 and gave them six month jail sentences, the maximum penalty. If they would go home, he said, he would suspend judgment.

After more than an hour of conferences, which included long-distance telephone calls, the riders accepted. They had planned to go on to New Orleans before their arrest Monday night.

They were released from jail pending their departure.

38a 1961

MISSISSIPPI

OCTOBER
McCOMB, MISS. SIT-IN ATTEMPT

White and 114 Negroes Held After Racial Melee

Atlanta Constitution p. 20
Thurs 10-5-61

McCOMB, Miss. (AP)—Police Chief George Guy said Wednesday 14 Negro students and one white were arrested during a scuffle on the steps of City Hall. They were protesting the dismissal from school of four Negroes arrested earlier in a sit-in attempt.

Guy said Pike County sheriff's deputies "had to take the white man away from the scene because they were fixing to kill him."

The police chief said two or three white men tried to pull him away and took punches at him before the officers got there.

A reporter asked Guy if officers arrested the white men attacking the Negro sympathizer.

"They left before we could get to them," Guy said.

The Congress of Racial Equality in Jackson identified the white man as Bob Zellener, 22, of Atlanta, a field worker for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee.

Guy said four Negro students were arrested about two months ago in a sit-in attempt at a Woolworth store and released Saturday on $1,000 bonds. He said they were in the group arrested Wednesday.

He identified them as Brenda Travis, Ike Lewis, Bob Talbert and Curtis Hays, all 18 or 19 years old.

Desk Sgt. J. L. Glover said, "They're the ones who started the whole thing. School officials wouldn't let them back in because of the way they had acted."

38a 1961

NOV.

MISSISSIPPI SIT-IN

Jail Two Illinois Men In Mississippi 'Sit-In'

WINONA, Miss. — (UPI) — Two Negroes traveling from Illinois to Mississippi were arrested after entering a cafe customarily used only by white bus passengers.

Freddie Moore and Nathaniel Moore, both of Alton, Ill., were jailed on breach of peace charges. They face a hearing in justice of the peace court Monday.

The Negroes, both about 20, got off a bus from Memphis at the Continental Trailways station and entered a cafe in the terminal, regarded by local law enforcement officers as the terminal's white waiting room.

Sheriff E. W. Patridge, who was in the cafe at the time, ordered them to "move on out." They refused, saying they wanted something to eat. He repeated the order, they refused and he arrested them.

Trailways employes recently removed all segregation signs from the terminal, including the cafe which is operated under separate management, to comply with an Interstate Commerce Commission order.

However, police and sheriff's officers stay in the cafe to direct passengers to segregated rooms.

Freddie Moore is Nathaniel Moore's uncle. They said they were en route to Indianola, Miss., to visit relatives. Both are natives of Indianola.

Trials Set for 119 in Race Protest

McCOMB, Miss., Oct. 5 (AP) Officers today untangled details of a mass demonstration by 118 Negroes and one white man and began preparation for trials in city and youth courts.

Police said a white man attacked the lone white demonstrator before officers rescued him. He was jailed for his own protection, they said.

City Judge Robert Brumfield will try 19 of the demonstrators over 18 years old and Judge Hansford L. Simmons will conduct youth court for 100 junior and senior high school pupils.

The pupils walked out of a school program yesterday in what they called a protest against officials for not allowing two sitin demonstrators to reenter school immediately.

School officials said Brenda Travis, 16, and Isaac Lewis, 20, were released from jail Saturday on $1000 cash bond. They were arrested after a sitin attempt at the McComb bus station Aug. 30.

When pupils at the school program asked if the two would be reinstated, officials said they could not make a decision until school records were checked.

The group walked out and, after a meeting, paraded on the streets with signs calling for equal rights.

The demonstration ended on the steps of City Hall when they started praying and making speeches. They were arrested for disturbing the peace and bond was set at $100 each.

The jailed white man, 22-year-old Bob Zellner of Atlanta, is a field worker for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

During the demonstration, officers also arrested the Rev. Donald Lloyd Gadson, 25, of Detroit, and Robert Moses, 26, of New York, both Negroes. Moses has been conducting voter registration schools in the McComb area and Gadson arrived Monday to help in the work.

114 Negroes Arrested In Near-Riot

McComb Pupils, One White Man Arouse Townspeople

McCOMB, Miss. (AP)—One hundred fourteen Negro pupils and one white man awaited the setting of a trial date today after a mass arrest following a demonstration on the City Hall steps.

The group—junior high and high school students—protested the expulsion from school of four Negroes arrested earlier in a chain store sit-in.

Police said a number of white men punched the lone white demonstrator before police rescued him. He was jailed "for his own protection," police said.

Demonstrators marched with signs through the streets of McComb—in southwest Mississippi—and made speeches outside the City Hall.

Police said they booked all of them on breach of peace charges. A hearing date may be set today.

Twenty-one pupils over 18 and the lone white man were held overnight in Pike County jail in nearby Magnolia, Sheriff Clyde Simmons said.

LED BY CORE MAN

The Congress of Racial Equality at Jackson identified the white man as Bob Zellener, 22, Atlanta, Ga. CORE said he is a field worker for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Police said most of the pupils ranged from 12 to 18 or 19.

Those under 18 were released in their parents' custody. They were to apear in juvenile court, police said.

Police desk Sgt. J. L. Glover said "everyone of them (the demonstrators) were carrying some kind of sign calling for equal rights, voting privileges and the like. You couldn't even read some of them.

"We didn't bother them while they were on the streets, but when they congregated on the steps of the City Hall, blocked the doors and started making speeches, we began arresting them."

Police Chief George Guy said sheriff's deputies had to spirit Zellener from the scene because an angry group of white men "were fixing to kill him."

Guy said two or three white men tried to pull him away and took punches at him before officers got there. Guy said the assailants left before deputies could arrest them.

ARRESTED AT WOOLWORTH

Guy said the four Negro students were arrested about two months ago in a sit-in attempt at a Woolworth store. They were released Saturday on $1,000 bonds. The four were in the group arrested Wednesday, he said.

Guy identified them as Brenda Travis, Ike Lewis, Bob Talbert and Curtis Hays, all 18 or 19.

"They're the ones who started the whole thing. School officials wouldn't let them back in because of the way they had acted."

The students issued a statement saying they would "suffer whatever punishment" the two expelled students would endure.

Police said most of the students go to Burgland High School. A few attend a Negro junior high school.

Negro Students In Protest March Are Suspended

MCCOMB, Miss. (AP) — Supt. R. S. Simpson said Friday 118 Negro students who participated in a protest march to City Hall have been suspended from school.

Simpson said the students would be readmitted Tuesray on a probation basis. They walked out of a school assembly program Wednesday in protest against school officials not immediately reinstating two Negro sit-in demonstrators.

The superintendent said Brenda Travis, 16, and Isac Lewis, 21, the sit-inners, would not be allowed to re-enter now. He said Lewis dropped out of school last year.

The two were arrested Aug. 30 for a sit-in attempt at the McComb bus station and were released last Saturday on $1,000 bonds.

Police announied the arrest of Curtis C. Bryant of CcComb, President of the Pike County branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor girl.

Rights Protesters Plead Innocent

By the Associated Press

McComb, Miss.

Nineteen demonstrators arrested for protesting the suspension of two Negro students remained in jail Friday with no indication bond would be posted.

The 18 Negroes and one white man—part of a group of 119 demonstrators arrested Wednesday afternoon for demonstrating on the steps of City Hall—will go on trial Oct. 23 on disturbing - the - peace charges. Ten of the group have also been charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The other 100 demonstrators, all juveniles, will go before Youth Court Judge Hansford L. Simmons at a later date.

Thursday the 19 were arraigned before City Judge Robert Brumfield. All pleaded innocent to the charges. Bond was set at $100 on the peace charge violation and $200 for the others.

Negro attorney Jack Young, who represented the 19, said no arrangements had been made for posting bond. All were returned to the Pike County jail at nearby Magnolia.

The McComb Enterprise-Journal, in an editorial written by publisher Oliver Emmerich, a moderate on the integration issue, said the Negro parents should use parental authority to curb the demonstrations.

He said the community and parents should not let such things happen under the influence of outside agitators. "The Negro people will accomplish nothing by resorting to such childlike tactics," he added.

Most of the demonstrators were from Burgland Junior and Senior High School, a modern brick-and-glass educational plant located near a new Negro housing project.

The students had walked out of a school assembly Wednesday, because they said officials would not allow Brenda Travis and Isaac Lewis, to re-enter school immediately.

Police had arrested the two Aug. 30 after a sit-in attempt at the McComb bus station. They were released last Saturday after posting $1,000 cash bonds.

Included among those arrested Wednesday was Robert Zellner, white field worker for the Student Nonviolent Co-ordinating Committee from Atlanta.

Two others, the Rev. Donald Lloyd Gadson of Detroit, Mich., and Robert Moses of New York, both Negroes, were also arrested. They were conducting voter registration schools in the McComb area.

McComb is a big railroad center and a hub of the Mississippi oil industry. It is located about 80 miles south of the state capitol at Jackson and has a population of 10,000.

In Atlanta, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Negro integration leader, said he has asked Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy for an immediate investigation of what he called "an apparent reign of terror" in McComb.

The Rev. Mr. King said he sent the telegram requesting a federal probe "as president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and as a concerned American citizen."

The leader of the Atlanta-based organization charged in the telegram that "intimidation and general harassment have become the order of the day" in McComb.

Negroes Jailed After Protest

High School Students March In McComb, 114 Arrested

From Our Press Services

M'COMB, Miss., Oct. 4. — A group of 114 Negro high school students marched on City Hall here Wednesday afternoon in protest to "discrimination" and were arrested after violence erupted on the steps.

Police said they began arresting the Negroes after one of the leaders was knocked dodn.

Desk Sgt. J. L. Clover said the students marched down city streets, and "every one of them was carrying some kind of sign calling for equal rights, voting privileges and the like. You couldn't even even read some of them.

"We didn't bother them while they were on the streets," he said, "but when they congregated on the steps of City Hall and started making speeches we began arresting them."

Sgt. Glover said every time a student would finish his speech, "we would arrest him. We did this until they were all arrested.

"They could have caused trouble."

The students were led by Bob Zellner of Montgomery, Ala., a white college student and a field secretary for the Student Non-Violent Co-Ordinating Committee.

A spokesman for the group claimed Zellner was choked by a white man on the city hall steps and a Negro co-worker, Bob Moses, was knocked down by a policeman and beaten by a white man.

Police Judge Robert Brumfield said charges of disturbing the peace would probably be placed against members of the group over 18 years of age. He said those under 18 were being paroled to their parents Wednesday night. Announcements were read on radio stations, advising that parents could pick up their children at the police station.

However, Charles Jones, a committee worker who was not in the group of demonstrators, said a "mass meeting" was to be held later Wednesday night and there are "indications that many adults would like to join the children in jail."

Jones said the students walked out of Burgland High School Wednesday afternoon and marched in two's, carrying placards, to City Hall.

He said at least one member of the group was threatened by a white man before reaching City Hall. At City Hall, he said, the students gathered at the front door and one mounted the steps and attempted to read a petition complaining about the treatment of Negroes. He was arrested, said Jones, as were others who followed suit.

Officials said they would not issue a statement on the matter until an investigation is completed. But they said the arrests were made after one of the group's leaders was knocked down. Officers said they did not know who struck the blow.

The students' walk-out was touched off, Jones said, by the refusal of school authorities to allow two students to register for the fall term.

They are Brenda Travis and Isaac Lewis, who were arrested last August during a bus station "sit-in" here.

The Student Non Violent Co-Ordinating Committee has been conducting a voted registration drive among Negroes here.

School Settles March Dispute

Sit In Students Allowed To Return To Class At McComb High

By DAVID D. CARPENTER

United Press International Staff

McCOMB, Miss., Oct. 5. — A spokesman for 116 Negro high school students who marched on city hall Wednesday said they reached agreement with school authorities Thursday.

Charles Jones, a field secretary for the Student Non-Violent Co-ordinating Committee, said th eauthorities had agreed to allow two students who participated in a sit-in here last August return to school.

The anti-segregation march, which brought on violence and the arrests of all 116 students, was touched off by refusal of school authorities to accept the two as students.

But Mr. Jones said a series of meetings Thursday morning resulted in acceptance of the two youths and he said no further demonstrations were planned.

Peace Charges Filed

Disturbing the peace charges were filed against al lthe students plus three adults, a Negro minister and two other field secretaries for the student non-violent movement, who were in the march.

Most of the students were released to the custody of their parents soon after their arrests and will be tried later in youth court.

But the adults and 16 students above the age of 18 were held and arraigned in Pike County Court here late Thusday—all on distubing the peace chages and nine on additional chages of contibting to the delinqency of minos.

All pleaded innocent and their trials were set for Oct. 23. Bonds were set at $300 for those who face two charges and at $100 for the others.

All were represented by Jack Young of Jackson, a Negro attorney who has represented most of the more than 300 protest riders to be arrested in Jackson—80 miles north of here—this year.

Jones said one of the non-violent workers in Wednesday's march, Robert Moses, age 26, of New York City, was beaten on City Hall steps. He said the other, white college student Bob Zellner, age 22, of Montgomery, Ala., was choked. Officers said they arrested the demonstrators after one of their leaders was knocked down and hundreds of white persons gathered at the scene.

The Negro minister who was arrested is Rev. Donald L. Gadson, age 25, of Detroit.

Conduct Vote Drive

Still another non-violent field secretary, Charles Sherrod, 22, of Virginia, was Thursday morning was jailed for resisting arrest. Police Chief George Guy said officers intended only to question Sherrod but that he resisted them and was arrested at the committee's local headquarters. Jones claimed that the officers knocked Sherrod down but Chief Guy denied this.

Chief Guy said charges of contributing to the delinquency of minors may be filed later against employes of the non-violent committee, and possibly others over 18. The committee has been conducting a drive to register Negroes to vote in this area.

Chief Guy said Zellner would have been killed Wednesday if officers had not moved in. Pike County Sheriff Clyde Simmons agreed. "We managed to get Zellner and Moses to jail before any real trouble started," Sheriff Simmons said.

Mayor C. H. Douglas commended law officers for their handling of the matter.

Isaac Lewis and Brenda Travis, the two students who were forst not allowed to register for classes, were arrested in a bus station sit-in here Aug. 30. They were jailed until Saturday, when they were freed under bond.

Pike County, which borders Louisiana to the south, has a population of about 19,500 whites and 15,500 Negroes.

MISSISSIPPI NAACP SIT-INS LIBRARY

800 Negroes Hear Read-In Try Praised

About 800 Negroes attended a meeting at the Lynch Street Masonic Temple last night and heard leaders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People praise read-in students, condemn local law enforcement officials, and urge a boycott of white merchants.

The NAACP has been conducting a telephone and house-to-house campaign for several weeks seeking to stimulate the boycott, but no evidence that it has been successful has been noted by merchants.

Clarence Mitchell of Washington and Julie Wright of Atlanta urged the boycott in addresses at a National Association for the Advancement of Colored People mass meeting in protest of arrest of nine Negro students from Tougaloo College for invading a white section of Jackson's Municipal Library.

Mitchell is director of the NAACP's Washington bureau and the Wright woman is the organization's Youth Activities Director for the southeast.

Dr. Aaron Henry of Clarksdale, Mississippi president of the NAACP, told the group he sent a telegram to President Kennedy which set off an FBI investigation of police dispersal of a crowd which gathered outside police headquarters during the trial of the nine Tougaloo students two days ago.

The students were convicted in city court of a breach of the peace, setting off the first segregation test case in the state.

The Justice Department had announced earlier it had called for an FBI investigation of the matter but said information indicated that reported violence at the demonstration was between a white man and a Negro and did not involve police.

"It appears that one Negro was beaten by a civilian—not a police officer," the Justice Department said. The civilian has been arrested and charged with assault and battery, the Justice Department's statement continued.

The department spokesman said he had received "assurances from responsible leaders in Jackson that no unnecessary force will be used."

Mitchell, in the address here, asked for additional financial aid from Negroes and blasted Mississippi Sovereignty Commission speaking trips into the North.

The Rev. John D. Mangram, chaplain at Tougaloo who served as master of ceremonies, warned Negroes against violence during integration attempts in Jackson.

Negro leaders presented five persons who claimed they had been injured while being dispersed from the police headquarters area and called for others to stand and announce they had been mistreated.

None stood.

15 Refused Service at Sikeston

SIKESTON, Mo. — Fifteen whit and Negro members of the Co gress of Racial Equality who r fused to leave a Sikeston restau rant after the management refuse to serve them together were a rested Saturday, April 22.

Most of the group were student of the University of Missouri, an Herman Thompson, a St. Loui teacher, was the spokesman. Th group also had a lawyer a n there was no disorder. Thompso said they are seeking out and tes ing discrimination against Negroe at eating facilities used by publi bus lines in Missouri. "We ar dedicated to exposing racial di crimination," he said. Thompso teaches at the integrated Sculli elementary school in St. Louis.

Wendell Caskey, manager of th Cyrus restaurant, signed a com plaint charging them with disturb ing the peace. Police Judge E. R Schrader required each member o the group to post a $12.50 bond and to appear before him Satu day, April 29.

Five of the Negro students fron M. U. were: Malvin L. West, o Kirkwood; Jim Masters, of Par ma; Joyce Wallace, of Kansa City; Justyne Williamson, of St Louis and Calvin Brooks of Lil bourn. Two other Negroes wer Vera Williams and Lizzie Jea Lee, of St. Louis.

Others in the group were: Tim Reilly, Molly Schlatman, Mary Lehmann, Susan Diehely, Don Brasher, Royce Bridges, and Mimi Levitt.

The group boarded a bus at East St. Louis, Ill., so they would be traveling in interstate commerce and Charles Oldham, a St. Louis, lawyer, followed the bus in an automobile.

They had no trouble getting service and food at Flat River and Cape Girardeau, but at the Sikeston restaurant there is a separate dining room for Negroes.

The 'Sit-In' Telecast On Awards Kick

"Sit-in," the special program which was presented as "NBC White Paper No. 2," is the only network film among the three winners of the Robert J. Flaherty Awards for "outstanding creative achievement" in documentary films.

The awards were announced by Yael Woll, director of the Institute of Film Techniques of the City College of New York, which sponsors the annual competition. The awards will be presented tonight at a screening of the winning films held in cooperation with Cinema 16 in New York.

"Sit-in," a study of the lunch-counter sit-in movement in Nashville, Tenn., presented Dec. 20, on the NBC-TV Network, was produced by Albert Wasserman.

NATIONAL NEWSPAPERS PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION CONTRIBUTED $1,000

NNPA Contributed To Bowdoin Fund For Expelled Sit-Ins

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Jan 2-26-61

Members of the National Newspapers Publishers Association have contributed $1,000 to a scholarship fund set up to bring to Bowdoin College Negro students who have been expelled from a southern college because of their sit-in-activities.

The scholarship fund is named in honor of John B. Russwurm the first Negro publisher and one of the first Negroes to graduate from an American college. Russwurm received his diploma from Bowdoin College, in Brunswick, Maine, in 1826.

In 1960 Bowdoin undergraduates established the Russwurm Scholarship Fund by initiating and successfully raising a fund of $2,000 from Bowdoin undergraduates, faculty, and residents of Brunswick. College officials agreed to guarantee the continuation of a Russwurm scholarship if the student does well academically in the first year at the school.

Longworth M. Quinn general manager of the Michigan Chronicle in Detroit and secretary of the N. N. P. A. said the publishers made individual contributions to the fund. The donation already has been presented to Dr. Leon A. Dickson, of Detroit, who is a graduate of Bowdoin.

Dickson said he had previously talked to Quinn about the work of the committee and other possible ways of improving to some extent relations between the races, especially in the south.

Dr Dickson added, "It was my feeling that, a continuation of a Negro student's education at Bowdoin would be a fine and noble gesture, the education of a [redacted] student at Bowdoin might well, in the years to come, do much improve interracial relations, because of the effects of the liberal New England and Bowdoin attitudes upon such a student who might otherwise never be exposed to a truly liberal environment."

A few weeks later, Quinn attended the annual convention of the National Newspapers Publishers Association in Chicago, where he introduced a resolution that the Russwurm Scholarship Committee be commended, that the N. N. P. A. make a donation of $1,000 to the committee, and that the association recommended that the committee be requested to explore the possibility of extending its aid toward helping to bring white southern students to Bowdoin for study. The resolution was unanimously approved by the convention.

Bowdoin College is one of the top ten small schools in the county. It was established in 1794 and has been closely associated with Negro history. The first Negroes to receive a college degree and a medical degree were graduates of Bowdoin.

Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote her powerful novel, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" while on the Bowdoin campus, where her husband was a professor. A famous Negro artic explorer, the late Mat Henson, who was a member of Admiral Perry's polar expedition, was also a Bowdoin graduate. So was Perry and General Otis Howard, founder of Howard University.

NATIONAL NEWSPAPERS PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION
CONTRIBUTES $1,000 FOR EXPELLED SIT-INNERS AT BOWDOIN

Gives Bowdoin $1,000 For Sit-In Students

Members of the National Newspaper Publishers Association have contributed $1,000 to a scholarship fund set up to bring to Bowdoin college Negro students who have been expelled from a southern college because of their sit-in activities.

The scholarship fund is named in honor of John B. Russwurm, the first Negro publisher and one of the first Negroes to graduate from an American college. Russwurm received his diploma from Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine, in 1826.

In 1960, Bowdoin undergraduates established the Russwurm Scholarship Fund by initiating and successfully raising a fund of $2,000 from Bowdoin undergraduates, faculty, and residents of Brunswick. College officials agreed to guarantee the continuation of a Russwurm scholarship if the student does well academically in the first year at the school.

DONATION GIVEN

Longworth M. Quinn, general manager of the Michigan Chronicle in Detroit and secretary of the N. N. P. A. said the publishers made individual contributions to the fund. The donation already has been presented to Dr. Leon A. Dickson, of Detroit, a graduate of Bowdoin.

Dickson said he had previously talked to Quinn about the work of the committee and other possible ways of improving relations between the races, especially in the south.

Dr. Dickson added, "It was my feeling that. although the continuation of the Negro student's education at Bowdoin would be a fine and noble gesture, the education of a white southern student at Bowdoin might well, in the years to come, do much to improve interracial relations because of the effects of the liberal New England and Bowdoin attitudes upon such a student who might otherwise never be exposed to a truly liberal environment."

TO INCLUDE WHITES

A few weeks later, Quinn attended the annual convention of the National Newspaper Publishers Association in Chicago, where he introduced a resolution that the Russwurm Scholarship Committee be commended, that the N. N. P. A. make a donation of $1,000 to the committee, and that the association recommend that the committee be requested to explore the possibility of extending its aid toward helping to bring white southern students to Bowdoin. The resolution was unanimously approved.

Bowdoin College is one of the top ten small schools in the country. It was established in 1794 and has been closely associated with Negro history. The first Negroes to receive a college degree and a medical degree were graduates of Bowdoin.

Harriett Beecher Stowe wrote her powerful novel, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" while on the Bowdoin campus, where her husband was a professor.

A famoue Negro arctic explorer, the late Mat Henson, who was a member of Admiral Perry's polar expedition, was also a Bowdoin graduate. So was Perry and General Otis Howard, founder of Howard University.

38a 1961

OCTOBER

NEW YORK

C O R E - SIT-IN

CORE Ends N.Y. Sit-In

NEW YORK (AP)—Six members of the Congress on Racial Equality ended an overnight sit-in at a Brooklyn realty office Thursday after a Negro widow and her three children were rented an apartment by the firm.

Margaret Chapman signed a lease for the apartment rental with Ira Management Corp.

The sit-in began Wednesday after, CORE officials charged the realty firm had refused to rent an apartment to Mrs. Chapman because of her race.

Dr. Robert Palmer, president of the Brooklyn branch of CORE, said Ira officials had stated earlier they would rent an apartment to another Negro but declined such an offer to Mrs. Chapman because she used "underhanded tactics."

Palmer denied the claim against Mrs. Chapman.

Ira officials wre unavailable for comment.

38a 1961

NORTH CArolina

SIT- IN
WHITE MAN STAGES BUST STATION SIT-IN

White Man Stages Bus Station Sit-In

CHAPEL HILL — (UPI) — A white man, who officers said refused to leave the "Negro" section of the Chapel Hill Bus Station grill last week was charged with trespassing.

A similar "sit - in" test attempt by Edward Orton Jr., of Durham, was staged Saturday night.

THE 25-YEAR-OLD Duke University student was said to have refused to leave after being requested to do so. Officers said they made the arrest on the complaint of Proprietor Leo Eliadis.

Police said Orton told them that he felt segregation was "morally wrong."

BOND of $100 was posted for a hearing in Chapel Hill Recorder's Court.

38a 1961

'Sit-Ins' To Widen Operations

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—The Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee closed its busy weekend agenda on a high vote calling for sit-iners across the South to extend their efforts into job discrimination, theater stand-ins, recreational facilities, and an all out voter registration campaign.

Also from the meeting held on the Johnson C. Smith University campus, came a unaminous decision t telegram a call to President Kennedy and Sargeant Shiver, newly appointed Peace Corps head, to place Fayette and Haywood Counties in Tennessee on the State Department roster for technical assistance when the progra n is initiated.

Among the high points on the committee's agenda was the stand-in demonstration staged last night before area theaters.

■

THE MEMBERS of the Coordinating Committee, Charles Sherrod, Virginia Union University, Richmond, Va., and James Hester, Johnson C. Smith University, Charlotte, N.C., were arrested and placed under a $50 bonds each for alleged trespassing violations.

Also, at the Charlotte theater, the cashier sold a ticket to Edward B. King Jr. of Atlanta, administrative secretary of the committee.

King entered the theater with his ticket and remained five minutes, until the assistant manager, Ed Pearce, revoked the ticket sale on the grounds that the management reserved the right to refuse service to anyone.

THE CHAIRMAN of the Committee, Charles F. McDew, Orangeburg, S.C., said that "we recognize the ever increasing need to broadn the base of the sit-in efforts and the Coordinating Committee is going on record as willing to participate whole-heartedly with each co- good faith to supply this broader base for massi vestudent nonviolent direct-action."

SIT-INS - LOUISIANA
GRADUATE FROM CENTRAL STATE COLLEGE

CSC To Graduate Expelled Sit-In Diploma to Peabody this month

The Afro-American
Life
Sat. 7-22-61
Baltimore Md

WILBERFORCE, Ohio — When a former "sit-in student who transferred to Central State College after being expelled from a Southern university for his part in the sit - in movement, marches down the aisle of Galloway Auditorium to receive his diploma, he will be fulfilling a life-long dream.

Charles Peabody, a tall, serious - minded young man from East St. Louis, Ill., was one of the group of students whose part in the Louisiana "sit-in" activities nearly cost him a college education.

He will be joined on the Central State Alumni list in February by two others from his former school, Janet Hoston of Monroe, La.; and Larry Nichols, of Shreveport, La.

* * *

BEHIND THEM will come an almost endless flow of civil rights fighters who have made Central State their harbor after experiencing dismissal from other institutions for their part in movements designed to tear down segregated patterns.

The list has reached the point where future graduation of these students will make very little news because it will have become a common occurrance.

Among its student body, Central State now has Elizabeth Ekford, one of the original "Little Rock Nine"; Delores Poindexter, also of Little Rock, whose NAACP activities there made it "expedient" that she complete her education in California;

Five students expelled from a Louisiana university for participating in sit-ins;

Three who met a similar fate at a Kentucky state-supported college; five "freedom riders"; and any number of students whose activities in breaking down barriers at local restaurants, theatres, amusement parks, parades, etc. have ranked them high on the list of fighters for freedom.

These are students of varied cultural and ethnic backgrounds who all believe in basic rights of men. They are, for the most part, not crusaders, but more aptly to be labeled "angry young men" (and women).

So, when a proud Charles Peabody walks down the Galloway Auditorium aisle Sunday, July 23, at 3:30 p.m., he will be only the first of a host of fighters whose entrance into the society outside of the Central State College walls will mean a strengthening of the civil rights force.

38a 1961

OKLAHOMA

NOVEMBER

OKLAHOMA CITY- SIT-IN S UI T

DAMAGE SUIT

Asks $50,000 of Restaurant Operator Seeking Injunction

Blue Blacks Dispel-

Dn. 11-10-61

The merits of sit-in demonstrations will undergo another area legal test soon as a result of two suits filed in Oklahoma district court Friday and Monday, both the outgrowth of recent sit-in demonstrations at the Pink Kitchen cafe, N.E. 23rd and Lottie.

Seeking an injunction to prevent any further sit-ins at his establishment by the NAACP is Merl G. Walker, operator of the Pink Kitchen, whose suit names the state NAACP president, E. Melvin Porter, local president, Mrs. Clara M. Luper, avowed leader and iniator of area demonstrations; Dr. Donald Yates, white ophthalmologist and ordained Disciples of Christ minister; Dr. James Cox, psychiatrist; the Rev. G. W. Pointer, presiding elder of the A. M. E. church, and a list of other veteran demonstrators.

Oklahoma City

Okla.

Walker's suit follows two Saturdays of sit-ins at his cafe which resulted in arrests of the adult members of the predominantly youthful group. In both arrests the adults were arrested outside of the establishment where all had been denied service. Charges brought were "disturbing the peace" and later "obstructing the sidewalks."

A subsequent trial of the first three arrested—A. Willie James, 528 E. Park; Cecil Williams, 936 S.E. 5th; and Billy Macom, 1129 N.E. 8th—saw charges dismissed against them in Municipal court by Judge Hillis Sanford and accounts for the second suit filed Monday which asks $50,000 from Walker for causing "false" arrests.

File Damage Suit

The damage suit was filed by Porter, counsel for the plaintiffs, and also one of the defendants named in the injunction suit. The three charge that Walker unlawfully and maliciously caused and procured a warrant to be issued by the police department for their apprehension and arrest.

They further charge that Walker caused them to be "forcibly imprisoned, kept, detained and restrained of their liberty in the city jail of said city for a period of three hours."

The plaintiffs further stated that the acts of Walker caused them a great deal of trouble and expense for their defense, compelling them to pay out a large sum of money for counsel fees and other related expenses. Physically they say they were subjected to "loss of health, nervous prostration and great mental and physical suffering by said imprisonment in jail, and by said arrest and prosecution."

On the other hand, Walked claims that sit-ins at his restaurant endangered lives and violated state fire regulations by blocking the front exit. He also cited 10 points where the demonstrators violated constitutional rights and state laws.

Plaintiffs also claimed violation of city and state laws by Walker in his refusal to serve them.

The recent injunction cited is the second such suit filed recently in an Oklahoma district court. The last suit brought against the NAACP by the Cravens Building saw the judge rule in favor of the plaintiff, but legal loopholes did not halt modified demonstrations at the location.

Last arrests made as a result of Pink Kitchen demonstrations saw Yates, Rev. Pointer, Mrs. Luper and Dr. Cox jailed with Yates spending a night in jail and being the central figure in a prayer service held the following Sunday in the jail halls. Charges against those four demonstrators were dismissed and bond money returned after Judge Sanford declined to prosecute for "lack of evidence."

Saturday Sit - In Arrests of 4 Bring Mammoth Prayer Service to City Jail

Pink Kitchen Restaurant Target for Second Week

By Abram Ross

Two ministers, one a presiding elder of the AME church, and two other cityans were arrested and some jailed around noon Saturday in front of the Pink Kitchen restaurant, N.E. 23rd and Lottie. They were Dr. Donald Yates, white intergrationist and initiator of the "picket and pray" movement; the Rev. G. W. Pointer, AME church presiding elder; Dr. James Cox jr., local psychiatrist; and Mrs. Clara Luper, NAACP youth leader.

At the time of the arrest the sit-in-demonstrators were standing on the sidewalk about fifteen feet from the entrance of the restaurant. The group admitted attempting to gain entrance, however, when refused they stood outside the restaurant for fifteen or twenty minutes at which time they were arrested and taken to the police station.

Obstructing Sidewalks

Upon arriving at the police station the demonstrators inquired as to what charge they were being held. After a thirty minute search, a city ordinance prohibiting obstruction of the sidewalks was found and filed against the group. Dr. Cox and Mrs. Luper were released on twenty-dollar bonds. Rev. Pointer, one of the most well-known Negro pastors of Oklahoma remained in jail until 4:00 p|m| at which time bond was posted. This is the first time a Presiding Elder has ever been arrested here.

Protest Ordinance

Dr. Yates, a controversial white integration leader protesting the ordinance, remained in jail until 8:00 Sunday morning. A fifty-car caravan meeting at a east side Rendezvous at 7:30 a.m. arrived at the police station before Dr. Yates release.

The group of one hundred persons, comprised of many denominations joined by Dr. Yates held a fifteen-minute prayer meeting inside the police station.

Dr. Yates read the scripture Galatians 5:1 "Stand fast therefore in the liberty where with Christ hath made us Free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of Bondage."

This prayer meeting was the first ever held at a police station here.

Hillis Sanford, Municipal Judge, presided over the trial which was held Monday, Oct. 30 at 8:00 a.m.

Rev. Pointer and Dr. Cox pleaded innocent to the charge. During the procedings the question arose if a person walks in and asks for service, is he violating a law?" The answer was: "No only if he stays after service is refused."

Judge Sanford postponed his decision until Saturday, Nov. 4, in order that he may have time to study the television films taken at the scene of the demonstration. The Clara Luper trial will be Saturday, Nov. 4 at 8:00 a.m. Attorney Melvin Porter and John Green represented the demonstrators.

The Pink Kitchen was the target of demonstrations for the second Saturday. Last Saturday the demonstrators gained entrance into the establishment, but were refused service by the owner who said he was closing and proceeded to wash the counter with "ammoniated" water when the group did not leave. Charges of distrubnig the peace against three men arrested that Saturday were dropped the following Monday in a Municipal court hearing.

LOCK-INN FOR SIT-INS — Two of Saturday's demonstrators arrested in front of the Pink Kitchen, 23rd and Lottie, peer through the bars of a city jail cell after they failed to make $20 bonds. They are the Rev. G. W. Pointer, presiding elder of the A.M.E. church; and Dr. Donald Yates, white integrationist and ordained minister, who protested the city ordinance used in the arrest. Jailed shortly after noon with two other demonstrators, the Rev. Mr. Pointer was released around 4 p.m. when bond was posted while Dr. Yates remained in jail overnight and lead the Oklahoma City Jail's first prayer meeting that morning when a group of 100 jammed the jail hallway. Other two arrested were Dr. James Cox, city psychiatrist, and Mrs. Clara Luper, NAACP youth director.

Sit-In Drama Set For Saturday Night

"Sit Down, Chillun, Sit Down," will be presented Saturday night, April 29, at Woodson school, 500 N. High. The time is 8 p.m.

"Sit Down, Chillun, Sit Down" is one of the most challenging stories of all time. It features Ruth Lythcott as Barbara Whittaker, Cecil Williams as Mr. Preston, El Centro Coffey as Dr. Liverspoon, and a strong supporting cast including Glendale Brown, Wayne Chandler jr., Troy Rogers, Barbara Collins, Carolyn House and 50 other members of the Sit-In family. Tickets are on sale at the Randolph Drug Store.

38a 1961

SOUTH CAROLINA

BENEDICT COLLEGE STUDENT INJURED
SIT-INS

Benedict Student Stabber Knifed By White Man

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(ANP)—A Benedict college student, Lennie Glover, was stabbed at a white lunch counter here last week, marking what is apparently the first time a sit-in demonstrator has been injured by a deadly weapon in this state.

The youth's doctor said an exploratory operation revealed some vital organs were punctured, and there was severe loss of blood.

The white man who plunged a knife into the student at a Woolworth's store disappeared into the downtown crowd and was the object of an immediate and intensive police search.

Demonstrators have been attacked before but there have been no known reports of weapons being used. However, Miss Mae F. Moultrie, a student at Morris college, Sumter, S. C., was injured in Sumter recently, when a policeman pushed her face down causing injuries to her chest, legs and he

Students Sit-In at Greenville Kress

GREENVILLE, S. C.—(ANP)—Greenville's first sit-in attempt since Nov. 28 took place last week at the lunch counter of the S. H. Kress Co. store.

The demonstration was orderly and there were no arrests. There were no sit-ins attempted at three other chain store lunch counters.

Between 25 and 30 young people, most of them of high school age and some in their 20s, gathered at the Kress store at 11 a.m. About a dozen went inside and a few found vacant seats. Manager C. W. West immediately ordered the counter lights put out and the counter closed.

The students stayed in the area and went back to the counter when it was reopened. The lights were turned out and the counter closed for the second time. Shortly afterward, the counter re-opened. This time every counter stool was occupied by a white person.

Negro Students Demonstrate In Rock Hill

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP)—Negro students from Friendship College demonstrated at two variety stores here Wednesday.

Three students paraded in front of Woolworth's and McCrory's stores carrying signs.

About a half-dozen students took seats at the white lunch counters in Woolworth's but were not served during their hour to an hour and a half occupancy.

On three occasions a smaller group of Negro students took seats at McCrory's lunch counter but departed each time immediately on request of store personnel.

300 Negroes Form Parade At Sumter

SUMTER, S.C. (AP) —Negro demonstrators and police scuffled on Sumter's main street Wednesday before a parade of 300 anti-segrationists was disbanded.

The Negro students formed on the Morris College campus about six blocks from the heart of Sumter's business district and began their march to town using sidewalks on both sides of the street.

Police Chief E. E. McIntosh advisedt he students over a loud speaker to disband and return to their campus. Several of the students in the vanguard ignored the advice and police moved forward to arrest them.

Robert Berryhill, areporter for the Sumter Item, said he saw no blows struck, but that police were forced to wrestle the five demonstrators, including a woman teacher from the college, into waiting patrol cars.

The demonstration heightened tension in this city of 20,000 which had its second serious demonstration within two days. Three Morris College students were arrested during sit-in demonstrations Tuesday. A television cameraman, who filmed the bodily ejection of two of the demonstrators from a drug store, was charged with breacho f the peace and will face trial Monday. Facing a similar charge is the pilotw ho flew the cameraman here.

Morris College, a four-year Baptist-supported school, is located on U.S. 15 six blocks from town. The students formed for their march shortly after noon, but moved only two blocks when Chief McIntosh advised them to return.

Several in the front ranks ignored the warning, but with the arrest oft hose in the front, the others disbanded.

Attested were Clifford Grady Sumner of Waycross, Ga., Abraham Kennedy of Sumter, and David Rayon Jr., of Marion all charged with breach of the peace; Joshua Prieleau of Russellville and Alma Gregg of Washingtonville, N.Y., both charged with breach of the peace and resisting arrest. Bond was set at $100 for each charge.

Officers said Sumner had been arrested previously in a lunch counter sit-in. Miss Gregg was described as a young teacher at the college.

A. F. Finney, a Sumter Negro lawyer, posted bond for Miss Gregg. Bond for the others was expected to be posted later Wednesday.

This is contrary to recent practices of Negro demonstrators who have a "Jail, no bail" slogan and remain in jail by choice rather than post bond."

Trial for the three arrested Tuesday and the five arrested Wednesday was set for 2:30 p.m., Feb. 21. The two white men will be tried Feb. 20.

George Carras, a cameraman for station WSOC-TV in Charlotte, N.C., said his station was tipped by telephone of yesterday's demonstration. Carras and his pilot was arrested when they photographed the demonstration.

Berryhill said there were television cameramen on hand today who apparently had been tipped to the demonstration.

Negro Sit-In Attempt Stopped

BY UP INTERNATIONAL

Police broke up an attempted march on Sumter, S. C., yesterday by 300 Negro students protesting segregation and eight additional Negro demonstrators were arrested in Atlanta—filling the local jail to capacity.

Sheriff Ralph T. Grimes ordered cots, double-deck beds, mattresses and blankets to take care of the expected overflow at Atlanta's Fulton County jail and warned the Negroes there was no possibility of stalemating arrests.

Grimes said there was almost unlimited space available in other jails throughout Georgia, adding that other sheriffs "will be glad to help, I'm sure."

Seventy-eight Negro sit-in demonstrators, arrested in recent weeks, currently are behind bars. They have announced their intention to remain in jail to dramatize their fight for integration and have made no attempt to raise the $100 bond each under which they are held.

All eight arrested today were ministers. Seven were Negroes and one was believed to be white. They were taken into custody when they refused to leave a lunch counter at a downtown train station when asked to do so.

Their action was regarded as indication that adult Negroes would take a more active role in the integration fight in the future.

The Rev. Martin Luther King was scheduled to speak last night at a mass meeting called for the purpose of making plans for future adult support of students now in jail.

The students who participated in the Sumter demonstration gathered on the campus of Morris College about noon and started a five-block march to the heart of the city. Police halted the marchers after they had gone about two blocks and arrested about five of them.

Jail Officials Thwart Mob

York County Demonstration By Negroes Set Down By Statement

By The Associated Press

YORK, S.C., Feb. 12.—State and county officials met about 500 Negro demonstrators at the York County prison farm Sunday and told them "the security of the county jail and county prison will be protected."

The officials then laid down in a statement the ground rules which took some of the steam out of the demonstration.

The statement was prompted by an influx of young Negroes from across the South to focus attention on the imprisonment of several members of their race for law violations during anti-segregation protests.

Authorities had expected 2,000 Negroes to congregate in the Rock Hill-York area for the Lincoln birthday anniversary rally.

500 Demonstrator

About 500 demonstrators proceeded to the York County Prison Farm in a motorcade to hearten the imprisoned Negro students. Officials let only members of the prisoners' families enter the prison, and then in groups of 10 each.

The visit was quiet and no placards were displayed. Prison officials barred parking from the immediate area of the camp, so many of the cars were parked some distance away and the demonstrators walked single file along the edge of the road to the camp.

State circuit solicitor (prosecutor) George Coleman met the group and read to them this joint statement from South Carolina and York County officials:

"It has been extensively advertised through the news media and otherwise that a motorcade transporting several hundred demonstrators would converge on the York County Prison and the York County Jail today. It was the careful and considerate opinion of the state, county and municipal law enforcement officials and those charged with the responsibility for the security of the prisoners . . . that such a situation would constitute a security problem and could momentarily resolve itself into a serious emergency.

"In view of this potential, the responsible state and county officials have promulgated rules to safeguard this situation.

"The demonstrators will be advised that for the foregoing reasons no large group of unidentified persons will be allowed to congregate on the prison or jail premises in close proximity to the security area.

"The State Highway Patrol will enforce all existing highway traffic regulations and laws.

"Each prisoner will be permitted to have only the number of visitors during visiting hours as is considered consistent with the safety and security of the prison system.

To Be Effective

"These rules and regulations are to be effective as concerns the anticipated demonstrators today, but shall be applicable to any other group consisting of large numbers of persons who undertake to come on the prison premises.

"The security of the county jail and county prison will be protected."

Confined to the prison camp are 11 male Negro students, including nine from Friendship Junior College at nearby Rock Hill and two Negro youths from colleges outside of South Carolina. All were convicted of trespassing at a variety store lunch counter and jailed, by their own choice, in lieu of appeal bond. The two non-resident students were arrested and convicted after a "sympathy" demonstration for the nine convicted earlier.

Sit-Ins Called Legal

Free Choice Is Violated Court Told

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) —The State Supreme Court was told Monday the law should not interfere with sit-in demonstrators.

This argument was made by attorneys for 26 Morris College students appealing their convictions for March, 1960, sit-ins at three Sumter places having segregated lunch counters.

By making the arrests at a variety store and two drug stores, attorney Donald Sampson of Greenville told the court, "The state interfered in the free choice of the vendee and the vendor."

Trespass, he said, was not involved. The state charged conspiracy to breach the peace. Each student was given 30 days or a $100 fine. Appeals to the State Circuit Court failed.

State Circuit Solicitor R. Kirk McLeod of Sumter explained that trespass was not charged because after the arrests it was impossible to determine which students had been in which store.

"Tensions and feelings in Sumter were high," he said, when the students staged the sit-ins.

"These young Negroes did not seek service," McLeod said. "They went in and read the Bible."

"They never had time to seek service," defense attorney Lincoln Jenkins of Coumbia declared, "they were arrested."

"The Negroes refused to leave the stores when requested," Assistant Attorney General Everett Brandon told the court. "The rights of property owners are paramount."

The court took the appeal under advisement.

Negro Stabbed During Sit-In, Attacker Flees

By the Associated Press

A white man stabbed a Negro yesterday during a sit-in at a segregated lunch counter in Columbia, S. C., where a recent wave of demonstrations has resulted in disorders and arrests.

The unidentified white man melted away in the crowd and the Negro, Lennie Glover of Adah, Pa., a student at Benedict College, was taken to a hospital in critical condition.

The white man asked Mr. Glover, "Are you having any fun?" just before stabbing him in the ribs, officers said.

Talk Canceled

In New York, John Ciardi, poetry editor of the Saturday Review and a member fo the Rutgers University faculty, said he had been canceled out as a speaker at the Alabama Education Association convention in Birmingham next week.

At Birmingham, a White citizens Council chapter distributed letters protesting Mr. Ciardi's scheduled appearance and inclosing a photostatic copy of an article entitled "Jim Crow is Treason." The council said it was written by Mr. Ciardi.

James A. Jordon, a Negro member of the Pittsburgh City Council, said he refused to eat in the University Club's main dining room after a question was raised whether he should be served. Club officials declined comment.

Negro Applies

At Savannah, Ga., Marine Corpl. Alfred Owens, 26, became the first Negro to apply for admission at State-supported Armstrong Junior College. He is a native of Savannah and is stationed at Parris Island, S. C., 32 miles from Savannah.

In Charleston, S. C., Roman Catholic parents called off a meeting to discuss opposition to planned desegregation of parochial schools.

The reason apparently was the attention the proposed meeting attracted, as well as a statement by Bishop Paul J. Hallinan that "Catholics who take part in meetings called to oppose the teaching of the church do so in contempt of the church's authority."

NAACP Asks Easter Boycott

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People urged Negroes Friday to boycott segregated Southern department stores during the Easter season.

The Rev. I. Dequincy Newman, South Carolina field secretary of the NAACP, told Negroes in this embattled community to begin a "nothing new for Easter" drive immediately.

Mrs. Ruby Hurley of Atlanta, NAACP regional secretary, said the drive might quickly spread throughout the rest of the South.

Newman called the move to shun the traditional Easter finery "the beginning of the big push" when asked if this would be the final, all-out effort to crush South Carolina's segregation laws.

However he refused to list any other measures.

"Why should we continue to give our money to those who support the laws which make us second-class citizens in the South," asked Mrs. Hurley.

"It's absolutely necessary for the Negroes in South Carolina to combine their efforts to utilize their economic resources in a more sensible way," she added.

Neither NAACP official would offer a guess as to the potential effectiveness of a boycott in curtailing retail trading. No figures were available on a similar boycott instituted last Christmas by the group.

Newman said the NAACP would support any integration attempt at the segregated state university in September. However, he said he could not say if such an attempt was being planned.

One white University of South Carolina student and 188 Negroes arrested here Thursday following an anti-segregation demonstration at the state Capitol were released Friday on $50 bonds. Newman said he could not say if the NAACP put up the $9,450.

Sit-Iner Now Road Gang Vet

ROCK HILL, S. C. — Back in jail went Willie Massey after little over a week ot freedom. Massey who just completed a thirty-day road gang sentence for sitting in was arrested on a CORE picket line.

Arrested with Massey were four girls: Macie Giles, 18; Patsy Sampson, 18; Thelma Davis, 19; and Jacqueline Henry, 18. The five CORE members began picketing the Tollison and Neal Drug Store at 12:30. They were arrested by Lieutenant Thomas of the Rock Hill police just a few moments later.

The five have been charged with breach of the peace. They have thus far refused to accept bond of $100 each which has been offered by the CORE national office. No date has been set for the trial, announced Atty. Ernest A. Finney, jr. Other Friendship Junior College students sent Massey assurances that: "You won't be returning to the chain gang alone."

In South Carolina—

Bill would stretch terms for sit-ins

Anti-segregation demonstrators could get five years in prison or $5000 in fines under a bill being considered by the South Carolina Legislature.

Rep. George Campsen of Charleston said he wants the law on the books by the time the National Civil War Centennial Commission meets in Charleston April 12.

"There seems to be an awful lot of tension over this centennial observance," Campsen told the state House of Representatives.

Meanwhile, the South Carolina Centennial Commission divorced itself from the national group. In a terse statement yesterday, the state commission said its commemorative program will not be "in any way connected with the fourth national assembly of the National Civil War Centennial body."

THE STATE GROUP said the re-enactment of the firing on Fort Sumter, the bombardment that launched the war, will go on as scheduled the night of April 12 in Charleston harbor. It also expressed the hope members of the national commission "will find time to witness and enjoy some of the activities."

New Jersey, Massachusetts and other states had announced they would not attend the assembly because a Negro commission member from New Jersey could not stay in the segregated hotel chosen as headquarters. The site was changed to the non-segregated U. S. Naval Station and the states said they would attend.

Police at Jackson, Miss., kept an eye on a large crowd of white persons and Negroes who gathered outside the city court building where nine Negro college students were fined $100 each and given 30-day suspended jail sentences for a sit-in in a white library.

A federal judge at Memphis, Tenn., refused the U. S. Justice Department's demand for a hearing on a request to order 15 white landlords to renew dealings with Negro sharecroppers. The Justice Department said it would appeal. The case concerns Haywood County Negroes who the Justice Department claims were prevented from farming after they registered to vote.

A GEORGIA Grand Jury branded bomber of Negro homes as "ill in their minds or possessed of such cowardly attributes that they merit the condemnation of all good citizens."

The Cobb County Grand Jury at Marietta, near Atlanta, said it didn't want anyone to think failure to track down the guilty parites meant the jury was giving tacit approval to the unknown bombers.

Also in Georgia, a leader of a Savannah high school boycott said he had failed in two attempts to reach President Kennedy to ask him to investigate the firing of a Negro principal. He was referred to Georgia State School Supt. Claude Purcell, said 17-year-old Benjamin Clark.

Negro leaders claim Alflorence Cheatham was dismissed as principal of Sol Johnson High because he participated in a drive to register Negro voters.

38a 1961

SOUTH CAROLINA

SEPT.
COLUMBIA- SIT-INS
COURT REVERSES CONVICTIONS

Precedent Set in Unanimous South Carolina Ruling

The Courier ✓ B 3 Sat 9-2-61

Court Reverses Sit-ins' Convictions

Pittsburgh Pa.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—The S. C. Supreme Court, in a precedent shattering ruling on sit-in cases thus far handled in state courts, unanimously reversed convictions of 26 Moris College student sit-ins at Sumter in March.

The top court agreed with NAACP defense attorneys that the charges against the students, who had made sit-in protests in two variety and one drug stores, were "entirely too general" in a warrant alleging that the defendants were arrested for "conspiring to breach the peace." The Supreme Court said:

● "All that can be found in the warrent is the designation of the offense by name which is a mere legal conclusion. No facts constituting the alleged offense are stated."

The decision went on to state that under breach of peace laws specification as to the type of offense, supported by proof, is necessary to comply with arrests, trials and convictions.

■

NAACP'S CHIEF of state counsel, Atty. Matthew J. Perry, told The Courier the ruling was the first apparent victory in this state for sit-in activity.

He ventured no opinion, however, as to likely further action, saying: "I'd like to read the court's rulings in its order first."

He was, however, obviously pleased with the ruling, which may be a guide to others of more than 900 cases involving sit-ins and other segregation demonstration protests to come up on appeals this fall.

■

OTHER LEGAL sources said state could, defects of its warrants now in contention, try to amend the warrants, necessary if new trials ordered by the top court are held.

However, should the state so attempt, defense lawyers would have better than average chance to meet this challenge under the "double jeopardy" rule of American courts, the rule which does not permit the accused to be tried more than once for an offense unless there has been a mistrial (incomplete trial).

38a 1961

SOUTH CAROLINA

SIT-INS

C O R E LEADERS CONVICTED

Convict CORE Leaders In S.C.

Chicago Defender

SUMTER, S. C. — Thirteen CORE leaders were convicted of various "crimes" in Sumter Recorder's court last week.

All of the students were fined $100 by Judge R a y m o n Schwartz. Notices of appeal were filed by attorney Ernest A. Finney, jr. $200 appeal bond for the students was posted by CORE.

Three—Ivor Moore, Newman K. Harris, and Eddie Drummond—were convicted of breach of the peace for sitting-in at and S. H. Kress lunch counter on Feb. 10.

CORE leader Mae Frances Moultrie was in Community Hospital for ten days after being thrown to the ground by local police.

Nine other CORE members were convicted of parading without a permit. The parading consisted of walling downtown to participate in the sit-ins. One other student, Joshua Prielieu, was also convicted of resisting arrest.

Finney challenged the convictions as a violation of the first amendment to the U. S. Constitution which guarantees freeddom of speech and assembly.

38a 1961

SOUTH CAROLINA

NAACP SUPPORTS
SIT -INS

NAACP Supports Sit-Ins In S.C.

Chicago Defender

Chicago Ill.

COLUMBIA, S. C. — NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins this week pledged the "full resources" of the association to its South Carolina state conference.

5-25-31-61

Mass arrests (192), the stabbing of an NAACP student leader during a sit-in, exorbitant bonds and unusual legal charges, have made it plain that this state is becoming a civil rights storm center.

Wilkins told J. Arthur Brown, state conference president and David Carter, NAACP youth leader, that "South Carolina's unwarranted arrest of peaceful demonstrators once more gives world 'round documentation to painful indignities visited on its Negro citizens."

Carter was arrested and placed under $5,000 bond, which was later reduced to $3,000. NAACP youth leader James Edwards, jr., was placed under $5,000 bond, later reduced to $2,500.

38a 1961

SOUTH CAROLINA

SIT- INS
ORANGEBURG COUNTY TEACHERS ASSN.

County Teachers Group

Hot Battle Over 'Endorsement' of Carolina Sit-Ins

The Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat. 7-6 P17

ORANGEBURG, S. C.—A resolution, "unanimously" adopted by the Orangeburg County Teachers Association two weeks ago supporting "sit-in" demonstrations by students at S. C. State and Claflin Colleges flared into a sizzling issue during the past week.

Copies of the unsigned statement, bearing simply the name of the association were distributed to the press.

Shortly afterwards, charges on the authenticity of the document enlivened the city and county.

■

PRO-SEGREGATIONIST Richard Rhame, a local white broadcaster, announced that Lee M. Tyler, president of the association, had denied that the statement had unanimous approval of teachers in the organization.

Two persons, Mrs. Gloria Rackley and Napoleon Ford, requested and were given time on the station Rhame works for to reply to the Rhame-Tyler assertion.

Rhame announced at the time that Mr. Tyler would also be presented to state publicly what the radio man said had been told him by the teacher official. However, Mr. Tyler did not broadcast a statement at the time announced.

There the issue hung when schools took holiday vacations.

■

THE TEACHERS had specifically denounced the mass arrests of some 400 college students early in 1960 during a demonstration against segregated facilities.

The students were herded into an open compound. Scores of them were doused with a fire hose and fined $15 or 30 days by a magistrate.

A few weeks ago three young male students were placed on the chaingang after convictions on sit-in charges. They were released when fines were paid a short time afterwards, however.

23 Negroes Are Fined in Nashville For Staging Police Station Sit-Down

P.2 The Washington Post
Tues. 8-8-61

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 7 AP) — City Court Judge Andrew Doyle levied $10 fines today against 23 Negro men and women several hours after they were arrested in a sitdown demonstration at the police station.

Washington Post

Fines were suspended for five persons and a spokesman said the other 18 fines would be appealed to Circuit Court.

The group was arrested early today when they marched into the police station in protest of the arrest of several other Negroes Saturday night during a clash between white youths and antidiscrimination pickets at a supermarket.

Officers said the 23, charged with loitering in a public place, lay down on the floor of the station lobby and refused to move.

"They came in and took the police station over," a veteran sergeant said.

Spokesmen for the Negro demonstrators gave a different version. The Rev. L. C. Roberts said the students were sitting quietly in the lobby, refusing to leave when police turned off the lights, closed the rest rooms and shut off the water fountain.

Roberts said officers then arrested the Negroes.

23 NEGROES FINED IN NASHVILLE SIT-IN

The New York Times

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 7 (AP)—Twenty-three Negro men and women were fined $10 each today after a sit-down demonstration at the police station.

They were arrested early today when the marched into the police station in protest against the arrest of several other Negroes Saturday night, during a clash between white youths and anti-discrimination pickets at a supermarket.

P. 18 c

FERNDALE, Md., Aug. 7 (AP) —Three Philadelphia Negroes were fined $100 and costs each today after conviction on charges of disorderly conduct and assaulting a policeman.

The incident was touched off Sunday when a restaurant operator on Ritchie Highway, in Anne Arundel County, south of Baltimore, refused service to more than fifty Negroes who had stopped on their way from Philadelphia to a near-by beach.

New York Times
Tues. 8-8-61

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 7 (UPI) — "Freedom Lobbyists" ended the first week of a twenty-four-hour-a-day demonstration in the Capital today in a campaign against discrimination in housing.

They have vowed to continue non-violent action until the Legislature passes bills banning discrimination in housing.

---

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 7 (AP) —The state asked a special three-judge Federal Court today to postpone a desegregation suit until all railway and bus lines operating in Mississippi were made parties to the case.

The court postponed a decision.

Nashville Police Fine 23 In Sit-In

The Washington Post
appeal

Headquarters Site Of Vigil All Night As Protest After Picket Brawl

Tues. 8-8-61

By United Press International

NASHVILLE, Aug. 7.—Negro and white demonstrators who staged an all-night "sit-in" protest at police headquarters here were arrested Monday and fined in city court.

P. 17

The 20 Negroes and 3 whites were protesting what they called police brutality during a racial clash. They were arrested on charges of loitering about a public place.

"They were lying on the floor and cluttering up the place," a police officer said.

City Court Judge Andrew Doyle fined all $10 each when they came up in court later but suspended the fine of five who said they had tried to leave the police station when officers asked them to leave.

All-Night Vigil

The group began an all-night vigil at the police station Sunday night. The police station "sit-in" came after a mass meeting and a march by hundreds of hymn-singing Negroes to the police station.

The protest stemmed from an incident Saturday night when white and Negro pickets at a grocery store were attacked by white youths.

Police arrested 13 persons, 10 of them pickets. Negroes have been picketing a local grocery chain for some time, saying it should hire Negroes to work in stores in predominantly Negro neighborhoods.

Leroy Roberts, a spokesman for the Negroes, charged that police squad cars drove by the grocery store while the pickets were being attacked.

Two persons were injured in the Saturday night incident when eggs and ice were tossed at the pickets and whites attacked them with their fists.

Claims Beating

Matthew Walker, one of the pickets Saturday night, said he was beaten and kicked by police.

Trials of those arrested Saturday night had been scheduled for Monday but were put off until Thursday.

Diane Nash, a Negro integration leader who had been arrested but refused to make bond, made bond after the cases were postponed.

The trials were postponed at the request of the city attorney.

More Jailed In Sit-In At Nashville Station

Jackson Daily News
P.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Police arrested this morning 22 persons who last night were camping in the police station lobby awaiting the trial of persons who were arrested Saturday after violence erupted during the picketing of a chain grocery store.

The booking sergeant at the station said the 22 persons were charged with loitering about a public place. A white male and two white women were among the 22 arrested. The rest were Negro.

Mon. 8-7-61

"They were lying on the floor and cluttering up the place," said the booking sergeant.

Trial for the campers is set for 10 o'clock this morning.

The sit-out at the police station started Sunday afternoon after six white and seven Negro persons were arrested following violence at a picketing of a chain grocery store.

Jackson

The pickets claimed the store did not hire Negro help.

After the violence started, two of the pickets were injured by eggs, ice and fists thrown by enraged bystanders.

Police arrested several of the demonstrators and those that bombarded them, but more of the pickets demanded that they be arrested also.

Racial Unrest Seethes Across The Nation As Demonstrations Continue

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The father of a Chattanooga, Tenn., Negro stand-in demonstrator says his son's life has been threatened and a crude cross burned in their yard.

John D. Ricks told police the threat was made over the telephone Wednesday night and that the caller identified himself only as the "grand dragon of the KKK" —an apparent reference to the Ku Klux Klan.

Ricks quoted the caller as saying, "We are going to kill him (Willie Ricks). We are going to march Friday and if you get smart, we'll come out there and march tonight."

The police found the cross burning in Ricks' backyard shortly after they arrived.

Willie Ricks, 18, had been fined $50 in city court earlier Wednesday on disorderly conduct charges growing out of a stand-in incident Tuesday night.

Fined along with Ricks was James Williams, 37, a white resident of nearby Ringgold, Ga. Both had been arrested after what police described as a pushing contest in front of the white-only theater where Negroes were seeking admission.

That demonstration resulted in a rock-throwing clash between the some 50 Negroes and a similar number of white persons. Wednesday night about 15 white youths snatched placards from Negro stand-ins, but the police quickly intervened and both groups scattered.

In Washington, the Justice Department says it will give the states every opportunity to act on Negro complaints of discrimination before taking civil rights cases to court.

This policy was outlined Wednesday by Burke Marshall and confirmed by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy. Marshall touched on the policy while testifying at a Senate hearing on his nomination to head the department's civil rights division.

At Marietta, Ga., Judge James T. Manning of the Cobb County Superior Court, said two or more Negro families have left their homes as a result of threatening telephone calls. The situation has gotten "pretty bad," he said. "These anonymous telephone calls are scaring some of our best Negro citizens."

A Negro group at Jacksonville, Fla., has asked the Duvall County Commission to remove all signs denoting segregation in public facilities throughout the county. And in Baton Rouge, La., strategists for Gov. Jimmie H. Davis and segregation leaders called for a limited constitutional convention to enable the state's 67 school districts to shift to private, segregated schools by next fall.

Miss Charlayne Hunter of Atlanta, one of the first two Negroes admitted to the University of Georgia, has been selected as one of the three interne reporters on the staff of the Louisville Times next summer. Managing Editor Norman Isaacs said she will be the first member of her race on the Times' news staff.

A Roman Catholic Priest says "squat-in" racial demonstrations will continue in Oklahoma City. The statement by Father Robert G. McDole, twice arrested as a demonstrator, was in conflict with one made by Negro leader E. Melvin Porter, who told the city council the "squat-ins" were out.

Eight white persons and five Negroes were arrested Saturday as they sat in the lobby of a downtown Oklahoma City building to protest a basement cafeteria refusing service to Negroes.

Negro college students attended services at Orangeburg, S. C., Wednesday — the anniversary of an anti-segregation demonstration resulting in the use of fire hoses and arrests before police could break it up.

About 270 students from South Carolina State and Claffin colleges attended the 40-minute service at Trinity African Episcopal Church then returned to their campuses singing a song entitled "Jim Crow Must iDe."

At Greenville, S. C., special county Judge James H. Trice Sr. declined to overturn the convictions of 10 Negro teen-agers found guilty last summer of trespassing after warning. The convictions resulted in sentences of $100 or 30 days each and the youths appealed.

About 400 singing, clapping teenage Negroes swayed single file through downtown Louisville Wednesday in another demonstration against segregated theaters and stores. There were no incidents and no arrests.

Meanwhile, at Trenton, N. J., the state's attorney general said the National Civil War Centennial Commission cannot dodge responsibility for segregated commemorative ceremonies in Charleston, S. C. The April 11-12 event commemorates the 100th anniversary of the South's firing on Ft. Sumter which marked the beginning of the Civil War.

The state's chief legal officer is a member of the New Jersey Civil War Centennial Commission which is boycotting the ceremonies because one of its members—a Negro—was told she could not have integrated hotel accomodations or attend any of the social functions.

CHATTANOOGA CHIT CHAT

Disorders, arrests follow city sit-ins

By PETER D. SIMMONS

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — The student "stand - in" and "Look - ins" at downtown Incidents ran rampant durtheaters are still holding the spotligrt in this somewhat jittery town.

Incidents ran rampant during the past weekend as 11 students were arrested, one an 80 - year - old whie woman was knocked down by a group of colored demonstrators fleeing from a pack of white youths brandishing knives and clubs.

The minister, the Rev. Robert B. Hunter, rector of Saint Mary's Episcopal Church, and an advisor to the students, was punched in the face near the Rodgers Theater on Market St. while observing the demonstration.

* * *

FATHER HUNTER told this reporter that he was struck in the face by a white man, identified by police as Harry (Nub) Light, a former convict and construction worker.

He said the man approached him and asked, "when are you all going to stop this damn mess? Maybe I had better make you," and swung with a terriffic right.

He rolled with the punch and was caught on the cheek and suffered a minor bruise.

The police standing by immediately pounced on the attacker and placed him under arrest.

A little while later as the minister started down town to the State House to witness another demonstration, he was attacked by six white youths and pummelled by their fists. He as not seriously hurt.

* * *

MEANWHILE a group of students at the Tivioli Theater on Broad St. was molested by a group of whites. Some of their signs were snatched from their hands and torn up.

Further up the street the group was jumped by white boys leaping from cars and running in from different directions.

Fleeing because they were outnumbered, the students tossed garbage cans and other objects at their attackers and in the rush, an 80 - year - old white woman walving down the street was accidentally knocked down.

She was not seriously hurt and told police she could not identify the youths. Eleven youths were arrested, all colored, and taken to headquarters.

* * *

TRIAL FOR Harry Light, the ex-convict, charged with attacking the minister at the theater, was continued Wednesday.

Light was arrested and jailed for a second time on a drunkenness charge and was in jail at the time set for the hearing.

Father Hunter and two of the youth were in court. The two youth cases were passed until next Monday; the others are to be tried in Juvenile Court.

Light was rushed to a hospital about two nights later, when he said four colored youths attacked him and slashed him across the arm with a knife.

* * *

A NEW GIMMICK being used by the police against the students now is the new ruling by the city attorney that after the group makes two rounds at the ticket office, they may be arrested on a nuisance charge.

Interest around the town took on a new twist when the Rev. William A. Dennis, 40-year-old pastor of the Orchardknox Baptist Church, editor of Chattanooga's newest weekly, The Tri-State Herald, was arrested last Friday night on three bad check counts, brought by a publisher in Kingston, Tenn.

He was booked at the city jail here and tturned over to the two officers from Kingston who served the warrants on him with the aid of city police.

According to police, the warrants were signed by Paul Page, editor of the Roan County News and vice - president of the Kingston Publishing Company.

One of the warrants charged that the minister gave the company and bad check for $360 on about March 4 and the other, that he gave a check for $60 on about Feb. 22. It turned out that the checks were paid to the firm for printing the Tri - State Herald of which the Rev. Mr. Dennis is editor.

The Rev. Mr. Dennis was taken to Kinston and placed in the lockup. A group of ministers from The Ministers Alliance went to Kingston and obtained his release.

* * *

THE FOLLOWING Sunday morning the Rev. Mr. Dennis was locked out of his church and services were called off by officers of the church.

However, it was learned that at a special meeting on Monday night, he was permitted to remain as pator.

According to reliable information, this is not the first time that factions in his church have tried to oust him as minister.

He was not avilable for comment at press time.

A last minute report showed that the Rev. Mr. Dennis has been cleared of the bad check charges when the Roane County Court dismissed the charges after the complainant refused to prosecute.

* * *

APPROXIMATELY 300 Chattanooga and Hamilton County teachers attended the Tennessee State Education Congress two days recently, at Tennessee A. and I. State University, Nashville.

Clarence B. Robinson, principal of Second District Junior High School, this city and president of the Congress, presided.

Local members of the State Educational Congress executive committee are C. C. Bond, principal of Howard High School; Samuel W. Seals, principal of Park Place School, and C. B. Kennedy, a teacher at Park Place.

Others from the city serving on discussion groups, etc., were Mrs. Nell Armstrong, principal of Calvin Donaldson School; George A. Key, principal of Orchardknob Junior High School, and Mrs. Earline Pitts, a teacher.

John L. Espey, 57, Booker T. Washington High teacher and civic leader, died here on March 13. Mr. Espey, since

Memphis Loses 14 Sit-In Cases

MEMPHIS — (ANP) - Memphis was the loser in a case against 14 students facing disorderly conduct charges resulting from sit-ins last summer at two downtown variety stores.

They were arrested at Silvers and Kress stores after refusing police orders to leave seats at the segregated lunch counters.

Judge John Wilson held that the city failed to prove the charges.

"The court's ruling is in no way to be construed as relating to the right of a store owner to serve white or Negro customers, or both," the judge said.

"It is the court's opinion that no one can deprive a person of the right to run his business as he wishes so long as he stays within the law."

Two other cases were dismissed by consent of both parties. One involved a Negro arrested when the Bellvue Baptist Church refused to admit Negroes to services. The other stemmed from the refusal of a Negro to move to the rear of a city bus.

Meanwhile, Circuit Judge Holmes affirmed $51 city court fines against 10 other Negro college students resulting from a sit-in demonstration last December at Ohman House restaurant.

B. L. Hooks, one of the defense attorneys, argued that the disorderly conduct law under which the students were charged was so vague that it could not apply. He contended they did nothing disorderly.

None of the students testified.

Hooks said the arrests were an abuse of police powers, violation of the defendants' rights.

Asst City Atty Arthur Shea contended that disrupting business constituted disorderly conduct.

"The proof is that the defendants went in and asked to be served, the manager asked them to leave and they did not, a crowd gathered and the business was completely disrupted. It is my judgment that the disorderly conduct law is a valid ordinance, has been upheld by a Supreme Court, and the city has made out its case.

This is the first sit-in appeal case which the city has won, at any level, and an appeal was indicated in this one.

Sitdowners put nation on trial

MONTEAGLE, Tenn. — "The student sit - in movement has put democracy on trial in international headlines and destroyed the myth that change in the South must be slow," proclaimed the Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker, executive director, Southern Christian Leadership Conference, in a speech to the opening session of a three-day college workshop at Highlander Folk School.

Ninety students representing 21 colleges and universities and five national organizations attended the workshop.

Meeting under the theme, "New Frontiers for College Students," the workshop is assessing the meaning and direction of the students' struggle for democracy in the South.

The Rev. Mr. Walker speaking to "The Sit - ins In Historical Perspective" said that the student sit-in movement was the result of the traditional bold and creative student mind dissatisfied with essentially conservative adult leadership.

He paid strong tribute to the role of religion in giving dynamic momentum to the movement. "It may not be articulate, but it is ever present."

Racial roundup—

Negro sta in's life said threatened

By The Associated Press

The father of a Chattanooga, Tenn., Negro stand-in demonstrator says his son's life has been threatened and a crude cross burned in their yard.

John D. Ricks told police the threat was made over the telephone late last night and that the caller identified himself only as the 'grand dragon of the KKK"—an apparent reference to the Ku Klux Klan.

Ricks quoted the caller as saying, "We are going to kill him (Willie Ricks). We are going to march Friday and if you get smart, we'll come out there and march tonight."

POLICE FOUND the cross burning in Ricks' back yard shortly after they arrived.

Willie Ricks, 18, had been fined $50 in city court earlier yesterday on disorderly conduct charges growing out of a stand-in incident Tuesday night.

Fined along with Ricks was James Williams, 37, a white resident of nearby Ringgold, Ga. Both had been arrested after what police described as a pushing contest in front of the white-only theater where Negroes were seeking admission.

THAT DEMONSTRATION resulted in a rock-throwing clash between some 50 Negroes and a similar number of white persons. Last night about 15 white youths snatched placards from Negro stand-ins, but the police quickly intervened and both groups scattered.

In Washington, the Justice Department says it will give the states every opportunity to act on Negro complaints of discrimination before taking civil rights cases to court.

This policy was outlined yesterday by Burke Marshall and confirmed by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy. Marshall touched on the policy while testifying at a Senate hearing on his nomination to head the department's civil rights division.

AT MARIETTA, GA., Judge James T. Manning of the Cobb County Superior Court, said two or more Negro families have left their homes as a result of threatening telephone calls. The situation has gotten "pretty bad," he said. "These anonymous teephone calls are scaring some of our best Negro citizens."

A Negro group at Jacksonville, Fla., has asked the Duval County Commission to remove all signs denoting segregating in public facilities throughout the county. And in Baton Rouge, La., strategists for Gov. Jimmie H. Davis and segregation leaders called for a limited constitutional convention to enable the state's 67 school districts to shift to private schools by next Fall.

Charlayne Hunter of Atlanta, one of the first two Negroes admitted to the University of Georgia, has been selected as one of the three interne reporters on the staff of The Louisville Times next Summer. Managing Editor Morgan Isaacs said she will be the first member of her race on The Times' news staff.

A. ROMAN CATHOLIC priest says "squat-in" racial demonstrations will continue in Oklahoma City. The statement by the Rev. Robert G. McDole, twice arrested as a demonstrator, was in conflict with one made by Negro Leader E. Malvin Porter, who told City Council the "squat-ins" Negro college students attended were out.

services at Orangeburg, S. C., yesterday—the anniversary of an anti-segregation demonstration resulting in the use of fire hoses and arrests before police could break it up.

About 270 students from South Carolina State and Claffin Colleges attended the 40-minute service at Trinity African Episcopal Church then returned to their campuses singing a song entitled "Jim Crow Must Die."

AT GREENVILLE, S. C., Special County Judge James H. Trice Sr. declined to overturn the convictions of 10 Negro teen-agers found guilty last Summer of trespassing after warning. The convictions resulted in sentences $100 or 30 days each and youths appealed.

Violence in Chattanooga—

Stand-in causes rock throwing

By The Associated Press

A stand-in demonstration protesting segregation in theaters turned into a rock throwing melee between Negroes and white youths in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Only two persons were arrested, but police broke up clashes involving as many as 50 white persons and 50 Negroes before order was restored late last night.

In other demonstrations, 175 Negroes were arrested during a singing, clapping protest against segregation at downtown stores in Louisville, Ky.; five pickets were jailed at Rutherfordton, N. C.

PICKETS WHO paraded in front of lunch counters at Columbia, S. C., carried signs reading, "If we cook for them, why can't we eat with them?"

South Carolina's Gov. Ernest F. Hollings refused to yield to what he called attempts "to exact the customs of New Jersey" on his state. Demand for desegregated hotel facilities in Charleston for a meeting of the National Civil War Centennial Commission next month had been made by New Jersey delegates.

World hehavyweight boxing champion Floyd Patterson declared himself satisfied that there was no segregation of the audience at his successful Miami Beach title defense against Ingemar Johansson Monday night, and returned a forfeit check of $10,000 to Feature Sports Inc. The check was put up as a guarantee against segregation.

THE NAVY, replying to a protest from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said, "all officers and men are granted liberty with no discrimination whatsoever . . ."

The NAACP had accused Navy officials of "heaping humiliation on Negro officers and men" in visiting strictly segregated ports in South Africa.

Owners of the largest amusement park in the Washington area, Glen Echo at Rockville, Md., announced that the park will be completely desegregated when it reopens March 31. Scores of demonstrators were arrested there in the past.

Negro leaders at Oklahoma City called off their "squat-in" demonstrations after 13 persons were arrested for blocking the lobby of a building where a cafeteria refused to serve Negroes.

Protests against segregation will continue, said E. Meyvin Porter, "but we won't block aisles and we won't violate fire laws."

IN NASHVILLE a Negro attorney active in civil rights cases says he has been constantly harassed by telephone calls, threats and unsolicited deliveries since shortly before the desegragation of the county's schools.

The lawyer, Avon Williams, said the most recent incident happened yesterday morning when a dozen applicants for a job as truck driver showed up at his office.

"It started with a bomb threat on Jan. 20, tthree days before the Davidson County schools were desegregated," Williams said. "There's been no let up since. I don't think there's been a day something hasn't happened."

CHATTANOOGA CHIT CHAT

Violence explodes as stand-ins wait

By PETER D. SIMMONS

CHATTANOOGA Tenn. — Harassment has begun to plague demonstrations here at downtown theaters as arrests and ducktail hair-white youths moved in on the students.

Rocks were hurled in the first racial tiff in brief exchanges, after a shoving incident at a downtown movie. There were no injuries and police made no arrests.

The whole thing stemmed from an incident in front of the Rogers, on Market St. when a white Riggold, Ga., laborer and an 18-year-old high school youth were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

* * *

INCIDENTALLY, the colored youth arrested was Willie Ricks, who has been fined three times for disorderly conduct in connection with the demonstrations.

The white man was identified by police as James F. Williams of Riggold. He is alleged to have pushed the youth when he entered the line to purchase a ticket.

Both Williams and Ricks were fined $50 and cost by City Judge Riley Graham the following morning.

According to police and witnesses, groups of whites who had witnessed the incident at the Rogers, followed the student demonstrators to the State, on Market, where another demonstration was in progress.

AS THE students left the State and apparently ended the demonstration for the night around 6:30, about 20 whites cornered about 16 students at 9th and Market Sts, and opened up on them with rocks.

The colored youths dispersed, but returned later with reinforcements. The white youths had also gotten reinforcements. The demonstrators were the aggressors as they bombarded the white youths with rocks and other missiles.

At the height of battle, three patrol cars careened on the scene and separated the groups as missiles hurled sent the whites scampering in all directions.

At press time reports were circulating that the Ricks family had received many threatening calls and on Wednesday night a cross was burned in the yard of the family.

It was also reported, but unconfirmed, that one of the theaters had sold one of the youths a ticket and called police to protect him while he saw the movie.

The picture at the Rogers when the tussle occurred was, "Hell Is A City." The students are still on the march. The fight for desegregation of all public places is on.

THE INTERDENOMINATIONAL Ministers Alliance issued a long and stinging statement hitting seating bias at the Memorial auditorium.

They asked all sponsors of programs at the auditorium to join in the effort to desegregate on a voluntary basis. They also asked the city commission to give consideration to the auditorium's segregated policy.

The movement came about after a Passion Play sponsored by the Lions Club, at which time tickets were mailed to all ministers alike.

However, when they went to the auditorium, the colored ministers found that they could only change their tickets for certain areas, while white ministers with the same tickets could sit wherever they liked.

The statement was signed by the Rev. C. E. Jenkins Sr., chairman of the executive committee; Dr. M. J. Jones, president; the Revs. W. A. Dennis, Edward W. Jackson, Dorgan W. Williams, M. Peace and Robert B. Hunter.

ACCORDING TO a statement and an announcement of C. C. Bond, Howard School principal, Misses Constance McCrorey and Helen Thomas tied for top scholarship honors at Howard and will be the valedictorians of the class of 1961.

Miss Mary Hughley placed second and will be the class salutatorian of the 391-member class.

Federal District Judge Leslie R. Darr, who has twice slapped down the Chattanooga school board on its delay in presenting a workable plan for desegregation, will retire after 21 years, 8 months and 22 days as an active US District Judge.

He recently notified President John F. Kennedy of his desire to retire. Speculation is high as to who will succeed him and what results it will have on the school desegregation suit.

Well, the town is still buzzing over that whang, dang, slam bang, knock down, drag out fight between champion Floyd Patterson and Ingemar Johansson.

Yep, they are still talking. And that's the news from here. . .Drop those letters and cards to Peter D. Simmons, 1102 Queens Dr. . .

CHATTANOOGA CHIT CHAT

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat 3-18-61

6 teenagers fined in movie stand-ins

By PETER D. SIMMONS

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — Chattanooga's high school student "Stand - In" and "Look-In", in the fight to break down segregated barriers at downtown theaters, hit a road block on last Thursday night.

The first group since the demonstration began, was arrested in front of the State on Market St. The second group was arrested in front of the Liberty theater (for colored) on E. 9th St. the same week.

At a hearing on March 8, Judge Graham levied fines of $50 and costs against six teenagers charged with disorderly conduct. Two of the fines were linked to the demonstration in front of the Liberty. The other four were assessed for what city witnesses termed sidewalk blocking in front of the State.

* * *

TWO OF those fined in court Wednesday morning were re-arrested that night at another demonstration in front of the State.

Police said the arrest of the two Wednesday night came after the manager of the State asked the demonstrators not to block the ticket window and they refused.

Judge Graham dismissed disorderly conduct counts against four of the students arrested in front of the Liberty, when Bruce Boynton, who recently established law offices here, pointed out that the city had not produced definite identification.

Two of those arrested in front of State, in the first group, were acquitted for the same reason.

* * *

BOYNTON ATTACKED the constitutionality of the city ordinance creating the disorderly conduct, but the judge upheld assistant City Attorney Gene Tatum's defense.

Mrs. Sarah Brown, manager of the Liberty, pointed out two of the students she said were causing disturbances in front of the theater.

Robert Lebovitz, an official of the theater said he called police officers when the demonstrators became loud and abusive to patrons trying to enter the show.

He said some of the picketers told patrons, those who bought tickets were traitors to the race.

A very noticeable point, no efforts were made to separate white and colored, who sat whereever seats were available in the normally segregated court room. 3

* * *

INCIDENTALLY, according to information given this reporter as to why the students were picketing the Liberty theater; it is because the same people who own the Liberty, are part of the company operating a number of theaters in Chattanooga, including the State.

Your reporter was told that the whole setup with students is based on unequal facilities and denial of rights.

Fines were paid by groups backing the movement.

At press time, the Interdenominational ministers alliance released a long and strong statement backing the demonstrators. The statement was released by Dr. Major Jones, pastor of Stanley Chapel Methodist Church, president of the Alliance.

* * *

IN A LAST minute release, this desk was informed that The Council for Cooperative Action was making final preparations for a cultural and informative affair at the James A. Henry Branch YMCA, featuring Dr. Charles Eric Lincoln, in an address on "Black Muslim Movement In America."

Dr. Lincoln, an ordained minister in the Methodist Church, is a graduate of Boston University with a Ph.D., whose thesis was written on "The Black Muslim In The United States."

Mrs. Mary M. Guines of Chattanooga, former teacher at Second District Junior High School has been initiated into Pi Lambda Theta, national honorary education fraternity at the University of Tennessee.

She is the first colored woman inducted into Alpha Xi chapter at the university where she is a graduate student, majoring in guidance. Mrs. Guines is a graduate of Howard High School (1952) and Hampton Institute ir 1956. She is a member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority.

* * *

THE CHATTANOOGA chapter of the NAACP will bring former Dodger baseball ace Jackie Robinson to town as speaker for the culmination of their membership drive April 16.

In the social whirl, the Aces Social Club is still receiving plaudits on their big annual dance at the American Legion Ball Room.

* * *

MISS EFFIE DAVIS left by plane on her return to New York after attending the funeral of her mother, top dress designer and dress maker Mrs. Addie Davis, who died here recently.

Also here were two sons, Julius Davis of Newark, N.J., and John Davis of Washington.

And that's the news from here . . . Drop those letters and cards to Peter D. Simmons, 1102 Q nD euesr ,. mons, 1102 Queens Dr., Chattanooga. . .THANKS . . .

SIT-INS
KILLEEN, TEXAS

Negro GIs Used To Stop Sit-Ins

MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—Maj. Gen. Edward G. Farrand, commander at Ft. Hood, Tex., has hit upon the neat device of using Negro military police to break up Negro sit-ins against segregated white restaurants in nearby Killeen, Tex.

Here is the story of what happened.

On July 9 last year, Pvt. Robert B. Curtis of the 2nd Armored Division at Ft. Hood, with two other Negro soldiers, staged a sit-in protest at Craig's Lunch Counter in Killeen. They were arrested by the provost marshal, Col. M. C. Miller, accompanied by several military police, and ordered to report to Gen. Farrand who, they state, threatened them with court martial if they were involved in a similar incident.

This pretty well intimidated Negro troops stationed at Ft. Hood until April 22 of this year, when Curtis and one other Negro soldier again sat-in at Craig's restaurant. This time, the provost marshal made a special trip to the barracks and recruited 12 Negroes to serve as military police. Normally, Negro troops do not serve as MPs outside of camp for fear of arousing the resentment of white Texans. But in this case 12 Negro MPs were rushed to Craig's restaurant and arrested the Negro sit-ins.

When United Press International telephoned Ft. Hood from Austin to inquire about the incident, the provost marshal's office denied that anything had happened.

When this column queried the Army in Washington as to whether such suppression of the news was a part of U. S. Army policy, the Army, after taking five days to exchange communications with Ft. Hood, made no comment. It did not deny the incident took place.

When asked whether the use of Negro troops to apprehend Negro sit-in strikers was U.S. Army policy, the Army replied that an order had been issued, June 19, instructing Gen. Farrand and other commanders that MPs could not be used "on behalf of local authorities to support enforcement of segregation," though they could be used to "quell affrays" where military personnel are involved.

The Diplomatic Cables

President Kennedy's ailing back now feels strong enough so he is definitely planning a goodwill visit to Latin America in August—visiting Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil and Venezuela. His main mission will be the big inter-American economic conference in Montevideo Aug. 5....Premier Khrushchev is trying to lure Prime Minister Macmillan into undertaking a dramatic peace mission to Moscow to head off war over Berlin. Privately, the Russians have passed the word that a Macmillan mission similar to the one he undertook in 1959 would be welcome. British diplomats figure it's a maneuver by Khrushchev to play up to Macmillan's aspirations to be the great peace leader of the 20th century, and the British embassy has strongly recommended against any trip to Moscow....Gen. de Gaulle has promised to withdraw at least two of France's top divisions from Algeria in time to mobilize for the Berlin crisis. This is why De Gaulle is urgently pressing the Algerian rebels for a compromise peace....The Austrian government has offered Vienna as a site for an East-West summit conference on Berlin in November. Premier Khrushchev told the Austrians before he left that he would like to come back for such a meeting. After checking accommodations, the Austrians have decided they can handle the diplomats and the mob of reporters that would accompany them. However, speculation regarding a summit conference still is very premature.

Medical Deception

Here is some of the evidence on the fabulously wealthy drug industry that led Sen. Kefauver to introduce legislation regulating injurious patented medicine.

Sworn testimony showed that some of the major drug companies have distorted, concealed, or even lied about the side effects of their drugs.

Chloromycetin, the second largest selling antibiotic, used especially on children, was found to destroy some of the marrow in children's bones long after the drug had been used.

The Food and Drug Administration and the National Research Council informed Parke, Davis, manufacturer of chloromycetin, August 1952 the drug could go back on the market "under revised labeling that would caution physicians explicitly against its indiscriminate use"; that it should be used only in certain sometimes fatal diseases in which its use is necessary, such as Rocky Mountain spotted fever and other Rickettsial diseases.

Parke, Davis, however, according to sworn testimony, responded by sending its salesmen a series of promotional letters which the Kefauver committee reported as "ranging from the deceptively misleading to the downright false." These letters claimed that the drug had been "officially cleared" with "no reservations on the number or the range of diseases in which chloromycetin may be administered."

This was directly contrary to advice from the Food and Drug Administration. In a subsequent letter to salesmen, Parke, Davis stated that the failure of the government to ban use of the drug completely was "undoubtedly the highest compliment ever tendered" to the Parke, Davis medical staff.

This is why Kefauver now proposes legislation to ban any medicine unless the Food and Drug Administration has licensed it.

Sing God Bless USA, Our Segregated Home, At 61 Reisner Street

The Informer Houston Tex Dat: 3-4-61 Pg 1

Sie-ins in Houston were auled to city jail at No 61 Riesner St this week, but the singing sit-ins, went there crooning "God Bless America our segregated home." They are flanked by Mses LeRoy, left, labor-civic leader and the young civil rights crusader, Eldrewey Stearnes.
Photo by Joseph

White And Negro College Youth Meet As—

The Informer Houston Tex

PYA Continues Picket Of Theatres. Station Cafeteria

By J. DON DAVIS

HOUSTON — Continuing their peaceful crusade to desegregate previously all-white theatres here, approximately Negro youths, thought to be members of the PYA, picketed and stood in line seeking admission to the Loew's State Theatre Wednesday night. 3-4-61 They were denied admission at the Main Street theatre, but no arersts were made.

When Police Sgt P. K. Spillers and two patrolmen reached the scene, Homer McCallon, manager of the theatre, was reporttedly asked if he wanted to sign a complaint against the demonstrators. His answer was no.

There was a mild shoving spree between theatre employees and the peaceful stand-in demonstrators. That was taken in stride, and Houston continued to keep its legal nose clean by making no arrests.

The Loew's State Theatre incident occasioned no comment from either Mr McCallon nor Ray Hay, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre.

Prior to Wednesday night's demonstration at Loew's, The Informer had learned that Marvin Rich, an executive of CORE (Congress of Racial Equality has assured the local group that the Loew's chain would be hit hard on the Atlantic Seaboard. The information eminated from Newark, New Jersey.

It was a known fact that Mr Rich expressed high regard for the local group headed by Eldrewey Stearnes. Whether th elocal group is connected with CORE could not be confirmed.

Houston Tex

With many charges already filed in connection with PYA demonstrations at the Union Station cafeteria, no information was available as to the PYA's next move in that area.

The Union Station situation is an interstate proposition, and is subject to become a national situation, some concerned people have asserted.

Houston was not alone in the peaceful youth movement to desegregate theatres.

Representatives of Wiley College, together with four white college groups met in Austin Tuesday and organized a statewide group to register to movie segregation.

Schools represented at the Austin meet along with Wiley, were: Southern Methodist University of Dallas, Texas Christian University of Fort Worth, Trinity University of San Antonio, and the University of Texas of Austin, the host group.

In the opinion of Chandler Davidson, chairman of the "University of Texas Students for Direct Action," the Tuesday move will save a waste of time, and give the various movements over the state the benefit of the best techniques found in other sections.

The banding together, attendants of the meet agreed, would attract more interest to the movement against segregation in theatres.

Mr Davidson emphasized:

"We didn't band together into any formally structured organization, but we will keep in close touch with the other groups."

Indication are that movies are the current primary objective of student groups. However, it was pointed out by Davidson that the theatre projects did not mean that restaurants would be "forgotten."

Local PYA officials lauded the Austin move, but said their local actions, up to now, had no direct connection with it.

23 Youths Face Prosecution For Picketing Theaters

HOUSTON. — (ANP) — Twenty-three members of the Progressive Youth association will be prosecuted as a result of their picketing two downtown Houston theaters last week.

District Attorney Frank Briscoe said he would press charges against the Negro group for "prohiting the proprietors from exercising their rights to sell tickets."

Miss Edythe Paige a PYA member was hospitalized and held overnight for observation after being attacked and struck in the stomach by Loew's theater employes for allegedly carrying a knife.

Police also charged that the demonstrators blocked a fire zone near the theater. However Assistant District Attorney Pete Moore doubted the legality of the charge.

Eleven cases of unlawful assembly filed March 16 against demonstrators arrested at the theater are to be tried before County Court-at-Law Judge Bill Miller.

MOVIE THEATERS TARGET

Segregation Under Fire By Hundreds Of Marchers

28 Montgomery Advertiser p. 2A Mon.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hundreds of young people, white and Negro, North and South demonstrated against segregation outside movie theaters Sunday.

In some Southern cities the Lincoln's Birthday demonstrators made efforts to get into all-white sections of theaters, often in pairs —one white youth and one Negro.

In New York, Boston and Chicago students demonstrated outside theaters which do not segregate Negroes but have common ownership with Southern theaters which do.

Mon. 2-13-61

At San Antonio, Tex., there was an anonymous telephone report that a bomb had been placed in a theater shortly after a demonstration against segregation ended there. But none was found after a search.

LUSTY SINGING

At Austin, Tex., the pickets sang lustily—to the tune of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" — words showing their disapproval of the segregationist policies of the governors of Louisiana and Arkansas.

"We'll send Jimmie Davis to an integrated hell," they sang, and "We'll hang Orval Faubus to a sour apple tree."

About 50 students gathered in New York's Times Square and marched outside the big Paramount theater.

Although the manager commented that "there is no segregation here," the marchers said they were protesting segregation policies of movie houses owned by American Broadcasting-Paramount Theaters, Inc., in the South.

NO COMMENT

There was no comment from ABC-Paramount.

The same company was the target in Boston, where some 50 young people marched outside the Boston Theater, and in Chicago, where a group of about 60 paraded outside several theaters partly owned by ABC-Paramount.

In Austin and Houston, Tex., the crowds of Negro and white demonstrators swelled to 200 or more. About 50 each marched in Dallas and San Antonio.

In San Francisco demonstrations at two theaters followed the same pattern. Police estimated about 50 students picketed the Paramount and St. Francis Theaters, neither of which is segregated.

Earl Long, manager of both theaters, said the picketing had no effect on ticket sales. The demonstrators carried placards and sang. They said picketing would continue Monday.

Stand-ins Hit Texas Theaters

Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta, Ga.

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Hundreds of University of Texas students chose Abraham Lincoln's birthday Sunday to stage mass stand-in demonstrations against movie theater segregation.

Mon. 2-13-61

They got sympathy protests from nearly 100 Southern Methodist University students in Dallas and expected similar demonstrations from students in 11 other cities across the nation.

Chandler Davidson of El Paso, Tex., chairman of Students for Direct Action, said he had commitments from students in San Antonio, Dallas, Houston, Shreveport, La., New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cambridge, Mass., Ann Arbor, Mich., Oberlin, Ohio and Champaign, Ill., that they would demonstrate in sympathy.

He said in college towns where theaters are integrated, students would simply register a protest at the box office windows that other theaters in the chain are not admitting members of all races.

38a 1961

TEXAS

HOUSTON, TEXAS- ARRESTS
SIT-INS

Police Arrest 48 Young Negroes In Houston Sit-In Demonstrations

Jackson Advocate
Jackson, Miss.
3-13-4-61

Houston, Tex. — Houston police arrested 48 young Negroes Saturday night during a sit-in demonstration at a railroad station restaurant.

No violence was reported and the Negroes laughed and joked with the 14 policemen who herded them into three paddy wagons at Union Station.

The U. S. Supreme Court ruled recently that a segregated bus station in Virginia was illegal.

Fourteen Negroes were arrested Friday night at the same place and charged with loitering. Capt. H. L. Ellisor said those arrested Saturday night would be charged with loitering also.

They were arrested on the complaint of James D. Burleson, the operator of the restaurant who also signed the complaints Friday night.

The demonstrators said they would refuse to post $10 cash bonds and would remain in jail until their Municipal Court trials come up Monday.

On the way to the police station the Negroes sang, "God bless America, our segregated home."

Those arrested included Eldrewey Stearns, the president of the Progressive Youth Association, which has organized many of the protests.

Pastor target of explosion

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

By B. T. GILLESPIE

DANVILLE, Va. —Believed to be the aftermath of a sit-in demonstration, a practice hand grenade recently was exploded in the yard of the Rev. T. Van B. Rhoe, 902 Washington St.

No one was at home at the time, but the minister said the blast shook the church building where he was at the time. He said he thought the church furnace had exploded.

A 20 - year - old soldier (white) whose name was not available was arrested later in the day and charged with igniting an explosive in the city. Mrs. Rhoe and her niece were away in Greensboro, N.C. The incident followed close on the heels of a sit-in demonstration of three ministers and a student at the Woolworth's, Kresge's, and Peoples Drug Store.

* * *

POLICE WERE reluctant to discuss the incident. The Rev. Rhoe expressed surprise at the incident at his home since he was not one of the members of the demonstration.

Pastor of the First Baptist Church, the minister said he thought the incident was directed at the Ministerial Alliance of which he is a member.

Police Chief E. G. McCain said it appeared the explosion was mere co-incident with the demonstration.

While he was willing to accept the explanation of the police chief, other citizens were reluctant to think so, the minister said.

They brought to fore the shooting of a colored citizen by a white policeman some few weeks ago. A group of boys, standing across the street from where the explosion was thrown, started to chase the soldier when he tossed the explosion, but then he threw something at them.

The explosion awakened most of the people in the neighborhood. The grenade is one said to be used by the Army in training exercises, and the FBI is investigating, since the explosive was government property and the accused man is a member of the Army.

Truce Taken In Danville Store Sit-ins

The Washington Post
Washington, D.C.

DANVILLE, Va., April 1 (AP)—Negroes and managers of stores involved in this week's sit-ins talked for more than two hours here today and agreed to meet again next Friday to talk some more.

The Negro ministers and students—10 in all—promised there would be no demonstrations in the meantime. Managers of the two novelty stores were asked to contact their superiors and others.

Each side pleaded with the other to see its own viewpoint during today's discussion. Mayor Julian Stinson said afterwards that progress was made in that the talks will continue during a truce period.

Up to 25 Negroes, mostly high school students but including several ministers, participated in the sit-ins at the three stores Friday but none was served. The stores are Woolworth and Kresge variety stores and Peoples Drug Store.

The city's second sit-in began Thursday when four Negroes remained for 7½ hours at Woolworth's lunch counter for white persons. Two weeks ago, a group led by the Rev. L. W. Chase and the Rev. A. I. Dunlap sought and received service at the cafeteria of the Greyhound bus terminal.

So far, the only one of the three stores to announce a policy toward the sit-ins is the drug store. Manager Frank B. Flemming said his store followed local custom.

"Whatever the people want is what they will get," he said. "We have no intention of serving them (the Negroes) until we have some expression from the people."

Test Va. Law Curbing Sit-Ins

Chicago Defender

RICHMOND, Va. — (UPI) — Negro attorneys filed notice of appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court Tuesday from a ruling upholding Virginia's trespass law, a weapon against sit-in demonstrations.

A three-judge U. S. Circuit Court of appeals last week ruled that the law was constitutional. The case under tres- Negroes arrested under the trespass law while staging lunch counter sit-ins in Hopewell, Petersburg and Lynchburg last year.

Hampton students note appeals

HAMPTON, Va. — The conviction of 11 Hampton Institute students on charges of violating the state's anti-trespass law is being appealed to the Circuit Court here.

The students were found guilty following a trial April 7 before Judge Macy M. Carmel, with only one defendant, Hurlbert H. James, a 19-year-old sophomore.

The defense counsel and Commonwealth Attorney stipulated that the evidence and outcome of James' case would apply to the other 10 defendants.

THE STUDENTS were arrested Feb. 1 after purchasing tickets at the Lee Theatre and taking seats in the downstairs section rather than in the segregated balcony.

William Sweeney, manager, said he told the students they could not sit in the downstairs section, but that they refused to move.

At the initial hearing on Feb. 22, counsel for the students told the court that the arrests were in violation of the students Consititutional rights as guaranteed by the 14th Amendment.

* * *

AT THAT time the Commonwealth Attorney asked for a delay on grounds he was not prepared to argue the Constitutional question.

The case was postponed until March 17 and later delayed until April 7.

The theatre is located in Phoebus, Va.

After Sit-Ins At Richmond, Everything Was As Before

The News & Courier 1,10-B
Charleston, S.C.

Editor's note: The author of this article, a public relations executive in Richmond, was a visitor in Charleston for the Civil War Centennial. He wrote this account at the request of The News and Courier.

Sun, 4-18-61
1,10-B

By JOHN J. SYNON

About a year ago, in Richmond, a dog fight broke out over the integration of Woolworth's lunch counter. It was no different from a hundred other such that have plagued the South these recent months. Pronouncements, pickets and publicity — the same tired story.

The only incident of moment a person recalls of this particular event has to do with a picture in the newspapers. It depicted a Negro woman being escorted, arms akimbo, feet up, from where she was to some place she did not want to be; probably the pokey. You may recall the dead-pan expression of the officers who had been given the distasteful chore, and the undignified position of the elderly woman.

Suddenly, after months or roiling, emotional torment, it was over, all over. The agitators had won, the counter henceforth would be integrated and, one supposed, all would be right with the world.

About a month or so ago, I had occasion to yisit Woolworth's. I had need of one or another of those things it sells.

It was my first time there. The incident, itself, had slipped my mind. Once inside I recalled those days last year and thought I would visit the scene of the imbroglio.

This lunch counter runs the entire length of the store's south side and the entire length of the store's east side. It makes a right angle.

Since I was there at noon the place, naturally enough, was packed, every seat taken.

And down the entire length of the store's south side, in every seat, sat Negroes. Down the entire length of the store's east side, in every seat, sat whites. Behind each row there stood, patiently, others who were awaiting their turn, whites behind whites, Negroes behind Negroes — 100 per cent segregated.

I could hardly believe my eyes. Had all the shooting been about?

I asked a clerk.

"Oh, it's just like always," she replied. "The Negroes always did use the south side and the whites the east.

"Once those people went away we went back, just like always."

The lady I had questioned did not identify "those people" and I did not ask.

I came away feeling how senseless it had been. What evil thing is eating us that can inspire white against black in Virginia? What alien thing is chewing at our vitals, and how can we expunge it? How beautifully our thesis—separate but equal—works when left for resolution by those who have to live with the situation.

There they sat, white and black, eating the same food, paying the same prices and because they wished it so, they had separated themselves.

I also wondered why no publicity had come of this situation, why no pronouncements of this amity had made the welkin ring, why no pictures buzzed across a thousand wires.

And I thought I knew the answer. I thought, and I think, Richmond, white-and-colored Richmond doesn't want another visitation from "those people." Neither now nor ever.

Peace, be still. . . . .

38a 1961

VIRGINIA

SIT-IN

Speaker Urges Support For Sit-In Crusaders

DANVILLE, Va. — The 21st annual conference of the Virginia Voters League convened in Danville, on the 30th of Sep. 30 - Oct. 1 with Danville chapter serving as host.

Registration of delegates began at 9 a.m. under the supervision of Mrs. W. T. Sutherlin. At 10 a.m. the advisory board was called to order by the vice president, S. Arther Holmes. Among the recommendations made to the executive council was the urgency of the officers and members of the chapters of the organization to check on denials of justice and fair play to Negroes and focus the spotlight of publicity upon them.

IT RECOMMENDED that a more intesne program be sponsored to better inform and prepare colored people for this new social order and that workshops be conducted in all chapters to bring about a better understanding between parent and school administration and that each chapter be remided of the threat of mass annihilation of the people by radiation fall - out and urge them to seek information on fall-out shelters.

The executive council approved the recommendations.

The delegates of the conference were served a most appetizing luncheon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Witcher.

THE AFTERNOON session was opened with a panel discussion presided over by the Rev. A. L. Dunlap, vice president of the Danville chapter. The panelists were Attorney Ruth H. Wood, the Rev. W. L. Chase, Mrs. Lelia L. White, Mrs. Beatrice Hairston and Lacona Allen.

The Danville chapter was cited at the banquet Saturday night for leadership in the Century Club contest. It entered the Century Club with 106 members. For this excellent performance, it was awarded a certificate of commendation. The Isle of Wight chapter also made the century club with 101 members, and was awarded a certificate of commendation for such excellent performance.

THE CLIMATIC point was reached Sunday 3:30 p.m. when the delegates and visiting friends assembled at the Loyal Baptist church in a public mass meeting. The Rev. A. L. Dunlap local minister of the city presided. Music was rendered by the Loyal Baptist church chorus. The Rev. L. W. Chase, minister of High Street Baptist church presented the invocation. Mrs. Irene D. Summerset state secretary grought greetings from the official family of the Virginia Voters League, Inc. M. C. Martin of 5th Congressional director, introduced the speaker. L. E. Auston, newspaper publisher of Durham, N. C.

Mr. Austin stressed the need for hard dedicated work. He lauded the sit - ins, and stand-ins,. He said that the ministers should give unstinted support to these young crusaders. He said that they should be found on the picket lines dressed in their usual ministerial attire, so the public would know them.

The following persons were in the forefront in organizing which made an indelible impression upon all present: Mrs. Pearl Witcher, Othia Davis, the Rev. A. L. Dunlap, Mrs. Beatrice Hairston.

The Danville chapter made extensive plans to entertain the delegates and visitors. The following are due credit for making the arrangements nd providing a good program: Mrs. Pearl Witcher, Othia Davis, the Rev. A. L. Dunlap, Mrs. Beatrice Hairston, Mrs. Virginia F. Watkins, the Rev. Walter G. Anderson. Mrs. Viola G. Finley and John H. Fuller.

The 1961 conference will convene in Richmond with the chapters of the Third Congressional District as host.

Va. students stage 7-hour sitdown

DANVILLE, Va. — Sit-down demonstrations occurred here, last week, at Woolworth's and Kresge's variety stores.

Seven of 11 students participating in the demonstrations sat for 7½ hours in Woolworth's. They were not served and there were no arrests.

Bobby J. Green, manager of the Woolworth's store, said there is no policy on sitdowns. "We will do nothing," he declared.

* * *

PERSONS DIRECTING the demonstrations included the following:

The Revs. L. W. Chase, A. I. Dunlap and Lawrence Campbell and a student from Virginia Theological Seminary and College in Lynchburg, Jesse Brown.

The students were from the John M. Langston High School.

In Charlottesville, Va., picketing continues at the University Theatre near the campus of the University of Virginia.

The pickets include both colored and white students enrolled at the university.

to $1,000 and up to 12 months in jail.

U. S. District Judge Albert V. Bryan, writing for the court, said the statutes applied "only to places where a person goes 'without authority of law,' meaning property not at the time affected with a public interest."

Attorney To Appeal Decision Upholding Sit-In Trespass

RICHMOND, Va., April 29 (UPI) — A Negro attorney said Monday he would appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court a decision by a special three-judge Federal Court upholding a trespass law enforced in luneh counter sit-ins.

Leonard W. Holt of Norfolk, one of four attorneys representing Negroes arrested in protests against lunch counter segregation in Petersburg and Hopewell, announced plans to appeal the decisio to the nation's highest court.

The Negroes had asked the special panel to restrain enforcement of the trespass laws, amended by the 1960 General Assembly, and to declare them invalid. The General Assembly increased the penalties for trespasing from a previous maximum of $100 and 30 days in jail

Lawyer in sitdown case calls decision 'shocking'

NORFOLK, Va. — "We're shocked at the opinion and feel that it is necessary to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court," Leonard W. Holt, attorney, said Tuesday of the three-judge Appeals Court recent sitdown case ruling.

Attorney Holt, one of the four lawyers in the case which contests the validity of Virginia's anti-trespassing laws, said the ruling "slurs over" the constitutional issues raised in the appeal.

"We also were surprised that throughout the lengthy opinion, the noun 'Negro' was spelled with a small 'n,'" Mr. Holt declared.

HE SAID the appeal to the Supreme Court would be filed on Tuesday.

The appeal stems from the conviction in state courts of students arrested during sitdown demonstrations in Hopewell, Petersburg and Lynchburg.

The eight - page opinion, handed down last Friday, was written by Judge Albert V. Bryan of Alexandria, Va., and concurred in by Judges Oren R. Lewis of Richmond and Herbert S. Boreman of Parkersburg, W. Va.

The court held that the arrests and convictions did not constitute violation of the students' constitutional rights.

* * *

IN REACHING its conclusion, the court held:

(1) The operator of a lunch counter "may lawfully forbid any and all persons, regardless of his reason or their race or religion, to enter or remain upon any part of his premises which are not devoted to a public use."

(2) The protection of the right of private property "is the sole aim" of Virginia's anti-trespassing laws.

* * *

IN THE APPEALS petition, the lawyers argued in behalf of their clients that places of public accommodation such as restaurants and stores could not be defined legally as not being devoted to public use.

It also was argued that the constitutional rights of the defendants were violated by the use of public police power to enforce a private prejudice.

While Mr. Holt did not state specifically, it is understood that one of the main points of the appeal to the Supreme Court will be a challenge of the conclusion that lunch counters where the arrests occurred are not devoted to public use.

35 NEGROES LOSE IN VIRGINIA COURT

High Tribunal Turns Down Appeals in Sit-In Cases

RICHMOND, Va., April 24 (AP) — The State Supreme Court upheld today the convictions of thirty-four Negroes under Virginia's strengthened anti-trespass laws.

The court did so in affirming lower court convictions of Negroes who had staged sit-in demonstrations in Richmond. It also upheld the conviction of a Negro woman arrested in an integration demonstration before a department store in Richmond.

The trespass cases were the first to be ruled upon by the court since the Virginia assembly strengthened the laws last year during a series of lunch-counter sit-in demonstrations by Negroes.

The thirty-four are students at Virginia Union University in Richmond. They were arrested in February, 1960, as they congregated about a lunch counter and a restaurant, both then reserved for white persons, in the Thalhminers department store in Richmond.

The students were fined $20 each in police court. The convictions were later upheld on appeal to Richmond's hustings court.

In the companion case, Mrs. Ruth E. Tinsley of Richmond was arrested during the picketing of the department store by Negroes. Although she was not picketing, she was charged with refusing to move from a street corner at the scene when told to do so by a policeman. Her $10 police court fine was upheld on appeal to the hustings court.

Sit-in Cases Postponed

ATLANTA, April 24 (UPI) — Cases against Negro sit-in demonstrators were postponed indefinitely today at the urging of business and civic leaders. They said that race relations "are better in Atlanta than they have been in a long time."

Judges Charles Bruce and Charles Wofford agreed to postpone cases against eighty-four Negroes after Solicitor General John I. Kelley said he understood that there would be no more sit-ins in Atlanta and that restaurants involved in the earlier sit-ins had agreed to the postponement.

Ivan Allen Jr., president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, said that an agreement between white merchants and Negroes, calling for desegregation of lunch counters this fall, had brought an end to the sit-ins.

Negroes Retaliate

Special to The New York Times.

DANVILLE, Va., April 24— Negro students here have developed a system of retaliation against variety stores whose lunch counters have remained segregated despite sit-in demonstrations.

The students enter a store in pairs, fill baskets with merchandise and take it to the check-out point. After the cashier has rung up the items, the "purchasers" say they have changed their minds and do not want the merchandise. This has the efect of slowing the store's business while the merchandise is returned to the proper counters.

Virginia High Court Affirms Convictions of 34 for Sit-Ins

The Washington Post B-3
Washington, D.C.
Sat., 4-25-61

RICHMOND, April 24 (AP) Thirty-four Richmond Negro students convicted under Virginia's anti-trespass laws lost their appeals to the State Supreme Court today.

The high court upheld the $20 fines levied in Richmond's Police Court and affirmed by Hustings Court for picketing and sit-ins at a Richmond store last year.

The Virginia Union University students were arrested Feb. 22, 1960, as they congregated about a main floor lunch counter and a fourth floor restaurant, both reserved for white persons.

The anti-trespassing convictions of the Richmond students were the first to reach the State Supreme Court since the 1960 General Assembly strengthened anti - trespass laws during a wave of lunch counter sit-ins.

Chief Justice John W. Eggleston, who wrote the opinion, said, "There is no evidence to support his (one of the student's) contention that he was arrested because of his 'race or color' . . .

"On the contrary, the evidence shows that he was arrested because he remained upon a store premises after having been forbidden to do so . . . by . . . the authorized agent of the owner."

"The only purpose of this law is to protect the rights of the owner or those in lawful control of private property," the jurist said

The Court said the store's action in refusing service to the student did not violate his constitutional rights.

Since the case was initiated, the store, Thalhimers and other downtown stores, including Miller & Rhoads, have desegregated their eating facilities.

Aimed At Sit-Ins

Virginia Supreme Court Upholds "Trespass" Law

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. p. 1
Sat., 4-29-61

RICHMOND, Va. — (UPI) —The State Supreme Court of Appeals Monday upheld a Virginia trespass law under which a number of persons have been arrested in lunch counter sit-in demonstrations.

The court, in an opinion written by Chief Justice John W. Eggleston, said the law, which carries a fine of up to $1,000 and jail sentence of up to 12 months, "does not purport to be and is not a racial segregation law."

THE LAW, according to the state high court, "forbids 'any person,' irrespective of race or color 'without authority of law' to 'go upon or remain upon the land or premises of another'."

The ruling was made in a case brought by Raymond B. Randolph one of 34 Virginia Union University students fined $20 more than a year ago for seeking service at a Richmond department store lunch counter. The store, Thalhimers, has since lowered racial barriers.

Eleven Convicted Second Time For Virginia Sit-In

LYNCHBURG, Va. — (UPI) — Eleven Negroes who appealed 60-day prison terms given them for taking part in a lunch counter sit-in demonstration were given a more severe sentence Thursday.

An all - white corporation court jury recommended sentences of 90 days and fines of $100 each for the Negroes — one of whom is a housewife hospitalized with a heart condition.

All were released under bonds ranging from $750 to $1,000 to appeal the latest ruling to the state Supreme Court.

The original sentences, growing out of a demonstration at a Lynchburg drug store, were handed out in municipal court on conviction of violation of Virginia's anti - trespass law.

Negroes' Lawyer Held in Contempt At Sit-In Trial

LYNCHBURG, Va., April 5 (AP) — A Norfolk Negro attorney twice was held in contempt of court today at the opening of an appeals trial for 11 Negroes charged with trespassing in drug store sit-ins here.

Leonard W. Holt Jr. of Norfolk, attorney for the Negroes, was held "grossly contemptuous" by Judge S. Duval Martin in Corporation Court when Holt made a motion that Martin disqualify himself because he would not abolish segergation in the courtroom.

Earlier, Martin held Holt in contempt for intferring the court was "aiding and abetting" the state because the court clerk's office permitted the designtaion of Negro to be placed against the names of Negroes selected for the jury panel.

Martin delayed punishment until the end of the trial.

An all-white five-member jury of four men and one woman was finally selected and the witnesses were called.

After hearing testimony from several witnesses, most of it brief, the judge conferred more than hour and a half with lawyers for the prosecution and defense concerning his instructions to the jury.

The trial was adjourned late in the day until 9 a.m. Thursday with the instructions still to be given.

The Rev. Virgil A. Wood and 10 other Negroes are appealing 60-day sentences handed down in Municipal Court by Judge Joseph P. McCarron.

Mr. Wood, 29, is pastor of Diamond Hill Baptist Church and president of the Lynchburg Improvement Association. Other defendants include William Walker Roberts, 23, pastor of Eighth Street Baptist Church; Bates Huston Ford, Samuel Walter Trimiar, Essie Elra Gordon, 27, of Lynchburg; William G. Roberts, 21, of Aliquippa, Pa.; Ralph Reavis, 19, of Lawrenceville; James A. Tucker, 22, of Clifton Forge; Elijah J. Regulus, 19, of Waycross, Ga.; Jon E. Crawford, 25, of Chicago and Lanksford E. Hankins, 25, of Nathalie.

'I can wait no longer,' 16-year-old declares after arrest in Va. sit-in

LYNCHBURG, Va. — Special police attention has been concentrated on 16-year-old Mandeline E. Thompson, youngest of eight persons arrested in the Feb. 13 segregation protest at Patterson's Drug Store.

While her associates could be heard singing hymns in their jail cells, Mandeline was questioned at length as to what adults 'put her up' to participating in the sit-ins.

An intelligent and outspoken young lady, Madeline insisted that she had acted strictly on her own.

Then to be sure there would be no misunderstanding she wrote out the following statement in answer to reporters' questions:

"TODAY, with the strength given me by my Maker, my heart overflowing with courage, I made my stand for my civil rights as given to me by God and the Constitution.

"I am telling you, as I told the policemen in jail, I moved when my heart said move.

"I can sit still no longer and wait for the privileges that I should have had since man sinned and took control of the world.

"Because I am a juvenile there are those who suspect that I have been influenced by others.

"But they are wrong. God is my influence, my only influence. And He said to one and all 'I help those who help themselves'. And that's enough for me."

* * *

BOTH HER parents point out that Mandeline would need no outside influence to join an effort for civil rights and human dignity. "That's been instilled in her since birth" they said.

Madeline, too, pointed out that long before last week's sit-ins, she was active in the desegregation campaign.

"I've walked the picket line until my feet felt like dropping off" she said. "And I'm for the cause, all the way."

COURAGEOUS TEENAGER is Mandeline E. Thompson, 16, who, arrested in a group of 8 lunch counter sit-in demonstrations in Lynchburg on Feb. 13, refused to let her parents bail her out for seven hours, as a demonstration of sympathy for six other college students now serving a 30-day jail term. Because of her youth she was repeatedly questioned by police as to who influenced her to participate in the protest.

Judge Fines 9 'Sit-Inners' $50 For Missing Court Call

Orders new trial in Lynchburg Oct. 2

LYNCHBURG, Va. — St.

Lynchburg is adopting Jackson, Mississippi's harassment program of convicted sit - inners. Last week, Judge O. Raymond Cundiff in cooperation with the wishes of the Commonwealth's Attorney fined nine persons for not being present at the court's roll call on Sept. 5th.

Each person was given $50 to pay for non - appearance. In addition to the fine, the old bonds were cancelled in a move seemingly designed to discourage businessmen from going on the bonds of the convicted sit - inners who are waiting to hear from the Virginia Court of Appeals.

From here on out each one of the sit - inners must be in court at the beginning of each term the first Monday of each month.

* * *

JUDGE O. RAYMOND CUNDIFF continued the case of the tenth sit - inner, Jor E. Crawford of Chicago, until the first day of the October term after receiving a telegram that Crawford was ill. All the bonds, having been forfeited, were returned with the exception of $50 each.

The nine who were fined were: William G. Roberts, 21, of Aliquippa, Pa., Ralph Reavis, 19, of Lawrenceville; James A. Tucker 22, of Clifton Forge; Elijah J. Regulus, 19, of Waycross, Ga.; Lanksford E. Hankins, 25, of Nathalie; the Rev. William Walker Robertson, 23, of Garfield Ave.; Bates Huston Ford, 40, of 1302 12th St.; Samuel Walter Trimiar, 26, of 2311 High St., and Mrs. Essie Elra Gordon, 27, of 1412 Jackson.

All out - of - state persons had $1,000 bonds, and all Lynchburg residents posted $750 bonds with the exception of Mrs. Gordon who posted a $500 bond.

* * *

THE BONDSMAN who posted nine of the original bonds asked to be relieved of further responsibility through his lawyer. All nine posted bonds again.

Mandeline Thompson, 16, of Madison Heights, was not fined after commonwealth attorney Royston Jester III asked for dismissal because he said the girl's father had seen Jester.

Besides the sit - inners and their attorneys, there were 14 colored and one white man in the courtroom as spectators.

Attorney Len Holt of Norfolk acted as defense counsel for all but the Thompson girl. He maintained that it was his fault the sit-inners had not appeared as he had not advised them to do so.

Holt contended it was not a "willful failure to appear" but an "act of inadvertence." He referred to the fine as a "punishment."

* * *

HOLT ALSO contended the sit-inners were not in court on June 5 when the case was continued until the first day of the September term.

Jester said if this were true, Holt's "statement indicates a prior violation," that "everyone knows ignorance of the law is no excuse," and asked $100 be taken from each bond."

Judge Cundiff said that since it was shown there was no willful action in not appearing, he could impose the $50 penalty.

All the cases were continued until Oct. 2, the first day of the October term.

38a 1961

VIRGINIA

AUGUST
ALEXANDRIA- RESTAURANT - SIT-IN

First Incident of Kind in City

Ten Sit-In Demonstrators Arrested In Protest at Alexandria Restaurant

Ten sit-in demonstrators protesting racial discrimination were arrested in an Alexandria restaurant yesterday for violating Virginia's trespass law.

The sit-ins were the first to demonstrate in Alexandria. They came nearly a year after a number of chain stores and restaurants in the city had dropped racial bars, averting threatened demonstrations.

A bi-racial committee had worker quietly behind the scenes to pave the way for last summer's desegregation.

The demonstrators yesterday were students at an "institute" sponsored by the Congress on Racial Equality in a nearby Fairfax County church and local supporters.

The first arrests were made about noon when six CORE students entered the 403 Restaurant at 403 King st. in two groups.

The youths, three of them white and three Negro, ignored requests by owner Alfred C. Pilla that they leave and Mrs. Pilla summoned Police Pvt. C. T. Callahan from his post across the street. When Pilla repeated his request in Callahan's presence, one of the demonstrators asked to talk things over.

But Pilla said he had no intention of changing his policy and Callahan, after a final warning, arrested the youths.

Later, four Negro girls seated themselves and refused to leave when told that no food was being served at the time. They also were arrested.

All 10 were charged with "trespass after being forbidden" under a law amended during 1960 by the General Assembly to increase maximum penalties from $100 and 30 days in jail to $1000 and 12 months. Pilla swore out the warrants.

Those charged were: Robert H. Balogh, 22, of New York City; Inge B. Powell, 31, of Berkely, Calif.; Betty Jean Daniels, 20, of New Orleans; William B. Greene, 28, of Hollywood, Calif.; Sidney M. Goldfarb, 18, of Peabody, Mass.; Rudolph J. Lombard, 22, of New Orleans; Mildred L. Winfrey, 19, listed at 634 N. Alfred st., Alexandria; Katrina Dunlop, 19, listed at 406 N. Payne st., Alexandria, and two 17-year-olds who live in Alexandria.

All except Miss Winfrey listed their occupations as student or teacher.

The juveniles were released in the custody of their parents and the adults jailed under $250 bond, which police said they made no attempt to post, for appearance in Municipal Court today.

Melvin Miller, an attorney for the demonstrators, said the defense will contend that the trespass law is unconstitutional.

CORE pickets continued to march outside the 403 Restaurant and three others on King st. yesterday.

SENTENCED TO JAIL — Sit - in lunchcounter protestors in Lynchburg, Virginia leave court with their attorneys after being fined $100 each and given jail sentences of 90 days by an all - white five-person jury in Lynchburg's Corporation Court. The sentences were given on appeal of the original sentences of 60 days and no fine each. In photo, from left, are the Reverends W. W. Roberts Jr., Virgil A. Wood, W. G. Williams, Lankford Hawkins, Ralph Reavis and Jon E. Crawford.

Lynchburg convictions appealed

(Photos on Pages 2 and 3)

LYNCHBURG, Va. — The double convictions and sentences levied by two local courts against 12 defendants arrested for sitdown demonstrations are being appealed to the State Supreme Court, a member of the legal defense team said Saturday.

The second set of convictions and fines followed a stormy, two - day trial in Corporation Court last Wednesday and Thursday during which the presiding judge held Leonard W. Holt Jr., defense lawyer, twice in contempt of court.

The jurist, however, dropped the charges against the lawyer at the end of the trial.

THE APPEALS are being made on the grounds that the trespass arrests violated the Constitutional rights of the defendants and the last court to hear the case erred in denying a number of motions made by the defense.

The second court to hear the case was the Corporation Court where a five - member, all white jury, on Thursday returned a guilty verdict against the defendants.

The presiding jurist, Judge S. DuVal Martin added 30-day jail terms and $100 fines to the 60-day jail terms levied earlier in Municipal Court.

ford, 25, Chicago, and Lankford E. Hankins, 25, Nathalie, all students at Virginia Theological Seminary and College here and all bonded at $1000.

The sentences were suspended for 60 days to permit the defendants to appeal to the State Supreme Court.

* * *

SIX OF THE defendants are pre - ministerial students, who went on a hunger strike in the Lynchburg jail last February after being sentenced to the 60 - day terms.

They are the Revs. James A. Tucker, Elijah J. Regulus, Lankford Hankins, W G. Roberts, Jon E. Crawford and Ralph Reavis.

The others are the Rev. Virgil A. Wood, president of the Lynchburg Improvement Association; the Rev. William Walker Roberts, Mrs. Essie E. Gordon, Miss Mandaline T. Thompson, a 16-year-old high school student; Bates H. Ford and Samuel W. Trimiar.

Bail for the defendants ranged from $500 to $1,000.

* * *

THE CONTEMPT charges against defense counsel Holt were made shortly after the trial started on Wednesday.

The lawyer and some of the defendants arrived shortly after 9:30 a.m., the time set for the trial to begin. The judge instructed that the recognizances of the defendants be read.

A few minutes later the defense lawyer and the defendants entered. Holt attempted to explain to the judge that they were late because the automobile in which they were traveling broke down.

* * *

JUDGE MARTIN ordered the lawyer to sit down and he would be heard later. When Holt failed to sit down, the judge commanded him to take his seat. He then delivered a stern lecture to the lawyer, telling him he would have to obey the orders of the court.

Before the trial proper actually started, Holt pointed out that the spectators in the courtroom were racially segregated. He submitted a motion that the segregated seating policy be discontinued.

11 in Sit-ins Given Stiffer Sentences

Get 30 More Days, $100 Fines After Lynchburg Appeal

LYNCHBURG, Va., April 6 (AP)—Eleven adult Negroes who apepaled 60-day sentences for trespassing in a drug store were sentenced to an additional 30 days today and fined $100 each. The lower court sentencing had not included fines.

An all-white jury of four and one woman decided the jail sentences after a hearing before Corporation Judge S. Duval Martin on appeal from a Municipal Court conviction. The maximum sentence is a year in jail and $1000 fine.

Judge Martin granted a 60-day stay of sentence to allow the defendants to appeal to the State Supreme Court.

In addition to the 11, Mandaline E. Thompson, 16, of Madison Heights, today appealed a 30-day lower court sentence for trespassing in the same drug store, Patterson's. Her case was heard by Judge Martin without a jury. He upheld the sentence but also granted her a stay for appeal.

Ten of the 11 adults were freed on bond—four under $750 and six under $1000. The 11th, Essie E. Gordon, 27, is confined to a hospital and was tried in absentia at her request. Miss Thompson was freed under $500 bond.

Judge Martin dismissed two contempt of court charges he lodged against Leonard W. Holt Jr. of Norfolk, attorney for the 11 adult defendants, at the opening of the trial.

All the defendants were charged after they sought service at Patterson's and conducted sit-in demonstrations when they were refused.

The other adults are: the Rev. Virgil Wood, 36, pastor of the Diamond Hill Baptist Church and president of the Lynchburg Improvement Association; the Rev. William W. Roberts, 23, pastor of the Eighth Street Baptist Church; Bates H. Ford, 40, and Samuel W. Trimiar, 26, all of Lynchburg, all bonded at $750.

Also: William G. Roberts, 21, of Aliquippa, Pa.; Ralph Reavis, 19, of Lawrenceville; James A. Tucker, 22, Clifton Forge; Elijah J. Regulus, 19, Waycross, Ga.; Jon E. Crawford, 25, Chicago, and Lankford E. Hankins, 25, Nathalie, all students at Virginia Theological Seminary and College here and all bonded at $1000.

The judge denied the motion. Then Holt submitted a motion asking that the judge disqualify himself on grounds that in denying the motion he was upholding racial segregation.

The judge held that in making the motion, Holt was "grossly contemptuous."

* * *

HE AGAIN held the lawyer in contempt of court when the defense attorney objected to racial designations being placed after the names of colored persons listed on the jury panel.

The judge would not permit Holt to ask the jury candidates 14 questions regarding their attitude toward such issues as race, integration and their affiliations with organizations.

The court held that the questions were either irrelevant or redundant.

The questions included whether the jurors were related to law enforcement officers, the court, or city employees, and whether they were subjected to "pressures," or members of racial hate groups.

At one point during the questions, the court bluntly questioned the "honest intent" of the defense lawyer.

* * *

HOLT ANSWERED by saying he needed the information the questions would reveal in order to adequately represent his clients.

The judge retorted that he would not permit the lawyer to take "hours, days, weeks, or months" to get a jury he liked.

The jury was out less than an hour before returning the guilty verdict.

Eleven of the 12 defendants were tried together, one of whom was tried in absentia due to being confined in a hospital.

The 12th defendant, the 16-year-old high school girl, was tried before the judge without a jury during the time the jury was reaching its verdict.

GIVEN 30 DAYS — Attorney Samuel Tucker, Emporia, Va., talks with Mandoline Thompson, 16, of Madison Heights, Va., who was given 30 days in jail by Judge S. Duval Martin who heard her appeal without a jury. She was charged with trespassing after a sit-in in Lynchburg's Patterson Drug Store. She was granted a stay to appeal the sentence.

Sit-In Trials of Eight Put Off in Lynchburg

The Washington Post
Washington, D.C.

LYNCHBURG, Va., March 14 (AP)—Corporation Court appeal hearings were continued today for eight Negroes charged with violating Virginia's anti-trespass laws in a Feb. 13 drug store sit-in demonstration.

The trial for seven adults involved was continued until April 5. They are appealing 60-day jail sentences imposed in Municipal Court.

A hearing for a 16-year-old Negro girl, sentenced to 30 days, was continued until April 6.

The hearings were continued because of the sickness of Commonwealth's Attorney Royston Jester III.

The eight remained free on $1000 bond each.

In another development, a Negro minister said the data had been made indefinite for filing an omnibus suit against the City asking for an end to segregation in public facilities.

The Rev. Virgil A. Wood, president of the Lynchburg improvement Association, said: "The eight persons filing the omnibus suit have decided to make indefinite the data of filing. This means the suit might be filed this week or any week."

An ultimatum was presented to City Council at its Feb. 28 meeting and council was given one week to reply. The data was later extended until today.

Three members of the Council have indivated they will sponsor a motion at tonight's meeting to hand the Improvement Association's petition to the Lynchburg Inter-Racial Committee for study and recommendation.

At today's hearing, all the witnesses were called before Judge S. Duval Martin, recognized and told to come back on the dates of the continued hearings.

Leonard W. Holt, Negro attorney from Norfolk for the seven adults, summoned 17 witnesses for the defense. The majority of these were employes of Patterson's Drug Co., the firm which operates the drug store which has been the frequent target of sit-in demonstrations recntly.

Holt was reprimanded by Judge Martin when the attorney attempted to make a motion.

"I don't want to hold you in contempt but I publicly reprimand you for such conduct in this court," Martin told Holt.

Holt was taking exception to the continuance of the trial while the court was engaged in recognizing witnesses.

Later, the Judge heard Holt in his chambers on a motion the attorney filed by mail yesterday in which he objected to Martin's dismissal of a Friday motion. That move by Holt called for dismissal of the charges and requested that racial signs in the courthouse be taken down. He also wanted a court reporter paid for by the court in the hearing.

Six of the defendants are students at Virginia Theological Seminary and College here.

Four other Negroes, including Mr. Wood, and another Negro minister, also are appealing 60-day sentences stemming from a sit-in at Patterson's. Their cases come up on t heopening day of Corporation Court April 3.

60-day sitdown sentences for Rev. Wood, others appealed

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

LYNCHBURG, Va. — The 60-day jail sentences of the Rev. Virgil A. Wood and three other persons convicted of violating the state trespass law are being appealed.

Hearing of the appeal is tentatively set for April 3.

The Rev. Wood, president of the Greater Lynchburg Improvement Association, and the three other defendants were tried Thursday before Municipal Court Judge Joseph P. McCarron.

The other defendants are the Rev. William Walker, 23, pastor of the Eighth Baptist Church; Bates Ford, a YMCA employee, and Samuel Trimiar.

* * *

FOLLOWING THEIR conviction, the defendants attended a mass meeting Friday night at the Curt Street Baptist Church, along with 700 other supporters of the sitdown movement.

The meeting, upon request of the Lynchburg Bi-racial Committee, voted a 60-day cooling off period to give the committee time to end racial discrimination in public places by negotiation.

Earlier the audience rejected a proposal that a 30-day boycott of the downtown shopping area be launched.

The main speaker was the Rev. Wyatt Walker of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

* * *

OTHER SPEAKERS were Dr. Milton A. Reid, president of the Virginia SCLC; the Rev. R. G. Williams, and the six divinity students who were released from jail the same day.

They are the Rev. Lanford Hankins, Jon Crawford, William G. Roberts, James Tucker, Elijah Reguius and Ralph Reavis.

At the trial of Rev. Wood and the other three defendants, Len W. Holt, defense counsel, sought to question the complainant, William S. Patterson, regarding why the four were refused service at Patterson's drug store.

* * *

RULING THAT Patterson did not have to give his motives Judge McCarron said: "Certainly it was because they were Negroes. He does not have to explain that."

The sentencing of the four brings to 10 the number of persons jailed as a result of sitdown demonstrations at Patterson's drug store.

Six students are awaiting hearings on appeals set for March 14, as well as a housewife and a high school student. Six other students served 20 days of 30-day sentences.

APPEALS SIT - IN CASES — Attorney Len W. Holt (center) walks out of Lynchburg Corporation Court after having two charges of contempt of court against him dismissed by Judge S. Duval Martin. Mr. Holt was accused of contempt during the opening of the trial of 11 sit - in defendants who were fined $100 each and given 90 days in jail. He was given 60 days to appeal to the State Supreme Court. At left is Bates Ford, 40, one of those convicted, and Barbara Thomas, 21, who served a 30 - day sentence after a Dec. 14 sit-in.

Lynchburg 'Sit-Ins' Convicted

The Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Int. 4-15-61 p2

LYNCHBURG, Va. — An all-white jury convicted 12 Negroes, including two ministers and a 16-year-old girl to jail terms on charges of trespassing involving three sit-in demonstrations.

Eleven of the Negroes were released on bond and granted a 60-day stay of sentence to appeal to the State Supreme Court of Appeals for a writ of error. Mrs. Essie Elra Gordon, 27-year-old housewife, confined to a hospital, was tried in absentia.

The 11 adults, appealing the 60-day jail sentence from Municipal Court, were sentenced to 90 days in jail and fined $100 each by the jury which deliberated one hour and 15 minutes.

The juvenile, a Madison Heights high school girl, appealing a 30-day Juvenile Court sentence, was tried without a jury and sentenced to 30 days in jail by Judge S. DuVal Martin.

Judge Martin said a person could discriminate "to his heart's content in matters allowed him by law—against a Negro or a white person who remains on his private property."

Meeting the $750 bonds were the Rev. Virgil Wood, 29, pastor of Diamond Hill Baptist Church and president of the Lynchburg Improvement Association; The Rev. William W. Roberts, 23, pastor of Eighth Street Baptist Church; Bates H. Ford, 40, and Samuel W. Trimiar, 26.

Released on bonds of $1,000 each were William G. Roberts, 21, Aliquippa, Pa.; Ralph Reavis, 19, Lawrenceville, Va.; James A. Tucker, 22, Clifton Forge, Va.; Elijah J. Regulus, 19, Waycross, Ga.; Jon E. Crawford, 25, Chicago, and Lanksford E. Hawkins, 25, Nathalie, Va., all students at Virginia Theological Seminary and College. No bond was set for Mrs. Gordon because she did not appear in court.

Presbytery Backs Sit-In Movement At Spring Meet

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. Int. 4-29-61 p3

PORTSMOUTH — The Presbytery of Southern Virginia of the United Presbyterian Church in the USA endorsed the sit-in demonstrations against segregation at public lunch counters and in other public places at its 74th stated spring meeting here recently. The meeting was held at the Community Presbyterian Church.

A recommendation on this movement and other current roblems was adopted following a report by the Committee on Social Education and Action which was made by Dr. J. M. Tinsley of Richmond, committee chairman. The title of the report was "Come, Let Us Think On These Things."

The recommendations in the report were as follows:

"2. THAT UNITS of the Presbytery's Committee on Social Education and Action be set up in each local church for implementing the general program of the department of social action and education.

"2. That the Presbytery of Southern Virginia go on record as endorsing the objectives of the "sit-in movement" against segregation at public lunch counters and public accommodations anywhere it is practiced, and that our ministers, ruling elders and communicant members be urged to lend their moral and material support to our brave, courageous and heroic young people in their quest to eliminate the injustice brought on by the evil of segregation and discrimination at public lunch counters and public accommodations anywhere segregation is practiced with special emphasis on businesses operating within the bounds of the jurisdiction of the Presbytery of Southern Virginia,, and the Commonwealth of Virginia.

"3. WE DENOUNCE legalized segregation as an abridgement to the true freedom of all citizens, irrespective of the so-called ethnological back ground, race or creed, and, if we are to survive as Christians and free people, we must find a way to erase these unjust enactments from our code of laws, that ours may be truly 'The Land of the Free, and The Home of the Brave!"

"4. Segregation is not a fact-but only fiction: We are led to believe that legalized segregation, as we know it today, is not a fact, never has been and never can be, but is fiction, at its worse, an empty dream of a dying world and was formerly intended by its original promoters to intimidate freedom - loving people, against the will of a majority and in favor of the few."

Trespass Law Left Standing By US Court

RICHMOND — Despite the fact that the Virginia General Assembly's 1960 amendments to the state trespass law "may fairly be said to have been enacted with an eye to the sit-ins," that does not make them unconstitutional, a three judge special U. S. court ruled on Friday.

The effects of the decision was to deny the contention of 131 persons arrested in Petersburg, Hopewell and Lynchburg demonstrations against segregation that the amendments were a device aimed at continuing racial discrimination and should be outlawed.

THE COURT acted unanimously in holding that "racial segregation on private property" in private possession and operation has never been adjudged illegal.

Acting for the whole court, Judge Albert V. Bryan of Alexandria said that the 131 persons arrested had not shown that the law was used unfairly, or that its use against Negroes was discriminatory.

HE ALSO wrote that the court would not have granted an injunction requested by the 131, even if the amendments had been considered illegal because they had not exhausted their remedies in state courts and had not shown that the amendments would cause them great harm.

The petition for the 131 had contended that the law changes were enacted and used to enforce segregation, and violated the equal protection of the U. S. Constitution.

REPRESENTING the demonstrators were Joseph A. Jordan, E. A. Dawley, Leonard W. Holt and Henry Jones. The state was represented by the attorney general, Albertis S. Harrison and the commonwealth attorneys of the cities involved in the cases, which are still in state courts.

Race Bars Fall At Leesburg

2 Lunch Places Serve Negroes

LEESBURG, Va., April 29 (Special).—Lunch counter integration took place here today after an inter-racial meeting of community leaders.

Three Negroes were served without incident at one drug store and two at another in this community of 3,000 persons.

Mayor George J. Babson said that the decision to let down the racial bar at lunch counters was taken at a meeting of a dozen persons yesterday at the St. James' Church Parish Hall.

Middleburg Cited

"It was a spontaneous meeting of community leaders," the mayor said. "They felt the pressure was on after what happened at Middleburg and that we couldn't allow any problems to arise here."

Attending the conference in addition to the mayor were four Negro leaders, the owners of three drug stores, three ministers and several other town businessmen.

Three lunch counters were integrated in Middleburg early this month after quiet negotiations with the owners.

Group to Meet Again

Mayor Babson said that apparently a sit-in demonstration was planned if the color bar wasn't lifted following the discussion. He said that the group would meet again in the future "to seek a continuous solution to this thing."

The mayor said that Leesburg—where about 15 per cent of the population is Negro—has experienced no racial problems in the past. Negroes have been served at lunch counters "when the owner knew them," the mayor said.

The mayor said that apparently most persons in the town felt there was no alternative but to accept integration.

2 Are Jailed For Sit-Ins At Hopewell

HOPEWELL, Va., April 27 (AP).—Two Negroes have been jailed here following a demonstration which occurred shortly after 33 other Negroes were convicted on trespassing charges in drugstore sit-ins last fall.

The Rev. Curtis Harris was charged with disorderly conduct and Herman Price, 18, was charged with trespassing after they participated in a sit-in at a drugstore yesterday. Both were jailed in lieu of $1,000 bond.

Authorities said a warrant charging disorderly conduct also would be issued for Norfolk Attorney Leonard W. Holt.

Five juvenile girls involved in yesterday's demonstration were released in custody of their parents.

Mr. Holt and the Rev. Mr. Harris led a group of 75 to 100 Negroes through a hymn-singing march through downtown Hopewell, which ended in the sit-in demonstration. Mr. Holt was defense attorney for the Negroes convicted in Municipal Court a short time before.

At the trial three Negro adults—Mrs. Mariah Roberts, Robert Graves, sr., and Simon P. Johnson—received 60-day jail sentences. Thirty juveniles were placed on probation for six months in the custody of their parents.

The adults, free on $250 bond each, noted appeals.

2 Negroes Hired At Lynchburg Store

LYNCHBURG, Va., March 15 (AP)—The secretary-treasurer of Leggett's Department Store chain said today the Lynchburg store has hired two Negro women clerks, putting into effect a policy announced last week by eight firms doing business here.

The two will report for work Thursday. Harold G. Leggett said, as of now, the policy applied only to the operation here. Leggett's operates some 80 stores in five states.

"We're just doing what we think is right—what is best for our stores,"—Leggett said.

A Lynchburg desegregation leader, the Rev. Virgil A. Wood, praised the action and caled it "a courageous move."

The Lynchburg Negro community last week agreed to call off a threatened boycott of stores in the community after the merchants said they would offer employment opportunities to qualified Negro job applicants.

In another development here, the City Council refered to the Lynchburg Interricial Committee a request from the Negro community for an end to segregation in publicly owned facilities.

The Council last night approved a move by Councilman Claude A. Hoskins that the committee hold public hearings and other meetings before reporting its findings and recommendations.

The Rev. Wood, president of the Lynchburg Improvement Association, said the matter did not belong with the interracial group. The Association two weeks ago called for an immediate end to segregation and threatened to seek relief in Federal court.

Sitdown Case Attorney Accused As 'Disorderly'

Exorbitant bail set for minister, youth

HOPEWELL, Va. — Leonard W. Holt, a Norfolk attorney accused of disorderly conduct in connection with a sitdown demonstration, told the AFRO he will surrender to local police authorities on May 29.

Commonwealth Attorney Ligon L. Jones revealed last Wednesday that a disorderly conduct warrant had been issued for Mr. Holt, but was not served because he had left town.

Contacted in Atlanta, Mr. Holt said he would return to Hopewell after completing trial work in Atlanta, Birmingham, Ala., and Louisville, Ky.

He said he expects to be defended by the law firm of Jordan, Dawley and Holt, with the assistance of Judge Sidney Clark of Wilmington, Del., and three Washington, D.C., attorneys, Hank Jones, Simon L. Cain and Wilbur Whitsett.

* * *

THE SITDOWN demonstration followed the trials, April 26, of 30 juveniles and three adults who were among 65 arrested here during last August and September. All were convicted.

Tre defendants and spectators used the empty courtroom for a protest meeting.

* * *

DURING THE meeting six persons announced to the Rev. Curtis Harris (President of the Hopewell Improvement Ass'n) that they were going to stage a sitdown demonstration.

Inspired by the example of the six, the remaining 100 persons in the courtroom decided to protest the convictions and show support for the six going to be arrested by peaceably walking in pairs through the business section of Hopewell. At the head of the column of marches was the Rev. Harris accompanied by Mr. Holt, defense atttorney.

Spontaneously the paraders started singing hymns: "We shall Overcome," "I Shall Not Be Moved," and "We're Marching To Zion." Drawn to the sidewalks to observe were hundreds of employees and shoppers in the downtown area.

Though policemen watched the entire procession, and on one instance directed traffic to allow the marchers to cross an intersection, no attempt by them was made to discourage the demonstration.

* * *

AFTER THE arrest of the six sit - inners had been completed and the protest march had been disbanded, a hurried conference took place in police headquarters.

The Commonwealth's attorney was sent for. Warrants were issued after some research through the criminal code. The Rev. Harris, who had gone to the police station to arrange for the release of the sit-inners, was then arrested on charges of disorderly conduct. A similar charge was brought against Mr. Holt. Bonds of $1,000 were demanded of the Rev. Harris and the one sit-inner over 17 years of age, George Price.

Ordinarily disorderly conduct charges are minor matters disposed of by the person charged forfeiting the usual $10 bond. Requiring $1,000 bonds for disorderly conduct is unheard of, the attorney stated. Bonds of this size are usual only when felonies or violent crimes have occurred, he declared.

HOLT WAS informed of the charges pending against him by long distance phone calls . . as he travelled to Noonan, Ga. in connecton with the hearing arising out of the contempt conviction of Carl Braden and Frank Wilkinson.

While the Rev. Mr. Harris was waiting for someone to post the two $1,000 bonds for George Price and himself, Price was subjected to intensive interrogation, apparently an attempt by police to obtain evidence for other possible charges.

The high bonds and the interrogation are interpreted as an attempt on the part of some city officials to bring all efforts for integration to an immediate halt. Apparently, long term jail sentences will be meted out to both Harris and Holt. Generally, the bonds are indications of the type of sentence that the Commonwealth's attorney expects to get. And the bonds in these cases are exorbitant, the lawyer said.

Under the particular statute involved the maximum punishment is one year in jail and a $500.00 fine.

The sitdown demonstrations began in Hopewell during the summer of last year. Because the sit-inners there are both the oldest and the youngest yet to be involved, nationwide attention was focused on the community.

Three of the 71 persons arrested for sitting in are over 60-years-old (Mrs. Minnie Robinson, John Phillips and Albert Absalom).

There are three sit-inners who were barely 11 years old when arrested. A dozen families within the colored community have as many as two members who are now appealing convictions for sitdown demonstrations, including father, mother and two children in several instances.

CLASS OF '41 TUSKEGEE

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — The Class of 1941 has presented Tuskegee Institute with a $2,500 gift to defray expenses in the construction of a modern chapel at the college. The presentation was made at the 20th class reunion held in conjunction with the 80th anniversary celebration.

Lynchburg Group to Tell City Council To End Segregatio n or Face Court

The Washington Post
Washington, D.C.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Feb. 27 (AP) — The Lynchburg Improvement Association has announced it plans to demand an end to racial segregation nad discrimination in Lynchburg public facilities at a City Council meeting Tuesday.

The Rev. Virgil A. Wood, president of the Association, said failure to comply with the petition would spur the Association to file an omnibus suit against the city government with the U. S. District Court for Western Virginia.

Eighteen persons have been arrested in sit-in demonstrations in Lynchburg since last December. Six were freed last week after serving 19 days of their 30-day sentences. Six others were sentenced last week to 60 days and are serving the time.

Five others are free under bond or with appeals pending, and one adult remains in jail pending a hearing.

Tht suit is designed to force by injunction an end to racial discrimination in Lynchburg public parks, swimming pools, cemeteries, public buildings, courtrooms, schools and all other public facilities.

Mr. Wood said "whereas our city has inflicted and does inflict countless denials of equal opportunity solely because of race, we asked for an immediate end to all discrimination this week.

"We wish to avoid lititgation. Such should be unnecessary if you, our leaders, will act within the framework of your moral conscience.

"If our pleas go unheeded, where is there for us to go, but tohe Federal court; and it is there that we shall go."

Mr. Wood said the suit would be filed in U. S. District Court March 9, the day court hearings are set for some demonstrators.

Len W. Holt of Norfolk, one of a battery of lawyers drawing up the omnibus suit for the Lynchburg Improvement Association, said a similar suit was filed against city officials in Jacksonville, Fla. It resulted in a Federal Court injunction against the city forcing public facilities to open to Negroes as well as white.

Virginia Puts Off Sit-in Case

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP)—Hearings were continued here Tuesday for eight Negroes appealing jail sentences imposed in a sit-in demonstration at a downtown drug store.

The hearing for seven adults, appealing 60-day sentences, was set for April 5. A hearing for 16-year-old girl, sentenced to 30 days, was continued until April 6. The eight defendants continued free on $1,000 bonds each.

6 Sit-ins Released in Lynchburg

The Washington Post
Washington, D.C.

Jail Sentences Cut 11 Days for Good Behavior

Jan 2-25-61

By Elsie Carper
Staff Reporter

LYNCHBURG, Va., Feb. 24—The first group of six college students convicted for "sit-in" demonstrations at a local drug store was released from jail early today.

The four white and two Negro students left after serving 19 days. Their 30-day sentences for trespass were reduced for good behavior.

The students, in individual statements, said they had no regerts. The time they had to think strengthened their convictions that their protest was an expression of the injustice of racial discrimination, they said.

Arrested in December

They were arrested last December when they sought service at the lunch counter in Patterson's store on Main st. The students refused to leave after Manager William Patterson denied them service.

Kenneth Greene, 28, student at the Negro Virginia Theological Seminary and College, was the first released. It was still dark when he left the jail shortly after 6 a. m. A few minutes later, Barbara Thomas, 21, also a student at the Seminary and College, was let out.

Then came George Brumback Jr., 20, and James Hunter, 20, students at Lynchburg College. Shortly afterwards Rebecca Owen, 21, and Mary Edith Dentley, 21, students at Randolph Macon Woman's College, joined the others on the sidewalk. All then walked to a Negro church and discussed their experiences.

The students were carrying stacks of textbooks and bundles of mail they had received.

They were met by college friends and by reporters from two Washington, D. C. newspapers.

The Lynchburg newspapers, the News and the Advance, did not send reporters or photographers to cover the release of the six students whose arrest catapulted their community into prominence.

Lynchburg papers later told the Associated Press they could not provide picture coverage of the release because they did not know the youths were going to be freed so early in the morning. There has been a virtual blackout on picture coverage of the segregation story by the Lynchburg newspapers in the last few days.

The Washington, D.C.

The six students are members of an inter-collegiate study group of students from the three colleges in Lynchburg and nearby Sweetbriar College.

The students said they had received hundreds of letters and cards from around the country and abroad. Included were cards of congratulations and sympathy. At first, they said, City Sergeant Charles M. Watts and his assistants tried to read all the letters but finally gave up and let the mail come in uncensored.

Miss Owen and Miss Bentley, who shared a cell, said they received more than 400 letters and cards on a single day. They were permitted to write two letters a week.

In their mail were letters from students at other colleges saying teh example of the Lynchburg students had given them courage to work for the end of discrimination in their own communities.

There also werel etters from Negroes in Lynchburg. One said "I will pray for you and all persons like you and I hope that your unselfish act will motivate other people to discuss freedom."

Since the six students went to jail, other "sit-ins" have taken place at Patterson's Drug Store. Six additional students from the Theological Seminary and College now are serving 60-day sentences and six others, including two Negro ministers, are out on bond awaiting trial.

Miss Owen, an honor student in religion at Randolph-Macon, said she was especially glad that white students took part in the first Lynchburg "sit-in."

"This is not a problem that the Negro should be called on to combat alone," she said. "We feel no bitterness against Lynchburg."

Brumback said the demonstration at Patterson's was a protest against a policy "which, although now protected by law, represents an invasion of the responsibilities of American citizenship."

"I am more sure than ever in my convictions," he declared.

Hunter said he experienced a feeling of unreality during the 19 days in jail. "I would sit o nthe bunk and think why am I here? What have I done?"

Greene, the oldest of the six students and a Korean war veteran, said of the jail term, "I will come back if it will help the cause."

The students said an attorney had told them while they were in jail that their sentence would be lightened if they would express regret for having broken the trespass law. This they said they would not do.

Miss Bentley, a music major, tried to memorize organ music for a recital she must give this spring. Miss Owen worked on her honors thesis by reading the letters and essays of the German theologian Dietrick Bonhoeffer, written while imprisoned by the Nazis.

The students said they made friends with the jailers and were treated with respect and kindness.

Hunter and Brumback shared a cell. Miss Thomas, alone most of the time, studied. Greene was in a cell with seven others where there was a constant card game.

After atending classes today, Miss Owen went to her home in Saluda, Va., to visit her father, a retired bank official, who has been ill.

Miss Bentley, a native of South Hill, Va., is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Floyd T. Bentley. Her father, a Maryland boy—described by District police as the first juvenile dope addict they have encountered in four years—was awaiting Juvenile Court action yesterday in the Receiving Home.

Juvenile Squad Det. Sgt Charles Calderwood said the youth was picked up Thursday night by Thirteenth Precinc detectives for questioning in

Delay Lynchburg Sit-In Appeal

7 adults, girl, 16, oppose jail terms

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

LYNCHBURG, Va. — Hearings were continued here last week until April 5 and 6 for seven adults and a 16-year-old school girl appealing jail sentences which they were given following their arrest on trespass charges.

The arrests, which followed a sit-down demonstration in a Lynchburg drug store, resulted in 60-day jail sentences for the seven adults and a 30-day jail term for the school girl.

All are free on $1,000 bonds.

* * *

DURING THE week postal cards were sent out over the name of the "Committee of Concerned" asking for neither integration nor segregation, but for our community welfare.

Racial conflict, the cards continued, "has hurt our business and damaged our community name."

The cards said also that an "omnibus suit" was pending and urged businessmen and residents of Lynchburg to "try other ways before being forced . . . Recognizing the inevitable now, may, in the end, preserve our community."

Recipients of the cards were urged to direct their requests for action to halt the city's racial conflict to the City Council, the Bi-Racial Committee, and William Patterson of Patterson's Drug Co.

April trial set

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. — The trials of six high school pupils charged with trespassing during an anti- — The trails of six high were continued Monday to April 10. The six have been released under $100 bond each.

They were arrested during a sit-in at a downtown drug t ore a few minutes after a group of more than 50 had assembled near the courthouse in a segregation protest.

* * *

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — A group of colored boys and girls picketed downtown Fayetteville movie houses Thursday afternoon.

The youngsters formed into squads of five or six members each and marched quietly bearing placards proclaiming: "Marching For Freedom," "A New Day" and other slogans.

They maintained silence despite questions from other persons on the streets.

Case reversed

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The Alabama Court of Appeals Thursday reversed the convictions of the Rev. R. Edwin King (white) of Boston University and Elroy Embroy, a former Alabama State student, who were arrested while attempting to eat together in a hotel coffee shop.

Earlier, on March 7, disorderly conduct charges against them, six other colored students and a white professor from MacMurray College in Jackson, Ill., were thrown out by the court of appeals because the complaint failed to spell out what offense, if any, they committed when the group ate together in a colored restaurant.

Warrants asked

HAMPTON, Va. — Commonwealth Attorney Elwood H. Richardson Jr., has been asked that trespass warrants be issued for 15 Hampton Institute students originally arrested under the law.

The charres of violation of segregated seating statutes were nolle prossed in Hampton Municipal Court last week. April 7 has been set for the start of hearings on the new charges.

* * *

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Charles Jones, a theological student at Johnson C. Smith University, who spent 30 days in jail following his arrest during a sit-in demonstration at Rock Hill, S.C. last Feb. 7, has been reinstated as a student at Smith, university officials announced last week.

272 in Ky. jail

LOUISVILLE, Ky., — A total of 272 arrests have been made here to date in connection with the NAACP sponsored withholding of patronage campaign against the downtwn shopping area.

The arrests stem from the NAACP's "Nothing New for Easter" drive against segregation and involves the city's 75,000 Negroes.

Local NAACP president, the Rev. W. J. Hodge, estiates that Negroes spend $18 million annually here.

Mr. Hodge and J. Earl Dearing, president of the Association's State Conference of Branches, are among those appointed by Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell to a special committee to iron out the crisis.

Kentucky Gov. Bert T. Combs entered recent integration talks at city hall as students and adults substituted prayer for demonstrations. After the meeting, the governor told newsmen, "It was a very informative discussion . . . We're going to play it by ear."

In Juvenile Court, Judge Henry Triplett overrulled a defense motion that he vacate the bench in trials of 17 youths and one adult arrested in demonstrations and postponed trial of their cases.

About 450 students and adults met as usual but instead of marching downtown again, they spent the period singing and praying on the gneral theme of brotherhood.

A white man slugged an Episcopal priest and an elderly white woman was injured as an aftermath of Chattanooga's latest theater stand-in demonstration.

In addition nine young persons who tried to buy tickets to a white movie theater were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

Ask law change

GREENVILLE, S.C. — A petition reuesting the repeal of a section of the City Code regulating serving of meals to white and colored people in public places has been presented to Mayor J. Kenneth Cass, with copies sent to managers of three leading variety stores in the city.

The petition preapred by tan Attorney Donald Sampson states that the offensive section is a "clear example of police power which may be inconsistent with Constitutional liberties and business ethics."

* * *

COLUMBIA, S.C.—Thirty-six demonstrators, including a minister and a 24-year-old student who was knifed by a white man, were convicted here on breach of the peace charges.

The trials of all, including the injured student, Lennie Glover of Adah, Pa., stemmed from an anti - segregation march on the State House March 2. Glover attends Benedict College here.

The minister convicted along with Glover was the Rev. Benjamin Glover, no relation, of Charleston. Both were given fines of $100 or 30 days in jail.

Supreme Court Asked To Review Va. Sit-In Cases

Atlanta Daily World

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U. S. Supreme Court was petitioned this week to review the cases of 34 Negro students who conducted a lunch counter "sit-in" in Richmond, Va., last year.

In a petition for certiorari filed July 22, attorneys for the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund ask the nation's highest court to review an April 24, 1961 decision by the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia which upholds the students' convictions.

The students, who attended Virginia Union University, demonstrated at Thalhimer's, one of Richmond's largest department stores, on February 20, 1960, and were arrested and fined $20 each.

They had attempted to obtain service at two lunch counters, a soup bar and a restaurant reserved for white people. The store maintains a lunch counter for Negroes in its basement.

Atlanta Daily World

During the demonstration, which was entirely peaceful, the Negro group was refused service and asked to leave the store. When they remained, police were called and the students were arrested.

RESULTS IN CONVICTION

Their cases were tried in a Richmond police court ,resulting in conviction under a Virginia statute which makes it a crime not to get off private property when ordered to do so by an owner, or by someone acting for the owner.

In subsequent appeals, the convictions were upheld by the Hustings Court in Richmond, and the aforementioned Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

The Legal Defense Fund petition contends that the Virginia arrests were motivated by segregation, maintain by state law, and "constituted state enforcement of racial discrimination contrary to the due process and equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment."

"Thalhimer's," the attorneys argue, "as a great department store, is part of the public life of the community. .... In choosing to exclude Negroes from some of its restaurants, and to expel from the store all who protest against this humiliation, Thalhimer's followed a policy of public racial discrimination."

The petition also maintains that the students, as citizens, have the right to express themselves "on topics connected with their relations with the store," and that these expressions were at all times moderate and peaceful.

The Legal Defense Fund attorneys also contend that the convictions "were obtained without clear evidence in any of the cases, of notice to petitioners of the authority, or even the identity, of the store employee who ordered them out."

Wisconsin Civil Rights Sit-In Ending, Hope for Laws Lost

Evening Star D A5 Sat 8-12-61

Washington D.C.

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 12 (AP).—Civil rights demonstrators, satisfied that their Capitol sit-in had at least brought attention to their cause, prepared today to go home.

The demonstrators' 13-day-and-night vigil in the Capitol Building rotunda had no effect on legislation.

The Legislature slammed the door yesterday on the last hope held by the demonstrators for favorable action on civil rights bills supported by the group.

Bills aimed at prohibiting racial discrimination in public housing programs and to increase the power of the Governor's Commission on Human Rights were killed as both houses rushed through their business in hope of recessing today until next fall.

Lloyd Barbee, Madison, president of the Wisconsin chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said his group, which sponsored the demonstration, was disappointed but not disheartened.

He said he believed the demonstration had some good results.

"There was a time when legislators wouldn't even admit there was a housing discrimination problem in Wisconsin," Mr. Barbee said. "At least they recognize the problem now."

"I also believe the public has a better understanding of the situation because of this sit-in," he said.

Mr. Barbee added that when the demonstration ends the final group of sit-ins—16 persons seated before the 16 columns in the Statehouse rotunda—will walk quietly out the west exit, the same way they came in July 31.

SIT-IN STAGED IN WISCONSIN STATE CAPITOL

Chicago Tribune D 9 Tues 8-1-61

16 Vow to Stay Until Rights Bills Pass

Chicago Ill

Madison, Wis., July 31 (UPI)—Members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People seated themselves in the state capitol today and vowed to remain until the legislature acts on bills dealing with civil rights in housing or adjourns for the summer.

Sixteen persons—both white and Negro—stationed themselves at pillars in the capitol rotunda. They plan to relieve each other to continue an "around the clock" vigil in protesting the legislature's failure so far to pass the bills.

Two Measures Killed

Bills to give the governor's commission on human rights broad powers to curb discrimination in housing are still to be acted on by the Senate. The Assembly has already killed two such measures.

The demonstrators criticized Sen. Leo O'Brien [R., Green Bay], for what they called "bottling up" two bills in the Senate governmental and veterans' affairs committee, of which he is chairman.

They said minority groups still are discriminated against in Wisconsin "in housing, employment, and public accommodations." They emphasized that their protest is nonviolent.

Assemblyman Sherman Sobocinski [D., Milwaukee] last night challenged Gov. Gaylord Nelson to take a public stand on the controversial bills. Sobocinski and three other Milwaukee county Democrats have been criticized for voting against the bills.

Urges Enactment

Fairfield said Nelson sponsored the bills killed in the Assembly and still before the Senate. He said the governor appeared before Democratic caususes in the legislature to urge their enactment.

Fairfield said Nelson took public stands for such legislation 10 years ago when he was a member of the state Senate.

Meanwhile inside the capitol, debate on the Republican tax revision bill began in the assembly with several G. O. P. members vowing not to support the measure unless it is revamped.

The Assembly took up the bill despite a proposal to Gov. Nelson by Lt. Gov. Warren Knowles that debate in the lower house be delayed so that Nelson could hold a bipartisan conference with legislators to work out a compromise on Wisconsin's tax problems.

Dislike Tax Proposal

Nelson has not commented on Knowles' suggestion.

A group of Republican assemblymen said last week they were unsatisfied with the tax proposals centered around a 3 per cent sales tax—as passed by the Senate Thursday, 17 to 16.

Several want withholding incorporated into the bill, others object to the 50 per cent reduction of personal property taxes as inadequate. At least one G. O. P. assemblyman is flatly opposed to the sales tax.

100 Stage Sit-In In Wisconsin Capitol Rotunda

Philadelphia Inquirer D 6 Wed 8-2-61

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 1 (UPI)—"Freedom Lobbyists" completed the first 24 hours of an around-the-clock sit-in in Wisconsin's Capitol on Tuesday in their campaign for a state ban against segregated housing.

There were no incidents as the 100 Negro and white volunteers, working in 16-person shifts, kept their vigil in the Capitol rotunda.

There also was little evidence that their demonstration would speed committee approval of fair housing practices bills.

'NO EFFECT'

Philadelphia Pa

State Sen. Leo O'Brien, who heads the committee on Governmental and Veterans Affairs, which is condering the bills, said the sit-in would have no effect on the committee's operations.

The Green Bay Republican said the bills would be handled under "due process." He would not comment further.

Leaders of the "Freedom Lobbyists" have accused O'Brien of bottling up the bills. During the first night of their sit-in, the volunteers slept on the Capitol's marble floor or on chairs surrounding the rotunda.

The "Freedom Lobbyists" said they would stay in the Capitol, day and night, until the bills are passed or until the State Legislature adjourns.

'WE WILL RETURN'

Bernard Mann, an accountant for the Wisconsin Highway Commission and a Negro, said if the Legislature adjourns without approving the bills, "we will be back for the next session."

The volunteers, recruited mostly from the Madison branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, have permission to stay in the Capitol over the week end even if the Capitol is closed, a Capitol Guard said.

AUGUST

MADISON- SIT-IN (SEGREGATED HOUSING)

The Wisconsin Assembly has killed two measures to give the Governor's Human Rights Commission broad powers to curb racial segregation in housing. Similar bills are pending in the Senate.

8 Sentenced to Jail In Alexandria Sit-in

The Washington Post
P. 1
Thurs - 8-31-61

By Everard Munsey
Staff Reporter

The first jail terms for sit-ins in Northern Virginia were handed down yesterday by an Alexandria Municipal Court judge.

Judge James N. Colasanto convicted eight demonstrators, associated with the Congress of Racial Equality, for refusing to leave the 403 Restaurant, at 403 King st., Tuesday.

After verbally chastising the group, the Judge asked for a recommendation of "severe" punishment from the prosecutor. He imposed fines of $250 and 6-month jail terms for each. The terms will be suspended after 30 days on condition of good behavior.

A. Melvin Miller and Otto Tucker, attorneys for the demonstrators, appealed the convictions.

The demonstrators released under bond of $250 each, returned to the restaurant to picket during the afternoon.

Restaurant owner Alfred C. Pilla testified that the demonstrators, including two juveniles not tried yesterday, refused his request that they leave and ignored a policeman's warning.

Betty Jean Daniels, 20, of New Orleans, testified that although Pilla had previously refused to serve her she entered "because I was hungry ... wanted to be served."

Besides Miss Daniels, who said she is a student of English at Louisiana State University, the others convicted were: Roobert H. Balogh, 22, a New York City school teacher; Inga B. Powell, 31, an instructor at the University of California at Berkeley; William B. Greene, 28, a Hollywood radio and TV writer; Sidney M. Goldfarb, 18, of Peabody, Mass., a student at Harvard; Rudolph J. Lambard, 22, of New Orleans, a student at Syracuse; Mildred L. Winfrey, 19, listed at 634 North Alfred st., Alexandria, and Kathrina Dunlop, 19, listed at 406 North Payne st., Alexandria, a student at Virginia Tech.

Called Unconstitutional

Miller and Tucker argued that the application of the trespassj law was unconstitutional because the State acted to enforce the racial discrimination of the proprietor in the violation of the 14th Amendment.

Judge Colasanto said the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals has ruled that the trespass law is "not a segregation issue." He noted that three of the sit-in demonstrators are white.

The sit-ins "are a deliberate attempt to force people to do something contrary to their individual beliefs. These things have to come in due course and not by force. This has to stop," the Judge said.

Alexandria Mayor Frank E. Mann, who attended the trial, said the City's concern is to protect the demonstrators and to allow them to use public spaces for any legal actions to protest what they feel are injustices. "If a private owner wants to get warrants (for trespass) that's up to him," he said.

10 in Restaurant Sit-In Due in Virginia Court

Evening Star
Wed - 8-30-61
Washington, D.C.

Ten sit-in demonstrators are scheduled to appear in court today on charges of trespassing in an Alexandria restaurant, where they were refused service.

The demonstrators were arrested in two groups yesterday. Six members of the CORE Interracial Action Institute were arrested at noon. Four other demonstrators, including two juvenile girls were arrested in late afternoon.

Both attempted sit-ins occurred at the 403 Restaurant, 403 King street. Alfred C. Pilla, the restaurant owner, asked the demonstrators to leave and, when they did not, he called in police. Mr. Pilla swore out warrants against the demonstrators.

The demonstrators were charged with trespassing after being forbidden to do so, which was stiffened recently to deal with sit-ins.

The maximum penalty is a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Spend Night in Jail

Police reported that all the demonstrators, with the exception of the two juvenile girls, spent the night in jail. Bond for those held in jail was listed at $250. The juveniles were released to their parents.

CORE (Congress of Racial Equality) has been holding an action institute at the Mount Vernon Unitarian Church in Fairfax County. It has been picketing the 403 Restaurant and three other King street eating places because attempts to negotiate integration had failed.

Almost a year ago, a local biracial committee effected integration at a number of restaurants and chain store lunch counters in the city, There were no demonstrations.

Members Arrested

The six CORE Institute members arrested by police were listed as:

William B. Greene, 28, a writer, television and radio announcer from Hollywood, Calif.; Inge B. Powell, 31, a teacher at the University of Califronia at Berkeley; Robert H. Ballough, 22, of Bayside, Long Island, a teacher in New York City schools; Betty Jean Daniels, 20, of New Orleans; Sidney M. Goldfarb, 18, of Peabody, Mass., and Rudolf J. Lombard, 22, of New Orleans. Miss Daniels, Mrs. Goldfarb, and Mr. Lombard were listed as students, but their schools were not identified.

Mr. Ballogh, Miss Powell and Mr. Goldfarb are white.

Shortly after 4 p.m. four Negro girls, not connected with the CORE Institute, were arrested. They were listed by police as Mildred L. Winfrey, 19, of 634 North Alfred street, an office worker; Kathina Mae Dunlop, 19, of 406 North Payne street, a student, and two 17-year-old girls. All four are from Alexandria. The juveniles will be tried in Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court and the adults in Municipal Court.

NOVEMBER

38a 1961

VIRGINIA

SIT INS

Alexandria Convicts Six in Sit-In Appeal

An Alexandria Corporation Court jury yesterday found six sit-in demonstrators guilty of violating Virginia trespass laws, and set their penalty at fines of $100 each, omitting the jail terms they were given earlier.

Their cases had been appealed from the city's municipal court, where the demonstrators were fined $250 each and given six-month jail terms, with five months suspended.

In addition to the six fined by the jury, attorneys for both sides agreed that the same evidence applied in the cases of two other demonstrators. They also were found guilty, and fined $100 each.

An all-white five-member jury deliberated 34 minutes before returning the guilty verdict.

See From Distant Points

Those found guilty today were William B. Greene, 28, of Hollywood, Calif.; Sidney M. Goldfarb, 18, of Peabody, Mass.; Rudolph J. Lombard, 22, New Orleans, La.; Robert H. Barlogh, 22, of New York; Inge B. Powell, 31, of Berkeley, Calif., and Betty Jean Daniels, 20, of New Orleans.

Testimony in the case was brief. Alfred C. Pilla, owner of the 403 Restaurant on King street, told how the six demonstrators entered his place August 29 and refused to leave when he asked them to.

Under cross-examination, Mr. Pilla said the defendants, three of them white and three Negro, were properly dressed and orderly. He said he just did not serve Negroes.

Alexandria Police Patrolman C. T. Callahan told how Mr. Pilla beckoned him inside, where the six demonstrators again refused to leave on the patrolman's orders. Patrolman Callahan then arrested them.

Commonwealths Attorney Earl F. Wagner, in summing up, told the jury that the trespassing statute is designed to protect the rights of restaurants to serve whom they choose.

Defense Attorney Otto Tucker told the jury "these defendants are members of the human race . . . they are part of the general public."

Mr. Tucker asked for light sentences if a guilty verdict were to be returned.

After the defendants were found guilty, S. W. Tucker of Richmond, Otto Tucker's brother, moved that the verdict be set aside and that the sentence be suspended to permit time to file the necessary papers for appeal.

Judge William Woolls gave the defense 60 days in which to file.

Two Others Convicted

Later, the defense and prosecution agreed that the same evidence applied to the two remaining defendants in the case, Mildred L. Winfrey, 19, of the 600 block of North Alfred street and Katrina Dunlop, 19, of the 400 block of North Payne street, both in Alexandria.

They were also found guilty and fined $100 each.

8 Convicted in Appeal From Sit-In Verdicts

By Walter Douglas
Staff Reporter

Eight sit-in demonstrators convicted last August of violating the Virginia trespass law in Alexandria were again found guilty yesterday in their appeal to the City Corporation Court, but won reduced sentences.

An all-white jury of three men and two women returned the verdict and fixed the sentences at $100 fines after deliberating 34 minutes. Defense attorneys A. Melvin Miller and Otto Tucker said a further appeal is planned to the State Supreme Court of Appeals.

The eight, who are associated with the Congress of Racial Equality, were sentenced originally to 6-month jail terms to be suspended after 30 days on condition of good behavior and fines of $250 each by Municipal Court Judge James N. Colasanto.

Yesterday, Alfred C. Philla, owner of the 403 Restaurant, 403 King st., testified that the demonstrators refused his requests to leave his establishment Aug. 29.

Six arrested at a noon-time sit-in were: Betty Jean Daniels, 20, of New Orleans, a student at Louisiana State University; Robert H. Balogh, 22, a New York school teacher; Inge B. Powell, 31, an instructor at the University of California at Berkeley; William B. Greene, 28, a Hollywood radio and television writer; Sidney M. Goldfarb, 18, a Harvard student from Peabody, Mass., and Rudolph J. Lombard, 22, a Syracuse University student from New Orleans.

Arrested at another sit-in at the restaurant later in the afternoon were, Mildred L. Winfrey, 19, listed at 634 N. Alfred st.; Kathrina Dunlop, 19, listed at 406 N. Payne st., a student at Virginia Tech, and two juveniles.

Commonwealth's Attorney Earl F. Wagner told the jury trying the first six demonstrators that it should determine how much punishment to be given to "act as a deterrant to others."

Tucker told the jury that "these defendants are members of the human race—part of the general public." He said there is no way for any one of the general public to determine if an establishment is run by someone who has a "pet prejudice."

After the jury found the first six defendants guilty, Judge William P. Woolls sentenced the other two to the same $100 fine when both sides stipulated that the same testimony would apply to their case.

Staff Photo

SQUAT-IN DEMONSTRATION, used yesterday for the first time in the Negro drive against segregation in downtown eating places here, was employed in front of the Walnut Street Blue Boar cafeteria.

155 Negroes Jailed; 'Squat' Tactic Used

Demonstrators Stop On Walk At 2 Places; 4 Are Unknowingly Served At Blue Boar

Negroes used new tactics yesterday in their demonstrations against segregation in downtown eating places.

Teen-age Negroes and a few adults squatted on the sidewalk in front of the Walnut Street Blue Boar cafeteria and the White Swan Restaurant, 566 S. Fifth.

Earlier in the day four light-skinned Negro women were unknowingly served in the Blue Boar while 16 Negro men and women who were refused admission walked in picket circles outside.

The "squatting" technique brought the arrest of 127 demonstrators by City police—117 juveniles and 10 adults, all in the afternoon Blue Boar demonstration. Twenty-eight others were arrested inside the Kupie Double Burger, 456 S. Fifth.

Breach Of Peace Charged

All those arrested by City police were charged with breach of the peace. Those at the Kupie were arrested on warrants, also charging breach of peace.

The demonstrators, led by Frank L. Stanley, Jr., cochairman of the Negro steering committee, marched from their rally point at Quinn Chapel to the sidewalk in front of the Kentucky Hotel on Walnut. There they were formed into three single-file lines which moved to the front of the Blue Boar.

Once in front of the place, the demonstrators squatted down on the sidewalk. They left clear an area in front of the cafeteria windows, and it was through this area that customers passed to enter the place. To do so, white patrons had to pass under guardrailings that have been installed at the entrance since the demonstrations began.

Some cafeteria customers kneed their way through the squatting students but there was little of the shoving of other demonstrations at the Blue Boar.

The students sat and sang their familiar "Freedom" and "We shall not be moved" choruses and added some tunes of rock-'n'-roll beat—"We love integration like a houn' dog loves his bone," and "He's got the Blue Boar in His Hand."

A crowd estimated at almost 1,000 gathered on both sides of Walnut as the demonstrations progressed.

Police stood by, watching, and after about 50 minutes moved in to ask the demonstrators to move. When they refused, arrests were made. As patrol wagons carried away arrested demonstrators, other Negroes replaced them.

Patron Faints

A Blue Boar patron, Mrs. Ida Moore, 60, of 4322 Taylor Boulevard, fainted inside the cafeteria and police took her to Norton Memorial Infirmary. She was treated there and released.

About 20 demonstrators squatted in front of the White Swan Restaurant until they were called to re-enforce the Blue Boar contingent.

Employees at the White Swan reportedly poured mop water on the floor by the front door and swept it out on the sidewalk under the squatters.

Other demonstrators took seats in Kupie Double Burger and remained there. They were not served.

Two Negroes were served at O'Neill's, Inc., a restaurant in the Starks Building. They left soon after they had eaten.

Williams Food Shop, Fifth and Market, closed its doors before the demonstrators arrived.

Stanley asked L. Eugene Johnson, owner of the Blue Boar, if he would negotiate with the Negro steering committee.

"Not until you call off these demonstrations," Johnson answered. "One week after you stop this mob action I'll meet with you."

Stanley said this would be "putting conditions on it" and offered to "meet right now—I'll call it off right now." Johnson refused.

When the four light-skinned women emerged from the cafeteria, they were cheered by the Negroes who had been picketing outside.

During the time the Negro women were inside, Blue Boar employees guarding the entrance refused to allow reporters and photographers to enter.

Later a Courier-Journal photographer, William Strode, got inside an dtook a picture of three of the women before he was ordered out.

Johnson said it was the practice of the cafeteria to serve Negroes if they got inside and up to the serving counter without being noticed. "Rather than embarrass them, we normally serve them," he said, and then inform them of the Blue Boar's policy not to admit Negroes.

'First Invitation'

Johnson also said that Stanley's offer to negotiate was the first invitation to meet with the Negro steering committee he has had. He said he had met twice with the Mayor's integration committee but "we've never been asked to meet with the steering committee."

Stanley had said earlier that he planned no demonstrations yesterday. Four members of the Negro steering committee accompanied members of the Mayor's committee to St. Louis to see hod desegregation of downtown establishments was accomplished there.

When asked why he did not go to St. Louis, Stanley winked and said, "Strategy."

Raps 'Inconsistency'

The four light-skinned Negro women unwittingly served at the Blue Boar about 11 a.m. were Mrs. Charles Steele, wife of the executive director of the Louisville Urban League; Mrs. Marjorie Miles, whose husband operates a drugstore at 15th and Walnut; Mrs. J. E. Hankins, wife of the president of Mammoth Life Insurance Company, and Miss Dorothy Rhodes.

Stanley issued a statement saying: "How inconsistent can the policy of segregation be? Negroes are Negroes and only by the difference of color, some were served, and others refused."

Stand-In Cases Pending In Courts

Trials of 14 teenage students and 7 adults arrested in connection with stand-in demonstrations against Stewart's Dry Goods Company and Fourth Street theaters have been continued in Juvenile and Police Court.

Police arrested a total of 72 student picketers and stand-in demonstrators Tuesday through Friday of last week. The later 58 were not formally charged.

K. D. Kerr, 39, of 6303 Camp Ground Road, was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor in Juvenile Court and disorderly conduct in Police Court. Juvenile Court charges were continued until March 16 and his police court case continued until March 28.

Delinquency cases against the 14 students were continued until March 16 cases of the other six adults were continued until March 16.

Staff Photo

WAITING FOR THE WAGON, demonstrating Negro students sing and clap rhythmically next door to the Mary Anderson Theater, where police arrested them. Theater was scene of many arrests. All were accused of blocking sidewalk.

Arrest Of 175 Quells Segregation Protest

3 Negro Leaders Included; Liveliest Demonstration Yet At Theaters, Cafes

Mass arrests, including those of three Negro integration leaders, quelled the liveliest Louisville demonstration to date against downtown segregation yesterday.

Platoons of police hauled off about 175 Negroes to Police Headquarters, including three members of the Negro steering committee that is directing the campaign against segregated theater and eating facilities.

The arrested leaders were Frank L. Stanley, Jr., 24-year-old assistant to the publisher of the weekly Louisville Defender; the Rev. W. J. Hodge, 40, pastor of Fifth Street Baptist Church, and the Rev. F. G. Sampson, 35, pastor of Mount Lebanon Baptist Church.

All Three Charged

Stanley and Mr. Hodge are two of the three cochairmen of the steering committee. All three were charged with disorderly conduct and released on bond provided by representatives of the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People.

Earlier in the day, both Mayor Hoblitzell and the steering committee expressed willingness to resume negotiations aimed at opening all downtown business facilities to Negroes. Hoblitzell denied he had said there would be no more negotiations until the demonstrations were called off.

The Mayor indicated his committee on integration might meet again tomorrow. He said it had not met this week mostly because "half of its members are out of town."

No Meetings Since

Negroes resumed downtown parading and demonstrations last Friday after 13 days of negotiations failed to produce enough progress to satisfy them. The Mayor's committee, composed of top business and civic leaders, has not met since then.

Yesterday's demonstration by around 300 persons may not have been the largest of the seven staged here, but it produced arrests far exceeding those in all previous demonstrations put together.

Demonstrators concentrated yesterday on four theaters in the 600 block of South Fourth, and on the Blue Boar cafeterias at 644 S. Fourth and 410 W. Walnut. A fifth theater in the area, the Rialto, is closed for installation of Cinerama equipment.

Five adults and 170 juveniles were included in the 175 arrested. Besides the three leaders the adults were Areatha Lorraine Swint, 19, of 1036 Cedar Court, and Marshall Wilbert Moore, 20, of 606 E. Caldwell. All were charged with disorderly conduct and released on bond.

Groups Sing Loudly

The Negroes sang loudly as they circulated in front of the theaters. None of the businesses closed during the demonstrations, and the Blue Boars continued to admit white customers. The Brown Theater, around the corner on Broadway, was not affected.

Stanley said the demonstration was timed to coincide with a meeting of the Louisville Board of Aldermen, and that it would continue until the meeting ended. But it broke up at 6:25 p.m. after the participants were arrested.

Police Chief William Bindner said blocking of sidewalks was the reason for the arrests.

Concerning further negotiations, Mr. Hodge said before the demonstration, "We have let it be known to Mayor Hoblitzell that we're ready for the negotiations to resume as quickly as possible."

Passers-By Let Through

The Negro youths, with a scattering of adults, circulated past movie ticket windows and Blue Boar entrances in elliptical orbits. Their lines opened to let passers-by through. When a group stood still too long, police rounded up several Negroes for arrests, directing them into patrol wagons, or if no wagon was immediately available, corralling them against the fronts of buildings.

The youngsters went willingly, starting a lusty song of "Freedom, freedom, everybody wants freedom" as they entered the wagons. Inside, they stamped and clapped, sometimes rocking the wagon on its springs.

Most Paroled To Parents

They were still singing and clapping as they arrived at Police Headquarters, where the Crime Prevention Bureau was hard put to book them as fast as they came in. Some were placed temporarily in the Police Gymnasium. Most were paroled to parents, who arrived in a steady stream to pick up their children.

Capt. George Haendiges, chief of the Crime Prevention Bureau, said those arrested for the second time were sent to Children's Center. The juveniles were charged with delinquency, the adults with disorderly conduct. N.A.A.C.P. representatives were on hand at Police Court to make bond for the adults.

Patrol Wagon Damaged

Police reported the leather seat in one patrol wagon was ripped by the students.

Before the march, the demonstrators gathered as usual at Quinn Chapel A.M.E. Church, 912 W. Chestnut, for instructions.

A member of the Negroes' steering committee, the Rev. F. B. Sampson, told them:

"Under no conditions are you to abuse anyone with words or with your hands. If you feel that you cannot hold your temper, please don't go. If you don't want to get arrested, please don't go."

Laughter greeted his last admonition.

The demonstrators raised their hands and repeated after Miss Beverly Neal, a C.O.R.E. leader, a pledge not to push back or hit back, and to "treat the other person as a man, even though he denies my humanity."

They then left for Fourth Street in groups, each group with a specific assignment. They carried signs reading, "Christ Died for All," "Land of The Free? ? ?," "The Eyes of The World Are on Louisville," "The Time Is Now!", and the like.

The Mary Anderson Theater was the scene of a large number of the arrests, including those of Mr. Hodge and Mr. Sampson. A merchant policeman stood squarely in front of the box office. The Negro youngsters baited him, trying to make him look them in the eye, holding a dollar bill in his face, and asking, "What's the matter, isn't my money as good as anybody else's?"

Bill Passed Along Line

Sometimes a dollar bill was passed from hand to hand as the line moved past the box office. At 5 p.m. the woman inside changed a sign to make the price $1.50 for adults, 50 cents for children.

At other theaters there was less baiting, the children filing past and chirping "Ticket, please," or saying nothing.

At the Walnut Street Blue Boar, about 25 demonstrators, mostly adults, circulated quietly. No City police were present, and only one merchant policeman guarded the door, letting white people in.

Signs Carried

The demonstrators carried signs, such as "We Like Louisville But Not Jim Crow," which they held up for persons inside the glass-fronted building to see.

As arrests depleted the line at United Artists Theater around 5:30 p.m., Stanley appeared at the head of a group marching south on Fourth to bolster the pickets.

Police Chief Bindner took Stanley by the arm from a moving line at the United Artists and steered him to a patrol wagon. Neither spoke. A group of students was loaded in behind Stanley.

Fewer Sing Louder

The singing seemed to grow louder as the lines grew smaller, and observers reported no weeping by arrested children, as had occurred in earlier demonstrations.

At 6:25 p.m., 15 to 20 police at the Mary Anderson loaded the last of the pickets there, including Mr. Sampson, into a wagon. A group of about 27 youths at the Kentucky Theater marched off down the street still singing, and Fourth Street was quiet again.

The only reported casualty was Police Capt. Charles V. Morris, who suffered an attack attributed to high blood pressure about 5:30 p.m. He was taken to General Hospital, where his condition was listed as good. He was to be moved to Methodist Evangelical Hospital later.

Places Serving Beer, Liquor Face Sit-Ins

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.
4-20-61
Page 1, 5

The Negro sit-in demonstrations aimed at desegregation of downtown eating places will be extended soon to those serving beer and liquor.

This was announced yesterday by Frank Stanley, Jr., one of the cochairmen of a Negro steering committee directing integration efforts.

He called for "as many adults as possible wishing to participate in our demonstrations" to meet with student demonstrators at 3:30 p.m. today at Quinn Chapel A.M.E. Church, 912 W. Chestnut.

He said that many downtown eating places had bar facilities and "adults will be used in these places."

Asked if Negroes planned to begin the new sit-ins today, Stanley said, "I'd rather not say now."

Stanley announced the new plan after Dr. Martin Luther King, Atlanta integration leader, spoke at Quinn Chapel.

Stanley said three days of sit-ins by Negro students had brought about the desegregation of 16 eating places, but "we're still a long way from our goal."

Cases Are Passed

He said that if eating places continued t orefuse to serve Negroes, "We will demonstrate up to and through Derby weekend."

The cases of 38 juveniles arrested Tuesday on breach-of-peace charges at Kupie Double Burger, 456 S. Fifth, were passed to 10 a.m. June 22 in Juvenile Court yesterday. All were paroled to their parents.

Two 19-year-old boys were also arrested Tuesday at the Fifth Street place. One of them, Henry C. Anderson, Jr., 1227 S. 41st, was originally listed as being 17.

Takes Out Warrant

Robert F. Whitehouse, coowner of the Kupie, yesterday took out a breach-of-peace warrant against Anderson. Whitehouse signed a similar warrant Tuesday night against Charles W. Rhodes, 1026 Cedar. Police also placed a breach-of-peace charge against Rhodes.

Anderson was released yesterday on $25 bond. His case will come up in Police Court today.

A motion for a jury trial was filed in Police Court yesterday in behalf of Rhodes. The paper was signed by four attorneys who have been active in representing persons arrested in desegrgeation demonstrations here.

Judge Hugo Taustine said he had not decided whether to hold jury trials in Police Court and set a hearing May 25 for Rhodes, who is at liberty under $100 bond.

Staff Photo

FILLING UP . . . A police patrol wagon is loaded with demonstrating Negroes in front of the Rialto Theater on Fourth Street. Police search demonstrators before loading them. In background a group stands patiently at the ticket window. The patrol returned and got them later.

50 Arrested On Fourth Street As Negroes Demonstrate Again

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.
Hauled Away
In Police Vans
Mar. 25-61
P 1

More than 50 persons were arrested on Fourth Street yesterday afternoon as Negroes conducted demonstrations against discrimination for the third straight day.

Vanload after vanload of Negroes and some whites, most of them juveniles, were hauled away from in front of theaters.

They sang "The Battle Hymn of The Republic."

The demonstrations began shortly after 4 p.m. and ended about 5:15 p.m. when the Rev. Philip Smith left an emergency conference of civic leaders with the Mayor at City Hall and asked the demonstrators to go home.

Active In C.O.R.E. Here

Mr. Smith, pastor of First Unitarian Church, has been active in the Louisville chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality.

Many of the demonstrators had already been taken to jail on disorderly conduct charges when Mr. Smith arrived.

The demonstration was split into two divisions. One group carrying signs picketed Kaufman's of Kentucky and Stewart Dry Goods Company. The other with no signs, lined up in front of Fourth Street theaters and tried to buy tickets.

Most of the arrests occurred at the theaters.

'Blocking Entrance'

Police Chief William E. Bindner arrested siv girls and one boy at the Ohio Theater. He said they were blocking the entrance. Three other girls just in front of the box office were not arrested.

Clerks remained in all the theater box offices, but the windows of the box offices were closed.

At the Mary Anderson Theater a merchant policeman lined up a group of youths and then told Police Capt. Carl Dotson to arrest the two on the end. The captain refused, commenting:

"These kids aren't doing anything wrong."

A white man was arrested near the Rialto. Bindner said he would be charged with "interference." He was offering "encouragement" to the Negroes, Bindner said.

A bullet was found in the man's pocket. He said there was no powder in it. He refused to talk to reporters.

A Negro youth in front of the Rialto said the group planned to stay "until we get in." After an hour, merchant policeman L. N. Smith announced that all were under arrest.

He began shoving girls over to a corner, jabbing at some with his stick. Some broke by him to return to the box office. He shoved harder. When one girl protested, others in the group calmed her.

A police patrol finally hauled the group off after Mr. Smith, the Unitarian minister, tried to intervene with Bindner and prevent it.

"They are under arrest," Bindner said.

Several Girls Cry

The Negroes, with a few whites sprinkled among them, were for the most part docile, determined, and resigned to arrest. But several girls cried as they were put into police cars and patrol wagons.

Large crowds gathered. Police ordered everyone to keep moving along the streets.

At the Walnut Street Blue Boar Cafeteria, a Negro detective in plain clothes mingled with demonstrators and arrested one boy he said ordered others to block the door. The boy said he didn't say "block" it.

"This is the second time I have been so disorderly as to be arrested," the bespectacled boy commented. He pulled a sandwich from his pocket and began eating it as he was placed in the police car.

The signs carried by pickets at Stewart's included one with this message: "Buy nothing for Easter."

It was obviously a reference to a "shopping vacation" being urged by the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People and set to begin Monday.

'Squat-Ins' Reported In Louisville

Louisville, Ky.
Mar. 25 61
P 1
3-11
Courier-Journal

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Anti-segregation demonstrators came up Monday with new tactics. Instead of sit-ins they squatted on the sidewalks in front of two downtown restaurants.

Police arrested 155 and charged them with breach of peace.

Police said 117 juveniles and 10 adults were arrested at a cafeteria and 28 others were seized inside a restaurant.

Earlier, four light-skinned Negro women were unknowingly served in the Blue Boar while 16 Negroes walked in circles outside after being refused admittance.

Demonstrations have been carried out intermittently for two months in seeking integrated facilities in the downtown business area.

Staff Photo

NEGRO PICKETS march down Walnut Street headed for Stewart Dry Goods Company as part of a protest against discrimination. Theaters along Fourth Street were also targets.

Negro Sit-Ins, Pickets Continue As 6 Of 17 Firms Deny Service

More Talks Due Tomorrow

Negro students seeking to spur desegregation of downtown businesses yesterday were served at 11 eating places, but were denied service at six.

At De Camillis Restaurant, 451 S. Third, about 50 youths left after a few minutes when they were told there was a $2 minimum for diners. Mrs. Lucy Le Camillis, proprietor, said she set the minimum for the students because "$2 is an average check."

The students were refused admission at the White Swan, 566 S. Fifth, and the W. & F Coffee Shop, 504 S. Third.

Let In Only Whites

The Chile Bowl, 616 W. Broadway, closed after 23 Negroes had sat unserved for 30 minutes. Then Frank C Ressnier, manager, stood by the door letting only white persons in for service.

The Franklin Way, 663 Armory Place, also closed briefly when two Negroes came in and asked to be served. The establishment opened again about 15 minutes later after student pickets left.

Dizzy Whiz, No. 2, 216 W. Broadway, closed after about 15 Negroes sat there for about an hour. There were no plans to reopen until this morning.

Some Carried Signs

Picket lines were set up at all these places briefly despite a cold wind and light rain

Some of the students carried signs bearing integration slogans and some sang.

There were no arrests and no incidents. About 200 students took part in the demonstrations.

Eating places that served the students were:

Colonnade Cafeteria, Starks Building; Whiz Sandwich Shop, 427½ W. Broadway; California Orange Bar, 314 S. Fourth; Country Kitchen No. 1, 738 S. ifth; Country Kitchen No. 2, 421 W. Broadway; Saratoga Restaurant, 128 W. Chestnut; Coffee Pot, 429 W. Broadway; Whiz Drive-In, 744 S. Fifth; Dandee restaurants at 417 W. Chestnut and 454 S. Fifth, and Bright Spot Hamburger Shop, 915 S. Fifth.

The Mayor's emergency integration committee held an unscheduled meeting at lunch yesterday at the Kentucky Hotel, presumably to discuss the demonstrations which were renewed Saturday with restaurant sit-ins after more than a month of quiet.

Talks Due Tomorrow

Mayor Hoblitzell, who Saturday deplored the sit-ins while negotiations were going on, said yesterday there was no change in plans for his committee to meet tomorrow with the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., and Negro leaders. The two groups and the integration leader will have lunch at the Sheraton Hotel at 1 p.m.

Hoblitzell also said members of both groups and representatives of downtown businesses still were to fly to St. Louis next Monday to study the progress of integration there. However, it was understood no representative of downtown restaurants would go along.

The Negro steering committee which is directing desegregation efforts yesterday called the Mayor's statement Saturday on the sit-ins "highly inopportune."

"He lost a magnificent opportunity to place the prestige of the Mayor's office behind his own committee, the steering committee, and business establishments already desegregated," the statement said.

Mayor Plans Tests For Desegregation

Sets Monday As Target In Plea To All Downtown Eating Places

Mayor Hoblitzell yesterday called on operators of all downtown eating establishments who have not done so to desegregate their facilities no later than Monday.

He also asked Negro leaders to cancel any further demonstrations supporting integration at least until next Wednesday.

The Mayor made the appeal at City Hall after a joint meeting of his emergency integration committee and representatives of the Negro steering committee that has been directing integration efforts.

At an earlier meeting, theater representatives gave the Negroes a target date for completion of integration of all downtown movie houses.

The Rev. D. E. King, a member of the steering committee, indicated the date was some weeks off and expressed some disappointment that it wasn't more immediate.

The presbytery of Louisville deplores racial tension and offers prayers for Newport's gambling foes. Story on Page 12.

Here is the Mayor's statement on restaurant desegregation:

"Citizens of Louisville:

"We have an extremely serious situation facing our community.

"As I have said before, with the full approval of the Mayor's committee, integration of downtown public accommodations is not only morally right and economically feasible but is also inevitable.

Co-operation Called For

"We must have the co-operation of all the involved groups, including the patrons, in order that integration can be accomplished in an orderly fashion. This we do not have today.

"Under these circumstances, after consultation with and upon the recommendation of the Mayor's committee, I am hereby requesting that no later than Monday, May 1, the operators of all downtown eating facilities quietly without publicity, desegregate.

"Meantime, I am asking that groups of three or four Negroes each, under the supervision of the steering committee, check all downtown facilities to determine whether this request to desegregate has been honored. I also am asking the Negro checking committees to report to the mayor's office full results of their investigations.

"I request that there be no further demonstrations during this testing period, and in no event prior to May 3."

'We Will Continue'

Asked if he knew what he would do if eating places refuse to honor his request, Hoblitzell said, "No sir, except that we will continue our efforts in this direction."

The Negro leaders declined comment on the Mayor's statement but scheduled a steering-committee meeting later last night to discuss their position on it and on the theater-integration target date.

Fred Latham, president of the Louisville Restaurant Association, said, "As far as the Monday date is concerned, I feel the Mayor is moving a little too fast to expect a great deal of co-operation." He declined further comment.

The Mayor's stand is an outgrowth of a trip he and representatives of his committee and the Negro group made to St. Louis to discuss integration procedures there.

College Faculty Pickets Theaters

Chicago Defender Chicago Ill 4-15-61 p 12

DURHAM, N. C. — An interracial team of faculty members From North Carolina college and Duke universtiy joined forces with student from those institutions here this week in picketing two local theaters which segregate their audiences by race.

Picketing by the faculty members followed an anti-Jim Crow resolution released earlier in the week over the signatures of 136 faculty members at Duke and 125 at North Carolina College. Thus far, 14 members of the Duke university faculty and 11 from NCC have marched in the picket lines with students.

CLOSES BALCONY

Student picketing for the past two months has caused one of the theaters to close its balcony previously set aside for Negroes. Both managers have refused to comment on the extent to which picketing by the students may have affected their attendance.

Dr. J. Neal Hughley, college minister and professor of economics at NCC, and Dr. Charles King, professor of sociology, and Gerald Underwood, also in social science, are leaders in charge of the faculty pickets at NCC.

Duke university faculty leaders include Peter Klopfer and Dr. Robert Osborn.

These faculty spokesmen told reporters, "this picketing by the faculty members is not a one-time shot. It will be a continuous thing as far as we are concerned."

Their resolution said: "Recognizing racial segregation and discrimination in all forms as morally indefensible, contrary to democratic principles and harmful to American prestige, we, the undersigned members of the faculties of Duke university and North Carolina College, jointly express our interest in, and support of our students and others who peacefully demonstrate against the practice of segregated seating in the Center and Carolina Theaters here in Durham."

Negroes Are Thwarted In Theater 'Stand-In'

The Evening Star Washington, D.C. Wed. 2-15-61

By the Associated Press

Theater officials and police thwarted efforts by Negroes to push their way into downtown Nashville, Tenn., movie houses reserved for white patrons.

Following this demonstration last night, the two dozen or so Negroes went to a Trailways bus restaurant—which had refused service to Negroes in previous sit-in attempts—and were served. A spokesman for the group said the quick and courteous service came as "somewhat of a surprise."

The demonstrators, who have sought to gain admittance to the all-white theaters through peaceful "stand-ins," tried more aggressive tactics last night. But none of them managed to elude officials of the four theaters which continued to accept white patrons.

TV Man Arrested

A television cameraman and a charter pilot were arrested in Sumter, S. C., after a druggist charged they had instigated a sit-in at his store for the purpose of getting film for a National Broadcasting Co. news program.

In Atlanta, five Negro high school students made final preparations for submitting entrance applications to Georgia Tech.

Ticket booths of the Nashville theaters have been moved inside lobby doors in a move to stave off the stand-ins, but the Negroes attempted to slip inside behind white customers or to push past theater officials.

Roger Scutt, Radio Station WMAK newsman, who watched the new attempt to break down the color bars at the theaters, said one Negro man got inside the lobby door but was ejected bodily.

Bomb Threats Phony

A crowd of about 500 gathered in the theater district but there were no other disturbances and police made no arrests among the Negro demonstrators or the white spectators.

Two of the theaters had phony bomb threats, causing police and firemen to make searches of the buildings which were empty of patrons at the time.

Druggist J. H. Lawson maintained that a sit-in attempt at his Sumter store resulted from the presence of George Carras, 36, cameraman for WSOC-TV in Charlotte, N. C., and Boyce Stradley, 46, Charlotte pilot who flew Mr. Carras to Sumter and was with him when he filmed the sit-in.

Negroes Are Roughed Up At Theatres

Jackson Daily News Jackson, Miss. Wed. 2-22-61

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A brief scuffle between Negro demonstrators seeking access to white theaters in Nashville, Tenn., and a group of white youths ended after several of the Negroes had been beaten and mussed up.

An estimated 50 white youths shouted insults Tuesday night as the students resumed their theater stand-ins. Monday night 26 Negroes and a white coed were arrested for a similar demonstration. All were released after spending the night in jail when City Judge Andrew Doyle ruled the fire ordinance under which they had been arrested had been replaced by a new one.

About 100 Negro students took part in Tuesday night's demonstration. Attacked by the white boys as they left the area, the Negroes did not retaliate although several were beaten and kicked and one had his glasses broken. Police stationed at the four downtown theaters did not witness the affray two blocks away and no arrests were made.

More than 60 Negro students were in jail at Sumter, S.C., today for refusing police orders to break up a mass march on the downtown area to protest segregation.

Young Negroes also went to jail at Columbia, S.C., and Lynchburg, Va., for staging lunch counter sit-in demonstrations. Pickets seeking entrance to white theaters at Chattanooga, Tenn., bore signs proclaiming, "We are misfits in a segregated society. Our color won't rub off."

There were three sit-in protests in the Sumter demonstrations. Most of those arrested were paraders who refused to return to the Morris College campus.

There was no immediate effort among the Sumter Negroes to post bonds of $100 each.

In Atlanta, the "jail, no bail" campaign of Negro students arrested about two weeks ago weakened slightly when nine posted $100 bonds on trespass charges in connection with sit-ins. But 70 students chose to remain behind bars.

In a federal court civil rights trial at Opelika, Ala., a Macon County voter registrar denied that he knowlingly made it more difficult for Negroes to register than for white persons. "They all lok alike to me," said Wheeler Dyson.

Federal attorneys charged that Negroes were systematically denied the ballot in the black belt county where Negro residents outnumber white persons 6-1. Twice as many white persons as Negroes are registered voters.

of lunch counters here a year ago, which resulted in the permanent lowering of racial bars in the cafeterias of seven stores.

J. B. White, district manager of the five-state Martin chain, said his firm had begun the test at some of its three theaters downtown. "No final decision has been made as to whether we will integrate permanently (on a full-scale basis) or not," said White. He said the decision would depend "on the outcome" of the tests.

Under terms of the test theater managers have reserved the right to refuse certain Negroes. The Negroes who have been permitted to enter the theaters have been mostly students from Fisk University, Tennessee State A&I University and the American Baptist Theological Seminary.

Detectives have been posted n the theaters to look out or trouble, but there has been one in the four days of the est so far.

Negro Bars Lowered in Theater Test

The Washington Post Washington, D.C. Wed. 4-29-61

NASHVILLE, April 27 (UPI) Several downtown theaters are admitting small groups of Negroes in an experimental desegregation program.

The experiment began Monday with young Negroes appearing in groups of twos and threes at theaters owned by Loews, Inc., and the Martin Theater Co. of Columbus, Ga.

The test program followed brief negotiations between theater officials and Negro leaders and apparently was brought about by weeks of stand-in demonstrations by Negroes.

The plan is similar to the trial period given integration

38a 1961

TEXAS

THEATER- STAND-INS

V

Stand-Ins At Bias Movies Called A Hit

Chicago Defender Chicago Ill.

AUSTIN, Tex. — (UPI) — Protest against movie theater segregation, sparked by University of Texas students, were held across much of the nation Sunday — Abraham Lincoln's birthday.

Feb. 25-Mar. 3-61

The largest demonstrations were staged at Austin, where the University of Texas is located. Hundreds of students conducted stand-ins in the central Texas city at movie houses.

In the stand-in protests, the demonstrators line up in front of the movie's ticket-seller and, when they reach the window, ask if the theater is segregated. If so, the protestor refuses to buy a ticket — and returns to the end of the line. Both Negroes and whites took part in the stand-ins in Texas.

BOMB HOAX

The only incident reported was a bomb hoax at a San Antonio theater. Police searched the movie house, but did not remove the patrons.

Other students in cities across the nation had promised Chandler Davidson, of El Paso, Tex., chairman of Students For Direct Action, that protests would be made. These cities included Houston, Tex., Shreveport, La., San Francisco and Ann Arbor, Mich.

Davidson said the demonstrations were aimed at Trans-Texas Theaters, the Interstate Circuit, Loews, Inc., and RKO theaters.

The demonstrations, which included picketing at some points, lasted anywhere from a few minutes to several hours.

When the protest ended in Austin, Davidson spoke to the demonstrators.

He said: "This has been a great success. This is not our last stand."

Double Dose Theatre Bias For Sit-Ins

Chicago Defender Chicago Ill.

SAN ANTONIO — A fourth peaceful stand-in was held Sunday by 25 members of the Students for Civil Liberties at the Majestic Theatre — this time trying to gain admission for white students in the theatre's balcony reserved for Negroes.

The white and Negro college and university students staged their demonstration from 4:30 to 7 p.m. at the theatre's rear entrance.

(15-21)-61

Lynn Krueger, manager of the Majestic, told the students the Interstate Theatres chain policy still calls for segregation.

In the reverse of stand-ins staged in February and early March, Negro students approached the balcony entrance and asked for tickets for their white friends.

"The demonstration was to show there is as much injustice in the back as in the front." Lone Castillo, SCL president. said.

STAND-INS—BUT NOT ACTORS—Members of the Dallas (Tex.) NAACP Youth and Young Adult Councils are waging a full-scale drive against local theatres that refuse service to Negroes. Joined by white students from Southern Methodist University, they stand in line, ask for tickets, and, when refused, call the manager. This holds up line. Lighter-skinned students get in, and then come back out and chat with their darker friends, to the confusion and embarrassment of management.

Texans Publicizing Segregation Battle

The Washington Post

Washington D.C.

AUSTIN, Tex., March 26 (UPI)—The leader of a University of Texas group seeking to desegrate movie houses said today they plan to advertise their cause 2000 miles away in New York City.

Chandler Davidson of El Paso, Tex., chairman of Students for Direct Action, said funds are being raised to purchase a full-page ad in New York in an attempt to reach the president of the ABC-Paramount Theater chain with their plea.

Davidson said the group would ask college students and "famous personalities" throughout the country to contribute to their cause. The ad would "ask Mr. (Leonard) Goldenson (president of ABC-Paramount) to change his policies in Austin and in other progressive communities," Davidson said.

The student group has held stand-ins and picket lines at Austin theaters since mid-November trying to change segregation policies.

They have aimed at chain theaters—Interstate Theaters, Inc., a subsidiary of ABC-Paramount, and Trans-Texas Theaters, Inc.—But the movie maangement has not budged.

During the stand-ins, the students queue up at the box office, ask if all Americans will be sold tickets regardless of race, and when told "no" move back to the end of the line to repeat the performance.

Davidson said his group will shift its scope to the national level in an effort to "correct local problems."

"It has been emphasized upon us that pressure must be brought to bear in the East if we are to get anywhere," Davidson said. "But at the same time we must let the local theaters know we are still here."

Independent of the group, Booker T. Bonner, a 33-year-old government student at Texas, has held two one-man "hunger sit-ins" in front of a local fine arts theater "because I'm angry."

Bonner perched himself on a small stool and leaned against a light pole March 6. Over 63 hours and four glasses of water later, he retired. His second sit-in March 14 lasted 27 hours. Bonner said he planned a third hunger strike next week.

Bonner said he has heard statements that Negroes were satisfied with segregation, but he said "I'm here to show they are not."

"A liberian is allowed to attend local theaters and restaurants, but not an American Negro," Bonner said.

38a 1961

ALABAMA LUNCH COUNTER

Montgomery Cafe Convictions Fall

Bham. Post-Herald
Bham Ala.
Wed. 3-8-61

Alabama Court Of Appeals Sets Aside Disorderly Conduct Charges For Group

MONTGOMERY, March 7 (AP)—The Alabama Court of Appeals today set aside convictions of a white college professor, a white minister and seven Negroes arrested while dining together in a Montgomery cafe.

All three judges joined in ruling that the disorderly conduct charges against the nine defendants failed to spell out what offense, if any, they committed.

Eleven others, including the college professor's wife and 10 of his white students from MacMurray College at Jacksonville, Ill., were acquitted by the jury which convicted the educator, Dr. Richard Nesmith, last May 10.

Nesmith is dean of men and head of the Sociology Dept. at MacMurray.

Another Court

The white minister, the Rev. R. Edwin King of Boston University, and the seven Montgomery Negro defendants were tried in another court, without a jury, and all convicted. Like Nesmith, they were fined $100 and costs.

City police arrested Nesmith, his wife, the 10 MacMurray students, King and the seven Negroes last March 31 while they were eating together in a Negro cafe. All 20 defendants were fined $100 and costs in city court for disorderly conduct.

Using the language of a city ordinance, the arresting officers charged the white and Negro diners with disorderly conduct by using "violent, profane, indecent or boisterous conduct or language, or by conduct calculated to provoke a breach of the peace."

After their trials in City Court, the defendants appealed to state court, and the nine convicted there went on to the Court of Appeals.

Presiding Judge Robert B. Harwood and Associate Judges Aubrey Cates and Annie Lola Price on the appellate court held that the language in the complaints failed to specify what particular act the defendants were accused of committing.

The decisions were based, partly, on another ruling announced today in which the Court of Appeals reversed the disorderly conduct conviction of a white Baptist minister in North Alabama.

Sentenced to 60 Days

In that case, the Rev. Jesse C. Mitchell had been sentenced to 60 days in jail for an incident which occurred on the grounds of the New Bethel Baptist Church near Powell's Cross Roads in DeKalb County. Mitchell had been pastor of the church, but led a minority group in the formation of another church nearby after the Bethel congregation split.

The wording of the complaint against Mitchell was almost identical to that in the Montgomery cases, since both were patterned after a 1959 state law. The Montgomery ordinance is an almost exact duplicate of the state statute.

In setting aside the North Alabama minister's conviction, Judge Cates ruled that the complaint was too indefinite to allege a specific act.

Officers who arrested the white visitors and the Montgomery Negroes while dining together charged that the incident was calculated to cause trouble at a time when racial tension was inflamed.

Negro students at Alabama State College a short time before had staged a series of demonstrations against segregation. Two arrested at the cafe—Marzette Watts and Elroy Embry — had been expelled from Alabama State along with seven others as leaders of the demonstrations.

Nesmith, his wife and the 10 students who accompanied them said they came to Montgomery on a field trip to study sociological conditions in the South.

King, visiting the city separately, joined them at the luncheon.

The Negroes arrested at the luncheon, in addition to Watts and Embry, were Solomon S. Seay Sr. and Robert E. Dubose Jr., Montgomery integration leaders, and students Bessie Cole, James Richburg and Aner Ruth Young.

MIXED DINERS FREED IN ALABAMA APPEAL

Bham. News
Bham. Ala.
Wed. 3-8-61

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 7 (AP)—The Alabama Court of Appeals set aside today the conviction of a white college professor, a white minister and seven Negroes arrested while dining together in a Montgomery cafe.

All three judges joined in ruling that the disorderly-conduct charges against the nine defendants failed to spell out whate offense, if any, they had committed.

Eleven others, including the college professor's wife and ten of his white students from MacMurray College at Jacksonville, Ill., were acquitted by an all-white jury that convicted the educator, Dr. Richard Nesmith, last May 10. He is dean of men and head of the Sociology Department at MacMurray.

The white minister, the Rev. R. Edwin King of Boston University, and the seven Montgomery Negro defendants were tried in another court, without a jury, and all were convicted. Like Dr. Nesmith, they were fined $100 and costs.

Mixed lunch retrial planned

The Bham News
Bham. Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 10—City Prosecutor Dave Crosland says two white visitors and seven Montgomery Negroes will be tried again for eating together in a Negro cafe.

Thu. 3-10-61

Their convictions on disorderly conduct charges were reversed by the Alabama Court of Appeals two days ago because the complaint filed by arresting officers failed to say specifically what they had done.

Crosland said today he will amend the complaints and call the defendants to trial again in Circuit Court. They are free under bond.

CONVICTIONS REVERSED

The Montgomery Advertiser
Montgomery Ala.
Wed. 3-8-61

Mixed Dining Ruling Set Aside

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Alabama Court of Appeals Tuesday set aside the convictions of a white college professor, a white minister and seven Negroes arrested while dining together in a Montgomery cafe.

All three judges joined in ruling that the disorderly conduct charges against the nine defendants failed to spell out what offense, if any, they committed.

Eleven others, including the college professor's wife and 10 of his white students from MacMurray College at Jacksonville, Ill., were acquitted by an all-white jury which convicted the educator, Dr. Richard Nesmith, last May 10.

Nesmith is dean of men and head of the sociology department at MacMurray.

10 STUDENTS

The white minister, the Rev. R. Edwin King of Boston University, and the seven Montgomery Negro defendants were tried in another court, without a jury, and all convicted. Like Nesmith, they were fined $100 and costs.

City police arrested Nesmith, his wife, the 10 MacMurray students, King and the seven Negroes last March 31 while they were eating together in a Negro cafe. All 20 defendants were fined $100 and costs in city court for disorderly conduct.

Using the language of a city ordinance, the arresting officers charged the white and Negro diners with disorderly conduct by using "violent, profane, indecent or boisterous conduct or language, or by conduct calculated to provoke a breach of the peace."

After their trials in city court, the defendants appealed to state court, and the nine convicted there went on to the Court of Appeals.

ACCUSED ACT

Presiding Judge Robert B. Harwood and Associate Judges Aubrey Cates and Annie Lola Price of the Appellate Court held that the language in the complaints failed to specify what particular act the defendants were accused of committing.

The decisions were based partly on another ruling announced Tuesday in which the Court of Appeals reversed the disorderly conduct conviction of a white Baptist minister in north Alabama.

In that case, the Rev. Jesse C. Mitchell had been sentenced to 60 days in jail for an incident which occurred on the grounds of the New Bethel Baptist Church near Powell's Cross Roads in DeKalb County. Mitchell had been pastor of the church, but led a minority group in the formation of another church nearby after the Bethel congregation split.

STATE STATUTE

The wording of the complaint against Mitchell was almost identical to that in the Montgomery integrated dining cases, since both were patterned after a 1959 state law. The Montgomery ordinance is an almost exact duplicate of the state statute.

In setting aside the north Alabama minister's conviction, Judge Cates ruled that the complaint was too indefinite to allege a specific act.

To illustrate the point, the judge wrote:

"If a statute makes it a misdemeanor to spit on a public sidewalk, then the allegation that (the defendant) spat on the sidewalk should suffice. But if the statute denounces 'disturbing the act in a public thoroughfare which might menace the health of others', the charge must allege an act done."

Officers who arrested the white visitors and the Montgomery Negroes while dining together charged that the incident was calculated to cause trouble at a time when racial tension was inflamed. But the formal complaint did not say what act was committee.

Negro students at Alabama State College a short time before had staged a series of demonstrations against segregation, including a sit-in at the white lunchroom in the Montgomery courthouse.

Two of the Negroes who were arrested at the cafe—Marzette Watts and Elroy Embry — had been expelled from Alabama State along with seven others as leaders of the demonstrations.

Nesmith, his wife and the 10 students who accompanied them said they came to Montgomery during a field trip to study sociological conditions in the South.

King, visiting the city separately, joined them at the luncheon.

Fines upset in racial case

The Bham News
Bham Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 8 (AP)—Disorderly conduct convictions of two white men and seven Negroes arrested here while dining together in a restaurant have been set aside by the Alabama Court of Appeals.

Wed. 3-8-61

The prosecution failed to specify what offense, if any, was committed by the white college professor, the white minister and the Negroes, all three judges said in a ruling yesterday.

86

City police arrested the defendants as they dined together in a Montgomery Negro cafe last March 31. The diners were charged, in the language of a city ordinance, with disorderly conduct by using "violent, profane, indecent or boisterous conduct or language, or by conduct calculated to provoke a breach of the peace."

The nine, convicted in City Court, appealed to state court and then to the Court of Appeals.

Convictions of Mixed Diners Reversed

(Courier Press Service)

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Those arrests and convictions of several whites and Negroes who ate together in a Negro cafe here last May have been reversed by the Alabama Court of Appeals.

Three judges unanimously agreed the disorderly conduct charges against the mixed group failed to spell out what offense, if any, they committed.

The reversal affected a white college professor, a white minister and seven Negroes arrested for eating together in a Negro cafe. The cafe was later ordered closed by police.

ELEVEN OTHER sons, including a group ofw nites—from MacMurray College, Jacksonville, Ill., were acquitted at the time of the trial of the charges. They were also in the cafe.

The incident occurred during the student demonstrations of Alabama State College students here. After the trials in city court, the defendants appealed to state courts and then moved on to the Court of Appeals.

That court held that the language of the police complaint failed to specify what particular act the defendants were accused of committing.

■

THE WHITE minister involved was the Rev. Edwin King of Boston University.

He was also arrested along with Elroy Embry, a Negro student then at Alabama State, for being in a white hotel restaurant with Mr. Embry, whom he had invited in as his guest, since he was stopping at the hotel.

ter he amends the complaint so as to allege specifically how their conduct was disorderly.

The Alabama Court of Appeals reversed their convictions because the complaint by arresting officers claimed disorderly conduct in general terms without saying what act they committed.

APPEAL TO CIRCUIT COURT

All nine defendants have been free under bond since last April when they were convicted in city court on charges of violating the disorderly conduct ordinance. They appealed to Circuit Court and on to the state appellate court.

Police raided a Negro cafe last March 31, and arrested all those having lunch together — Dr. Richard Nesmith, dean of men and head of the sociology department at McMurray College in Jacksonville, Ill., his wife, 10 of his white students, the minister and the seven Negroes.

PROFESSOR CONVICTED

An all-white jury in Circuit Court convicted the professor and acquitted his wife and the 10 students, who said they were in Montgomery on a sociological field trip.

Tried without a jury were the seven Montgomery Negroes and the other white visitor, the Rev. R. Edwin King, a Boston university student. All were convicted.

Each defendant was fined $100 and costs.

Second Re-Trial Ordered In Alabama Sit-Ins

MONTGOMERY. — (ANP) — The Alabama Court of Appeals for the second time last week reversed the convictions of a visiting white minister and a Montgomery Negro arrested while trying to eat together in a white hotel coffee shop.

City attorneys who prosecuted the Rev. R. Edwin King of Boston university and Elroy Embry, a former student at Alabama State College for Negroes, acknowledged in court that the complaint against the defendants was improperly drawn.

With that admission, the appellate court sent the case back to circuit court because the trespassing complaint failed to identify the owner of the hotel where the incident occurred.

The tribunal cited previous court rulings that the owner of "property trespassed upon" must be named.

It was the second time this month that the Court of Appeals set aside convictions against King and Embry involving separate integration attempts.

Nine To Face Trial Again For Eating Together In Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — Seven Montgomery Negroes and two whites — a college professor from Illinois and a minister from Boston — will be tried again for eating together in a Negro cafe.

City Prosecutor Dave Crosland said the defendants will be called to trial again in Circuit Court af-

38a 1961

Trinity Students Back Sit-Ins for Integration

Students at Trinity College have adopted a resolution supporting sit-in demonstrations as a means leading to "nationwide integration."

The resolution, drafted and voted on Tuesday by students, deplores discrimination in any facility "allegedly serving the general public."

An individual has the right, it reads, "to work peacefully for the rectification of such social injustice through nonviolent legal protest."

Students voted 330 to 120 for the resolution. This College has an enrollment of 650.

The resolution also directs the Student Council to send letters of approval to businesses which have desegregated facilities and letters of censure to those "that promote segregation."

Students voted down directives to notify lawmakers "encouraging segregation" of the college's stand, and to start a campus "Mass and prayer" program for the sit-in movement.

Student Government president Marjory Weinberg, 21, a senior, said the resolution was "entirely a campus project." She said the National Student Association, to which Trinity belongs, had asked members to vote student positions on desegregation last year.

"Nowadays, the voice of the student is being heard around the world," added Paula Roy, another student.

ating deficit which he said resulted from a boycott by the hospital's more than 1150 Negro employes who protested the segregated dining areas. The hospital has only 100 white employes.

"There are simply not enough white employes for the cafeteria to break even," Denton said. He added the cafeteria, in a 1.5-million-dollar food services building completed last year, probably will be used in preparing meals for the hospital's 4700 Negro patients.

Minister Declares Sit-Ins Hope For America's Future

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — A Washington minister has declared his preference for student sit-ins as hope for America's future instead of a growing movement he described as profit-seekers and "organization men."

Unless the present American "pattern" is changed, the new rulers of the country will be "organization men"—amoral, ruthless, dim-visioned, the Rev. Dr. Duncan Howlett said last week.

He contrasted organization men, typified by the seven electrical company executives recently sentenced to jail for conspiracy, with the six Lynchburg students convicted for taking part in sit-ins.

D.C.

LUNCH COUNTER

D.C. ministers protest bank job policy

By EDWARD PEEKS

WASHINGTON

For the second week in a row, a group of ministers picketed the banks which they allege discriminate against hiring colored people in higher jobs.

Once again, they assembled in front of the White House, in Lafayette Park where they called the problem of racial discrimination in the banks to the attention of President Kennedy through placards.

Banks, however, busily defended themselves against the charges.

Six major banks of Washington gave answers this week to the AFRO on the question of employing colored persons in other than menial jobs.

A group of ministers, under the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, prayed in front of the White House and picketed the financial district last week in protest over job discrimination.

Two building and loan associations also responded to the following question asked the major banks:

Do you employ colored persons in white - collar jobs?

* * *

LENWOOD P. HARRELL, president of Union Trust Company, said, "No, not generally speaking. We have a man who does a lot of things, including driving a car for me. He does some clerical work."

Asked if there were immediate plans to hire colored workers, Mr. Harrell replied, "I don't think so."

Allen Greenstreet, vice president of National Savings and Trust Company, said:

"We have no restrictions at all. It's not correct to say we don't employ colored in white collar positions. We have them in our printing department and they have been there for 12 years.

"While we don't have them in other sections, we don't have any restrictions because of race or color. We have 20 colored employees and some of them are porters, but they are very happy, too."

Robert C. Baker, president of American Security and Trust, said, "As far as we're concerned we have no racial practice in any shape or form. We are running a bank and we have to have standards. We aren't going to let the bars down either way (for white or colored).

"We have had two or three with us. In the last three weeks, we've had 12 or 15 people to come in. I don't think any passed the test.

"I don't know that we have any colored white - collar workers. I'd have to check to find out. We have 1,100 employees.

"I hope we can get some good people. We will be delighted to have them.

"And let me say again, we have no racial practice. Doyle Mitchell of the Industrial Bank was down here for lunch one day last week.

"We're for fairness, but we won't be pressured into anything that we think is not right."

* * *

J. LEO LYNCH, vice president of the National Bank of Washington, said, "We have colored employees. We hire persons regardless of their race. We have about 12 colored employees. They work in our stockroom, records section and places like that."

James W. Walden of the First National Bank said, "We have some colored on our staff, about three on our payroll. We used to have quite a few when we were in charge of our own building. There were about 14 on the payroll and two of them were supervisors in charge of the care of the building.

"Of the three now, two are doormen and we have a lady in charge of our lunch room."

John McCormack of Riggs National Bank said, "Generally, we don't give information out over the phone. We invite reporters to come in and discuss any problem they have.

"You realize the difficulty of talking over the phone. We have no way of identifying you."

Edward C. Balz, Perpetual Building Association, said "No comment."

Norman Martin, Suburban Trust Company, said, "We have no policy against hiring colored people as white-collar workers.

"We now have about 15 colored employees. They are messengers, porters and janitors."

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 3-11-61
p. 1

MINISTERIAL PROTEST against job discrimination in banks and other financial institutions was carried downtown last week. Clergymen prayed in front of the White House and picketed in the financial district. Shown before the American Security and Trust Company are (front row) the Revs. S. E. Guiles, J. D. Foy, E. Franklin Jackson, William Bishop and (back row) W. C. Cole, Andrew Fowler and Donald Ford.

Florida Civil Righters Gird For Legislative

The Defender
Chicago, Ill.
Wk. Jan. 28-Feb. 3-61
p. 22

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Leaders of the Florida legislature are believed to be sharpening the ax for sit-in demonstrators and others working for integration and civil rights in this state.

When the Legislature meets in April, one item on the agenda will be a threat to jail the Rev. A. Leon Lowry, of Tampa, state president of the NAACP and a Baptist leader.

Lowry is charged with contempt for refusiig to cooperate with a legislativ committee which sought to check NAACP membership lists. The committee said it was looking for "subversives."

Recently the Florida Supreme Court upheld a 6-month jail sentence given the Rev. Theodore Gibson, head of the Miami NAACP branch, for his defiance of the same committee. Rev. Gibson, who is ector of Christ E. iscopal Church, i. appealing to the U. S. Supreme Court.

SENTENCE OVERTURNED

The Florida high court overturned a similar sentence given the Rev. Edward T. Graham of Miami, who refused to say he was a member of the NAACP. Graham is former president of the Miami NAACP.

The three ministers are among 47 persons in the United States who have defied such legislative committees on the ground that the purpose of these committees is to block integration and other social progress. These 47 take their stand under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, guaranteeing freedom of speech, press, religion, association and protest.

Graham and Rev. Gibson were sentenced after the committee cited them for contempt. In Rev. Lowry's case, the committee voted to asl. the Legislature to jail the minister when it meets. The assembly can keep him in jail during its whole session if he still refuses to cooperate.

WITHIN RIGHTS

Lowry declared: "We have a right to associate with whomever we wish. It is not within the power of the Legislature to deny any citizen that right. There is no attempt on our part to flout any duly constituted legislaive committee. We are merely attemptiig to exercise our freedom."

Gibson said recently: "I shudder to think what would happen if the segregationists could get their hands on the membership list of an organization like the NAACP. I don't look at this as a personal matter at all, but rather as something which concerns all posterity."

Professors and college students will be the targets of a bill to be sponsored and pushed in the Legislature by Senator Randolph Hodges of Cedar Key, president-designate of the Florida Senate.

Hodges said he expects to obtain passage of a law to provide for the firing of any professor and the explusion of any student at state-supported universities who advocates or takes part in demonstrations such as lunch counter sit-ins.

Sharpening Axes —

The Jacksonville Defender
Jacksonville, Fla.
1-17-61
p. 1

Florida Seeks Anti-Sit-In Legislation

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Leaders of the Florida Legislature are sharpening the ax for sit-in demonstrators and others working for integration and civil rights in this state.

When the Legislature meets in April, one item on the agenda will be a threat to jail the Rev. A. Leon Lowry of Tampa, state president of the NAACP and a baptist leader.

Mr. Lowry is charged with contempt for refusing to cooperate with a legislative committee which sought to check NAACP membership lists. The committee said it was looking for "subversives".

Recently the Florida Supreme Court upheld a 6-month jail sentence given the Rev. Theodore Gibson, head of the Miami NAACP branch, for his defiance of the same committee. Father Gibson, who is rector of Christ Episcopal Church, is appealing to the U. S. Supreme Court.

The Florida high court overturned a similar sentence given the Rev. Edward T. Graham of Miami, who even refused to say if he was a member of the NAACP. Mr. Graham is former president of the Miami NAACP.

The three ministers are among 47 persons in the United States who have defied such legislative committees on the ground that the purpose of these committees is to block integration and other social progress. These 47 take their stand under the First Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, guaranteeing freedom of speech, press, religion, association and protest.

Mr. Lowry summed it up when he said: "It is quite apparent that the committee's action is an attempt to intimidate and label an organization and to weaken it. We have been pressing for our rights in almost every area and that is why they are after us."

Mr. Graham and Father Gibson were sentenced after the committee cited them for contempt. In Mr. Lowry's case, the committee voted to ask the Legislature to jail the minister when it meets. The assembly can keep him in jail during its whole session if he still refuses to cooperate.

Mr. Lowry declared: "We have a right to associate with whomever we wish. It is not within the power of the Legislature to deny any citizen that right. There is no attempt on our part to flout any duly constituted legislative committee. We are merely attempting to exercise our freedom."

Father Gibson said recently: "I shudder to think what would happen if the segregationists could get their hands on the membership lists of an organization like the NAACP. I don't look at this as a personal matter at all, but rather as something which concerns all posterity."

Professors and college students will be the targets of a bill to be sponsored and pushed in the Legislature by Senator Randolph Hodges of Cedar Key, president-designate of the Florida Senate.

Hodges said he expects to obtain passage of a law to provide for the firing of any professor and the expulsion of any student at state-supported universities who advocates or takes part in demonstrations such as lunch-counter sit-ins.

NAACP leaders and the Florida Civil Liberties Union are among groups fighting efforts to punish ministers, professors, students, and others working for civil rights and integration.

The Southern Conference Educational Fund has helped to organize a state-wide committee to counter efforts of the courts and the legislature to penalize these people. Protests to members of the Legislature and other public officials have been called for.

Supreme Court asked to rule on Fla. sit-downs

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
2-18-61
p. 3

WASHINGTON

The Supreme Court was asked Friday to review two lunch counter sit-in cases from Tallahassee, Fla., involving a group of Florida A and M students and four white students from Florida State University.

Attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union filed the students' appeal.

They claimed that the arrest and conviction of the sit-in participants violated their constitutional rights of free speech and liberty to seek contracts privately by persuading the stores to serve them food.

* * *

THE CIVIL liberties group also stressed the need for a Supreme Court ruling on the sit-in question in view of the hundreds of cases now pending in various state courts.

"An authoritative expression of controlling constitutional principles is needed from this Honorable Court, the petition concluded."

The petition was filed by Tobias Simon, general counsel, and Albert Hopkins, a member of the board of directors of the Florida Civil Liberties Union.

In both instances the students were arrested after having been refused service at a Woolworth's lunch counter in downtown Tallahassee.

Sit-In Fight Counts Are Denied by 5

TALLAHASSEE, March 7 (AP). Five persons arrested during disorders touched off by a sit-in demonstration by Negroes here last Saturday pleaded innocent today in city court to charges brought against them.

Their trial dates weren't set immediately by Judge John Rudd.

Two Negroes, Patricia Stephens, a leader in the sit-ins, and Benjamin Cowins, were charged with fighting and engaging in disorderly proceedings.

Three white persons also were charged. Nathaniel Warman was charged with assault and battery on a police officer, and his two sisters, Elsie and Natalie, were charged with assault and battery.

The disorders occurred at a suburban shopping center when a white youth and Cowins fought as the demonstrators were leaving the store. The white youth escaped.

City authorities said several white youths attacked a police sergeant, who was scratched on the neck.

Leon Sit-In Negroes Get Jail Terms

TALLAHASSEE, March 30 (AP)—Two Negroes convicted of charges of fighting as an outgrowth of a sit-in demonstration today filed notice they would appeal.

City Judge John Rudd gave mandatory 30-day jail sentences to Benjamin Cowin and Patricia Stephens, both 21, and sentenced them to pay $500 each or serve 60 additional days in jail.

The judge released three white persons, Nathaniel Warman, 20, and Warman's two sisters, who were charged with assault.

The fight occurred as police broke up a sit-in demonstration March 4 at a variety store. Warman was charged with assaulting a policeman, and his sisters, Elsie and Natalie, with assault.

Judge Rudd said medical findings that Warman suffered from epilepsy indicated he could not be held responsible, and that his sisters, knowing his condition, were acting in what they considered Warman's defense.

The Negroes posted bonds of $1,000 each while their convictions are being appealed to the Leon County Circuit Court.

3 students lose plea, are jailed

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Jeff Poland, white, one of two former State University of Florida students serving 60-day jail terms for sit-down demonstrations, went on a hunger strike, last Friday.

Chief Jailer S. G. Revell of the city jail told the AFRO that the student was refusing both food and liquids placed in his cell.

The other student, Derek Lawler also white, is not participating in the hunger strike, the jailer said.

Poland and Lawler were jailed Monday along with Henry M. Steele, 17, after U.S. District Judge Harrold Carswell denied their petition for release on a writ of habeas corpus.

* * *

TOBIAS SIMON, one of the defense attorneys, asked that the students be released on ground their Constitutional rights were being violated.

Later the same day, Mrs. Steele, wife of the Rev. C. K. Steele, president of the local NAACP, paid the $300 fine levied against her son and he was released.

The Rev. Mr. Steele, who was one of the 1956 leaders of the anti-segregation bus boycott in Tallahassee, was in Washington where he was guest minister at a week-long revival service.

"I was opposed to my wife paying the fine," he told the AFRO.

* * *

THE STUDENTS were among 11 convicted and sentenced March 18, 1960, for sit-down demonstrations over segregated lunch counters at the Woolworth variety store here.

Eight of the 11, including Steele, chose to serve the 60-day jail sentences rather than be bailed out.

Leonard W. Holt, Norfolk, Va., attorney, who represented some of the defendants, said at the time that the defendants decided to go to jail in the hope of setting a pattern for other anti-segregation demonstrators.

* * *

THE GROUP, including Priscilla G. Stephens and Patricia Stephens, sisters, were among the defendants and subsequently attracted nation-wide attention as a result of the jail terms.

They traveled throughout the country lecturing, under auspices of the Congress of Racial Equality.

Miss Priscilla Stephens again was convicted of trespass charges last month and sentenced to 120 days in jail. The sentence is being appealed and currently Miss Stephens is out on bail.

* * *

IN MIAMI "Strong protests" to the Heart Association came from Miami CORE after colored members were turned away from a benefit dance, last week.

Mayor Robert King High said that he had no objections to colored attending the "Heart Hop" at city-owned Bayfront Park Auditorium.

The decision to conduct the benefit on a segregated basis was made by a steering committee of local disc jockeys as well as Heart Association representatives.

* * *

CHARLIE MURDOCK, who acted as general chairman and emcee for the dance, said the committee "felt that we could get a larger audience, avoid any friction and raise the most money for the association—our main goal—by keeping the dance segregated."

Dr. John O. Brown, CORE project director, said, "We do not feel such practices are practical if the group hopes to raise money for the association. In the past integrated benefits have been held here without incident. We shall protest any other discriminatory benefits no matter what the cause."

Seven Stores End Bias in Clearwater

CLEARWATER, Fla. (ANP)— Managers of seven variety stores in Clearwater, Largo and Dunedin agreed last week to integrate their lunch counters. The move came after a committee of four Negroes met with store managers to discuss possible integration.

Though they declined to be quoted, the store executives said the Negroes feared what they called radical elements from the outside would come into the north Pinellas County area, and start sit-in demonstrations.

One of the men, Arthur Specht, general manager of 35 Grant stores in Florida, said he decided to integrate lunch counters after the peaceful desegregation of lunch counters in Tampa last August. The variety stores involved were Woolworth, Madison's and W. T. Grant.

Lunch Counter Desegregation Started In Florida Stores

Clearwater, Fla.— Lunch counters were desegregated at 21 stores in Pinellas County Jan. 3. One Negro woman showed up to eat with white patrons.

Management of stores in St. Petersburg, Clearwater, Dunedin, and Largo agreed at meetings last month to start serving Negroes along with whites on Jan. 3.

The agreements were similar to those reached earlier between Negro leaders and managers of some stores at Tampa, Sarasota, and Bradenton. Integration started at some establishments in these cities more than two months ago.

Cleric's son faces jail in Florida

WASHINGTON

The Rev. C. K. Steele, Tallahassee civil rights leader, said his 17-year-old son Henry Marion "may be put in jail any day now" as a result of his participation in the Florida sitdown case which was turned down for review by the Supreme Court.

"Most of the stores in Tallahassee would desegregate lunch counters were it not for the stubborn city government," the Rev. Mr. Steele told the AFRO.

He ended a week's revival Friday night as guest minister at Mt. Carmel Baptist Church, the Rev. R. L. Patterson, pastor.

"I have participated in protests with the young people but I don't direct their activities," the Rev. Mr. Steele said.

"Henry Marion, who just graduated from high school, was ordained to preach this year. He preached his trial sermon in February."

Florida Measure Aimed At "Sit-Ins"

TALLAHASSEE — (UPI) — The first bill of the session dealing with race legislation was introduced in the House Friday by Rep. George Stallings of Duval. It was aimed at sit-in demonstrations.

The measure would prohibit officials and employes of state universities, university students, and state, county and municipal officials and employes from taking part in any demonstration that could result in violence.

It would have the effect of stamping out demonstrations like the one last year in Tallahassee, which was carried out almost entirely by white and Negro university students.

The bill would make any violation of the law a misdemeanor.

'Sit-In' Girl In Jail Again

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Patricia Stephens, who last year served 49 days in a Florida jail for sitting in, was sentenced to 120 days for participating in another CORE demonstration last week.

Miss Stephens and Ben Cowins were arrested on March 4, of this year while sitting-in at a Neisner lunch counter. They were charged with "disorderly proceedings." Previously that day members of CORE had staged sit-ins at both McCrory's and at Sears.

Judge Rudd sentenced Miss Stephens to 60 days or $500 and to a mandatory 30 day term for the "disorderly proceedings" charge. He also imposed a 30 day sentence for violation of probation imposed last year. This last sentence has since been suspended.

The CORE members were represented by Atty. Wolfman of the Miami chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union. An appeal will be filed.

Six A&M Students Told To Start Sit-In Sentences

TALLAHASSEE, April 21 (AP) — Circuit Judge Ben Willis today ordered six Florida A & M University students to surrender within 21 days to pay fines or serve jail sentences on charges growing out of a sit-in demonstration March 12, 1960.

The Negro students are Benjamin Cowins, Robert Kemp, William Mathis, George Carter, Vecient Moore and Willie Black.

All were sentenced by Municipal Judge John Rudd. Each ordered to pay a fine of $300 or serve 60 days in jail.

Willis' order terminated a Dec. 27, 1960, order allowing them to appeal. Today's order said the appellants failed to appear, failed to file for review and made no effort to secure further review before any court.

A bill aimed at curbing participation of university students and teachers in sit-in demonstrations was introduced today in the Florida Legislature by Rep. George Stallings of Duval County. It would prohibit them from aiding, encouraging or participating "in any public demonstration which may result in public violence." "If violence resulted, and someone was killed, the participants would be guilty of a felony. Persons violating the law would be guilty of a misdemeanor.

In either case students would be expelled from the university and public employes would be fired.

Kemp, Mathes, Black and Cowins also were convicted of unlawful assembly. Rudd gave them 30-day suspended sentences on this charge.

Judge Willis previously had upheld city court convictions of eight Negro students charged in a Feb. 20, 1960 sit-in, and five white Florida State University students in the March 12, 1960, demonstrations against segregated lunch counters.

38a 1961

FLORIDA

PENSACOLA -LUNCH COUNTER

5 Sit-In Negroes Arrested

Birmingham Post Herald

PENSACOLA, July 12 (AP)—Five Negro teen-agers were arrested today at a sit-in demonstration at a downtown variety store lunch counter.

At the same time, an organized opposition sit-in was put on by a group of white boys. A series of sit-ins have been conducted by young Negroes in recent weeks but this was the first appearance of an opposiiton sit-in.

Huntsville, 7-13-61

The white youths took over all available seats at the Woolworth counter, leaving no places for the 12 to 15 Negroes. As white customers came up to the counter, the white youths would yield their places. The Negro group left after about 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, another group of about 20 Negroes appeared at the Kress Store lunch counter. It was closed by the manager and the group moved on to the Newberry store, in the same block. The counter there was closed also, but the Negroes remained seated.

Birmingham, Ala.

Police ordered the group to move on. When they failed to do so, the officers began arresting members on charges of unlawful assembly and refusing to obey a police order.

After the fifth arrest, other members of the group got up and left.

Those arrested, four boys and a girl, were booked at City Jail and released on appearance bonds pending a hearing in police court Friday.

Jacksonville Integrates Its Counters

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga
F.2
wed. 5-17-61

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Lunch counter integration came quietly Tuesday to Jacksonville, where sit-ins in August touched off rioting and vandalism.

A few Negro youths were served at several—but not all—downtown lunch counters during the day without incident.

Apparently the plan to serve the Negroes had been worked out but store managers and others refused to comment.

A police official who didn't want to be named said plain-clothesmen watched the lunch counters at variety stores and reported most white persons paid no attention when the Negroes were served.

Spokesmen for a Chamber of Commerce race relations committee, formed after the rioting last August, were either unavailable or would not say whether the committee had worked out the integration plan.

VICTORIOUS— Shown strolling in the city zoo in Jacksonville, Fla., is a group of Negroes who enjoy integrated public facilities for the first time. The suit was sponsored by the Duval County Citizens Benefit Corporation.

SIGN OF THE PAST— Negroes in Jacksonville, Fla., read a sign of the past which was torn down at the city zoo when public facilities recently were integrated.

Jacksonville Centers Mix Quietly!

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The walls of segregation came tumbling down in each and every recreational facility operated by this city, without untoward incidents of any kind.

● The old order passed away at midnight, Sunday, Jan. 8, as a result of a Federal court order handed down in a "package" suit brought primarily by Frank Hampton, and prosecuted by Atty. Ernest D. Jackson Sr.

● All over town the "White" and "Colored" signs which have long dominated every aspect of the city's recreational facilities were torn down and tossed into garbage receptacles. One of these was salvaged and presented to Hampton as a trophy of victory over the by-gone era.

Such incidents as were to be observed on Jacksonville's "Second Emancipation Day" were all to the good. Hampton, accompanied by a number of his supporters in the suit, escorted their children to the municipal zoo to "break the ice."

■

ASKED BY The Courier how he felt in physically opening the door to the ex "white" restaurant which he had already opened legally, Hampton replied:

● "In holding that door open for those children I felt I was but exercising a natural right as a human being, American, and citizen of Jacksonville. I wouldn't have surrendered that job to anyone else for anything."

That same day, on the formerly segregated Springfield playground, white and Negro kids picked teams—mixed ones—and began to "play ball" as though they had been at it that way all their lives.

At the city's new colliseum, Jaxons watched goggle-eyed for the first time at ice hockey being played, seemingly unaware that they were seated without regard to race for the first time.

■

ALSO ON HAND at the zoo to mark the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Ira Coswell and their two small children.

This was the first time at the zoo for the latter, and they marched right up to the lunch counter and asked the white waitress for root beer. Delighted by the smiling service and all the wonders a zoo has in store, they acted as though they were honored guests at a spectacle created for them.

Some day, someone will have to explain to them how it was in the bad old days, when folks had to be on the watch for "Colored" signs on the zoo's lunch counter, picnic area, ticket lines and rest rooms.

■

BUSINESS LEADER Frank Hampton, who led a successful court fight to end the racial barriers in city-owned recreational facilities, said he was not surprised at the smooth manner in which the transition has taken place.

"It has been the politicians," he said. "They are the ones who have kept up the noise and agitation. The community, itself, has not been upset over it, just the politicians. And the Ku Klux Klan show had no effect on the community either," he concluded.

Florida Lawmakers Set To Kill Sit-In Program

Journal + Guide
Norfolk, Va.
2/13

Special to Journal and Guide

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Leaders of the Florida Legislature are sharpening the ax for sit-in demonstrators and others working for integration and civil rights in this state.

When the Legislature meets in April, one item on the agenda will be a threat to jail the Rev. A. Leon Lowry of Tampa state president of the NAACP and a Baptist leader.

MR. LOWRY is charged with contempt for refusing to cooperate with a legislative committee which sought to check NAACP membership lists. The committee said it was looking for "Subversives."

Recently the Florida Supreme Court upheld a 6-month jail sentence given the Rev. Theodore Gibson, head of the Miami NACP branch, for his defiance of the same committee. Father Gibson, who is rector of Christ Episcopal Church, is appealing to the U. S. Supreme Court.

THE FLORIDA high court overturned a similar sentence given the Rev. Edward T. Graham of Miami, who even refused to say if he was a member of the NACP. Mr. Graham is former president of the Miami NAACP.

The three ministers are among 47 persons in the United States who have defied such legislative committees on the ground that the purpose of these committees is to block integration and other social progress. These 47 take their stand under the First Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, guaranteeing freedom of press, speech, religion, association and protest.

MR. LOWRY summed it up when he said: "It is quite apparent that the committee's action is an attempt to intimidate and label an organization and to weaken it. We have been pressing for our rights in almost every area and that is why they after us."

Mr. Graham and Father Gibson were sentenced after the committee cited them for contempt. In Mr. Lowry's case the committee voted to ask the Legislature to jail the minister when it meets. The assembly can keep him in jail during its whole session if he still refuses to cooperate.

MR. LOWRY declared: "We have a right to associate with whomever we wish. It is not within the power of the Legislature to deny any citizen that right. There is no attempt on our part to flout an yduly constituted legislative committee. We are merely attempting to exercise our freedom."

Father Gibson said recently: "I shudder to think what would happen if the segregationists could get their hands on the membership lists of an organization like the NAACP. I don't look at this as a personal matter at all, but rather as something which concerns all posterity."

Students at FAMU under fire

The Afro-Am
Baltimore, Md
Dec 1-21-61
1/4

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida's war against the sitdown movement will take a new turn in April when the Legislature convenes.

At that time Sen. Randolph Hodges said he will introduce and work for passage of a bill to authorize the firing of any professor and expulsion of any student at a state-supported university who advocates or participates in a sitdown.

The students jailed last spring in the Tallahassee sitdowns were enrolled at Florida A. and M. University.

Sen. Hodges, of Cedar Key, is president - designate of the Florida Senate.

This will be the first state law specifically naming the sitdown movement although other states have passed laws aimed at the movement but not naming it. These have been laws against "trespassing" which have been both enacted and reinforced as anti - sitdown weapons.

There have also been cases, notably at Alabama State College and Southern (La.) University, where the state administration had ordered the expulsion of sitdowners. Faculty members have also lost their jobs for giving their support to the movement.

* * *

SEN. HODGES' plans are in direct opposition to the wishes of Florida Governor Leroy Collins who has repeatedly advocated that the sitdown situation be handled on a local level by committees composd of city officials, store managers, sitdowners and colored adults.

Gov. Collins has been virtually alone, however, in advocating a peaceful settlement. Most other Florida politicians have savored an iron - fisted policy.

This session of the Legislature will also see a continuation of the war against adults who are supporting the sitdowners — notably, NAACP officials.

The legislature formed an investigative committee to probe the NAACP. The coming session will consider a proposal to jail the Rev. A. Leon Lowry for refusing to give the committee names of NAACP members. The Rev. Mr. Lowry is state president of the NAACP.

* * *

RECENTLY THE Florida Supreme Court upheld a six-month jail sentence given the Rev. Theodore Gibson, head of the Miami NAACP. The rector of Christ Episcopal Church, the Rev. Fr. Gibson is appealing to the United States Supreme Court.

Florida's highest court overturned a similar sentence Graham of Miami, former president of the Miami chapter. The Rev. Mr. Graham even refused to tell the committee if he was a member.

The three ministers are among 47 NAACP leaders who have defied southern legislative investigating committees in refusing to turn over lists of NAACP members.

These leaders have stated that if known, NAACP members would be subjected to reprisals varying from economic to physical — such as bombing, arson, etc.

In the case of Florida, the investigating committee will ask the Legislature to jail the Rev. Mr. Lowry when it meets. He could be kept in jail for the whole session.

* * *

ALTHOUGH several African communities have seen the adoption of the American sitdown technique, there has been no violence recorded there.

Sam Sly, writing in several African papers, said:

"At two (sitdowns) I have witnessed (in Capetown, South Africa), there has been scarcely a stir from the surrounding teasippers and bun-eaters."

African sitdowners protest discrimination in public places just as American sitdowners do.

* * *

TWENTY DALLAS, TEXAS citizens staged a sitdown at the Continental bus Station in protest to segregation in food service. The sitdowns have been going on for four weeks. The Rev. H. Rhett James is leader of the group which operates as the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights.

Students of both races staged a massive protest at University Drug Store in Dallas after two colored students were refused service.

The students are enrolled at Southern Methodist University and are committed to wiping out segregation among merchants who derive most on their trade from the campus.

* * *

IN COVINGTON, KY., two restaurants and one bowling alley were desegregated anter continuous picketing by interracial groups. Located there is Kentucky State College where students last year staged a strike over conditions allegedly connected with the sitdown movement. Formerly all colored, the college is now integrated.

In Rock Hill, S.C., Friendship College students demonstrated at two variety stores, Woolworth's and McCrory's. Sitdowns were staged at the two stores but the students left on request.

* * *

IN JACKSONVILLE, FLA., signs designating "colored" and "white" rest rooms and drinking fountains were removed in downtown Hemming Park.

This action followed a federal court order integrating recreational facilities. The manager of the new coliseum said tickets to future events will be sold on a first come, first served basis with no jim-crow sections in the auditorium.

* * *

IN ATLANTA, Superior Court Judge George P. Whitman Sr. told the grand jury to investigate the sitdown movement. He said property owners have the right to exclude persons from their property, that those who refuse to leave are guilty of a misdemeanor and that conspirators should be punished.

In Pinellas County (Clearwater), Fla., lunch counters were desegregated at 21 stores.

IN NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 1 was set as the deadline for four sitdowners to appeal their 60-day sentences and $350 fines. The four, one of whom is a philosophy instructor at Tulane University, were convicted of "criminal mischief" in connection with a sitdown at McCrory's.

Sentenced were: Rudolph Lombard, Oretha Castle, Cecil Carter Jr. and Sydney L. Goldfinch Jr., the instructor. They were freed on bond of $750 each.

Appeals will also be made by six Lynchburg, Va. sitdowners who were given 30-day jail term. Four of them are white. They are freed on $1,900 bond.

* * *

IN RALEIGH, N. C. —30 students, most of them from Shaw University, attended services at several all-white local churches. There were no incidents.

Before the kneel-ins, the Rev. James S. Williams conducted a 20-minute service on the steps of the state capitol.

* * *

TAKING A LEAF from the sitdowners' book, 30 Greenwich Village beatniks staged a stidown and "snore-in" at the Gaslight Poetry Cafe.

They were protesting over the closing of the coffee house as a fire hazard.

Supreme Court Denies Hearing On Sit-In Case

Tallahassee Group Fails On Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — In its first action on a Southern lunch counter sit-in case, the Supreme Court Monday refused a hearing to eight Negroes and four whites convicted in a Florida lunchroom demonstration.

They were convicted in Municipal Court in Tallahassee in connection with sit-in demonstrations at a Woolworth store Feb. 20 and March 12 last year. Each received a sentence of 60 days in jail or a $300 fine.

The import of the action was not made clear. The court merely said it would not hear the appeal.

Court observers speculated the refusal may have been based, at least partially, on the fact that the case had not gone through Florida's highest courts. The appeal came here from the Circuit Court for Leon County, which affirmed the Municipal Court.

RUN FULL COURSE

The Supreme Court now has before it a sit-in case involving 17 Louisiana Negroes. This case has run the full course in state courts. The high court has not yet said whether it will hear arguments in this case.

The Tallahassee demonstrators were convicted under a city ordinance prescribing acts of disorderly conduct, breaches of the peace, and unlawful assembly.

In New York, James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said he hoped the decision does not mean the court intends to avoid the issues raised by the sit-ins. Farmer's group organized the Tallahassee demonstrations.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said it had no immediate comment.

UNANIMOUS DECISION

In a unanimous decision, written by Justice Potter Stewart, the high court staked out a forbidden area in the use of electronic eavesdropping. The decision threw out the conviction of three men accused of operating a big-time Washington gambling house near the State Department.

In the spring of 1958, police here suspected a row house was being used for gambling operations. They gained permission to enter the vacant adjoining row house and used a "spike mike" to listen to what was going on in the house next door.

The instrument was a microphone with a spike about a foot long attached to it, together with an amplifier, a power pack, and earphones. The officers inserted the spike several inches into the wall between the two houses until it hit a heating duct, thus converting the entire heating system into a conductor of sound.

Stewart said the facts in the case did not require the court to "contemplate the Fourth Amendment implications of these and other frightening paraphernalia which the vaunted marvels of an electronic age may visit upon human society."

He said eavesdropping accomplished by means of such a physical intrusion was "beyond the pale of those decisions which . . . held that eavesdropping accomplished by other electronic means did not amount to an invasion of Fourth Amendment rights."

The Fourth Amendment forbids unlawful search and seizure.

1. Let stand a decision of federal courts in Philadelphia barring use of labor union funds for the payment of legal expenses of accused union officers.

Raymond Cohen and three other officers of Local 107 of the Teamsters Union are under charges of conspiracy to defraud members of the local. A majority of the local's members voted to pay the legal expenses of the accused officers, but nine dissenting members won an injunction in U. S. district court. The Court of Appeals affirmed this.

2. Upheld, 6-2, the Michigan law which imposes a higher tax on shares of stock in national banks than on shares in savings and loans associations. Justice Tom C. Clark, speaking for the majority, said this does not constitute unlawful discrimination against national banks or their shareholders as a class. Justice Charles C. Whittaker wrote a dissenting opinion in which Justice William O. Douglas concurred.

Justice Stewart took no part in the case.

SIT-IN APPELLANTS FAIL IN U.S. COURT

High Tribunal Refuses Hearing in Fla. Case

By KARL R. BAUMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — In its first action on a southern lunch counter sit-in case, the Supreme Court Monday refused a hearing to eight Negroes and four whites convicted in a Florida lunchroom demonstration.

They were convicted in Municipal Court in Tallahassee in connection with sit-in demonstrations at a Woolworth store Feb. 20 and March 12 last year. Each received a sentence of 60 days in jail or a $300 fine.

IMPORT NOT CLEAR

The import of the action was not made clear. The court merely said it would not hear the appeal.

Court observers speculated the refusal may have been based, at least partially, on the fact that the case had not gone through Florida's highest courts. The appeal came here from the circuit court for Leon county, which affirmed the municipal court.

The Supreme Court now has before it a sit-in case involving 17 Louisiana Negroes. This case has run the full course in state courts. The high court has not yet said whether it will hear arguments in this case.

COPE MAN COMMENTS

The Tallahassee demonstrators were convicted under a city ordinance proscribing acts of disorderly conduct, breaches of the peace, and unlawful assembly.

In New York, James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said he hoped the decision does not mean the court intends to avoid the issues raised by the sit-ins. Farmer's group organized the Tallahassee demonstrations.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said it had no immediate comment.

EAVESDROP RULING

In a unanimous decision, written by Justice Potter Stewart, the high court staked out a forbidden area in the use of electronic eavesdropping. The decision threw out the conviction of three men accused of operating a big-time Washington gambling house near the State Department.

In the spring of 1958, police here suspected a row house was being used for gambling operations. They gained permission to enter the vacant adjoining row house and used a "spike mike" to listen to what was going on in the house next door.

The instrument was a microphone with a spike about a foot long attached to it, together with an amplifier, a power pack, and earphones. The officers inserted the spike several inches into the wall between the two houses until he hit a heating duct, thus converting the entire heating system into a conductor of sound.

FOURTH AMENDMENT

Stewart said the facts in the case did not require the court to "contemplate the Fourth Amendment implications of these and other frightening paraphernalia which the vaunted marvels of an electronic age may visit upon human society."

He said eavesdropping accomplished by means of such a physical intrusion was "belond the pale of those decisions which . . . hel dthat eavesdropping accomplished by other electronic means did not amount to an invasion of Fourth Amendment rights."

The Fourth Amendment forbids unlawful search and seizure.

High Court Snubs Appeal Of Sit-Ins

Refuses To Act In Initial Test Of Mix Convictions

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court today unanimously refused to act on an appeal by 12 persons arrested during two sit-in demonstrations at a white lunch counter in Tallahassee, Fla.

It was the first time the high tribunal had been asked to rule on a case growing out of a wave of sit-in demonstrations in the South.

The court gave no reason for its refusal to act on the appeal. It merely listed the case among a group of appeals in which it denied hearings.

The 12 persons who appealed had sat at a counter in an F. W. Woolworth Co. store at 120-126 N. Monroe St., in Tallahassee.

Eight of those who appealed are Negroes. The others are white. Each was sentenced in Tallahassee Municipal Court to pay $300 fine or serve 90 days in jail. The demonstrations occurred Feb. 20 and March 12, 1960.

The 12 questioned whether their arrest and convictions constituted "unlawful interference" with their freedom of speech and liberty of contract—right to do business with the establishment—in violatoin of contitutional guarantees of due process and equal protection of the laws.

The High Court And Sitdowns

The refusal of the Supreme Court Monday to review the first of a series of sitdown cases headed in its direction in itself is not significant.

In letting stand the convictions of 12 Tallahassee, Fla., students for sitting at the counter of an F. W. Woolworth store, the court in its unanimous ruling was merely saying that the cases should have been first passed on by the Florida Supreme Court.

Because of this technical error, the youngsters, eight of them students at Florida A. and M. University and four enrolled at Florida State University, unfortunately must now pay fines of $300 each or serve 90 days in jail.

The lesson to be noted here is that appeals must be taken painfully, step-by-step through state courts before seeking review in the Supreme Court. It is one that should not be forgotten.

Because this procedure was not followed, the nation's highest tribunal did not pass on the merits of the students' contentions that their arrests were "unlawful interference" with freedom of speech and liberty of contract (right to do business with the store) as guaranteed them under the Constitution.

* * *

NO SUCH ERROR appears in the cases of 17 Baton Rouge, La., student sitdowners. The hope is that in these cases the court will be given a clear-cut opportunity to rule on the legality of the sitdown movement.

Such a rule unquestionably would have direct bearing on scores of cases awaiting judicial determination in ten other states.

The Baton Rouge appeal goes to the very heart of the matter in that it challenges the right of a state, through abuse of its police power, to protect the segregation policies of private store and restaurant operators.

Baton Rouge police arrested the demonstrators after they refused to leave a Kress dime store lunch counter. Warrants charging disturbance of the peace were sworn out, not by management of the store, but, by the arresting officers themselves.

The arrests followed the pattern established last July all over the South. Chain store management, fearing nationwide boycott and a rash of false arrest suits, ordered local managers not to swear out arrest warrants for sitdowners.

* * *

POLICE IN A number of Southern cities took it upon themselves to fill the gap. If they did not have hastily-enacted "trespass" laws under which to proceed, they arrested sitdowners charging everything from disorderly conduct and disturbing the peace to violation of fire laws. They did this despite the fact that in all situations, sitdowners were the most peaceable persons present and the red-necked rowdies who resorted to violence went unmolested.

The Supreme Court established beyond doubt the right of all citizens to receive unsegregated meal service at bus and railroad terminals in the Bruce Boynton case. It upheld the Howard student's contention that he was unjustly denied service in a Richmond, Va. bus terminal.

The court, as it also did in the earlier Atlanta air terminal case, termed such racial discrimination an undue burden on interstate commerce.

Should it rule, and we are confident that it will, that peaceful demonstrators are to be protected from hostile police interference, the sitdown movement will have added another 'missile' in its growing arsenal of weapons against segregation.

3ca 1961

FLORIDA

SUPREME COURT REFUSES TO ACT
LUNCH COUNTER

Supreme Court Refuses Appeal In Sit-In Cases

The Tallahassee Daily Democrat

Tallahassee Fla.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U.S. Supreme Court hasity. Vice President Lyndon B. refused to review the first case Johnson was named chairman brought before it in connection and Secretary of Labor Arthur with the wave of sit-in demon- J. Goldberg vice chairman.

strations at variety store lunch "Through this vastly strength- counters in the South the past ened machinery," Kennedy said year.

Dec. 3-7-61

The High Tribunal merely said sure that Americans of all colors Monday that it would not hear and beliefs will have equal access the appeal of eight Negroes and to employment within the four white persons convicted in government, and with those who Municipal Court at Tallahassee, do business with the govern- Fla., in connection with sit-in ment."

Tallahassee Fla.

demonstrations in that city.

The President also announced

The import of the action was that he has directed all federal not made clear. But defense agencies "to take immediate ac- counsel said the decision did not tion to broaden government em- determine the merits of the case. ployment opportunities for mem- bers of minority races."

Tobias Simon, Miami attorney who represented the 12 defendants, said a similar case pending in the Supreme Court from Miami "represents a much more succinct legal picture."

He referred to sit-ins at a Miami shopping center where, he said, management admitted refusing to serve the group because it included Negroes.

Simon said possibly the Supreme Court refused to review the Tallahassee case solely because of factual questions as to whether or not it involved solely racial issues.

But South Carolina Atty. Gen. Daniel L. McLeod said at Columbia the Supreme Court action "could turn out to be a most significant one." He said he was "most impressed" by the court's upholding of police powers employed in maintaining peace and order.

A few hours later in Washington, President Kennedy set up by executive order—effective in 30 days — a President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity. Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson was named chairman and Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg vice chairman.

"Through this vastly strengthened machinery," Kennedy said in a statement, "I intend to insure that Americans of all colors and beliefs will have equal access to employment within the government, and with those who do business with the government."

High Court Bars Appeal By Sit-Ins

A.P. Herald Tribune New York N. Y.

Dec. 3-7-61

In First Such Case Brought to Tribunal

WASHINGTON, Mar. 6 (AP). —The Supreme Court today unanimously refused to act on an appeal by twelve persons arrested during two sit-in demonstrations at a white lunch counter in Tallahassee, Fla.

It was the first time the high tribunal had been asked to rule on a case growing out of a wave of sit-in demonstrations in the South.

The court gave no reason for its refusal to act on the appeal. It merely listed the case among a group of appeals in which it denied hearings.

8 Were Negroes

The twelve persons who appealed had sat at a counter in an F. W. Woolworth Co. store. Eight of those who appealed are Negroes. The others are white persons. Each was sentenced in Tallahassee Municipal Court to pay a $300 fine or serve ninety days in jail. The demonstrations occured Feb. 20 and March 12, 1960.

In their appeal, those involved in the action questioned whether their arrest and convictions constituted "unlawful interference" with their freedom of speech and liberty of contract (right to do business with the establishment) in violation of Constitutional guaranties of due process and equal protection of the laws.

Tallahassee's Argument

The City of Tallahassee in a brief opposing any Supreme Court hearing for the twelve asserted there was no racial question involved in the case.

The brief said that if the twelve had complied with a command by the Mayor to immediately and peaceably leave the lunch counter there "would have been no arrests. It added that the Mayor of Tallahassee "had good reason to believe that the continued assembly of the petitioners (the sit-in by the twelve) would cause a riot."

Names of the 12

Those appealing in the case were Henry M. Steele, William Haywood Larkins, Patricia Gloria Stephens, Priscilla Gwendolyn Stephens, Angelina Nance, Barbara Joan Broxton, John Anglish Broxton, Clement Collier Carney, Robert K. Armstrong, Roland W. Eves, Derek Spencer Lawler and John J. Poland. The latter four were listed as white students.

In other actions today, the court:

Gambling Conviction Is Reversed

Threw out the gabling convictions of three men in Washington because police obtained evidence by driving a "needle microphone" in the wall of a house. Justice Petter Stewart, who delivered the opinion, said the Constitution's Fourth Amendment guarantees against unreasonable search and seizure and added that "the personal rights which it secures, have a long history." He asserted: At the core stands the right of a man to retreat into his own home and there be free from unreasonable governmental intrusion. "The case involved Meyer Schwartz, Julius Silverman and Robert L. Martin. Each was sentenced to twenty months to five years' imprisonment.

Justices Fail To Elaborate On Decision

Miami Herald

Dec. 3-7-61

Body Also Limits Use Of Electronic Eavesdropping

BY KARL R. BAUMAN

WASHINGTON, March 6 (AP)—In its first action on a Southern lunch counter "sit-in" case, the Supreme Court today refused a hearing to eight Negroes and four whites convicted in a Florida lunchroom demonstration.

They were convicted in Municipal Court in Tallahassee in connection with sit-in demonstrations at a Woolworth store Feb. 20 and March 12 last year. Each received a sentence of 60 days in jail or a $300 fine.

The import of the action was not made clear. The court merely said it would not hear the appeal.

Court observers speculated the refusal may have been based, at least partially, on the fact that the case had not gone through Florida's highest courts. The appeal came here from the Circuit Court for Leon County, which affirmed the Municipal Court.

The Supreme Court now has before it a sit-in case involving 17 Louisiana Negroes. This case has run the full course in state courts. The high court has not yet said whether it will hear arguments in this case.

The Tallahassee demonstrators were convicted under a city ordinance proscribing acts of disorderly conduct, breaches of the peace, and unlawful assembly.

NAACP Is Mum

In New York, James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said he hoped the decision does not mean the court intends to avoid the issues raised by the sit-ins. Farmer's group organized the Tallahassee demonstrations.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said it had no immediate comment.

In a unanimous decision, written by Justice Potter Stewart, the high court staked out a forbidden area in the use of electronic eavesdropping. The decision threw out the conviction of three men accused of operating a big-time Washington gambling house near the State Dept.

In the Spring of 1958 police here suspected a row house was being used for gambling operations. They gained permission to enter the vacant adjoining row house and used a "spike mike" to listen to what was going on in the house next door.

'Spike Mike'

The instrument was a microphone with a spike about a foot long attached to it, together with an amplifier, a power pack, and earphones. The officers inserted the spike several inches into the wall between the two houses until it hit a heating duct, thus converting the entire heating system into a conductor of sound.

Stewart said the facts in the case did not require the court to 'contemplate the Fourth Amendment implications of these and other frightening paraphernalia which the vaunted marvels of an electronic age may visit upon human society."

He said eavesdropping accomplished by means of such a physical intrusion was "beyond the pale of those decisions which . . . held that eavesdropping accomplished by other electronic means did not amount to an invasion of Fourth Amendment rights."

Forbids Unlawful Search

The Fourth Amendment forbids unlawful search and seizure.

Stewart cited a decision which upheld the use of an electronic device on the wall of a house as a permissible invasion of privacy. He said he found no occasion to re-examine the earlier decision, "but we decline to go beyond it, even by a fraction of an inch."

In other action today the court let stand a decision of Federal courts in Philadelphia barring use of labor union funds for the payment of legal expenses of accused union officers.

Raymond Cohen and three other officers of Local 107 of the Teamsters Union are under charges of conspiracy to defraud members of the local. A majority of the local's members voted to pay the legal expenses of the accused officers, but nine dissenting members won an injunction in U. S. District Court. The Court of Appeals affirmed this.

Supreme Court Refuses To Review Conviction Of 12 In Florida Sit-In ## Brief Order Not Explained

From Wire Dispatches

Washington, March 6.—The Supreme Court refused Monday to review the first case brought to it from the wave of sit-in demonstrations at lunch counters in the South.

The court left standing the convictions of eight Negro and four white students for sitting at the counter in a Woolworth's store in Tallahassee, Fla. Each was sentenced to pay a $300 fine or spend 60 days in jail.

So far as could be learned, the justices were unanimous in refusing review. At least none noted dissent. There was no explanation for the action, simply one-line order stating that the petition for review had been denied.

Significance Discounted

Observers cautioned against reading too much significance into the court's action. They warned that it could not necessarily be takne as an indication of what the Supreme Court will do in the large number of sit in cases approaching it.

The particular reason for questioning the meaning of this case is that it may have had a technical flaw. The city of Tallahassee, opposing Supreme Court review, claimed that the 12 convicted youths had not followed out the possible avenues of appeal in the Florida courts.

The Supreme Court will not hear cases from the State courts unless they have been taken as far as possible within the State judicial system.

Rules On Eavesdropping

The Supreme Court now has before it petitions for review from 17 Negro students convicted in sit-in tests in Baton Rouge, La. Those cases were filed earlier than the Tallahassee case but have not yet been acted on.

In another decision written by Justice Potter Stewart, the high court staked out a forbidden area in the use of electronic eavesdropping. The unanimous decision threw out the conviction of three men accused of operating a big-time Washington gambling house near the State Department.

Listened With 'Spike Mike'

In the spring of 1958 police here suspected a row house was being used for gambling operations. They gained permission to enter the vacant adjoining row house and used a "spike mike" to listen to what was going on in the next house.

The instrument was a microphone with a spike about a foot long attached to it, together with an amplifier, a power pack, and earphones. The officers inserted the spike several inches into the wall between the two houses until it hit a heating duct, this converting the entire heating system into a conductor of sound.

Stewart said eavesdropping accomplished by means of such a physical intrusion was "beyond the pale of those decisions which . . . held that eavesdropping accomplished by other electronic means did not amount to an invasion of Fourth Amendment rights." The Fourth Amendment forbids unlawful search and seizure.

In other action the court let stand a decision of federal courts in Philadelphia barring use of labor-union funds for the payment of legal expenses of accused union officers.

38a 1961

FLORIDA

Fla. 'Sit-In' Appeal, Based On Restrictive Convenant, Rejected

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Supreme Court Monday rejected an appeal of Negro and white sit-in demonstrators arrested in Tallahassee, Fla.

The brief order left standing their convictions and upheld the fines or jail sentences given them.

The court acted on appeals by two groups of students, who were arrested for disorderly conduct after refusing to leave the lunch counter in the F. W. Woolworth Five and Ten Cent Store.

Woolworth sells to Negroes in all departments of the store except the lunch counter.

The brief order gave no reason for the high court's refusal to hear arguments in the case.

The Tallahassee appeal had been viewed as a possible opportunity for the high court to set legal precedent in the sitin disturbances which have flared throughout the South.

Still pending is a request for Supreme Court consideration of three sit-in appeals from Baton Rouge, La.

The mayor of Tallahassee personally instructed police in both instances to arrest the students after they ignored his order to leave. All drew $300 fines or 60 days in jail. The Leon County Circuit court affirmed the convictions.

The principal legal argument by the demonstrators has been that no arm of the state government may use its power to compel racial discrimination at the behest of a private party.

They relied on the 1948 Supreme Court decision which dealt with real estate covenants designed to preserve all white-neighborhoods. The court held these racially restrictive agreements are not enforceable in court.

In the Tallahassee case, it was argued that the city may not enforce trespass laws which result in racial discrimination.

The students contended that their cases are actually stronger than the real estate cases because the arests were demanded by third persons, including the mayor, rather than by Woolworth, whose property was involved.

They cited the 14th Amendment's guarantee of "due process of law" and "equal protection of the laws."

REVIEW REFUSED IN FLORIDA SIT-IN

High Court, Without Dissent, Lets Stand the Conviction of Twelve Students

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6—The Supreme Court refused today to review the first case brought to it from the wave of sit-in demonstrations at lunch counters in the South.

The Court left standing the convictions of eight Negro and four white students for sitting at the counter in an F. W. Woolworth Company store in Tallahassee, Fla. Each was sentenced to pay a $300 fine or spend sixty days in jail.

As far as could be told, the justices were unanimous in refusing review. At least none noted dissent. There was no explanation for the action, simply a one-line order stating that the petition for review had been denied.

Observers quickly cautioned against reading too much significance into the court's action. They warned that it could not necessarily be taken as an indication of what the Supreme Court would do in the large number of sit-in cases approaching it.

Technical Flaw Possible

The particular reason for questioning the meaning of this case is that it may have had a technical flaw. The City of Tallahassee, opposing Supreme Court review, contended that the twelve convicted youths had not followed the possible avenues of appeal in the Florida courts. The Supreme Court will not hear cases from the state courts unless they have been taken as far as possible within the state judicial system.

The Supreme Court has before it petitions for review from seventeen Negro students convicted in sit-in demonstrations in Baton Rouge, La. Those cases were filed earlier than the Tallahassee case but they have not been acted on.

The Tallahassee case began on Feb. 20 and March 12, 1960, when groups of Negro students sat at the Woolworth lunch counter and demanded service. That store serves Negroes in all departments except the lunch counter, as is true of many Southern variety outlets.

The white students sat at the counter in sympathy on March 20. They ordered and received food and passed some of it to the Negroes.

Action of Mayor

The manager of the store did not ask any of the students to leave. But the Mayor of Tallahassee, saying that he feared a riot, personally ordered the students out. When they refused, he told the police to arrest them for breach of the peace.

In their petition for review the students made the point that they had actually done nothing violent that could be called a breach of the peace. And they argued that since the Mayor, not the store owner, had ordered them out, this was clearly a governmental action against persons because of race.

SUPREME COURT REFUSES TO ACT

LUNCH COUNTER

Court Refuses Sit-In Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) —In its first action on a southern lunch counter sit-in case, the Supreme Court Monday refused a hearing to eight Negroes and four whites convicted in a Florida lunchroom demonstration.

They were convicted in Municipal Court in Tallahassee in connection with sit-in demonstrations at a Woolworth store Feb. 20 and March 12 last year. Each received a sentence of 60 days in jail or a $300 fine.

The import of the action was not made clear. The court merely said it would not hear the appeal.

Speculation.

Court observers speculated the refusal may have been based, at least partially, on the fact that the case had not gone through Florida's highest courts. The appeal came here from the Circuit Court for Leon County, which affirmed the Municipal Court.

The Supreme Court now has before it a sit-in case involving 17 Louisiana Negroes. This case has run the full course in state courts. The high court has not yet said whether it will hear arguments in this case.

The Tallahassee demonstrators were convicted uder a city ordiwere convicted under a city ordiderly conduct, breaches of the peace, and unlawful assembly.

In New York, James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said he hoped the decision does not mean the court intends to avoid the issues raised by the sit-ins. Farmer's group organized the Tallahassee demonstrations.

The National Assocition for the Advancement of Colored People said it had no immediate comment.

In a uanimous decision, written by Justice Potter Stewart, the high court staked out a forbidden area in the use of electronic eavesdropping. The decision threw out the conviction of three men accused of operating a big-time Washington gambling house near the State Department.

In the spring of 1958, police here suspected a row house was being used for gambling operations. They gained permission to enter the vacant adjoining row house and used a "spike mike" to listen to what was going on in the house next door.

The instrument was a micro phone with a spike about a foot long attached to it, together with an amplifier, a power pack, and earphones. The officers inserted the spike several inches into the wall between the two houses until he hit a heating duct, thus converting the entire heating system into a conductor of sound.

The Fourth Amendment forbids unlawful search and seizure.

Supreme Court Turns Down Tallahassee Sit-In Review

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court refused Monday to review the first case brought to it from the wave of sit-in demonstrations at lunch counters in the South.

The court left standing the convictions of eight Negro and four white students for sitting at the counter in a Woolworth's store in Tallahassee, Fla. Each was sentenced to pay a $300 fine or spend 60 days in jail.

So far as could be learned, the justices were unanimous in refusing review. At least none noted dissent. There was no explanation for the action, simply a one-line order stating that the petition for review had been denied.

Observers cautioned against reading too much significance into the court's action. They warned that it could not necessarily be taken as an indication of what the Supreme Court will do in the large number of sit-in cases approaching it.

The particular reason for questioning the meaning of this case is that it may have had a technical flaw. The City of Tallahassee, opposing the Supreme Court review, charged that the 12 convicted youths hadn't pursued the possible avenues of appeal in the Florida courts. The Supreme Court won't hear cases from the state courts unless they have been taken as far as possible within the state judicial system.

The Supreme Court now has petitions for review from 17 Negro students convicted in sit-in tests in Baton Rouge, La. Those cases were filed earlier than the Tallahassee case but have not yet been acted on.

The Tallahassee case began on Feb. 20 and March 12, 1960, when groups of Negro students sat at the Woolworth lunch counter and demanded service. That store serves Negroes in all departments except the lunch counter.

The white students sat at the counter in sympathy with the sit-ins on March 20. They ordered and received food and passed some of it on to the Negroes.

The manager of the store did not ask any of the students to leave. But the manor of Tallahassee, saying that he feared a riot, personally ordered the students out. When they refused, he told the police to arrest them for breach of the peace.

In their petition for review the students made the point that they had done nothing violent that could be called a breach of the peace. And they argued that since the mayor, not the store owner, had ordered them out, this was clearly a governmental action against persons on account of race.

The latter point is significant because the Constitution prohibits only governmental, not private discrimination. The tough legal problem in most sit-in cases is whether there is any "state action" when a private property owner calls in the authorities to enforce his discriminatory regulations.

The students were convicted in the Municipal Court of Tallahassee, and the convictions were affirmed in a county circuit court. There is no further appeal guaranteed under Florida law, but it is possible to ask the higher courts for discretionary writs of certiorari to look at the face of the record.

This last step was not taken by the students. They claimed that the Florida procedure did not permit review of constitutional questions by writs of certiorari.

Court Will Look Again At Sit-Ins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court is expected to take another look soon at racial sit-in demonstrations despite its rejection of an appeal by student demonstrators in Tallahassee, Fla.

Three more appeals from Baton Rouge, La., are on the court's docket and may be acted on March 20. Appeals from other states also are on the way to the high court.

Eventually, the court seemed bound to establish legal guidelines for handling the widespread Negro and white demonstrations at privately operated lunch counters in the South.

The court Monday without comment denied review to a group of Negro students and to a white group. The demonstrators were convicted of disorderly conduct after refusing to leave a lunch counter in an F. W. Woolworth's store in Tallahassee. There was a dispute between the parties over whether the appeals should have come to the U.S. Supreme Court, or first should have gone farther in state courts.

This factor may have caused the Supreme Court to deny review. But the justices themselves gave no reason.

The 12 students were sentenced to 60 days in jail or fined $300.

The issue in the sit-in cases was whether a city could use its police power to enforce racial segregation in a store or other privately operated establishment.

High Court Weighs 'Sit-In' Appeal

By the Ass

Washington

The Supreme Court of the United States at its next session may announce what action it will take on a second appeal involoving "sit-in" demonstrators at white lunch counters in the South.

In a brief order Monday, the high tribunal denied a hearing to eight Negroes and four white persons who were arrested in a demonstration in Tallahassee, Fla. They face sentences of 60 days in jail or $300 fine each.

The court's order of the denial gave no explanation. Some observers surmised the refusal might have been because the 12 persons had not first taken their case to the Florida Supreme Court.

It was the first time the Supreme Court had acted on appeal papers involving "sit-in" demonstrations.

The second appeal still before the court was filed by 17 Negroes who were arrested in Baton Rouge, La. They were sentenced to four months' imprisonment each, with the provision that three months could be suspended upon payment of a $100 fine by each.

Between now and the court's next session, on March 20, the justices will study the appeal papers filed by the 17, who hope to obtain a hearing and dismissal of their sentences.

The justices may be ready to announce at the March 20 session whether they will grant or deny a hearing in the Louisiana case.

The 17 in their appeal contend the states have no power to compel segregation of races. They assert Louisiana therefore could not penalize them for expressing dissatisfaction over "being relegated to second-class status in public establishments."

Lunch counters now desegregated in Florida cities

CLEARWATER, Fla., Jan. 5—(AP)—Lunch counters were desegregated at 21 stores in Pinellas County Tuesday. One Negro woman showed up to eat with white patrons.

Management of stores in St. Petersburg, Clearwater, Dunedin and Largo agreed at meetings last month to start serving Negroes along with whites on Jan. 3.

The agreements were similar to those reached earlier between Negro leaders and managers of some stores at Tampa, Sarasota and Bradenton. Integration started at some establishments in these cities more than two months ago.

A check with store managers in the four communities affected yesterday brought only one report of integration. A Negro woman dined alone and without disturbance at McCrory's in Clearwater.

The group working out the agreement at St. Petersburg requested news media to allow the change to become a reality "in an orderly way, without advance fanfare."

At Tampa, spokesmen for several firms which agreed to integration said no Negroes have sought service at lunch counters in recent weeks.

End Lunch Counter Ban In 21 Clearwater Sites

CLEARWATER, Fla. (ANP)—Lunch counters were desegregated at 21 stores in Pinellas County. One Negro woman showed up to eat with white patrons.

Coach's charges on firing called 'absurd'

Morals, not sitdowns involved

Special to the AFRO

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Charges that a football coach at Florida A. and M. University was fired because of his opposition to sit - in demonstrations, were branded as "completely absurd" last week.

A university spokesman told the AFRO Saturday morning that the dismissal of Macon L. Williams "was purely a matter of morals."

Williams, freshman coach and the school's head recruiter, told a national news service on Friday that he had been let out of his $6,000-a-year job at the school because he disapproved of student participation in racial demonstrations.

* * *

ACCORDING to Williams, he was a victim of "personal prejudice on the part of Dr. George W. Gore Jr.," the president of Florida A. and M.

The firing came about, he said, "because I have consistently opposed student sit-ins and other demonstrations. As far back as the boycott," Williams continued, "I refused to join in demonstrations. I rode the buses and I expressed my feelings openly on the campus.

"I am convinced this has been a factor in the dismissal I intend to fight this unfair action. The charges against me are not true."

* * *

THE "CHARGES" are that the young coach had torrorized three women students.

According to the information reportedly contained in 500 pages of recorded and transcribed testimony, Williams sought to molest the young women in an apartment they shared off the campus.

The girls are said to have signed affidavits in support of the allegations. These affidavits were drawn up after a faculty committee had heard them testify.

* * *

"MR. WILLIAMS," the spokesman told the AFRO, "has never been identified with any social change movement here. There is no basis whatsoever for his story about sit-in opposition.

"It was a purely moral issue that was involved in his dismissal. The reasons reportedly given by him are completely absurd."

Sit-In Trio Starts Jail Terms

By the Associated Press

Tallahassee, Fla.

Two white college students and a Negro youth have begun serving 60-day jail sentences at Tallahassee, Fla., after carrying their convictions in a variety store sit-in demonstration all the way to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The high tribunal refused to hear their appeal March 6 apparently because they did not take their case through all the state courts first.

Two weeks later the Supreme Court agreed to hear arguments in the fall on appeals of Negroes convicted in sit-ins at Baton Rouge, La., the first such action by the court since the wave of sit-ins began in the South.

Three Jailed

The three, who went to jail Monday rather than pay $300 fines, were Derek Lawler, a Florida State University student; Jeff Poland, former FSU student; and Henry M. Steele, a son of the Rev. C. K. Steelse, a Negro integration leader.

Shortly after they entered the jail their attorneys sought their release on grounds the constitutional rights of the three were being violated. However, a federal judge denied the petition.

The Justice Department began an investigation of reports of discrimination against Negroes seeking to vote in three Mississippi counties, Madison, Walthall, and Forrest. The New Orleans Federal Bureau of Investigation office said the Madison County probe was ordered at the request of John Doar, acting assistant United States Attorney General for civil rights.

Warning Sounded

In another Mississippi development, Medgar Evers, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People state field secretary, warned demonstrations will continue in Jackson until segregation barriers fall. Several Negroes were arrested during a recent read-in at a Jackson public library.

A request by Negroes to use a municipal golf course at Macon, Ga., would be considered by the City Council at a meeting Wednesday, Mayor Edgar H. Wilson reported. The course is segregated.

The Augusta Coach Company asked United States District Court to uphold a Georgia Public Service Commission rule calling for segregation on public conveyances for reasons of public health.

Sitdowner out of jail

WASHINGTON

Patricia Stephens of the Florida sitdown movement was in Washington this week to visit friends after her most recent release from a Tallahassee jail.

She and Ben Cowins, Florida A. and M. student, are free under $1,000 bail each, after their arrest on charges growing out of sitdown protests at Neisner's Five and Dime Store and Sears Roebuck in Tallahassee.

Coed Sentenced To 120 More Days In Jail For Sit-Ins

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — (ANP) — Patricia Stephens, who last year served 49 days in a Florida jail for sitting-in, was sentenced last week to 120 days for participating in another demonstration.

Miss Stephens, a college student, and Ben Cowins were arrested on March 4th of this year while sitting-in at a Neisner lunch counter. They were charged with "disorderly proceedings."

Judge Rudd sentenced Stephens to 60 days or $500 and to a mandatory 30 day term for the "disorderly proceedings" charge. He also imposed a 30 day sentence for violation of probation imposed last year. This last sentence has since been suspended.

Suit to Halt Negro Pickets In Pinellas Left to Judge

CLEARWATER, March 24 (AP)—Attorneys for opposing sides wrapped up their cases today in a circuit court suit seeking to prevent Negroes from picketing a St. Petersburg store.

J. E. Webb, founder and owner of Webb's City, a famous St. Petersburg "drug store" where just about anything may be purchased, filed suit seeking to have the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People permanently stopped from picketing his store for lunch counter service.

Judge Jack White told attorneys he probably would rule in two weeks.

He indicated that "constitutional questions involved are rather delicate ones."

Webb was granted a temporary injunction last December after several days of picketing by the St. Petersburg branch of the NAACP.

Attorneys for Webb argued that the picketing was not peaceful and that, even if it was, it was subject to injunction because it was for the "unlawful purpose of discouraging trade at Webb's City and thus force Webb to comply with the wishes of the NAACP for integrated lunch counters.

Attorneys for the NAACP said the plaintiffs failed to show any evidence of violence in the picketing.

They argued that to deny the defendants the right to picket peacefully for what they believe to be their rights would be to deny them their constitutional rights to freedom of speech.

During the noon recess, the Negro lawyers and followers of the case had lunch at counters of variety stores in downtown Clearwater.

The Clearwater and St. Petersburg lunch counters, including Webb's City, integrated eating facilities voluntarily last December.

However, Webb said he is continuing to push for a court injunction against picketing, saying he is fighting for the right of a merchant to operate his store without interference from any group.

RATHER THAN PAY FINES

2 White Youths, Negro Begin Sit-In Jail Terms

TALLAHASSEE, April 10 (AP)—Two white college students and a Negro youth jailed on charges growing out of a 1960 sit-in demonstration made an unsuccessful move today to gain their freedom by a federal court order.

Federal Judge Harrold Carswell denied their petition for release on a writ of habeas corpus. Attorneys for the three contended their constitutional rights were being violated.

The three who went to jail rather than pay $300 fines were Derek Lawler, a Florida State University student; Jeff Poland, former FSU student, and Henry Steele, son of an integration leader here.

They were ordered to surrender after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review their convictions. The high court indicated they should exhaust their appeals in state court before going there.

Poland, who recently was dropped from Florida State, appeared at the police station with a Bible in his hand to begin his term.

Two other FSU students fined in the same case, Roland Eves and Stephen Poe, paid $300 fines. Another former student, Robert Armstrong, was confined to a hospital and could not appear for the court action.

They were convicted by City Judge John Rudd of charges of disorderly conduct growing out of a sit-in demonstration at the Woolworth variety store. Police said the Negro and white demonstrators refused to leave the counter on order of the City Commission. The Leon County Circuit Court without comment refused to review the case.

8 ministers give aid to sitdowners

ATLANTA — "Hunger is a part of the human makeup. We were hungry in body and in spirit to be treated like men."

With this thought the Rev. Otis Moss Jr. led eight local pastors in a sitdown which resulted in their jailing last Wednesday. After two days and two nights in jail, each was freed on $100 bond.

The ministers' action was in support of the 78 student sitdowners jailed the previous week. Bound over to the Fulton County grand jury, the students chose to remain in jail rather than pay $100 bond for freedom.

In city court before Judge James Webb, who also bound the ministers over to the grand jury, the 25-year-old Rev. Mr. Moss said:

• • •

"WE ARE not lawless. We believe in the Constitution of the United States; we believe in God and in the power of redemptive suffering.

"We entertain no hatred toward anyone. We have nothing but love in our hearts for the man who refused us service, the policeman who arrested us and the judge before whom we stand."

The Rev. Ross W. Anderson, a 60 - year-old white preacher who was in the group of arrested clerics, said to the judge:

"In this critical period of history, if we go on denying the laws of God and man, civilization as we know it will be destroyed."

The Rev. Mr. Moss is pastor of Providence Southeast Baptist Church. The Rev. Mr. Anderson is from the Koinonia Farms community which has been under fire from Georgia authorities.

• • •

THE OTHER ministers were: The Revs. Benjamin J. Johnson, 49, Mt. Calvary Baptist Church; Walter R. McCall, 37, Providence Baptist; Joe D. Grier Jr., 31, Fort Street Methodist; Joseph E. Boone, 38, Bush Memorial Congregational;

Also the Rev. Albert L. Dunn, 26, Fountain Memorial AME, and the Rev. Roosevelt W. Moore, 47, Gordon Road Methodist Church.

The sitdown was staged at Terminal Station. When arrested, the ministers at first declared they would stay in jail as long as the jailed students. Later, they desided to post bond for freedom so they could help on the mass prayer service planned for Sunday.

THE REV. WILLIAM HOLMES BORDERS, who coordinated plans for the service, told the AFRO Saturday that it would be held either at the Fulton County jail, where the students are, or Wheat Street Baptist Church, which he pastors. Jail authorities advised the group not to plan the service for the jail for fear of disturbing the prisoners.

He said that from 10 to 12 thousand persons are expected. On Wednesday night, after the arrest of the eight ministers, almost 2,000 persons attended a mass meeting at Warren Memorial Methodist Church.

Speakers were the Rev. Mr. Borders and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Dr. King declared that "you can do nothing but disobey an unjust law" for in obeying an unjust law, you uphold it.

He declared also that the colored citizens of Georgia would not accept "token integration" because "you can no more have 'token integration' than you can have 'token democracy.'"

MEANWHILE, STUDENT demonstrators are continuing sitdowns and picketing — none were arrested last week. The Atlanta colored community is maintaining a "buyers' strike" on stores that practice discrimination also.

As the 78 jailed students continued to tax the limited facilities of Fulton County Jail, Sheriff Ralph T. Grimes said if there are any more mass arrests, he would have to send the new prisoners to jails in other Georgia counties.

County solicitor John T. Kelley indicated he was in no hurry to end the sitdowners' jail stay by setting an early trial date. He said:

"They will be brought to trial but they will be handled routinely, and if they want to stay in jail, that's where we want to put them anyway."

• • •

ATLANTA SITDOWNERS won the praise of a Georgia Segregationist, Roy Harris who said: "You've got to hand it to them. They're willing to go to jail for their beliefs."

Speaking to a segregationist rally, Harris said he "always wanted to see one southern governor who had the courage to let a federal judge put him in jail" for refusing to follow school desegregation orders.

Another speaker at the rally, an Atlanta restaurant-owner, said:

"They say Lumumba is buried. I don't believe it. I think somebody had him for dinner."

Maddox has run several paid ads in Atlanta newspapers in opposition to the sitdowns and school desegregation.

• • •

IN NASHVILLE demonstrators against movie jim crow got a pleasant surprise when they topped off their "stand in" with a visit to the Trailways bus station lunch counter where they had previously been refused service. They were served "quickly and courteously," according to a spokesman for the group. They were also served at the Greyhound bus station.

• • •

THE FIGHT AGAINST segregated movie houses continued on several fronts. In Chapel Hill, N.C., some 350 members of the University of North Carolina faculty bought a newspaper ad urging that segregation be abolished.

On the previous Sunday, "Brotherhood Day," a group of colored demonstrators marched from a church mass meeting to the City Hall area. They protested jim crow at local movie houses.

The demonstrations against movie jim crow were also tied to Lincoln's Birthday as hundreds of students from the University of Texas staged demonstrations in Austin.

In Dallas, students from Southern Methodist University also staged protest marches.

Other demonstrations were held in San Antonio, Houston, Shreveport, New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cambridge, Mass., Ann Arbor, Mich., Oberlin, Ohio and Champaign, Ill.

In Savannah, Ga., a city park was closed when about 100 colored persons entered.

• • •

IN SUMTER, S.C., a white camera - man was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct when he filmed the forceful ejection of two colored sitdowners by a burly restaurant operator.

Arrested along with George Carras was Boyce Stradly, an airplane pilot, who flew the newsman to Sumter from Charlotte, N.C. for the assignment.

They said the cafe operator threw a soft drink on the cameraman and manhandled the pilot. He was not arrested.

Three sitdowners arrested in connection with the incident were: Ivor G. Moore, 19, Bronx, N.Y.; Herman H. Harris, 20, Lancaster, and Eddie Drummon, 18, Greenville. Another sitdowner, Clifford Sumner, 21, Waycross, Ga., said police struck him as they placed him under arrest.

J. H. Lawson, a Sumter druggist, accused the National Broadcasting Company of stagind the sitdown deliberately. The network denied it. Films of the incident were shown over NBC which got them from WSOC-TV, the Charlotte affiliate which employs Carras.

Nine Charleston, S.C. sitdowners posted a total of $900 bond after being arrested in a sitdown at a Kress store. Five more chose to stay in jail pending a court hearing. All were high school students.

Trial for six Little Rock, Ark. sitdowners was delayed a third time last week by Judge Quinn Glover. He set April 27 as the hearing date on the plea of the sitdowners' attorney, E. V. Trible.

The attorney cited the fact that the Arkansas Supreme Court has not ruled on the constitutionality of the state law under which the sitdowners were arrested.

An anti - sitdown law was introduced in the Tennessee House of Representatives. The bill would make it a misdemeanor to loiter in a business place after being told to leave.

• • •

SPEAKING IN DETROIT, James J. Blake, a sitdowner from Morehouse College in Atlanta, said his group would "continue to sit in, stand in, walk in, fly in, wade in and move in until the walls of segregation come tumbling down."

Judge Herman E. Moore, retired as U.S. District Judge for the Virgin Islands, commended the sitdowns. He spoke at a banquet given in his honor in Chicago.

He said, of the movement, "This is not only our struggle in American but a struggle for the dignity, peace and justice of people all over the world.

"Today, it is becoming the mode of the world to adjust things by peaceful settlement. There can be no peace by force. We have found that there can be no peace unless it is a just peace."

STAR IN PICKET LINE.—Dr. Vasco Smith, a leader in the civil rights movement in Memphis, is one of the few Memphians willing to walk a downtown picket line. Recently, Dr. Smith had Howard Martin, 65, arrested on a disorderly conduct charge. The prominent dentist said he was walking a picket line when Martin approached him with a knife open in his hand. Dr. Smith told the court: "Martin didn't say a word, but he started at me and I was afraid he intended to attack me." Martin said: "I was walking down Main street minding my own business, cleaning my fingernails with a pocket knife when the officers arrested me." Judge Boushe ruled it was on man's word against another and dismissed the charge against Martin.

SITDOWN HIGHLIGHTS

Trial begins this week for 189 students and two NAACP officials arrested in Columbia, S.C.

Last of 14 students jailed in Rock Hill, S.C., released this week. Mammoth mass meeting set.

Thirteen of 64 arrested in Sumter, S.C., convicted. Appeals being filed. Trials for 64 start this week.

City of Lynchburg, Va. faces challenge on segregated public facilities. Suit due in Federal Court, March 8.

U.S. Attorney General Robert Kennedy asked to investigate arrest of 15 on Virginia segregated stat- ing law faces challenge in Hampton. Segregated buses in Macon, Ga. theatre faces boycott by University of Virginia students.

The Realm Of Religion

Minister Believes Sit-Ins Must Be A 'Protest In Love'

P. A. Smith Meets Task With Cool Head

By ORA SPAID
Courier-Journal Religious Editor

It is quite human to have one attitude toward something in the abstract and a different attitude toward the same thing in the concrete.

Thus a man may quarrel with the American Medical Association but swear by his own doctor, be anti-Catholic but vow that "some of my best friends are Catholics," harshly condemn "young hoodlums" but soften with sympathy when he meets one up close.

It is this paradox with which sit-in demonstrations by Negroes seek to deal.

'Treat Us As Persons'

The Rev. Philip Smith explains it this way: "When our kids picket a place that will not serve Negroes, they are saying, 'You must treat us as persons; you can't deal with us in the abstract.'"

The idea is to "force the segregationist to confront himself," to make his segregation policy a matter of conscience. To do this, the demonstrators must "protest in love." So all stand-ins of the C.O.R.E. (Congress of Racial Equality) group, which Mr. Smith advises, take an oath of nonviolence—never to strike back even if struck, to "grant self-dignity to every individual even if he withholds mine."

Almost Accidental

Mr. Smith's connection with C.O.R.E. is almost accidental, but his role in the demonstrations and negotiations for desegregation of downtown Louisville businesses are an extension of his guiding philosophy.

Mr. Smith is minister of First Unitarian Church and is among the integration leaders meeting with Mayor Hoblitzell's committee. He and a member of his church, Dr. George Kimbrough, chairman of Louisville Unitarians for Social Action, are the only white men among the integration leadership.

Has Important Role

Mr. Smith's role in the negotiations has been an important one—that of a quiet and cool head steadily holding up the rule of principle, insistent upon desegregation but insistent also that the means to that end not trail off into opportunism.

It is a role that has come suddenly and early—Mr. Smith is only 31, and he has been in Louisville little more than a year.

He's a New Englander—born in Bangor, Me.—with a Boston accent and more the man than a social reformer.

He got involved with C.O.R.E. when its members asked him to be an adult leader after their parents rejected other leadership that had been trying to sponsor the organization here.

THE REV. P. A. SMITH
Gets early test

Blended Easily

C.O.R.E. blended easily into the activities of Louisville Unitarians for Social Action, a group which formed during the relief crisis of last spring and continued with demonstrations against discrimination in the showing of the "Porgy and Bess" movie here. L.U.S.A. also surveyed restaurant operators in downtown Louisville and found some of them feeling that racial integration was inevitable but looking for some "out"—such as a City ordinance or all-at-once desegregation—to justify it to their customers.

There has been more good will in desegregation than some people realize. One department store integrated its restaurant after a series of talks on the friendliest terms. And in one case where negotiations failed and demonstrations began, a department-store executive showed that kindness was not forgotten when he offered chairs to the foot-weary pickets.

Shuns Labels

Mr. Smith doesn't like labels but admits that "naturalistic humanist" fits him as closely as any. He sums up his philosophy as "an attitude of reverence for life" and feels strongly that the church must be "an atmosphere in which individuals can confront themselves more honestly."

Only as man "quits evading himself" can he confront his need of others and the realization that "love does not come on earth until a human exhibits it."

These beliefs lead Mr. Smith not only to work for trustful relationships between Negro and white but also to insist upon the integrity of those relationships once established. "It is the politics of tyranny when you violate individual integrity."

It is for this reason that he is morally opposed to any boycott of business in downtown Louisville by Negroes.

And his clinging to the idea of bargaining in good faith has been an important element when negotiations threatened to bog down.

Staff Photo

PRINTED PROTEST . . . Negro youths protesting segregated downtown businesses yesterday carried signs stating their complaints. The youngsters marched in the downtown area. No arrests were made.

38a 1961

igh State Court
Trespass Law

100 sit-in cases involved in plea

NEW YORK — The American Civil Liberties Union appealed this week to a three-man Federal district court in Richmond to accept jurisdiction and rule on sitdown cases involving more than 100 Virginia defendants.

The suit is based on the state's 1960 anti - trespass law. In its brief, the ACLU said:

"Over 100 individuals are threatened with a criminal prosecution for asserting their rights to dignified treatment by various commercial establishments.

"If the prosecutions are allowed to proceed — in the face of a clear federal Constitutional question — plaintiffs will plainly suffer great and immediate irreparable injury, the kind of injury that necessarily and invariably flows from the burden of defending a criminal action.

"In addition, the conduct engaged in by plaintiffs is the assertion of human rights protected by the United States Constitution and therefore, is singularly appropriate for adjudication by the federal courts."

Sitdowners' attorneys have argued that the anti - trespass law is a violation of civil rights guaranteed by the Constitution. They asked that the statute be invalidated not only because of its language but also because of the setting in which the law was enacted and is applied.

LAWS THAT THE State of Arkansas used to arrest and convict 11 sitdowners were attacked by Wiley Branton last week in the State Supreme Court at Little Rock.

Mr. Branton said the laws are unconstitutional and unfairly administered.

The students were arrested last March and April during sitdowns at Woolworth's, Pfeifers of Arkansas and the Gus Blass Department Store. The Pine Bluff attorney said that if white persons had done the same thing his clients had done—request service at a lunch counter — they would not have been arrested.

In making the arrests, he said, the police were using the force of law to support the private prejudice of the store manager.

* * *

A STATE'S attorney said the students were not arrested for asking for service but because they refused to leave when denied service.

Associate Justice J. S. Holt asked if they had been told to leave because they were colored. The state's attorney did not answer this question directly but said violence was threatened because of their presence.

The court, highest in the state judiciary, took the case under submission. It set no date for a ruling.

Arrested on March 10 at Woolworth's were: Chester Briggs, Ledridge Davis, Frank James, Charles Parker and Vernon Mott. In city court, each was fined $500 and sentenced to 60 days.

Arrested April 13 at Pfeifers of Arkansas were Eugen D. Smith, William Rogers Jr., McLoyd Buchanan and Sammy J. Baker. They also received $500 fines and 60-day jail sentences in city court.

On April 13, at Gus Blass Department Store, Thomas B. Robinson and Frank Lupper were arrested. They were fined $1,000 each and sentenced to seven months in jail.

Mr. Branton, assisted by Harold B. Anderson, also of Pine Bluff, said all of these penalities were excessive.

* * *

IN GREENVILLE, S.C., a 17-year-old girl, Miss Leola Clements, asked the city council to repeal city ordinances which require eating establishments to practice racial discrimination.

She was joined in her plea by Mrs. Juanita Carter, the Rev. J. S. Hall, and Donald Sampson. Miss Clements and Mrs. Carter are officers in NAACP units.

Looking on as the Council heard the statements were some 175 colored persons who packed the City Hall Council chambers. Greenville Mayor J. Kenneth Cass told the group that the Council would study the request and give a decision soon.

* * *

IN GREENSBORO, N.C., five colored teenagers picketed a theatre showing "Porgy and Bess" after they were denied admission. It was the second picketing incident in recent weeks.

Pickets earlier paraded in front of a Chapel Hill theatre where the same movie was showing and where they had been denied admission. Several white persons also picketed the movie in Chapel Hill.

* * *

IN OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., a white Catholic priest arrested with a group of anti - segregation demonstrators was cleared of a disorderly conduct complaint.

Judge Hillis Sanford, dismissing the complaint against the Rev. Robert G. McDole, said the assistant pastor at Corpus Christi Catholic Church "was on a frolic of his own and his superiors have far more jurisdiction than I."

Eight other persons arrested for the demonstration in the lobby of the Cravens Building were granted a continuance. They are: Mrs. Clara Luper, NAACP youth advisor; Mrs. Ella L. Floyd, Freddy L. Edwards, Willie Johnson, Ed Stone, Stephen E. Wilson, Miss Paula Dean and Mrs. Lu A. Atkins.

IN RALEIGH, N.C. the state supreme court said restaurant operators had a right to refuse service to colored persons.

It made the ruling in upholding the conviction of seven Durham sitdowners convicted of trespassing at a Kress store.

The court also upheld the conviction of Robert Williams, militant integrationist in Monroe. He was convicted of trespassing at a Monroe drug store.

In denying the appeal, the court said restaurant operators have the right to serve either white persons only, colored persons only or mixed groups.

* * *

IN MONTGOMERY, the state Court of Appeals refused a rehearing for 14 colored persons sentenced to jail because they rode on city buses without regarding jim crow regulations in Birmingham.

Among the persons convicted was the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesowrth who was not on the bus at the time. He was arrested because at an earlier meeting, he had advocated bus desegregation.

The Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth was fined $100 and sentenced to 90 days in jail. J. S. Phifer, another defendant, was fined $100 and sentenced to 60 days.

The other 12 drew 180-day sentences. They are: Arthur L. White, the Rev. C. F. Jackson, Johnny C. Collins, Miss Annie Buckley, Alfred Thomas, Joe Hendricks, Jim Hendericks, Willie Butler, Miss Roberta Brinson, James C. Suttles, Misses Doris Burrell and Lillie Bowman.

* * *

SITDOWNERS' CONVICTIONS were also upheld in Georgia as 32 persons fined $100 each in Savannah vainly sought relief from the state Court of Appeals.

Attorneys for the sitdowners said that the 1960 law under which they were arrested was racially discriminatory. The court upheld the view of state's attorney that the sitdowners gathered at the lunch counter to disturb the peace.

In Atlanta city court, two Morehouse College students were acquitted of disorderly conduct. They wre arrested, along with a white man, in a disturbance on a city bus when they refused to move.

John E. Gullatt, 18, and Robert L. Grier, 19, were on the bus with a 16-year-old girl. A white man allegedly told them to move and threatened them with a knife when they refused. He also grabbed one of them, they said.

The white man forfeited $15 bond rather than appear in court.

Ben F. Tilman got a 60-day suspended sentence in an Atlanta court after admitting that he had told an untruth when he said colored pickets at a downtown store assaulted him for crossing the line.

Tilman then said he was assaulted by another man — then said he had been drinking and hurt himelf in a fall. He said he made up the stories to keep from being fired from his job at a trucking firm.

* * *

TWO STUDENTS at Lynchburg (Va.) College were severely reprimanded and placed under suspension for participating in a sitdown with two other white students (from Randolph - Macon Women's College) and two colored students (from Virginia Theological Seminary).

* * *

AN EMERGENCY defense fund was set up by Plymouth Congregational Church in Milwaukee for Arthur L. Bacon, a Talladega (Ala.) student who was assaulted as he sat in an Anniston, Ala. railway station.

A church committee said: "The drama unfolding now at Talladega College is a challengt to us here in Milwaukee also."

In Montclair, N.J., the 100-member Council on Human Relations set up an educational campaign to advance integratin in housing, schools, employment and social life. The council has 100 white fembers.

* * *

IN ANN ARBOR, Mich., Michael A. Crisovan paid a $100 fine for refusing a colored patron admittance to the Newport Batsing Beach which he operates.

The case was brought under Michigan's Diggs Act which prohibits such iscrimination.

Negro Sit-Ins Continue In Some Southern Cities

the Talladega Daily Home
Talladega Ala.
Date 2-14-61

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Negro sit - in demonstrations broke out again in three Southern states in what leaders described as a renewed attack against segregation at lunch counters and restaurants.

Eight Negroes were arrested in one downtown Lynchburg, Va., drug store, but three others were served without incident at another drug store lunch counter.

Negro leaders discussed an all-out movement against segregation in Lynchburg during a recent prayer meeting. Primary target was to be the Patterson drug store where six college students now serving 30-day jail sentences were arrested during a sit-in last December.

It was at Patterson's that all eight arrests were made Monday under Virginia's trespass law. Two demonstrators were released on bond ,the others remained in jail.

Three Negro youths staged a brief sit-in at a downtown Krystal Restaurant in Chattanooga, Tenn., the first since last spring's massive sit-in. Police were called but no arrests were made.

Shortly afterward Negro leaders said that "stand-ins, wade - ins, swim-ins, and play - ins probably will be forthcoming in Chattanooga."

The Rev. Dogan Williams, pastor of Wiley Memorial Methodist Church, said these tactics are sweeping the country and will almost inevitably strike in Chattanooga.

"As long as the Negro hasn't achieved status of a full-fledged citizen and equal rights this sort of thing will happen," said the Rev. Horace Tyler, pastor of the Fairview Presbyterian Church.

In Atlanta, four Negro-sit-in demonstrators forced the closing of a downtown drug store lunch counter but no arrests were made.

In another Atlanta development, three of some 80 demonstrators jailed during last week's extensive sit-ins posted bond after staying in prison over the weekend.

Nearly all the demonstrators originally refused bond in an effort to dramatize their "jail, no bail" protest of segregated lunchroom practices.

At Winston-Salem, N. C., the faculty of Wake Forest College passed a resolution asking the board of trustees at the Baptist-supported institution to admit Negro students. Wake Forest officials had no comment.

Here Is The Text Of Committee Report

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.
Date 2-13-61

Mayor's Group Says 'Significant Progress Made In Talks With Downtown Business

The formal report which the Mayor's Emergency Integration Committee delivered yesterday to Negro and other antisegregation leaders follows:

"The Mayor's Committee was appointed on Friday before last. It immediately entered into discussions with downtown public-service establishments to ascertain whether or not further orderly integration was feasible.

"Its efforts were initiated in an atmosphere of tension. On the one hand it found a lack of understanding and misgivings regarding its objectives. On the other, it encountered impatience with delay and a determination that immediate progress be accomplished.

"Less than two weeks have elapsed since the committee's formation and it has been unable to completely reconcile all of the conflicting emotions just mentioned. Nevertheless, significant progress has been made in general, and almost unhoped-for progress has been made in specific instances.

Idea Well Accepted

"In general, the committee has found the idea of integration well accepted by the businesses and businessmen involved. Many of the misgivings have been dispelled, and broadly speaking the desirability of bringing about orderly integration has been accepted.

"As to specific accomplishments, the committee points first to its own creation by the Mayor of the City; it reports that it has interviewed many businessmen and several groups of businesses and has explained its objectives; it has issued a public statement urging adoption of the program of integration by the business establishments of this community; it has appeared before the boards of directors of business organizations and urged endorsement of the committee's program.

"Such recommendations are presently under consideration by the said boards. The committee has made similar recommendations to religious organizations, as evidenced by the statement of the Louisville Ministerial Association issued on Tuesday of this week. This followed a reiteration of his strong position by Archbishop Floersh in the issue of the Catholic Record of March 4.

"The committee has secured approval of a program in the restaurants of the largest department stores in the area. Agreements have been made in other fields which are confidential in nature and cannot now be publicly disclosed.

"The above developments have occurred despite public statements and press releases which intensified the misgivings earlier mentioned and thus hampered the progress which the committee could otherwise have hoped for.

'Need No Agreements'

"This statement cannot be answered by the assertion that no agreement to refrain from such action existed. Men of good will working toward an unselfish objective need no agreements to refrain from doing that which they know conflicts with the program or makes more difficult the ultimate attainment of their objectives.

"It is the considered opinion of this committee that if such activity is discontinued and if the specific instances of planned integration above referred to are permitted to proceed without demonstration and in a co-operative manner, other businesses in the area will follow the pattern quickly and in substantial numbers.

"We all must now demonstrate to the public that further orderly integration can be accomplished in those areas in which agreement has been established.

Advances Are Noted

"In its investigations and deliberations, the committee noted that without demonstration and without pressures full integration had already occurred in, among others, three of the major downtown hotels, four of Louisville's leading restaurants, an art movie house, and restaurant facilities in two of the major retail establishments, all of the major variety chains and all of the major drug chains.

"Admittedly, this does not represent full realization of the objectives of the committee. We therefore reaffirm our belief, as expressed in our public statement on Sunday, that integration of the public-service establishments is morally right and economically expedient and express the hope that as a result of this partial cataloging of Louisville's progress others will be inspired to voluntarily bring about similar results in their own establishments.

To Hold Self In Readiness

"In view of the foregoing, the committee will hold itself in readiness to take further steps whenever it can feel assured that it has attained new effectiveness by virtue of proof of orderly progress in integration programs now being undertaken. Any future success must depend on a spirit of mutual confidence between all interested groups."

Members of the Mayor's committee are:

Mayor Hoblitzell; Dillman Rash, president of Louisville Title Company; Thomas A. Ballantine, vice-president of Glenmore Distillers; William Harrison, chairman of Louisville Central Area, Inc., and head of Taylor Drug Stores; George W. Norton, president of WAVE, Inc.; Barry Bingham, president of The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times; John M. Hennessy, Jefferson Circuit Court clerk; Henning Hilliard, a broker; John Acree, Jr., president of Lincoln Income Life Insurance Company; Archibald P. Cochran, president of Anaconda Aluminum Company, and Henry Y. Offutt, Jr., president of Kentucky Trust Company.

SIT-IN CAMPAIGNS SPREAD IN A YEAR

The N. Y. Times

Protests on Discrimination Assume the Proportions of a National Movement

New York

By CLAUDE SITTON

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Jan. 28 — The Negro lunch-counter demonstrations that began a year ago next Wednesday have grown into a national protest movement against many forms of discrimination. 1-29-61

The sit-ins continue today in cities like Atlanta, where merchants have refused to desegregate eating facilities. But the lowering of racial barriers at lunch counters in more than 125 Southern communities has led the students and their adult supporters to turn to other fields of protest. P. 64

There have been stand-ins at theatres, kneel-ins at churches and wade-ins at public beaches. Demonstrators have prayed on the steps of Southern capitols, paraded through the streets and picketed courthouses and city halls. "Selective buying" has become a widely used weapon against businesses that practice discrimination.

Boycott Extends North

The movement has spread far beyond the South. Northern chain stores have been boycotted because their Southern outlets discriminate against Negroes. Protests have been staged in the North against de facto school segregation and discrimination in housing and other fields.

Greenwich Village beatniks have appropriated the methods, if not the goals, of the students with an overnight snore-in at a coffeehouse that was ordered evacuated as a fire hazard. And a biracial group has conducted a sit-in against tearoom segregation in Capetown, South Africa.

Negro adults and white liberals, mostly students, have joined the movement. Behind their action lies a factor that many observers consider more significant than the desegregation of the lunch counters. This is the psychological impetus that the demonstrations have given to the over-all civil righs struggle.

"It has brought a reawakening among both whites and Negroes," Mrs. Ruby Hurley said this week. She is regional secretary in the Southeast for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

'New Awareness' Seen

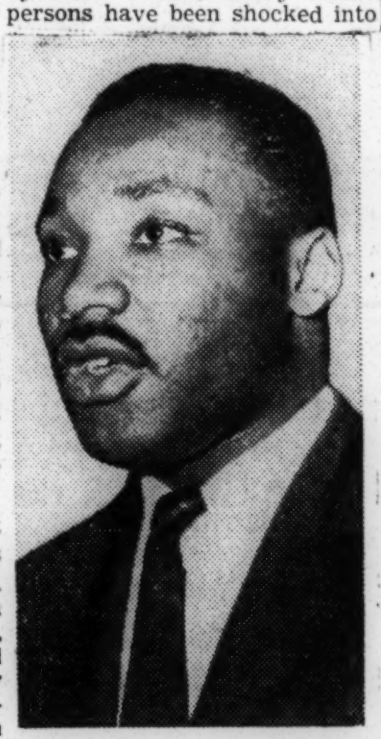
In her annual report, she said of this new attitude:

"By the year's end, more Negro adults had turned from their old casual ways to more dynamic action. Many white persons have been shocked into



Associated Press

LED SIT-IN: The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

the realization that lines of communication must be established between the races, that positive changes must be made."

Gordon R. Carey, field director for the Congress of Racial Equality, commented:

"There is a new awareness of the racial problem throughout the country."

Edward B. King Jr., administrative secretary of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, agreed. He predicted that the anniversary of the sit-ins would bring an upsurge in activity.

"We once again will dedicate ourselves to purge this country of the rabies of racism and not with the deliberate speed evidenced in school desegregation," he asserted. "On the timetable of the world, tomorrow is today. Only forthright action can square America's racial practices with the world's changing order of democracy and human rights."

Dr. King Is Spokesman

The committee was established last April to provide coordination and exchange of information among college groups involved in the nonviolent protest movement. It was formed at a student meeting called by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, headed by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Dr. King, no relative of the committee secretary, has served as spokesman and symbol of the movement. Many of its participants are dedicated to his principle of passive resistance and nonviolence.

The sit-ins began somewhat inconspicuously last Feb. 1 in Greensboro, N. C. The setting was a Woolworth lunch counter. The four participants—freshmen at the Agricultural and Technical College of North Carolina—said later that they had not realized the far-reaching implications of their actions.

They took seats at the counter with a casualness that belied their uneasiness. After their request for service was refused, they sat silently until the store was closed. Then they went to the local branch of the N. A. A. C. P. for advice and legal aid.

Started in Chicago

The sit-in technique had been used before. A biracial group pioneered it in Chicago in 1942. This group later founded the Chicago Committee of Racial Equality, parent organization of the Congress of Racial Equality, also called C. O. R. E. The Youth Councils of the N. A. A. C. P. had also employed the sit-in. But the act of the four freshmen caught the imagination of Negro students across the South.

This occurred at a time of growing dissatisfaction with the slowness of school desegregation. It offered an opportunity for the Negro youth to rebel against the gradualism heretofore accepted tacitly by his elders. It appealed to the student's taste for the dramatic in a way that voter registration campaigns and litigation never could.

Southern whites have given the protests a mixed reception. Serious racial strife has erupted in some communities. Others have moved quickly to find an acceptable solution with as little disruption as possible.

Negro Youths Attacked

After two weeks of sit-ins at Jacksonville, Fla., whites armed with axe handles, baseball bats and other weapons set upon Negro youths. Intermittent rioting followed. Other riots have taken place in Portsmouth, Va., and Chattanooga, Tenn.

There have been mass arrests in many Southern cities. The most highly publicized involved Dr. King. He was jailed here after he refused to leave the Magnolia Room at Rich's, Atlanta's largest department store.

A spokesman for the Legal Defense and Educational Fund of the N. A. A. C. P. reported this week that the organization had spent 40 per cent of its $405,000 budget last year in defending 1,700 cases involving demonstrators.

Typical of the reaction of the militant segregationist is that of Lester Maddox, a restaurant operator here who mixes his racial views with menu listings of 25-cent, "skillet-fried" chicken in weekly newspaper advertisements.

Calls Students 'Lawless'

He recently asked:

"Why do Atlanta merchants continue to allow lawless Negro student agitators, renegade whites and outside subversive forces—all of whom have knowingly or unwittingly become a part of the Communist plot to divide the races and overthrow our American republic—to disrupt and shut down the operation of food service facilities?"

But there has been progress as well through the efforts of responsible community leaders, according to the Southern Regional Council.

"The principal means used by these cities and towns to meet the sit-in problem has been the creation of biracial committees," the council said.

"By this action, municipalities have confined the sit-in problem to the local level, insulated from the storms of state politics. They have also given reality to the oft-expressed desire for better communication between the races."

The council has also pointed out that the demands for desegregation fall directly upon merchants, "a group sensitive to so many pressures as to be peculiarly unprepared for the role of leading social change."

The southeastern manager of a chain variety store put it this way this week: "You're damned if you do and damned if you don't."

He said that his company had lost a considerable amount of business in northern states because of its policy of integrating lunch counters in Southern stores only when local merchants went along. The problem in the South, he said, is the decrease in patronage from both whites and Negroes who fear violence.

The merchants have been upheld so far in their contention that tney have a legal right to refuse service to Negroes. But the N. A. A. C. P. asked the United States Supreme Court on Jan. 2 to decide whether the police could be used to help merchants enforce that right.

The question raised by the lunch-counter controversy appears to be one of principle. A spot check of communities in which discrimination has been ended indicates that only a few Negroes are exercising their newly won privilege.

Accused of Insincerity

A somewhat different problem has been posed by the kneel-ins at white churches, a phase of the movement that had its start in Atlanta. Some churches have welcomed the Negroes warmly while others have either turned them away or have sought to seat them in segregated balconies.

In most cases, they have not returned to the houses of worship that accepted them readily. This has caused some persons to accuse the demonstrators of insincerity.

While church segregation is not confined to the South, the kneel-ins here have been followed by one of the most positive stands yet taken. Representatives of the ninety-nine churches in the Atlanta Presbytery, the largest unit in the Presbyterian Church in the United States, called on its members this week to receive all who attend services without discrimination.

Two fields—recreation facilities and employment—have been singled out for special attention this year. Both Mr. Carey of C. O. R. E. and Mr. King of the Student Coordinating Committee said that theatres would be among the chief targets.

Mrs. Hurley said that the N. A. A. C. P. Youth Councils would probably devote most of their activity to a campaign designed to win better jobs for Negroes.

Northern City Plans To Battle Integration

The Commercial Appeal

New Rochelle To Appeal U.S. Ruling—Sit-Ins In Atlanta

New Rochelle Standard Star

By United Press International

New integration troubles flared on both sides of the Mason-Dixon Line yesterday.

Seventeen Negro students were arrested in Atlanta for staging a lunch counter sit-in, and in New Rochelle, N. Y., the board of education voted to appeal a Federal ruling ordering the Lincoln Eelementary School desegregated. 12-8-61

The Congress of Racial Equality announced in New York that demonstrations would be staged in "sympathy" with 13 Negro students sentenced to jail terms in Rock Hill, S. C., for refusing to leave a segregated lunch counter. 1-15

Student leader Edward King of Atlanta urged that Rock Hill be made the next battleground for integration. He called on "all who share the conviction of the . . . students to go to Rock Hill, S. C., and join them at the lunch counters and in jail."

Lonnie King, another of the student leaders in the South-wide movement, was among the 17 arrested in Atlanta yesterday. They were charged under the state's trespassing act when they refused to leave a cafeteria. They had picked up food as they moved through the line, but when they got to the cashier their money was refused.

The vote by the New Rochelle Board of Education to appeal a Federal integration ruling followed a public meeting Monday night at which several speakers voiced opposition to the appeal.

Parents of eight Negro children who filed the original suit charge that Negroes have been allowed to register at only one elementary school in New Rochelle - Lincoln Elementary which is 94 per cent Negro. They also charge that their children were receiving a substandard education at Lincoln School.

Capetown Sit-Ins Provoke No Violence

By SAM SLY

EDITOR'S NOTE: The sit-in technique revived last year by a group of Negro college students is being used in several African countries to break down racial barriers. This article, taken from "Contact," a paper published in Capetown, S. Africa, tells of the public reaction to these demonstrations.

CAPETOWN, S. Africa.—(ANP) So far the anti-apartheid cafe "sit-ins" that a group of Capetown liberals are conducting have happily not been visited with the fire-hoses, clubbings, black marias, fist blows and spittle that made the lunch counter sit-ins in the Southern States so heroic—and so triumphant.

At two I have witnessed there has been scarcely a stir from the scrouning tea-sippers and bun-eaters, though as the campaign develops this may change. If it does, these people will not be provoked by assault: they will not squeal at legal punishments. They are steadfast people.

Most whites do not hate Coloureds here, and there are not enough Africans (an eighth of Capetown's 800,000 people) to produce the fear-crazed atmosphere of White Durban or the Rand.

Most Whites do not fear the "Coloured" vote here, but they may be roused by this far more radical claim: socialy oneness. Many whites can bear the thought of non-whites next to them on the voters' roll, but even the Progressives advocate restrictive convenants on title deeds, to spare them the final "disaster" of non-white neighbours.

Political "new deal" talk and the superficial interracial calm may look as if they favour the sit-ins.

But these Liberals are probing, and if they strike a raw nerve in the whites' racial consciousness, the reflex may be to their cost. In the long run it will be to South Africa's gain.

As Jim Crow began to die a lingering death in the Southern States, the Dixiecrats turned nastier than ever.

Do you remember the twisted faces of the white school children in the Little Rock news-photos? Then last March four very young Negro students walking quietly up to a lunch counter?

The people at our sit-ins are neither very young, nor students, nor are they of one race or another.

Liberals Sit In

So far they are mostly Liberals who therefore call themselves South Africans, admitting no racial classification (as I heard them tell the policemen taking their names at Caledon Square charge-office).

Why are they doing this? To protest publicly against social segregation, to demonstrate their rejection of racialism and apartheid, to challenge the acceptance of status based on colour—all of these adding up to their task as Liberals—to defeat apartheid in this and very form.

I have confidence in the sit-in teams, in their patriotic motives and in their determination.

The sit-ins get good laughs: This is not gloomy-faced heroism. At the first, a neighbouring tea-sipper said to a bun-eater:

"They must be Canadian diplomats." And one counter-hand answered another's question: "Oh they're Natives from one of those countries that don't have apartheid Zambezi, I think it is."

At the second, a waitress got it all wrong, by consenting to serve two "Coloured" men and refusing one sun-tanned "White" girl in the party.

Sitdowner says students should be encouraged

TOLEDO, Ohio (ANP)—"We (student crusaders) should be encouraged, not in the radical things, but to do those things which they know are right, always remaining humble and pointing people toward God."

This was the message of William Bush, a ministerial student at Philander Smith College, in an address here.

He said some people say the time is not ripe for action on civil rights but young people in the South are moving toward goals for which an earlier generation of Christian parents prayed and fought.

Sit-Ins, Profit-Seekers Contrasted in Sermon

By Kenneth Dole
Staff Reporter

Unless the present American "pattern" is changed, the new rulers of the country will be "organization men"—amoral, ruthless, dim-visioned, the Rev. Dr. Duncan Howlett said yesterday.

He contrasted organization men, typified by the seven electrical company executives recently sentenced to jail for conspiracy, with the six Lynchburg students convicted for taking part in sit-ins.

"Who represents us," the minister of All Souls' Church asked in a sermon,—"these giant electrical corporations with their conspiracies to insure large profits for themselves at our expense, or these half-dozen students protesting a practice they believe to be unrighteous?"

"Who represents us — corporate magnates willing to sacrifice a few junior executives 'for the good of the company' and in order to maintain their own positions of security in the social and financial circles where they move, or a group of students whose future is still before them and who enjoy only the security their parents can provide?"

If the country continues in its present way, organization men, Dr. Howlett said, will soon be running government, education, the armed services and the church, as well as industry. The organization man, he said, has only one standard, "the organization of which he is a part."

He follows this standard blindly even if it differs "from what he may believe in his heart," the minister said.

The congregation sang as its concluding hymn an early Negro spiritual, "Jacob's Ladder," in tribute to the six students—"American citizens," Dr. Howlett said, "who bear in their minds and hearts the sense of rectitude in which this Nation was born and in which she grew to greatness."

SITDOWN SUMMARY:

S.C. resists; Va. yields somewhat

The hiring of two colored saleswomen in Lynchburg, Va., the exoneration of three students in Rock Hill, S.C., and increased participation by white students and teachers, were among the main features of the sitdown movement the past week.

The two women were hired by Leggett's Department Store in Lynchburgh. There are 80 other Leggett stores in five states. Five other Lynchburg stores are reportedly interviewing potential saleswomen.

The hiring is part of an agreement between merchants and civic leaders that picketing be discontinued for 60 days to allow the city's interracial committee time to negotiate for discontinuance of lunch counter public facilities segregation.

* * *

ELSEWHERE IN Virginia, the boycotting of segregated theatres continues in Charlottesville and Hampton, with a number of white students and teachers participating in the protest.

The effort to negotiate an end to theatre segregation continues in Charlotte, N.C. Colored and white students and teachers continue the picketing of two theatres in Durham, N.C.

The exoneration of three Friendship College students arrested for picketing in Rock Hill, S.C., is being taken as indication of the increasing difficulty authorities are experiencing in enforcing various anti-picketing laws.

* * *

THE ONLY violence in South Carolina reported as a result of sitdown demonstrations was in Rock Hill where two young men were attacked by white hecklers.

A number of colored and white youths were arrested in Savannah, Ga., Friday, as the result of a reported "riot" following a parade.

Elsewhere in the South there were sitdown activities in the following places: Louisville, Ky., Atlanta, Ga., West Palm Beach, Fla., New Orleans, La., and San Antonio, Tex. Detailed stories inside.

3-a 1961

GENERAL

LUNCH COUNTER

Negro Students Fan Integration Fires Across South

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hundreds of young people observed emancipator Abraham Lincoln's birthday with demonstrations against segregated motion picture theaters and in support of the "jail, no bail" stand of some imprisoned Negro students.

White persons and Negroes, North and South, protested segregated movies. In some instances pairs of white youths and Negroes made unsuccessful attempts to get into all-white sections of Southern theaters.

At San Antonio, Tex., a bomb was reported placed in the 3,600-seat Majestic Theater shortly after an integration demonstration out front.

About 350 persons were inside at the time. Manager Lynn Krueger said he decided not to evacuate them when officers advised him the anonymous call was believed to be the work of a crank. The building was searched but no bomb was found.

The demonstration at San Antonio followed the same pattern used in Austin, Houston, and Dallas, Tex.

A white student approached the box office and asked to "purchase a ticket for myself and my American Negro friend." A theater official replied, "You may purchase one for yourself but not for your Negro friend."

One theater was picketed in San Antonio, two in Dallas, three in Houston and four at Austin.

At Austin pickets showed their disapproval of the segregationist policies of the governors of Louisiana and Arkansas by introducing some words of their own for the traditional text of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

"We'll send Jimmie Davis to an integrated hell," they sang, and "we'll hang Orval Fabus to a sour apple tree."

In Austin and Houston the crowds of Negro and white demonstrators swelled to 200 or more, while about 50 each marched in Dallas and San Antonio.

Students also demonstrated outside theaters in New York, Boston and Chicago which do not segregate Negroes, but have common ownership with Southern theaters which do.

About 50 students assembled in New York's Times Square and marched outside the Paramount Theater. The manager said there was no segregation at the theater but the marchers said they were protesting segregation policies of movie houses owned by American Broadcasting-Paramount Theaters Inc. in the South.

At Rock Hill S. C., about 1,000 Negroes from many Southern states attended a rally in a church in support of the "jail, no bail" stand of 13 imprisoned Negro college students.

The students went to jail for 30 days rather than post bonds to appeal their convictions of trespassing by refusing to leave the segregated lunch counter of a Rock Hill variety store.

Ernest A. Finney Jr., Sumter, S. C. Negro attorney who represented the 13 students told the mass meeting:

"The Negro can fully realize his true self only when he becomes fully integrated into America's economic, social, intellectual and political life."

Six hundred demonstrators drove in a motorcade to York, 15 miles away, where the students were in jail. Several others tried to attend Sunday services at churches for white persons. They were admitted at three churches and turned away from two.

Voice Of The Student Is Being Hear Around World

WASHINGTON---(ANP)--"Nowadays, the voice of the student is being heard around the world," declared Paula Roy, a student at Trinity college here.

This comment was made in regard to a resolution adopted last week by the student body of Trinity, supporting the sit-in demonstrations as a means leading to nationwide integration.

The resolution, adopted by a vote of 330 to 120, deplored discrimination in any facility "allegedly serving the general public."

It stated that an individual has the right "to work peacefully for the rectification of such social injustice through non-violent legal protest."

It also directed the students council to send letters of approval to businesses which have desegregated facilities, and letters of censure to those who promote segregation.

The resolution was a "campus project," according to Marjory Weinberg, the student government president. She added, however, that the National Student Association, to which Trinity belongs had asked members to vote student positions on desegregation last year.

Trinity is a predominantly white Catholic college, with an enrollment of 650 students. While the student body is chiefly white, there is no discrimination against admission of any qualified students because of race.

MOVIE THEATERS TARGET

Segregation Under Fire By Hundreds Of Marchers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hundreds of young people, white and Negro, North and South demonstrated against segregation outside movie theaters Sunday.

In some Southern cities the Lincoln's Birthday demonstrators made efforts to get into all-white sections of theaters, often in pairs—one white youth and one Negro.

In New York, Boston and Chicago students demonstrated outside theaters which do not segregate Negroes but have common ownership with Southern theaters which do.

At San Antonio, Tex., there was an anonymous telephone report that a bomb had been placed in a theater shortly after a demonstration against segregation ended there. But none was found after a search.

LUSTY SINGING

At Austin, Tex., the pickets sang lustily—to the tune of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" —words showing their disapproval of the segregationist policies of the governors of Louisiana and Arkansas.

"We'll send Jimmie Davis to an integrated hell," they sang, and "We'll hang Orval Faubus to a sour apple tree."

About 50 students gathered in New York's Times Square and marched outside the big Paramount theater.

Although the manager commented that "there is no segregation here," the marchers said they were protesting segregation policies of movie houses owned by American Broadcasting-Paramount Theaters, Inc., in the South.

NO COMMENT

There was no comment from ABC-Paramount.

The same company was the target in Boston, where some 50 young people marched outside the Boston Theater, and in Chicago, where a group of about 60 paraded outside several theaters partly owned by ABC-Paramount.

In Austin and Houston, Tex., the crowds of Negro and white demonstrators swelled to 200 or more. About 50 each marched in Dallas and San Antonio.

In San Francisco demonstrations at two theaters followed the same pattern. Police estimated about 50 students picketed the Paramount and St. Francis Theaters, neither of which is segregated.

Earl Long, manager of both theaters, said the picketing had no effect on ticket sales. The demonstrators carried placards and sang. They said picketing would continue Monday.

Race Protests Mark Feb. 12

By the Associated Press

Hundreds of young people observed emancipator Abraham Lincoln's birthday with demonstrations against segregated motion-picture theaters and in support of the "jail, no bail" stand of some imprisoned Negro students.

White persons and Negroes, north and south, protested segregated movies. In some instances pairs of white youths and Negroes made unsuccessful attempts to get into all-white sections of southern theaters.

At San Antonio a bomb was reported placed in the 3,600-seat Majestic Theater shortly after an integration demonstration in front of the structure.

Building Searched

About 350 persons were inside at the time. Manager Lynn Krueger said he decided not to evacuate them when officers advised him the anonymous call was believed to be the work of a crank. The building was searched, but no bomb was found.

The demonstration at San Antonio followed the same pattern used in Austin, Houston, and Dallas, Texas.

A white student approached the box office and asked to "purchase a ticket for myself and my American Negro friend." A theater official replied, "You may purchase one for yourself but not for your Negro friend."

One theater was picketed in San Antonio, two in Dallas, three in Houston, and four at Austin.

Disapproval Shown

At Austin pickets showed their disapproval of the segregationist policies of the Governor of Louisiana and Arkansas by introducing some words of their own for the traditional text of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

"We'll send Jimmie Davis to an integrated hell," they sang, and "We'll hang Orval Faubus to a sour-apple tree."

In Austin and Houston the crowds of Negro and white demonstrators swelled to 200 or more, while about 50 each marched in Dallas and San Antonio.

Students also demonstrated outside theaters in New York, Boston, and Chicago which do not segregate Negroes, but have common ownership with southern theaters which do.

Students Assemble

About 50 students assembled in New York's Times Square and marched outside the Paramount Theater. The manager said there was no segregation at the theater, but the marchers said they were protesting segregation policies of movie houses owned by American Broadcasting-Paramount Theaters, Inc., in the South.

At Rock Hill, S. C., about 1,000 Negroes from many southern states attended a rally in a church in support of the "jail, no

Says Jail-Ins Hurting Race

By LOUIS LAUTIER
(Washington Correspondent For N.N.P.A.)

THE MARTYRDOM which students seek by accepting jail sentences after having staged demonstrations in restaurants to protest against racial discrimination does not make sense.

The "jail-in" tactics actually hurt the young people who are acquiring police records which may haunt them in later life. The arrest statistics which these young people are piling up also injure colored people generally by making themes appear to be more criminal than they are.

Any adult advising jail-ins ought to have his head examined.

Of course, the sit-down demonstrations served several useful purposes:

1. They dramatized the issue of the refusal of variety and other stores to serve colored customers at their lunch counters.

2. They raised cases to test the validity of the application of trespass, disorderly conduct, breach of of the peace, and unlawful assembly laws.

But once a test case has found its way into the courts in a given locality or a state, the wisdom of staging demonstrations for the purpose of getting arrested and going to jail is questionable.

THE CASTE SYSTEM

Such tactics may have worked in India under Mahatma Gandhi, Hindu nationalist leader, against British rule. In Ghandhi's lifetime the caste system was deeply entrenched among the Hindus. India has outlawed the caste system but there are still places there where a low-caste Hindu may not even drink at the public well.

Moreover, the people of India are wretchedly poor. Many of them now have no place to sleep except the streets of New Delhi, Calcutta, Bombay and other towns and cities. They may be seen early in the morning getting up off the sidewalks where they have spent the night and rolling up the rags on which they slept and which represent their wordly treasurer.

To the masses of people in India jail certainly offered more shelter than they had.

But these are not the conditions in the United States. Colored people here are simply fighting for 1st class citizenship. Going to jail is not advancing that goal.

The courts here are the proper forum for a determination of questions which have arisen out of the sit-down demonstrations. A number of cases are now in the process of reaching decision by the highest court of the land.

The NAACP is seeking a review by the Supreme Court of three cases in which the questons and facts are identical.

Baton Rouge, La., police arrested John Burrell, Jannette Hoston and Mary Briscoe, students at Southern University, for violating a state law making criminal "any other act" committed "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

These students had merely requested non-segregated service at three different lunch counters in stores where they were otherwise welcome.

THE ISSUES

In these cases, the NAACP wants the Supreme Court to decide:

1. That mere refusal to move from a lunch counter seat when ordered to do so by an agent of the stores does not constitute a disturbance of the peace and the law under which the arrests were made is unconstitutional because it deprives defendants of their constitutional rights.

2. That there was no disturbance of the peace except for the activities in which the defendants engaged, to protest segregation, and the use of the criminal process in such a situaton deprives defendants of their constitutional rights.

The American Civil Liberties Union is also seeking a Supreme Court review of two lunch-counter sit-down cases from Florida.

In those cases, a group of colored students were refused service at a Woolworth's lunch counter in Tallahassee, Fla., Feb. 20, 1960 and four white students who sought service for colored students in the same store were arrested on March 1.

Police arrested both groups on orders of the city's mayor. The colored and white students were convicted in Municipal Court of disorderly conduct, breaches of the peace, and unlawful assembly. The convictions were upheld by the Leon County Circuit Court.

The American Civil Liberties Union contends that the convictions violated the students' rights of free speech and liberty to seek contracts privately by persuading the store to serve them food.

"The legal, moral, and social issues raised by the cases at bar are of nation-wide importance," the ACLU asserts in its petition for review.

The ACLU has also asked a three judge Federal District Court at Richmond to pass on the constitutionality of Virginia's anti-trespass law in cases involving more than 100 defendants.

Virginia amended its anti-trespass law in 1960 in an effort to reach the sit-down demonstrations.

The brief filed with the court points out that over 100 individuals "are threatened with a criminal prosecution for asserting their right to dignified treatment by various commercial establishments."

In addition to these cases, the legality of convictions in sit-down demonstrations is being tested in numerous other state courts. Thurgood Marshall, director-counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, has reported that 75 lawyers throughout the country are now engaged in defending students who participated in sit-downs.

Surely the students who are now staging demonstrations to get arrested and go to jail should quit such nonsense and let the courts decide the issues.

Segregation At Theaters Is Protested

Hundreds of young people, white and Negro, North and South demonstrated against segregation outside movie theaters Sunday.

In some Southern cities the Lincoln's Birthday demonstrators made efforts to get into all-white sections of theaters, often in pairs —one white youth and one Negro.

In New York, Boston and Chicago students demonstrated outside theaters which do not segregate Negroes but have common ownership with Southern theaters which do.

At San Antonio, Tex., there was an anonymous telephone report that a bomb had been placed in a theater shortly after a demonstration against segregation ended there. But none was found after a search.

At Austin, Tex., the pickets sang lustily—to the tune of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" — words showing their disapproval of the segregationist policies of the governors of Louisiana and Arkansas.

"We'll send Jimmie Davis to an integrated hell," they sang, and "We'll hang Orval Faubus to a sour apple tree."

In Austin and Houston, Tex., the crowds of Negro and white demonstrators swelled to 200 or more. About 50 each marched in Dallas and San Antonio.

In San Francisco demonstrations at two theaters followed the same pattern. Police estimated about 50 students picketed the Paramount and St. Francis Theaters, neither of which is segregated.

38a 1961 GENERAL LUNCH COUNTER

Negroes Move In on Lunch Counters Again

The Christian Science Monitor

By Joseph H. Baird

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Atlanta

Negro college students here have begun a new series of "sit-in" demonstrations at downtown restaurants with the apparent purpose of dramatizing their fight for equality at the table before President Kennedy and the Justice Department.

A total of 37 students were arrested under Georgia's antitrespassing law Tuesday and Wednesday after declining to leave two restaurants where they were refused service. Most of the Negroes converged on Sprayberry's Cafeteria, located in the Peachtree-Seventh Street Building which is leased by the federal government for some of its southeastern offices.

Meanwhile, Lonnie King, Jr., Negro student leader of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, which is directing the "sit-in," announced that the group had telegraphed Attorney General Robert K. Kennedy asking for an immediate investigation of the arrest of Negro students here.

White House Prodded

The request followed by only a few days the submission to the White House by the Southern Regional Council, a bi-racial organization with headquarters in Atlanta, of a memorandum asking President Kennedy to use the full power of his office to assure Negroes equality of treatment in all areas of life.

Mr. King announced that the 20 Negro students arrested Wednesday would not seek to make bond, but would follow the student group's earlier policy of "jail, not bail" as a means of dramatizing their protest.

Mr. King and Miss Herschelle Sullivan, of Pittsburgh, Pa., vice-chairman of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, were among 17 Negroes arrested at Sprayberry's Cafeteria Tuesday. They posted $100 bond, explaining their action on the grounds that their freedom was required to direct the "sit-in" movement.

Four of the 17 were released by City Judge James Webb after they pleaded that they did not hear a demand by the manager of the cafeteria to leave after they had been refused service. The others were bound over for trial in the Fulton County Criminal Court.

Police Summoned

Of the 20 students arrested Wednesday, 13 demanded service at Sprayberry's Cafeteria, the other seven staged their "sit-in" at Denny's Grill, a small restaurant just across the street from Rich's department store which closed all its restaurants last fall following a series of "sit-in" demonstrations there. The managers of both eating places called police after the students refused to leave.

A Georgia law passed by the General Assembly in early 1960 provides that a person who is requested by the management to leave a restaurant and refuses to do so may be arrested for trespassing.

In a series of "sit-in" demonstrations held in Atlanta last fall just before the beginning of the Christmas shopping season about 80 Negro students were arrested under the anti-trespassing law. They were released, however, after Mayor William B. Hartsfield intervened in their behalf and managers of department and chain drug stores were the "sit-in" occured refused to press charges against them.

Two Factors Given

Sources in close touch with the student protest movement said the new wave of "sit-ins" was motivated by two factors.

First, leaders felt that since they had done nothing since the mass release of protesters last fall to call their demand for equal rights to public attention, it was "dying on the vine."

Second, with a new national administration in power, they wanted to dramatize their fight before the White House and Justice Department in the hope of obtaining federal support.

Atlanta Negro leaders were heartened last fall during the presidential campaign when President Kennedy telephoned the wife of the Rev. Martin Luther King to express his concern over the Negro leader's sentence to Reidsville Prison by Judge J. Oscar Mitchell of De Kalb County.

At the time the Rev. Mr. King was on probation for driving an automobile without a Georgia driver's permit and following his arrest for participation in the Atlanta "sit-ins." Judge Mitchell sentenced him to serve a four-month term.

Obligation Cited

After Mr. Kennedys' phone call and an appeal by the President's associates to Gov. S. Ernest Vandiver, Mr. King was released on bond pending an appeal. His case was taken under consideration by the Georgia Court of Appeals here Wednesday.

Benjamin Brown, a member of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, said that the students taking part in the latest "sit-ins" did not intend to be arrested. However, he said that since they had been," they have a moral obligation to stay in jail."

"It's a personal conviction on the part of every student there to remain in jail so citizens of Atlanta and all over the world will know that injustice is prevalent in the South," Mr. Brown said.

The Negro students apparently feel also that their appeal to Washington will excite more sympathy and interest if those arrested remain behind bars than if they were free on bond.

It was learned that several Atlanta Negro students have gone to Rock Hill, S.C., where the students of Friendship Junior College have been staging "sit-ins" and street demonstrations.

gia Court of Appeals Wednesday that a traffic sentence imposed upon him in DeKalb County was illegal and that his arrest in an Atlanta lunch counter sit-in a few days earlier violated the United States Constitution.

Attorney D. L. Hollowell, in arguing the Negro integration leader's appeal from a four-month jail sentence, all but gave formal notice that the case will be taken to the United States Supreme Court if the state appellate courts rule that the Rev. Mr. King must serve the sentence.

The court of appeals took the case under advisement.

Mr. Hollowell charged that the state actions against the Rev. Mr. King were designed solely to attempt to further the cause of racial segregation.

After the Rev. Mr. King was arrested at Rich's department store Oct. 19 for taking part in a lunchroom sit-in. DeKalb officials charged his actions were a violation of probation in the traffic case. The Rev. Mr. King had been fined $25 and sentenced to 12 months in a public works camp for driving without a license. Judge Oscar Mitchell had suspended the jail term.

Department stores change their policy

The Afro-American

RICHMOND

A major victory for sit-downers was scored here last week when two of the city's largest department stores desegregated its dining facilities after 11 months of picketing and boycotting by colored citizens.

The stores. Thalhimers and Miller and Rhoades, were the last of seven stores to desegregate. Five other stores dropped color bars at their lunch counters last Fall.

The picketing and boycott followed the arrest of 34 Virginia Union University students last February, for staging sitdown demonstrations. The 11-month protest was led by the Richmond Citizens Advisory Committee, an adult group which intervened in behalf of the students.

The protest was called off after the stores announced their new policy of service to all.

* * *

IN ATLANTA, GA., a small group of students, who brought lunches and college textbooks with them, staged a sitdown demonstration in a downtown drugstore. The counter was closed and they were not served.

One student told newsmen that semester final examinations are in progress at Atlanta University and the drugstore was a good place for them to study.

In Savannah, Ga., seven men were being released in $1,000 bond each for playing basketball in a segregated park. They were arrested after refusing to leave the basketball court at Savannah's municipal Daffin Park, which is reserved for whites only. The men were charged with "unlawful assembly."

Last summer the Savannah NAACP petitioned the city to desegregate its recreational facilities.

* * *

IN HOUSTON, TEXAS, ten students staged a sit-down demonstration at the all-white police station cafeteria.

The same group was turned away earlier at the Harris County courthouse cafeteria.

Wally Gee, 35, Chinese-American operator of the police cafeteria, refused to serve the students.

In Raleigh, N.C. a sitdown case lost in the State Supreme Court is to be appealed to the United States Supreme Court. The state court granted attorneys for seven convicted sitdowners a stay so they could make the appeal.

The state court had ruled that privately operated restaurants have the right to refuse service to colored persons. It made the ruling in upholding the trespass conviction of sitdown demonstrators sentenced during last year's lunch counter protest.

The court ruled on two separate cases: the conviction of five North Carolina College and two Duke University students; and that conviction in Union County of Robert Williams, president of the Union County NAACP Chapter. Williams was convicted of trespassing at a Monroe drugstore after he refused to leave the store at the request of the management.

In Durham, N.C., college students began picketing two downtown theaters in protest of segregation policies.

Five students carried signs in front of the Center Theater and 15 carried signs in front of the Carolina Theater. Two signs read: "Freedom and justice for all" and "Give everybody a chance."

* * *

IN NASHVILLE, charges were dismissed against 81 sitdowners in Circuit Court here. The sitdowners were arrested last February. The sitdowners were arrested at downtown lunch counters which have since been desegregated.

Judge Byrd Douglas, in overturning city court convictions, ordered the city to pay the $861.30 court costs. Cases are set this week for eight adult sitdowners in Oklahoma City who were arrested during a protest demonstration at a downtown cafeteria.

In an earlier hearing charges were dropped against the Rev. Robert McDole by a judge who called the priest's action a "frolic" and left action on the incident to his superiors.

Catholic Bishop Victor J. Reed supported the Rev. Fr. McDole's participation in the sitdown.

IN LAWRENCE, KANS, petitions calling for the boycott of business places which discriminate against colored patrons were circulated at the University of Kansas.

Over 1,000 students signed the petition urging the university's student council to adopt a strong anti-discrimination resolution.

Woman Correspondent Honored For Role In Sit-In Struggle

The Call Kansas City, Mo. 12/22/61 p. 22

WASHINGTON. — (AP) — Alice A. Dunnigan, Washington correspondent for the Associated Negro Press, was cited last week for complete, accurate and unbiased reporting on the sit-in demonstrations in northern Virginia which resulted in the abolition of segregation at lunch counters in drug and department stores in Arlington and Alexandria.

Presented Trophy

A trophy was presented Mrs. Dunnigan by Laurence Henry, a leader in the Non-Violent Action Group (NAG) of the District of Columbia.

The presentation was made at a mass meeting sponsored by NAG, in behalf of the tenant farmers of Fayette county, Tenn.

In making the presentation, Henry called attention to the fact that Mrs. Dunnigan had questioned the President on what he planned to do about the Tennessee situation. She was the first Negro, and the first woman to ask the new President a question at his initial press conference.

Mrs. Dunnigan, who was sitting with the working group covering the affair, was greatly surprised at being called up and honored. Tears welled in her eyes as she explained that her trips to Virginia to cover the sit-in demonstration, and even her trip to Fayette County, Tennessee, to get a first hand view of that situation was all done "in the line of duty."

Prison Sit-Down

21 Nov. 61

Negroes and others demonstrating in South Carolina against racial inequality have every right to pursue a "Jail—No Bail" policy of resistance to the present order of things.

However, there were reports over the weekend that eight of the eleven students sentenced in the demonstrations at Rock Hill had been put in solitary confinement for staging a strike in prison.

It would be improper and unjust for South Carolina prison officials or any other prison officials for that matter to mistreat any prisoners. At the same time, student demonstrators preferring to serve prison sentences to spotlight their cause have no right to refuse to obey legitimate prison orders.

Obviously they cannot be allowed to upset routine or create trouble in the already potentially explosive atmosphere of a prison camp, even at the price of further dramatizing their cause.

IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

Says sitdowns have served good purpose

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Bal. 1-25-61 p. 20

By LOUIS LAUTIER

The sit-down demonstrations served several useful purposes:

1. THEY DRAMATIZED the issue of the refusal of variety and other stores to serve colored customers at their lunch counters.

2. They raised cases to test the validity of the application of trespass, disorderly conduct, breach of the peace, and unlawful assembly laws.

3. In a large number of instances they resulted in 5 and 10 cent stores, drugstores, lunch rooms and restaurants dropping their color bars.

But once a test case has found its way into the courts in a given locality or a state, the wisdom of staging demonstrations for the purpose of getting arrested and going to jail is questionable.

* * *

THE COURTS here are the proper forum for a determination of questions which have arisen out of the sit-down demonstrations. A number of cases are now in the process of reaching final decision by the highest court of the land.

The NAACP is seeking a review by the Supreme Court of three cases in which the questions and facts are identical.

Baton Rouge, La., police arrested John Burrell, Jannette Hoston and Mary Briscoe, students at Southern University, for violating a state law making criminal "any other act" committed "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

These students had merely requested non-segregated service at three different lunch counters in stores where they were otherwise welcome.

* * *

IN THESE cases, the NAACP wants the Supreme Court to decide:

1. That mere refusal to move from a lunch counter seat when ordered to do so by an agent of the stores does not constitute a disturbance of the peace and the law under which the arrests were made is unconstitutional because it deprives defendants of their constitutional rights.

2. That there was no disturbance of the peace except for the activities in which the defendants engaged, to protest segregation, and the use of the criminal process in such a situation deprives defendants of their constitutional rights.

The American Civil Liberties Union is also seeking a Supreme Court review of two lunch-counter sit-down cases from Florida.

In those cases, a group of colored students were refused service at a Woolworth's lunch counter in Tallahassee Fla., Feb. 20, 1960, and four white students who sought service for colored students in the same store were arrested on March 1.

* * *

POLICE ARRESTED both groups on orders of the city's mayor. The colored and white students were convicted in Municipal Court of disorderly conduct, breaches of the peace, and unlawful assembly. The convictions were upheld by the Leon County Circuit Court.

The American Civil Liberties Union contends that the convictions violated the students' rights of free speech and liberty to seek contracts privately by persuading the store to serve them food.

"The legal, moral, and social issues raised by the cases at bar are of nationwide importance," the ACLU asserts in its petition for review.

* * *

THE ACLU has also asked a three-judge Federal District Court at Richmond to pass on the constitutionality of Virginia's anti-trespass law in cases involving more than 100 defendants.

The brief filed with the court points out that over 100 individuals "are threatened with a criminal prosecution for asserting their right to dignified treatment by various commercial establishments."

In addition to these cases, the legality of convictions in sit-down demonstrations is being tested in numerous other state courts. Thurgood Marshall, director-counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, has reported that 75 lawyers throughout the country are now engaged in defending students who participated in sit-downs.

White Coed Tells Of Sit-In Arrest

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Ill.

NEW YORK — A white New Orleans coed, who was arrested for participating in a Negro lunch-counter sit-in, said yesterday she took part in the October demonstration because she "just didn't like segregation and hoped to be able to help end it."

The coed, Margaret "Sissy" Leonard, a sophomore at fashionable Sophie Newcomb college, said she attended a meeting of the New Orleans chapter of CORE (Congress of Racial Equality) and offered to take part in any kind of demonstration protesting segregation.

Her account of her experiences during the sit-in and her subsequent questioning by the police appeared in an article in Look Magazine.

Miss Leonard, who was reared in Macon and Atlanta, Ga., said the New Orleans police were perplexed that a Southern girl would take part in the Negro demonstration.

"They asked me if I had received any money from CORE," she wrote, "and also if I thought CORE was trying to make money. I said no, of course not, to both questions, and said that I thought CORE needed money pretty badly.

"They wanted to know, again, why I as a Southern girl would do such a thing if I didn't get any money. That seemed sort of absurd to me, but again I said something about wanting to demonstrate how I felt about discrimination."

Miss Leonard said she was released by the police and told to go back to her minister "and think very seriously before I ever did this again."

Brooklyn CORE Members Encourage Integration

The Louisville Defender
Louisville, Ky.
Thurs. 1-5-61

Brooklyn, N. Y. — Teams of Brooklyn CORE members are visiting Negro parents in their homes this weekend to encourage pupil tranfers to integrated schools.

Under the new Board of Education policy, which provides free transportation for all elementary school children who transfer for the purpose of integration, requests for transfer must be made between January 3 and January 18.

The CORE group is cooperating with a committee formed by the presidents of the PTA's of the nine sending schools in the Bedford Stuyvesant area of Brooklyn, with Assistant School Superintendent Sam Levenston and school coordiator Austin Sober as well as the New York Cty Commission on Intergroup Relations in this pilot project.

Dr. Robert Palmer, Brooklyn CORE shairman, announced that hte CORE teams would explain the open enrollment program and encourage transfers. They would also try to learn the reasons why some parents have not taken advantage of the program so that modifications may be made if needed.

PTA presidents have sent postcards to their members asking their cooperation with the CORE teams.

Sit-Ins Refused by Miami 'Castles'

The Miami Herald
Miami, Fla.
Wed. 1-18-61

A dozen Negro members of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) staged "test" sit-ins at three Royal Castle hamburger stands in Miami Tuesday night and met no disturbances, Miami police said, but no service, either.

Dr. John O. Brown, project chairman, said the group "tested" Royal Castle to find out the policy of the chain. He said CORE moved on Royal Castle because Negroes can buy food and drinks to take out but are not permitted service at the counter.

"We're following a social custom of long standing," said Lawrence E. Singer, president of the big hamburger chain. "Our policy is not to serve Negroes at the counter."

It was the first sit-in effort by CORE members here since early December when they tried unsuccessfully to buy tickets at four Miami theaters.

Dr. Brown said the next CORE move will be to contact Royal Castle officers "to try to get the policy changed."

Sit-Ins To Be Continued

CORE Director Slates National Drive On Bias

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.
Sat. 1-14-61

NEW YORK — (UPI) — James Farmer, newly - appointed national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, last week announced plans to attack racial segregation throughout the nation.

Mr. Farmer, a founding member of CORE who took part in the nation's first Negro sit - in demonstration in 1942, also said the organization would utilize "nationally coordinated boycotts" against companies that discriminate against Negroes.

CORE'S FIRST national chairman, he was appointed to the newly - established post of national director.

In the Deep South, he said, the organization will continue to aim for lunch counter integration.

In the upper South, where counter segregation has ended, he said CORE will sponsor sit-ins in buses and theaters.

IN THE NORTH, he said housing is the major problem and CORE will stage sit - ins in the renting offices of new apartments.

Mr. Farmer, a former NAACP program director was director of student work for the League for Industrial Democracy 1950-55.

He was born in Texas in 1920 and was graduated from Wiley College in 1938 and from Howard University in 1941. In his student days he was active in the Christian youth movement, serving as vice-chairman of the National Council of Methodist Youth and Christian Youth Council of North America.

DESEGREGATED
LUNCH COUNTERS

South Progresses In Desegregation

The Washington Post
Washington, D.C.
Jun 2-19-61

United Press International

A brief news dispatch from Roanoke, Va., last week began: "The Miller and Rhodes department store tea room here has quietly desegregated, it was leraned today."

There have been many such stories in recent months attesting to the slow breakdown of segregation barriers at eating facilities in the South.

Frequently the announcements are purposely delayed by the source to soften their impact, or made with such little fanfare that they pass virtually unnoticed.

It is part of a pattern that dates back to a meeting last summer in Washington. At that time the then-Attorney General William P. Rogers announced that a group of chain stores had voluntarily agreed to desegregate lunch counters in 69 Southern communities.

Neither Rogers nor the chain stories would pinpoint the communities, contending that publicity would only hamper efforts to end lunch counter segregation.

A survey last week, however, showed that well over 150 lunch counters have been desegregated.

The first lunch counter demonstration was staged at a Woolworth store in Greensboro, N. C., slightly more than a year ago. Ironically, Negroes seldom eat at that counter now.

Mississippi and Alabama are the only two Deep South states where lunch counter desegregation has not taken place to some degree. Here is a breakdown on how the South stands on the issue.

North Carolina—Scores of lunch counters desegregated in Raleigh, Rocky Mount, Goldsboro, Durham, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Fayetteville. Drug stores and five-and-ten-cent stores that are part of national chains have led the way. In some instances the integration has come about through the work of bi-racial civic committees, but in many cases action was taken by stores on an individual basis. No consistent pattern has emerged.

Virginia—About a half dozen cities have some lunch counter desegreation, including Lynchburg, which has been the scene of a number of demonstrations recently. One of the most significant developments has been the desegregation of eating facilities at Richmond's two largest department stores—Miller & Rhodes and Thalhimers. Both stores were the targets of sit-in demonstrations early last year and subsequently desegregation first-floor lunch counters, while preserving segregation at eating facilities above the first floor. But last month both quietly announced a Negro college professor had been served at other facilities in the store.

Tennessee—Widespread desegregation of eating facilities in Knoxville, Chattanooga and Nashville, with two bus terminal counters desegregated at Nashville recently. Sit-ins also have occurred at Memphis and Jackson but there has been no desegregation of facilities. The Chattanooga integration was worked out at a meeting between businessmen and Negro ministers.

South Carolina — A lunch counter at Columbia's airport was quietly desegregated several months ago, but otherwise racial barriers remain. South Carolina cities, particularly Rock Hill and Sumter, have been the target of demonstrations in recent weeks.

Alabama—Several sit-in demonstrations were staged in Birmingham last summer but the participants were arrested each time. There has been no desegregation of eating facilitties, although a Negro leader, the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, has filed suit to desegregate a Dobbs House restaurant at the Birmingham airport.

Georgia — Token desegregation at two Atlanta lunch counters—one at City Hall and the other in the YWCA. Many downtown stores have closed their lunch counters rather than desegregate and department stores have made wide use of vending machines where shoppers can obtain a sandwich and beverage on a stand-up basis.

Mississippi — Total segregation. There have been no sit-ins or demonstrations of any kind.

Florida—Lunch counter desegregation has been carried out in Miami, Tampa, Orlando, Sarasota, St. Petersburg, Daytona Beach, Pompano Beach and Ft. Lauderdale. Demonstrations have been staged, without success, to force desegregation at lunch counters in Tallahassee and Jacksonville.

INS- OUTLINED

GENERAL

LUNCH COUNTERS

38a 1961

Nothing is left 'out' when Rev. Cox lists all the 'ins'

The Afro-American P. 9

Baltimore, Md.

WINSTON - SALEM, N.C.— A man who speaks with the authority of experienced returned to North Carolina last week to tell students at Winston-Salem Teachers College that they should expand the "in" campaign.

He was the Rev. B. Elton Cox, national field secretary of the NAACP Youth Division, who spoke on a program commemorating the anniversary of the sitdown movement.

The Rev. Mr. Cox, a young dynamic Congregationalist minister from High Point, was the advisor for a group of high school students who started sitdowns there a week after they began in Greensboro.

"Where do we go from here?" the Rev. Mr. Cox asked. "Are we satisfied with eating a hot dog at a five - and - ten cent store counter? I would say no, especially if we cannot go to a rest room.

"I recommend that we fight on, fight on, fight on until every vestige of segregation is destroyed."

* * *

HE OUTLINED the ' 'ins that the students should pursue as:

SIT-IN — These should be continued wherever lunch - counter segregation persists.

STAND - INS — These pro tests should be carried out at movie theaters.

WADE - INS — Students should not hesitate to go to tax-supported beaches.

SWIM-INS —Public swimming pools should be used by all.

PRAY-INS — "Prove to man that God created man free. As long as we take segregation, they will dish it out. As a minister of God, I don't believe that we can live in segregated homes, go to segregated churches, be buried in segregated cemeteries, then live happily ever after in an integrated heaven — I am mad as hell at segregation."

VOTE-INS —Students over 21 should register and vote.

DRIVE-INS — "A colored man cannot get a decent meal on the road in this state," the Rev. Mr. Cox said as he urged the use of such facilities.

APPLY-INS — "Don't be satisfied with 'colored' jobs. Confront the man, let him know segregation is wrong."

RUN-INS — Colored persons should qualify for political office.

WALK - INS — Students should not hesitate to enter any tax-supported institution from a library to an art gallery.

RIDE - INS —Ride up front on city, intrastate or interstate buses.

BUY - INS —"Live wherever you want to live" and buy your home in the neighborhood you choose.

STUDY - INS — "Don't limit yourselves to a colored college" but apply to the college that teaches the subject you are interested in.

PLAY - INS — Children should be permitted to play in tax-supported playgrounds where they want to play.

BURY - INS — Public graveyards that are supported by tax money should be used by all.

Rev. Cox concluded: "Everything is waiting for you — if you ask, seek, knock and fight for it, the door will be opened. You must let the world know you want to be free.

"You have the ability to stand up and fight. All I want you to do is stand up and be counted in, or else you will be counted out."

REV. LARTIN LUTHER KING

LUNCH COUNTERS

38a 1961

GENERAL

Writer Says That Dr King Revolution Is "Frightening" Some Influential Leaders

The Reverend Martin Luther King Jr, has reluctantly become the leader of a revolution which is frightening some of the most influential members of the Negro community, says James Baldwin, noted author.

This is because, unlike most Negro leaders who tell the white people to speed up integration but urge Negroes to be patient, the Reverend King speaks with the same voice to both races, writes Mr Baldwin in an article in the February issue of Harper's magazine.

"The fact that King really loves the people he represents and has — therefore no hidden, interior need to hate the white people who oppose him has had and will, I think, continue to have the most far-reaching and unpredictable repercussions on Mr Baldwin.

In the Harper's magazine piece titled "The Dangerous Road Before Martin Luther King," Mr Baldwin believes that the Reverend King "is not like any preacher I have ever met before. He is immediately and tremendously winning, there is really no other word for it."

Mr Baldwin spent many days with the Reverend King in the South, seeing him in social situations and attending services at his church.

It was at a church service that Baldwin witnessed the real effect of the Reverend King on Negroes.

He writes: "Until Montgomery, the Negro church, which has always been the place where protest and condemnation could be most vividly articulated, also operated as a kind of sanctuary. The minister who spoke could not hope to effect any objective change in the lives of his hearers, and the people did not expect him to. All they came to find, and all that he could give them, was the sustenance for another day's journey.

"Now, King could certainly give his congregation that, but he could also give them something more than that, and he had.

"It is true that it was they who had begun the struggle of which he was now the symbol and the leader; it is true that it had taken all of their insistence to overcome in him a grave reluctance to stand where he now stood. But it is also true, and it does not happen often, that once he had accepted the place they had prepared for him, their struggle became absolutely indistinguishable from his own, and took over and controlled his life. He suffered with them and, thus, he helped them to suffer.

"The joy which filled this church, therefore, was the joy achieved by people who have ceased to delude themselves about an intolerable situation, who have found their prayers for a leader miraculously answered, and who know that they can change their situation, if they will."

After reviewing in detail the Reverend King's life, Mr Bladwin concludes: "By the power of his personality and the force of his beliefs, he has injected a new dimension into our ferocious struggle. He has succeeded, in a way no Negro before him has managed to do, to carry the battle into the individual heart, and make its resolution the province of the individual will. He has made it a matter, on both sides of the racial fence, of self-examination; and has incurred, therefore, the grave responsibility of continuing to lead in the path he has encouraged so many people to follow."

King urges JFK to kill segregation

NEW YORK — Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. has made a suggestion that President Kennedy should call a White House conference of colored and white leaders to "serve the great purpose of opening the channels of communications between the races."

Writing in "The Nation," a magazine published here, he characterized the Federal Government as the nation's "highest investor in segregation."

He called on the Kennedy Administration to conduct a thorough examination of "its own operations and development of a rigorous program to wipe out immediately every vestige of Federal support and sponsorship of discrimination."

Dr. King asserted that, even without further legislation, the President — through exercise of the Executive power — "could give segregation a death blow through a stroke of the pen."

Says King Leadership Frightens Negro Elite

NEW YORK—Reverend Martin Luther King has reluctantly become the leader of a revolution which is frightening some of the most influential members of the Negro community, says James Baldwin, noted author.

This is because, unlike most Negro leaders who tell the white people to speed up integration but urge Negroes to be patient, Reverend King speaks with the same voice to both races, writes Mr. Baldwin in an article in the February issue of Harper's Magazine.

"The fact that King really loves the people he represents and has—therefore—no hidden interior need to hate the white people who oppose him has had and will, I think, continue to have the most far-reaching and unpredictable repercussions on our racial situation," says Baldwin.

'NOT LIKE ANY PREACHER'

In the Harper's Magazine piece titled "The Dangerous Road Before Martin Luther King," Baldwin believes that Rev. King "is not like any preacher I have ever met before. He is immediately and tremendously winning, there is really no other word for it."

Baldwin spent days with Rev. King in the South, seeing him in social situations and attending services at his church.

It was at a church service that Baldwin witnessed the real effect of Rev. King on Negroes.

He writes, "Until Montgomery, the Negro church, which has always been the place where protest and condemnation could be most vividly articulated, also operated as a kind of sanctuary.

"The minister who spoke could not hope to effect any objective change in the lives of his hearers, and the people did not expect him to. All they came to find, and all that he could give them, was the sustenance for another day's journey.

"Now, King could certainly give his congregation that, but he could also give them something more than that, and he had.

"It is true that it was they who had begun the struggle of which he was now the symbol and the leader; it is true that it had taken all of their insistence to overcome in him a grave reluctance to stand where he now stood.

"But it is also true, and it does not happen often, that once he had accepted the place they had prepared for him, their struggle became absolutely indistinguishable from his own, and took over and controlled his life. He suffered with them and, thus, he helped them to suffer.

"The joy which filled this church, therefore was the joy achieved by people who have ceased to delude themselves about an intolerable situation, who have found their prayers for a leader miraculously answered, and who know that they can change their situation, if they will."

After reviewing in detail Rev. King's life, Baldwin concludes, "By the power of his personality and the force of his beliefs, he has injected a new dimension into our ferocious struggle.

"He has succeeded, in a way no Negro before him has managed to do, to carry the battle into the individual heart and make its resolution the province of the individual will.

Magazine reveals Dr. King became leader reluctantly

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
2/17/62

NEW YORK — Dr. Martin Luther King has reluctantly become the leader of a revolution which is frightening some of the most influential members of the community, says James Baldwin, noted author.

This is because, unlike most leaders who tell the white people to speed up integration but urge colored people to be patient, Dr. King speaks with the same voice to both races, writes Mr. Baldwin in an article in the February issue of Harper's Magazine.

In the Harper's Magazine piece titled, "The Dangerous Road Before Martin Luther King," Mr. Baldwin believes that the minister "is not like any preacher I have ever met before. He is immediatly and tremendously winning, there is really no other word for it."

Mr. Baldwin spent many days with Reverend King in the South, seeing him in social situations and attending services at his church. It was at a church service that Baldwin witnessed the real effect of Dr. King on colored people.

GENERAL

Apr 1961

Sit-In Leader Named To SCLS As Staff Consultant

The Louisville Defender
Louisville Ky.

Atlanta, Ga. — SCLC's director, Wyatt Tee Walker announced today that the Rev. James M. Lawson, Jr., has been added to the integration organization as Staff Consultant.

Rev. Lawson was projected into national prominence last Spring at the height of the Sit-In Movement. He was a graduate student at that time in the Divinity School of Vanderbilt University at Nashville and was arrested by city police for his leadership role in the nonviolent attack on segregated lunch counters in that city.

He was summarily dismissed from the University which was closely followed by the resignation of more than half of the faculty of the Divinity School in protest of his dismissal. For several days, a national furor prevailed with demands for 'Christian and fair' treatment pouring in from all over the nation.

Rev. Lawson avowed that he was only following his Christian conviction as a participant in the Sit-Ins. He is looked upon as one of the nation's most articulate prophets of nonviolence.

He has served as Field Secretary for the Fellowship of Reconciliation, an organization dedicated to the pacifist position. He traveled and lived in India for two years as a missionary for the Methodist church.

The youthful minister's present responsibilities will be parttime, serving primarily as a lecturer and resource person in conference institutes geared to the spread of the philosophy of nonviolence as a means of social change.

NAACP to defend sit-ins in South

NEW YORK, Jan. 6—(AP)—A uint of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, will concentrate this year on defending students arrested in sit-in protests and in speeding legal activities for school desegregation.

Thurgood Marshall, N A A C P coupsel, outlined the plans yesterday.

He said the legal defense and educatioanl fund "gladly assumes full responsibility" for defending Negroes involved in sit-ins.

"Most of them," he said, "have been charged and convicted for crimes such as disorderly conduct, trespass, interfering with business and parading without a license."

'Sit Down Chillun' makes big hit with NAACP delegation

NEW YORK — This poem, read by president Arthur Spingarn at the opening of the afternoon session of the NAACP annual meeting at the association's headquarters, was heartily applauded.

Sit Down Chillun

(By J. Farley Ragland, Lawrenceville, Va. pharmacist, from his new book of poems, "Stepping Stones To Freedom," Published 1960. Dedicated to Dr. Martin Luther King.)

Sit down chillun, sit down!
In every jim crow state and town,
Bury your cross and wear your crown.
Sit down chillun, sit down!
Walk right in and take your seat!
Pay the same for what you eat!
All the world applauds your feat,
Sit down chillun, sit down!
Though your face is black or brown,
Smile a smile, don't frown a frown!
Right is right the whole world 'round,
Sit down chillun, sit down!
A new day's coming, keep on singing!
Keep the bells of freedom ringing,
Keep the flags of freedom swinging,
Sit down chillun, sit down!
Old jim crow has got to go!
The "moving finger" tells us so!
Here, and there, and to and fro,
Sit down chillun, sit down!
Keep on smiling with quiet faith,
Keep on walking, hold your place,
Keep on striving, lift your race,
Sit down chillun, sit down!

Two sitdown leaders join NAACP staff

NEW YORK— The NAACP added two sitdown protest leaders to its fulltime field staff this week, according to Roy Wilkins, executive secretary.

Miss Julie A. Wright, summa Cum laude graduate of Claflin College, Orangeburg, S.C., was one of the two leaders of the famed March 15, 1959, demonstration in Orangeburg.

Two columns of students, totaling 1,500, staged an orderly march into town where a protest ceremony was slated to be held in the local square.

Police attacked the students, armed with Bibles and signboards, using tear gas and high pressure fire hoses. A record 338 soaking students were arrested and forced to shiver in the cold spring air in an outdoor stockade.

Miss Wright will work with Herbert L. Wright, the Association's youth secretary and will be based in the Atlanta regional office of the NAACP.

* * *

PHILLIP H. SAVAGE, of Baltimore, Md., has been named field secretary at large and will conduct NAACP membership campaigns in major cities.

He was chairman of the Civic Interest Group that was responsible for breaking down segregated eating facilities in four major department stores and more than 100 restaurants in Baltimore.

A graduate of Morgan State College, Mr. Savage has worked as an organizer in the Association's register to vote drive in Baltimore. He also conducted an NAACP membership drive there that resulted in 11,254 members.

Mr. Savage also served as acting executive secretary of the Baltimore branch during 1960. He will work under supervision of Gloster B. Current, NAACP director of branches.

NAACP Kicks-Off Campaign Monday, Discusses Sit-Ins

Interest as well as discussions may result Monday, February 13 at 8:05 PM in West Hunter Baptist Church during the "Kick-Off" meeting of the Atlanta Branch Membership Campaign, with a report on the Student Moveemnt and an address by Dr. William Holmes Borders, pastor of Wheat Street Baptist Church. Questions are being raised in regard to last week's "sit-in demonstrations as well as the advisability of the stuednts' remaining in jail by refusing bond.

Workers, members and prepective members will be concerned about this controversial phase of Civil Rights campaign as the NAACP assumes more importance as the leader of the movement, just as the membership drive begins. This is expected to be the final organization meeting of the current campaign, which will proceed until March 13 and the public is invited to attend.

Numbers announced for the program include: remarks, speeches and music from the following persons: Rev. Samuel W. Williams, branch president, Rev. Otis Moss, first vice president, Rev. A. S. Dickerson, second vice president, Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker, membership chairman, Rev. B. Joseph Johnson, church work chairman, Charles W. Greene, general campaign chairman, Attorney A. T. Walden, life membership co-chairman, Rev. Z. T. Berrien, northwest chairman, Rev. Borders, J. H. Calhoun, campaign director, Mrs. Essie M. Groves, the youth choir of West Hunter Baptist Church, Miss Pauline Shields, organist and a representative of the Student Movement.

The campaign organization will meet every Monday night at 7:00 PM in the Graham Jackson Room of Frazier's Cafe Society, 880 Hunter Street, SW and two announced public programs have so far been scheduled: a club affair at the Waluhaje Ballroom on Tuesday, February 28, and a public program on the final night, Monday, March 13

Desegregation campaign—

Negroes picket Broadway shows set to play in South

BY STUART W. LITTLE
Herald Tribune News Service

NEW YORK, March 21—Picketing of Broadway's legitimate theaters "on a sporadic basis" was promised Monday by officials of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in support of a major new campaign to break theater segregation in the South.

The campaign was launched only last month along the lines of last year's lunch counter sit-ins. Many of the same university students who conducted the sit-ins are involved.

Up to Monday, according to a count at NAACP offices here, the demonstrations had resulted in over 400 arrests. NAACP officials said they had accomplished the desegregation of 18 downtown movie theaters in Kansas City, Mo.

The New York picketing, which began Saturday against four shows, will be directed against those shows which have or will have national touring companies playing the South. Discouraging patronage is intended rather than preventing the actors from performing or shutting the theaters, according to Herbert Hill, labor secretary of the NAACP.

HILL PERSONALLY launched a "Southwide" campaign against movie and legitimate theaters Feb. 5 at a rally in Durham, N. C. It has been extended to 13 states.

The NAACP describes the campaign as "stand-in" demonstrations. A Negro takes a place in the line leading to the white box office and remains there until turned away. Sometimes a white sympathizer will buy a ticket for a Negro, giving him access to the main part of the house. He sits in the unrestricted seat until he is ejected. In addition, picket lines are thrown around the theaters.

The NAACP is asking for the support of Actors' Equity in its campaign.

At the moment, Equity has informed the NAACP that it "is precluded from taking direct action" in the campaign by reason of its contract agreement.

AT THE SAME time, Equity is taking steps to explore with league officials the possibility of changing the contract. The change would extend a policy of not playing segregated theaters, now in effect only for Washington, D. C., to the whole country.

Theater producers and actors face the dilemma of putting themselves out of business in the South by such a stand.

An optimistic view is held by NAACP officials. They believe they are within sight of ending segregation in most Southern legitimate theaters.

Desegregation Fight Shifts From Lunch Counter to Jobs

Negro demonstrators against segregation shifted their emphasis from lunch counters and theaters to jobs in two localities which made the news last week.

In Kansas City, Mo., 100 persons from two civic organizations picketed eight retail stores where it was claimed Negroes have been limited to menial jobs.

And in Elkhart, Ind., a group of more than 50 Negroes staaged a demonstration in front of the offices of Mayor Frank J. Parmater against job discrimination.

Lloyd Saville, a professor of economics at Duke University, Durham, N. C., spoke out against job discrimination at a conference on national goals. "If Negro employment opportunities could be increased, he said, there would also be an increase in consumption and create new employment."

Violence broke out in another paid of locations.

Chattanooga, Tenn., two-day protest demonstrations against theater discrimination turned into violence. Rocks were thrown, a Negro Episcopal minister was slugged and an elderly white woman was knocked down.

In Savannah, Ga., a series of fights between Negroes and whites erupted shortly after 150 Negroes marched two abreast to a St. Patrick's Day parade.

Peaceful recreation desegregation developments during the week included the announced desegregation of the Glen Echo Amusement Park in suburban Maryland, the opening of a Mobile, Ala., municipal golf course to Negro players ordered by a U. S. District Court and the pledging of a Negro member for the first time by a state university of Iowa social fraternity.

Elsewhere on the demonstration front, 175 persons were arrested in Louisville, Ky., after a handclapping, singing parade to call for continued demonstrations and boycotts in support of desegregation of theaters and restaurants; in Oklahoma City 13 demonstrators for integrated restaurants, including a Catholic Priest, pleaded innocent to charges of disorderly conduct; five Negro demonstrators were arrested outside a drug store in Rock Hill, S.C.; 22 Negroes were arrested in front of a theater in Houston, Tex.; Negro leaders in Lynchburg, Va., threatened court action if all public facilities were not desegregated.

The planned segregation in Charleston, S.C., of delegates to the meeting there April 11 and 12 of the Civil War Centennial Commission raised some more steam. By the weekend, ommission Chairman U. S. Grant III had said he and the Commission had no jurisdiction in racial matters. President Kennedy contradicted him, noted that the Commission was an agency of the Government responsible for insuring equality of treatment. The NAACP is protesting the "outpouring of pro-south propaganda" and the "meaningless pageantry" of the Civil War Centennial observances.

The Justice Department stepped into four Federal Court suits in Louisiana in an effort to head off school desegregation problems like those of New Orleans. The State's Education Superintendent, Shelby M. Jackson, facing contempt of court charges in the New Orleans hassle, appealed to the State's lawmakers to do something. The Legislators called on Gov. Jimmie H. Davis to call a Constitutional Convention. Its aim—the end of public education in the State.

LUNCH COUNTERS

NAACP- LEGAL DEFENSE AND EDUCATIONAL FUND

Major Objective In 1961

Legal Defense Fund Will Protect Sit-In Students

Journal And Guide

Norfolk, Va.

NEW YORK — Defending the students arrested in connection with sit - in protest demonstrations and speeding up the legal activities for school desegregation in several states are the major objectives of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund for 1961, Thurgood Marshall, the Fund's director - Counsel has announced.

Approximately 1,700 students were arrested and convicted during 1960 in whose behalf attorneys for the Legal Defense Fund have filed suits arising out of the sit - in demonstrations. He said the battery of some 75 Negro and white lawyers throughout the country are now engaged in defending the students.

AS THE NEW YEAR begins, cases are on record which were filed in behalf of Negro children, in almost every southern state, who were barred from schools supported by public funds, because of their race. This includes renewed legal action in two of the original five cases which resulted in the Supreme Court's 1954 decision outlawing segregation in public education.

Mr. Marshall declared that the Negroes who have been accused and convicted because of the sit - in demonstrations.

"MOST OF THEM (the Negro students) have been charged and convicted for crimes such as disorderly conduct, trespass, interfering with business and parading without a license," Mr. Marshall said.

"The only crime they have committed was to protest in an orderly and peaceful manner the denial of their right to sit at lunch counters," he pointed out. "To protest against injustices is the foundation of our American democracy."

THE LEGAL Defense Fund head is pleased and enthused with three full scale lawyers' conferences held in New York, Washington, D. C. and St. Paul during 1960 in connection with the sit - in demonstrations. Ideas and legal theories in these cases were exchanged at the conferences, as well as scores of drafts of pleadings and briefs on the law and other material pertinent to the sit - in demonstrations were prepared and distributed, Mr. Marshall disclosed. "These conferences brought about a marvelous spirit of cooperation among the lawyers which assures us of victory," he stated.

As a result, Mr. Marshall asserted, several of the sit-in cases have already been reversed by higher courts while others are still on appeal in state appellate courts.

THE FIRST sit - in case reached the U. S. Supreme Court on Dec. 31, 1960, when Legal Defense Fund attorneys filed three petitions in behalf of 15 colored students arrested last spring in Baton Rouge, La. The high court was urged to hear these cases on the ground that the arrests and convictions violated the students' constitutional rights to protest discrimination and seek equal treatment at public lunch counters.

The attorneys also urged the Supreme Court to lay down basic guidance for lower courts to follow in similar cases.

WITH RESPECT to public school desegregation, Mr. Marshall said the events revolving around the New Orleans school crisis again focused attention on America's public school segregation issues.

"The New Orleans episode may become either the dying gasp of massive resistance in interposition theories or another rallying point for defiant southern states to continue resistance to the Supreme Court's 1954 decision prohibiting school segregation," Mr. Marshall stated. He added:

"If the federal government takes a firm position and the 'uncommitted" public awakens to the great danger to America represented by massive resistance to the law in the name of segregation, 1961 could produce considerable civil rights advances.

'Sit-Ins' get backing

The Afro-American

Baltimore, Md.

By J. BENJAMIN HORTON

NEW YORK CITY — The 46th Anniversary Conclave of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, meeting at the Park - Sheraton Hotel, here, Dec. 27-20, heard Roswell O'Neil Sutton, of Atlanta, Ga., its national president, discuss "Reassessing Our Role of Leadership For Culture and Service," Wednesday.

President Sutton, declared that "the continued fight among the black peoples and the minorities of the world for freedom, first - class citizenship, for equal job opportunities, for the right and privilege to worship God as they see fit, is going to claim the attention of every human being on the face of the earth."

• • •

SUTTON emphasized that "as we push this fight within the fraternity and from without, each of us has a definite and dedicated responsibility —first to ourselves and secondly to our fellowman, to use all of the energy, influence, time and money that we can command to insure that Democracy wins; that the free world peoples can come together and resolve their differences to the end that we will have one world."

"I am no communist," Sutton asserted . . . and am not a communist sympathizer, nor am I tainted with red, but Krushchev was right in some of the things he said when he last attended the United Nations meeting in New York City. How can we as Americans come to the United Nations, sit down at the table in an effort to negotiate a lasting peace, talk about freedom versus slavery, democracy versus communism, the free world versus those who would enslave men?

"Mr. Krushchev wanted to know," the speaker continued, "how we could sit down and talk to these Africans about peace and democracy when we know of course, that while they can go any place in New York City and perhaps some other places above the Mason - Dixon line as equal men but can be denied the privilege of such any southern city."

* * *

PRESIDENT SUTTON praised the sit - in movement of young people of the nation, stating "the young people of our country are dedicated unequivocably to the proposition that they, in their life time, will enjoy, will live to see themselves as first - class citizens and as respectable people of the world."

Sit-ins Legal Defense Seen Top 1961 Object

The Louisville Defender

Louisville Ky.

NEW YORK, N. Y. — Defending the students arrested in connection with sit-in protest demonstrations and speeding up the legal activities for school desegregation in several states, are the major objectives of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund for 1961. Thurgood Marshall, the Fund's director-counsel, announced last week.

Approximately 1,700 students were arrested and convicted during 1960 in whose behalf attorneys for the Legal Defense Fund have filed suits arising out of the sit-in demonstrations.

He said the battery of some 75 Negro and white lawyers throughout the country are now engaged in defending the students.

Every Dixie State

As the new year begins, cases are on record which were filed in behalf of Negro children, in almost every southern state, who were barred from schools supported by public funds, because of their race.

This includes renewed legal action in two of the original five cases which resulted in the Supreme Court's 1954 decision outlawing segregation in public education.

Marshall declared that the Legal Defense Fund gladly assumes full responsibility for defending the Negroes who have been accused and convicted because of the sit-in demonstrations.

"Most of them (the Negro students) have been charged and convicted for crimes such as disorderly conduct, trespass, interfering with business and parading without a license," Marshall said.

"The only crime they have committed was to protest in an orderly and peaceful manner the denial of their right to sit at lunch counters," he pointed out. "To protest against injustices is the foundation of our American democracy."

Pleased

The Legal Defense Fund head is highly pleased and enthused with three full-scale lawyers' conferences held in New York, Washington, D.C. and St. Paul during 1960 in connection with the sit-in demonstrations.

Ideas and legal theories in these cases were exchanged at the conferences, as well as scores of drafts and pleadings and briefs on the law and other material pertinent to the sit-in demonstrations were prepared and distributed, Marshall disclosed. "These conferences brought about a marvelous spirit of cooperation among the lawyers which assures us of victory," he stated.

As a result, he asserted, several of the sit-in cases have already been reversed by higher courts while others are still on appeal in state appellate courts.

The first sit-in case reached the U. S. Supmere Court on December 31, 1960, when Legal Defense Fund attorneys filed three petitions in behalf of 15 Negro students arrested last spring in Baton Rouge, La.

The high Court was urged to hear these cases on the ground that the arrests and convictions violated the students' constitutional rights to protest discrimination and seek equal treatment at public lunch counters.

GENERAL

LUNCH COUNTERS

38a 1961

RACIAL RIFT HURTS INDUSTRY IN SOUTH

Some Cities Pay Heavy Toll but Impact Is Selective Rather Than Area-Wide

Special to The New York Times

ATLANTA — The racial desegregation controversy is expected to cause marked changes in the pattern of Southern economic development.

This is already apparent in the experiences of communities that have faced the problems of public school desegregation, lunch counter demonstrations and transportation boycotts by Negroes.

Cities in which racial disputes have been prolonged and marred by violence appear to have paid a heavy toll in terms of industrial expansion.

The effects generally have been selective, affecting the individual city or area rather than the South as a whole. This stems from the basic reason for the development of new manufacturing facilities in the region.

Philip M. Webster, in a report published in the Monthly Review of the Sixth Federal Reserve District, noted that service to the regional market was largely responsible for manufacturing's growth. His findings were based on a study of development from 1947 to 1958 in the district—Alabama, Florida, Georgia and parts of Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Job Changes Classified

"Judging from an analysis of employment changes roughly classified according to the market orientation of the industries involved, it would seem that about nine out of every ten manufacturing jobs added were in industries serving the regional rather than the national market," Mr. Webster concluded.

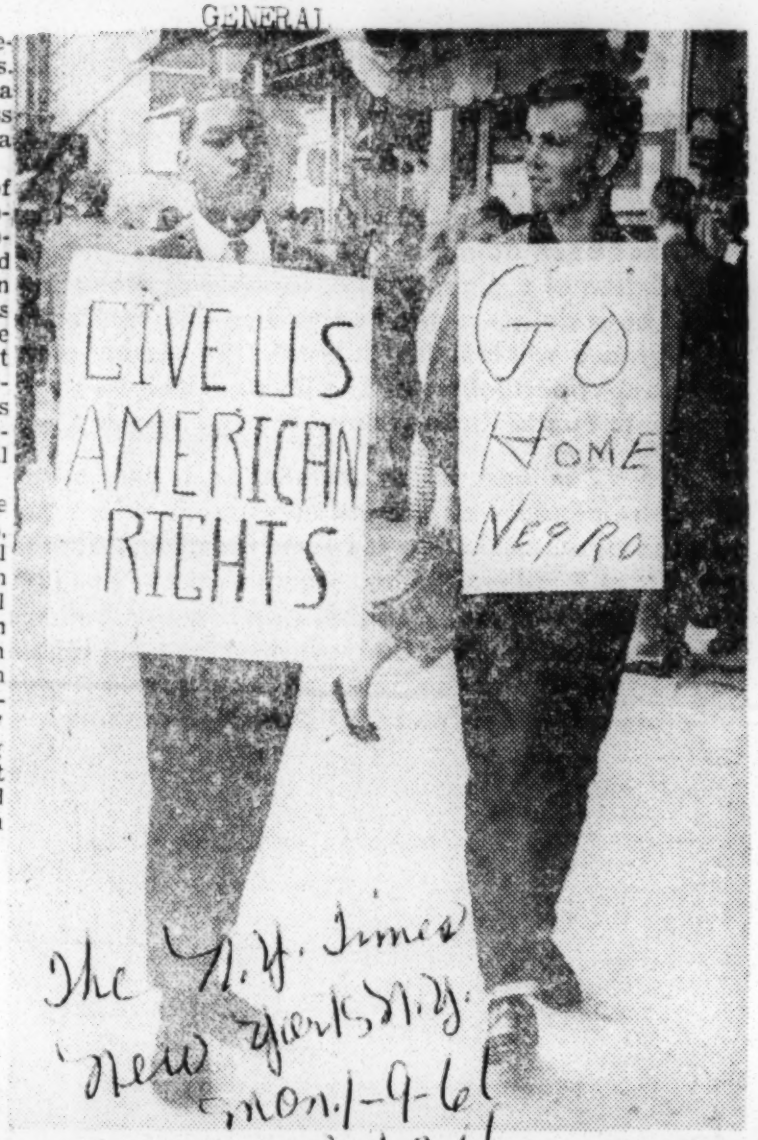
As a result, a manufacturer who found one Southern area unattractive as a new plant site would probably shift to another within the region. This would favor communities in which racial disputes already have been resolved with a minimum of trouble and possibly would give them a greater than normal economic growth rate.

Because of the complex and interlocking nature of the economic factors involved, it is virtually impossible to set a dollar value on the losses resulting from racial disputes. But H. McKinley Conway, a specialist in Southern business development, recently offered a partial answer.

Mr. Conway is president of Conway Publications, Inc., publishers of Industrial Development, Manufacturers, Record and the annual Site Selection Handbook and other business guides. His estimate of the economic implications that might result if suburban DeKalb County closed its schools to block desegregation was published by the Southern Regional Council.

"It has been found that the first effect of school closings, or even the threat of school closings, is a sharp reduction in the number of new industrial plants which will be located in an area," Mr. Conway said. "In fact, new industrial locations in Little Rock [Ark.] were reduced to zero for three years."

He then asserted that closing DeKalb schools would cost at least some thirty medium-sized plants over a thirty-six-month period.



Associated Press

COUNTER IRRITANTS: A white youth matches a picketing Negro's stride in Greensboro, N. C., during sit-in demonstration. Race disputes have hurt Southern economy.

LUNCH COUNTER
SIT-INS
ETC.

Dixie Negroes Open New Rights Battle

Students Seek Admission To Nashville Theaters

By United Press International

Negro students in the South opened a new phase of their integration fight Wednesday on the first anniversary of the lunch counter sit-in movement.

Theaters were the new target. Negroes at Nashville, Tenn., and Greensboro, N. C., where the first sit-ins occurred, lined up outside segregated theaters and demanded admission. They were turned away, or in some instances, box offices closed.

In Atlanta, an estimated 1,500 Negroes marched on the downtown area but limited their activities to picketing outside department stores with segregated eating facilities. They carried signs demanding an end to Jim Crowism.

At Orangeburg, S. C., at least 10 Negroes were jailed in connection with sit-in demonstrations. Police said the protests were continuing and more arrests were expected.

Edward B. King Jr., administrative secretary of the student non-violent co-ordinating committee, said students had been asked to "rededicate themselves" to desegreation effort.

An estimated 300 Negro students took part in the theater demonstrations in Nashville. Initially there were about 20 Negroes at each of at least five downtown theaters, but later the lines swelled. The Negroes were wearing cards reading: "Remember Freedom Day — February First." This referred to the anniversary of the sit-ins. There were no incidents or arrests.

All but one of the box offices closed quickly and the Negroes stood silently outside the theater. The other movie theater kept its box office open, turning away the Negroes individually.

The Negroes were predominantly college students from Fisk University, Tennessee State A&I University, and American Baptist Theological Seminary in Nashville.

Negroes Mark Anniversary Of Sit-Ins By Demonstrations

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The first anniversary of the lunch counter sit-in movement was marked by anti-segregation demonstrations by Negroes in five Southern states.

Twenty-four Negroes were arrested and six others were taken into custody but released after a lecture by police.

The largest demonstration occurred in downtown Atlanta where several hundred Negro college students paraded in groups Wednesday. Spokesmen said the march was part of a Southwide demonstration that included initial efforts to end segregation at theaters.

Picketing began at Greensboro, N. C., where the sit-in movement started on Feb. 1, 1960, after six Negro students were denied tickets at an all-white theater. The Negroes left and began picketing the theater and others in the downtown area.

Fifteen Negro students from Hampton Institute were arrested on trespassing charges when they sat in a theater section usually reserved for white persons at Hampton, Va.

At Orangeburg, S. C., nine Negroes were arrested on charges of trespassing at the lunch counter of an S. H. Kress variety store when they ignored a warning from the store manager.

In Nashville, Tenn., several hundred Negroes unsuccessfully sought admission to a number of downtown theaters. No disturbances were reported, and police said the groups were orderly.

Some 130 students marched in the downtown area of High Point, N. C., near Greensboro, and later picketed a theater which closed its Negro balcony in what was termed an economy move last week.

A group of apparently unorganized Negroes, believed to have been high school students, were refused service at three lunch counters in Spartanburg, S. C.

Atlanta police said the four Negro men and two Negro women taken into custody included a brother of integration leader Martin Luther King Jr., the Rev. A. D. W. King. They were released after a lecture on blocking pedestrian traffic.

About six white youths joined some 50 or 60 Negroes in the demonstration at Rich's department store in Atlanta, where earlier sit-ins had forced the closing of a grill and a tea room.

On racial developments elsewhere—

A Florida State University student on probation following his participation in lunch counter demonstrations said he had been suspended from the school at Tallahassee. Jefferson Poland, 18, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said he had been accused of breaking the terms of his probation by continuing to work against segregation.

Ten Negro college students filed notice of appeal after being sentenced to fines of $100 each or 30 days in jail on their convictions of trespassing at a variety store's white lunch counter in Rock Hill, S.

The Georgia Senate voted, 30-0, to limit the use of the capitol to government functions, except that refreshment stands may be operated for the use of legislators and their guests. The move apparently was aimed at preventing any recurrence of Negro sit-ins at the capitol in Atlanta.

Picketing in Atlanta Observes First Year of Sit-In Movement

Negro College Students March Without Disorder at Downtown Stores— 15 Seized in Virginia Theatre

ATLANTA, Feb. 1 (UPI)—Negro students marched on downtown Atlanta today and placed a picket line in front of stores in a demonstration marking the first anniversary of sit-ins at segregated Southern lunch counters.

A student leader, Lonnie King Jr., estimated the number of demonstrators at 1,500. The police gave no estimate.

The group marched from the Morris Brown College campus a mile away.

Picket lines were placed at stores covering a six-block area. Signs bearing "Jim Crow Must Go," and similar messages were carried by more than one-hundred demonstrators.

The police said there had been no disorders and none of the students was arrested.

The group, after picketing less than an hour, returned to the college to attend a rally in the school chapel.

The sit-in movement began at an F. W. Woolworth Company store in Greensboro, N. C., last Feb. 1.

Fifteen Seized in Theatre

HAMPTON, Va., Feb. 1 (AP)—Fifteen Negro students from Hampton Institute were arrested and charged with trespassing today when they sat in a theatre usually reserved for white persons.

The students, part of a group of about twenty boys and girls, were arrested for sitting in the segregated orchestra section of the Lee Theatre.

Trespassing Is Charged

ORANGEBURG, S. C., Feb. 1 (AP) — Nine young Negroes were charged with trespassing here today after taking eats at an all-white lunch counter.

The police said J. B. Todd, manager of the S. H. Kress store, twice warned the nine not to take seats. When they did, policemen, who had been called, made the arrests.

Students Sentenced

ROCK HILL, S. C., Feb. 1 (AP)—Ten Negro college students were convicted Thursday of trespassing at the white lunch counter of a Rock Hill variety store.

Rock Hill Recorder's Court Judge Billy D. Hayes passed sentences of $100 or thirty days on the ten Friendship College students arrested in McCrory's variety store Tuesday. They filed notice of appeal and Judge Hayes set bond at $200 each.

Savannah Inquiry On

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 1 (AP)—The Justice Department has ordered a civil rights investigation in the arrest of seven Negroes for playing basketball on a white playground last week.

Charles Brown, agent here for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said his office had begun the investigation.

Sit-In Movement One-Year-Old This Month

The Louisiana Weekly

The United States, indeed the world, hasn't been the same since four students sat down at a Woolworth lunch counter in Greensboro, North Carolina a year ago this month and asked for coffee.

New Orleans, La.

It was like dropping a match in the confetti at a New Year's party. Before the South knew what had happened, Negro and white students all over were demanding they be served a cup of coffee together.

Dat. 2-11-61

Some states found they had no laws prohibiting this simple manifestation of the equality of man. They hurriedly called together their lawmakers and corrected the oversight. They even went a step further and ruled that Negroes change their status from customers to trespassers the second they ask for service at "white only" lunch counters.

p. 17

Meanwhile the sit-in technique at the lunch counters became kneel-ins; at churches; wade-ins at swimming pools; stand-ins at theatres and play-ins at golf courses.

Northern students adopted the same techniques to demonstrate sympathy for those "on the firing line" in the South.

And before the end of the year, Capetown, South Africa was witnessing sit-ins.

What they accomplished is hard to measure, but the gains were phenomenal. Racial barriers began to fall like ten pins in a bowling alley.

But accompanying the collapse of old customs and laws were violent outbreaks by whites resentful of the quiet militancy of the Negro students. In many instances the effect, ironically, was to emphasize the dignity and discipline of the Negro demonstrators and to win sympathy and support for their objectives.

Another, perhaps more important by-product was the psychological affect the demonstrations had upon the Negro and on the conscience of the white man.

The dramatic demonstrations by the students infused the Negro with a new sense of pride that fostered a unity among the race unknown before. Many, who had lost hope because of the slow pace of school desegregation, were encouraged when they saw lunch counters opened to all, swimming pools desegregated and churches practicing Christianity by opening their pews to worshippers of all races.

The sit-ins caused many whites who had lived in segregated communities to realize for the first time that the Negro was unhappy with his position in society. And the irrefutable logic of a man seeking service at a lunch counter of a store where he was welcomed at all other counters made a dent on all but the fanatical.

New Orleans, La.

Finally the magnitude of the sporadic movement can be partly realized by the report of the Legal Defense and Educational Fund of the NAACP which disclosed that 40 percent of its $405,000 budget was used in defending 1,700 cases growing out of the demonstrations. These cases have been the basis of estimates at least 1,700,000 Negroes participated in the sit-in movement in one way or another.

Historians, after reading about the four A and T college students last February, recalled that Frederick Douglas might have been the father of sit-ins when he refused a request that he refrain from eating at the table in the boarding house where he was the only Negro.

Others suggested that the labor unions might have given birth to the idea when they ordered their striking workers to remain in the factories during the thirties.

Further research disclosed that the late Edgar G. Brown, of Chicago staged a one-man sit-in at a lunch counter in Washington airport in the forties and that a group of Negro and white students conducted sit-ins in Chicago in 1942.

None of these, though, had the electrifying effect of what happened just a year ago this month in Greensboro -- and America, indeed the world, hasn't been the same since. Nor will it ever be.

Now: Theatre Stand-In

Louisville Courier-Journal

Sit-Ins 1 Year Old; New Targets, More Arrests

Norfolk Va. p. 10

Dat. 2-11-61

By United Press International

Southern Negro students finished a year of successful sit - in campaigning against segregation at the lunch counter Wednesday and began a drive on a new target — the segregated movie theater.

The sit - in movement began Feb. 1, 1960, at the F. W. Woolworth store at Greensboro, N. C. Students over the South turned out in force to commemorate the start of their campaign and try to buy tickets at theaters.

THERE WERE a few arrests, but most of the theaters closed their box offices.

In Atlanta an orderly march of 400 to 1,500 college students thronged the downtown section. Police estimated the demonstrators at 400 but their own leaders said 1,500.

Edward C. King Jr., head of the Student Non-violent Coordinating committee, said students had been asked to "rededicate" themselves to the desegregation effort.

"WE HAVE called for stand-ins at theaters throughout the South as our first move in the second phase of the student protest movement," King said.

He said Negroes planned to set up "revolving lines" at theater box offices. Each one refused a ticket will go to the rear of the line and wait to make another request. King said this would keep whites from being able to buy movie tickets.

MOST MOTION picture theaters in the larger southern cities cater to whites only. In smaller town balconies are reserved for Negroes although this practice is disappearing.

About 300 demonstrators tried to buy tickets at five downtown theaters in Nashville, Tenn., Wednesday. Nashville stores desegregated their lunch counters last year.

STUDENTS at Greensboro, N. C., succeeded in getting one of their number into a downtown theater. A light - skinned Negro girl was admitted, but the attendant apparently thought she was white.

38a 1961 GEORGIA ATLANTA LUNCH COUNTER

Lonnie King Challenges Seating, Jailed

By KEELER McCARTNEY

Negro integration leader Lonnie King, Jr., 24, Thursday challenged seating arrangements in Municipal Court and was arrested for contempt during hearings for 39 other students picked up during the third day in a row of sit-in demonstrations.

Judge James Webb sentenced King, chairman of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, to serve five hours in jail, saying, "That is the maximum penalty I can give under the law."

Webb sentenced King after the 39 others, including Nezetta O'Neal, 21, the current "Miss Clark College" were ordered held under $100 bonds each for Fulton Criminal Court on charges of violating the Georgia Anti-Trespass Law.

BAILIFF INSTRUCTED

King and two companions, a boy and a girl, entered the courtroom as spectators and took seats in a section usually occupied by whites. Webb instructed Court Bailiff M. L. Barnes to tell the three to move.

Barnes said he conveyed the judge's request and King countered with "What law are we violating?" Barnes said the three refused to move until he told them they were under arrest and escorted them to a section of the courtroom reserved for prisoners.

After other court matters had been disposed of, Webb instructed Barnes to bring King and the two others before him. He told King he understood King had refused to obey an order from an officer of the court and asked what he had to say.

ASKED ABOUT LAW

King, arrested Tuesday with 17 others, said he had seen Barnes in court before but did not know him as a bailiff.

"I asked him (Barnes) what law I was breaking," King said. "He didn't identify himself as a bailiff and he didn't answer. I still don't know what law we were breaking. He came up here (to the bench) and conferred with you and then he came back and told us we were under arrest."

JUDGE DOUBTS STORY

Webb said he . . . "found it difficult to believe as many times as you have been in court that you did not recognize an officer of the court."

"As I understand it," Webb said, "you are coming into court seeking something and yet you have no respect for the court itself."

Webb told King's companions, identified by Barnes as Essie Jett and John Popwell, "You can go because I'm convinced you were just following the leader."

MADE BOND TUESDAY

King was one of two persons released on bond out of the 33 who had been bound over prior to Thursday's hearings. He posted bond Tuesday night because he said his presence was needed on the outside to direct activities. He said the others "felt a moral responsibility" to remain in jail.

The demonstrators have posed an acute housing problem at the Fulton County jail, and during the arrests Thursday an officer said one student remarked: "Reckon they have space for the 30,000 others whe are coming?"

JAILER HAS SPACE

Fulton Chief Jailer Carl Smithwick said before the 39 ordered held Thursday reached the jail he had only three beds left, but he had plenty of space.

County Manager A. E. Fuller said the county would take emergency measures to see that all prisoners are cared for even though the mattress stockpile "is at a low ebb."

Four of the demonstrations Thursday were directed at a grill at 66 Forsyth St., SW, across the street from the new post office, where Negro pickets set up a refreshment stand during picketing of downtown stores.

OTHERS PICKED UP

Thirty-two students were arrested at 66 Forsyth St., officers said, and seven others were picked up at the Coffee Shop, 1 Forsyth St.

Of those arrested 15 gave addresses other than Atlanta.

The first two arraigned, Marvin R. Anderson, 20, of St. Paul, Minn., and Willie J. Stewart, 20, of Tarpon Springs, Fla., were not represented by an attorney. They pleaded guilty.

Anderson said he and Stewart went to 66 Forsyth St., were told it was against the policy to serve Negroes.

LEFT WITH POLICE

"We asked him to explain his policy and he called police and we left with the police," Anderson said.

The remaining 37, represented by Attorney H. T. Ward, waived hearing.

They were listed as James Jefferson Joyner, 21, and Jacqueline Brown, 19, both of Clark College; Rebecca Brown, 240 Chestnut St.; Patricia Simon, 21, of Spelman; Wilbert Dixon, 19, of 810 Huff Rd.; Frank Smith Jr., 18, of 147 Ashby St., SW; John Alton Bryant, 18, of 361 Lee St., SW; Charles Williams Jr., 19, of 633 Parsons St., SW.

ONE FROM LOUISIANA

Patricia Ann Tate, 18, of Baton Rouge, La.; Edith Christine Simmons, 19, of Brunswick; Marshall Ann Barrett, 20, of 145 Chestnut St.; Florence Miller, 18, of Tuskegee, Ala.; Barbara Diane Middlebrooks, 18, of 110 Ozone St., SW; Lillie Mae Sherman, 19, of 326-B Archer Way, NW; Mary Lee Gholston, 19, of 1323 LaFrance St., NE; Bazalene Smith, 19, of 1350 Meridian St., SE.

Norma June Wilson, 20, of 350 Leonard St., SW; Shirley Ann Smith, 20, of 195 West Lake; Lydia Marie Tucker, 21, of 974 Ashby Grove; William Franklin Cummings, 22, of 796 Play Lane, NW; Alton Henry Stephens Jr., 1629 Detroit Ave., NW; Virginia Caroline Brown, 21, of Columbia, S.C.; Adolphus Lee Campbell, 18, of 1331 English St., NW; Louis Hudson Nevett, 18, of Bessemer, Alabama.

Shirley Dalton, 20, of 85 Hutchison Ave., NW; Joe Edward Johnson, 19, of Augusta; William Nelson Dallas, 19, of Detroit, Mich.; Benjamin Arnold Hardeman, 18, of Covington; Samuel Eddie Watts III, 22, of 140 John Hope Drive; Harry James Spencer, 18, of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Prince Martin Jr., 19, of 941 Ira St., SW; Edwin Baldin, 19, of Tampa, Fla.; Bradley Faulkner Watkins, 18, of Lexington, Ky.; Vivian Calhoun, 19, of 1991 Verbena St., SW; Delores Aldridge, Tampa, and Vivian Patrice Hansford, 18, of Bainbridge.

Ten Negroes Refuse Bond After Arrest

ATLANTA (AP) — Negro demonstrators tried unsuccessfully again Friday to break the traditional Southern policy of segregated eating facilities.

Police arrested 10 at a coffee shop and a grill in downtown Atlanta.

The arrests brought to 86 the number of Negroes taken into custody. Before Friday, 70 Negroes were held in jail awaiting Criminal Court action on charges of violating the state's anti-trespass law—a measure to curb desegregation demonstrations.

BOND REFUSED

The Negroes, mostly students at the Atlanta University Center, have elected to remain in jail rather than go free on bond.

One of them, Leon Greene of Morris Brown College, said he hated to miss school but, like the others, he said he felt the cause is worth the trouble. "It is worth anything to do this," he said.

Don Calbos, owner-manager of Denny's Grill, had a different view. His restaurant has been the scene of several days of Negro sit-ins.

"For the life of me I can't see what they're driving at," he said. "I'm sympathetic with some of their objectives, but there's a stopping point to everything."

Calbos, who is of Greek descent, said he has "no personal grudge against the Negro students."

'WIDE OPEN MIND'

"But they're not going to establish a new way of life down here by coming in with a club," Calbos said.

Calbos, a pleasant-faced, middle-aged man, was born in Mississippi and worked as a theater manager in the East 20 years before coming to Atlanta 10 years ago.

"I've got a wide open mind, and I don't care if it's black or white or Chinese or Greek. If somebody comes in here and starts interfering with my normal operations, I feel it's my duty—and my right—to stop them," he said. "There is still a possibility that even I have some civil rights too," he added.

Calbos posted a sign in his coffee shop Friday advising:

"We reserve the legal right to refuse service or admittance. We also reserve the right to designate seating and to reserve any seat or standing room."

18 Students Are Arrested Here After Sit-Ins

Eighteen College students and two non-students were arrested Wednesday afternoon in sit-in demonstrations to bring the total to 37 for the past two days.

Seven demonstrators were arrested at Denny's Grill, Forsyth and Hunter Streets and thirteen were arrested at Sprayberry's Cafeteria, 888 Peachtree Rd. Sprayberry's was the scene of 17 arrests Tuesday when Negro students attempted to gain service.

The students were arrested Wednesday when the proprietor and manager of the two eating facilities stated to students in the presence of police a request for the demonstrators to leave.

In a 4:30 hearing a Municipal Court yesterday Judge James E. Webb set bond at $100 and bound the demonstrators over to Fulton County Criminal Court.

The sit-inners refused to make bond because "we feel that our stay in jail will be significant in solidifying the Negro race in the area of economic withdrawal and for support for the entire student movement program," one of the jailed students stated.

Students arrested at Sprayberry's Cafeteria inclued: Lenora Taitt, 22, Spelman College; Johnnie Price, 20, Spelman College; E. Christine Sparks, 20, Clark College; Marsha Goodwin, 18, Spelman College; Yvonne Tucker, 18, Spelman College; Laurine Weaver, 22, Spelman College; Suzon Grimes, 20.; Rev. Harold Middlebrook, Morehouse College; Richard Hope, 21, Morehouse College; Robert Young Whatley, 21, Clark College; Gene Edward Flowers, 21; Charles Smith, 22, Morehouse College; William Beasley, 22.

Atlanta police records gave the following as sit-inners being taken into custody at Denny's Grill: Roy Carver Crittenden; Ralph Lorenza Stephens, 22, Morehouse College; Wilbur Michael Byrd, 17, Morehouse College; Julian Ward Blackshear, Morehouse College; Roland L. Turpin, Morehouse College; Eric V. A. Winston, Morehouse College; Johnny Bullock, Jr., 20, Morehouse College.

Lonnie King, 12 Others Held Under $100 Bond in Sit-In

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

By KEELER McCARTNEY

Thirteen Negro college students, including integration leader Lonnie King Jr., were ordered held Tuesday under $100 bonds each on charges of violating the Georgia anti-trespass law in connection with a sit-in demonstration.

CW 2-8-61

Seventeen were arrested at the noontime demonstration at Sprayberry's cafeteria in the Peachtree-Seventh Building. Municipal Judge James Webb dismissed charges against four after they testified they had not been asked to leave the restaurant. p. 3

Those whose cases were dismissed were Harold Albert Middlebrooks, 18, of Memphis, Tenn.; India Cooper, 16, of 2766 Oldknow Dr., NW; Eric V. A. Winston, 18, of Savannah, and Carol Ann Clark, 18, of Winter Park, Fla.

Winston said he heard a man identified to him later as H. J. Sprayberry, restaurant owner, ask someone to leave, but he did not know whom. Miss Cooper said she was in a phone booth. Middlebrooks and Miss Clark said they were not requested to leave.

Capt. J. L. Moseley, who made the arrests after he said Sprayberry in his presence asked the troup to leave, testified it "was possible" some members of the group were not asked directly to leave.

Defense attorney D. L. Hollowell moved for a dismissal on the four and Webb agreed that evidence was not clear that they had been asked to leave.

Hollowell then asked for dismissal of the remaining 13 cases on the grounds police action was based upon "discriminating practices" and, he contended, in violation of the First and 14th amendments. Webb overruled the motion.

A dramatic moment in the trial came when Dorothy Brown, a Negro employe at the cafeteria, wept as she described events.

She said she thought they "were about to leave" when taken into custody and sobbed:

"This may cost me my job, but it's all I know."

Sprayberry said the group entered the serving-line shortly after 11 a.m. and he ordered the line and the cashier's position closed. He said some picked up salads and desserts and sat down.

Sprayberry said he asked the group to leave and, when they refused, called police. He said he repeated the request in the presence of Moseley.

King and several other students told the court they were preparing to leave when taken into custody.

Questioned by Hollowell and attorney A. T. Walden, Sprayberry said he was sole owner of the restaurant and paid rent through a local real estate company. The building houses federal governmental agencies.

In addition to King, those ordered held were Charles Persons, 18, 21 Bradley St., SE; Frank Holloway, 21, 897 Michigan Ave., NW; Leroy Washington, 22, Jacksonville, Fla.; Wilford Hepburn, 20, of Miami; Ralph M. Moore, 20, Washington, D.C.

Mitchell Daniel, 19, Waterboro, S.C.; William Robinson, 20, Gadsden, Ala.; Ernest E. Moore, 19, Cedartown; Solomon Taylor, 21, 1598 Ezra Church Dr., NW; Leon Greene, 18, 1900 Calloway Dr., NW; Harold Andrews, 22, 47 Holly Rd., NW, and Herschelle Sullivan, 22, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

37 Students Are Bound Over Here After Sit-Ins

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Mar 2-10-61

Thirty-seven Negro sit-iners were bound over to criminal court late Thursday and their leader was sent to jail for contempt of court.

Lonnie King was sentenced to spend five hours in the city jail after he created an incident in the courtroom where Negro students were brought for arraignment under Georgia's anti-tresspass law.

Seventeen boys and 20 girls waived commitment in Municipal Judge James Webb's court and he bound them over to Fulton criminal court under bonds of $100 each.

King and two companions entered the courtroom and, after taking seats on the side reserved for Negroes, moved over to the side reserved for whites.

The three were ordered by a bailiff to move and King "asked the officer "what law have we broken?"

Webb instructed the bailiff to bring the three to seats in the front of the courtroom and they sat there until all other cases had been handled.

Webb then called the three to the bench and asked King if he had anything to say.

The young man, who has led most of the sit-in demonstrations here, said that the bailiff did not identify himself and that he therefore did not know who the man was.

"If he had asked us to move we would have done so," King said.

The judge said it was hard for him to believe that King, who has been in and out of courts for months during the sit-in arrests, did not recognize the court officer.

"You claim to be seeking something through the courts of this country but if you don't respect the courts I don't see how you expect to get what you want," Webb said.

He then sentenced King to five hours in jail, commenting that this was the maximum he could impose in his court. He released King's two companions saying he felt sure they were simply following his direction.

The 37 bound over Thursday were among the 64 Negro students who have been arrested here since Tuesday for staging sit-in demonstrations at three Atlanta restaurants. The other 27 will appear before Webb later

A total of 29 students were arrested Thursday, 22 at Denny's grill across from the Post Office annex here and seven more at another grill. Nine more tried to stage a sit-in Sprayberry's Restaurant in a building housing federal offices but the owner never let them through the door.

On Wednesday, 13 were arreested at Sprayberry's and seven at Denny's and on the previous day 17 were arrested at Sprayberry's. Four of those arrested the first day were released but most of these were later rearrested during other demonstrations.

Of the 64 students now under $100 bond, King is the only one who has paid his bond and gone free.

A spokesman for the student nonviolent movement said King took this step because he was needed to carry on his integration work.

The remainder have chosen to stay in jail in passive resistance to segregation

Atlanta Negro Students Balk At Agreement To End Sit-Ins

Jackson Advocate
Jackson, Miss
Sat. 3-18-61

Adult Leaders Defend Agreement As Providing Best Available Solution

p. 1

Atlanta, Ga., Mar. 13 — While wire services and out-of-town newspaper headlines proclaimed a major victory for Atlanta sit-in demonstrators, Student Leaders, Lonnie C. King, Jr., Chairman of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, and Spellman College senior, Herschell Sullivan, Co-Chairman, resigned Wednesday night during a stormy session in which the two student leaders expressed dissatisfaction with their roles and the part they played in signing the March 6th agreement between Negro leaders and White Merchants ending the sit-in demonstrations.

A "policy-making" group of some 150 students gathered at Rush Memorial Congregational Church refused to accept the resignations and re-instated King and Miss Sullivan in their former posts. At the same time the group authorized a subcommittee to draw up a "statement of position" which reportedly will not be available for publication until "further conferences and consultations" have been held.

Jackson Miss

Meanwhile, many members of Atlanta's adult community raised sharp questions concerning the agreement, while some of the adult negotiations and their supporters defended it as providing the best available solution to the "stalemate" existing between merchants who had closed down most of their dining facilities and Negroes who have carried on an intensive boycott during the past five months.

Announced through the Chamber of Commerce by C. C. head Ivan Allen, Jr., and by Atty. A. T. Walden, who has served as chief negotiator for the Negro group during the past few weeks, the statement of agreement indicated that the 14 major stores and chains would carry out in lunchrooms and other facilities "the same patterns as have been recognized and evidenced" by the admission of two qualified students to the University of Georgia, the erasing of its segregation laws by the Georgia Assembly and the decision of the Atlanta Board of Education to comply with the orders of the federal court.

The text of the state follows: "We feel that the fine relationship which has existed between the races for a long number of years should be reinstated in Atlanta in every way as soon as is possible. In order to re-establish good relaionships, the leading merchants have stated that it is their decision to carry out in lunchooms and other facilities the same patterns as have been recognized and evidenced (1) by actions of the 1961 General Assembly of Georgia; (2) the administration of qualified students to the University of Georgia, and (3) the decision of the Atlanta Board of Education to comply with the order of the federal court —all relating to the public school issues in Atlanta and as are finally decided upon in the public school issues in Atlanta. The Negro leadership has stated that every effort will be made to eliminate all boycotts, reprisals, picketing and sitins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible. Each party is fully cognizant of the limitations of its own commitments on behalf of any group other than that it specifically represents."

Retail stores which signed the agreement were: Rich's Davison's, Woolworth's Kresge's McCrory's, Grant's S. H. Kress & Co., Sears, Walgreen Co., Jacobs Pharmacy, H. L. Green Co., Newberry's and Lanes.

Negro leaders who signed, in additio nto King, Walden and Miss Sullivan, were Rev. M. L. King, Sr., Leroy R. Johnson, Q. V. Williamson, Jesse Hill, Jr., Mrs. P. Q. Yancey, Rev. Otis Moss, and Dr. Rufus Clement.

Walden, Borders, and Clement were among the signers who pointed particularly to the fact that some 17 major merchants and business leaders in the downtown area of this Deep South city placed themselves on record for the first time as prepared to give up a one hundred year old custom.

Walden indicated that it was only by "major concessions" on both sides that a workable agreement could be reached.

3-a 1961 GEORGIA ATLANTA- LUNCH COUNTER

Whitman Hits Bombing, Calls For Grand Jury Sit-In Probe

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta Ga.

A Fulton County Superior Court judge Tuesday condemned the bombing of a Negro school here last month, and declared that prejudice, racial or otherwise, "has no proper place or part in our American way of life."

In still another area, the same judge called for an investigation into the legality of the sit-in movements in Atlanta, asserting his opinion that "Courts, not the streets, are our tribunals of justice."

Both remarks were made Tuesday morning by Presiding Superior Court Judge George P. Whitman, Sr., in his charge to the incoming January - February Term Fulton County Grand Jury.

Judge Whitman diverted from what is considered to be an ordinary charge to the grand jury in order to give expression to his condemnation, "in no uncertain terms," to the recent bombing of the English Avenue public school building in Atlanta.

Judge Whitman absorbed a local Telecast Editorial concerning the bombing and represented it as his feeling. The editorial comment was "It will be wasted if the reaction is simply a wave of indignation and voicing of concern that such useless, tragic action has marred our city."

On his own accord, the judge said "It is profoundly to be hoped that the guilty party or parties of the 'despicable act' will be found and tried and 'duly punished'."

Recalling a similar bombing of The Jewish Temple two years ago, Judge Whitman noted that the perpetrators guilty of that blast still remain at large, unapprehended and unpunished by law.

Whitman said flatly that "Prejudice, be it racial, religious or sectional, has no proper place or part in our American way of life."

In other areas, Judge Whitman told the grand jurors that "There are two local problems involving law violations which we now desire to bring to your particular attention; first, the illegal sale of mixed drinks in the city of Atlanta; and second, the so-called 'sit-in' operations which have plagued our community in recent months."

Regarding the sit-ins, Judge Whitman quickly declared that he was not concerned with the problems arising out of segregation and integration in racial relationships generally, nor was he "going to enter into any dissertations in respect of the controversial issues in that field."

Whitman said he "merely would undertake to charge you as to the law relating to our local situation and to make a few observations in connection therewith."

Whitman, in that part of his charge, pointed to the freedom of association laws and the laws governing the rights of private property. He further pointed to the 1960 Georgia anti-trespass law that was enacted during the midst of lunch counter desegregation movements elsewhere in the South.

The judge told the panel that they, as a Grand Jury, had no authority to initiate civil action on behalf of private property owners for injunction of damages on account of "illegal 'sit-ins'" and "unlawful interference with their businesses."

"However," the judge noted, "even though civil relief is not sought by private property owners, violators of the criminal laws should be prosecuted and punished."

Atlanta Ga.

"It is your duty," the judge told the grand jurors, "to make such investigation as may be necessary to determine whether you have reasonable grounds to believe that the law has been violated either by direct act or acts by an individual or individuals or pursuant to conspiracy with another or others, and also whether you have reasonable grounds to believe that an attempt or attempts at violations have been committed. If you so find, you will make presentment or presentments accordingly."

Going further the judge had this to say:

"It should be said that no longer is the sole issue between the misguided demonstrators and blind leaders on the one hand and the owners of private property engaged in lawful business in private enterprise on the other;

"The paramount issue is between the law and those who place themselves above the law and flaunt its mandates. Among other things, the strange doctrine is promulgat- ed that one may be the sole judge according to his own conscience whether a law is just and, therefore legal, and also determine for himself whether he will respect and obey the law and the rights of others. It would be a sad day indeed for such a doctrine to prevail."

As a final swipe, Judge Whitman said bruquely, "Courts, not the streets, are our tribunals of justice. What shall we say then?"

In other areas of the judge's charge, Whitman called for a probe of the sales of mixed drinks in Atlanta. He said that violators of laws regarding mixed drinks are subject to indictment by the grand jury.

Segregation Taking Toll, Mayor Asserts

The Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta, Ga.

Segregation in hotels, restaurants and other facilities is hurting Atlanta's development as a convention city and international center, Mayor Hartsfield declared Friday.

Sat. 1-7-61

"We are losing one convention after another," the mayor told the Northside Kiwanis Club, "simply because we cannot take a few Negroes in our hotels."

He said that in reply to those who want to make the new airport an "international airport," he has been saying "you've got to be international people before you have an international airport.

"We've got to make up our minds what we want to do about it," the mayor asserted.

Segregation questions, he continued "are going to loom heavily in the year to come, and it's come to the point where it hits the cash register and the city and national policy."

In every instance of desegregation, Hartsfield said, some people have predicted "riots, bloodshed and intermarriage"—when Negroes were added to the police force, when golf courses were desegregated and when segregation ended at the libraries and the airport restaurant.

"About nine-tenths of these things they predict never happen," he told the Kiwanians.

In other matters, Hartsfield predicted that the new Kennedy administration would take special interest in the problems of urban transit.

Expressways have proved an inadequate solution, he said, because "as fast as you build them, they get clogged up."

He predicted the time will come when government limits the number of single-passenger cars allowed to drive downtown.

The mayor made an appeal for support of proposed legislation to allow city employes to come under social security.

He said obtaining and keeping trained personnel is becoming increasingly difficult. Comparable county employes have far better retirement benefits, he declared.

Sit-In Truce Aids Atlanta's 'International City' Bid

ATLANTA (ANP) -- Atlanta may have moved a step closer in its announced bid to become an international city with the announcement last week that a group of leading merchants have agreed to end lunch counter segregation within a few months.

Mayor William B. Hartsfield, in a recent statement to Atlantans, said if the city wanted to fulfill its hopes of becoming a major convention city and have an international airport, Atlanta citizens would have to act like international people.

He said, in effect, that segregation is a costly system and that the practice stands in the way of Atlanta's aspirations for becoming an international metropolis.

SIGN SIT-IN TRUCE

Atlanta merchants and Negro leaders reached an agreement to end sit-in demonstrations in exchange for the promise by store operators to introduce lunch counter integration as soon as the Atlanta public school system is integrated, an event now scheduled for this fall by school authorities.

The lunch counter agreement was announced by Ivan Allen, Jr., president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, who said representatives of two major department stores and eleven chains of drug and variety stores had joined in the settlement.

Allen said the agreement calls for cessation of sit-ins and picketing at 75 stores, many of which have been closed because of the demonstrations, and operation of lunch counters in these places on a segregated basis for the time being.

VICTORY IN MOVEMENT

The action appeared to be a victory for the Atlanta segment of the widespread sit-in movement.

Also signing were Martin Luther King, Sr., father of the well-known integration leader, and Lonnie C. King, Negro student leader. He is not related to the M. L. Kings.

The statement came one day after the Georgia legislature adjourned for the year.

CITES UNIVERSITY INTEGRATION

The statement said "leading merchants have stated that it is their decision to carry out in lunch rooms and other facilities the same pattern as has been recognized and evidenced" by admission of two Negro students to the University of Georgia.

It cited also the decision of the Atlanta school board to comply with federal integration orders this fall and actions of the late Georgia General Assembly in repealing the state's massive resistance anti-segregation laws.

A. T. Walden, a Negro lawyer who served as special negotiator, said the agreement also that 500 or 600 Negroes who had lost jobs in stores affected by sit-ins would get them back where practicable.

Walden said setting of a "time certain" for desegregation was a factor in the acceptance of the agreement.

The agreement has the effect of putting additional emphasis on the school issue. On the other hand, chamber spokesmen said, it assured a calmer mood for school integration.

"The Negro leadership has stated that every effort will be made to eliminate all boycotts, reprisals, picketing and sit-ins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible," the statement said.

VOID KING'S SENTENCE

The statement was subscribed to by Rich's and Davison's department stores, by the Walgreen's, Jacobs, and Lane's drug chains, and by the Woolworth, McCrory, Grant, S. H. Kress, Kresge, H. L. Green and Newberry variety chains. Sears-Roebuck also signed.

In another development tending to ease racial tensions, the Georgia Court of Appeals voided a 12 month jail sentence given Martin Luther King, Jr., Negro integration leader, in a traffic case and ordered the case returned to the DeKalb county court for a lesser sentence. The voiding of the sentence against Martin Luther King, Jr. was based on a ruling that the DeKalb county court had exceeded statutory authority in imposing a 12 month sentence on King's plea of guilty to operating a car with an improper driver's lecense. The Court of Appeals said the maximum penalty is six months in jail plus a fine.

ATLANTA PACT ADOPTED TO END SIT-INS

Effective as Schools Are Integrated

Atlanta, March 7 [Special]—An agreement between Atlanta merchants and Negro leaders for an immediate end to lunch counter sit-in demonstrations in return for a promise of lunch counter integration within a few months was announced today.

In another development tending to ease racial tensions, the Georgia Court of Appeals voided a 12 month jail sentence given Martin Luther King Jr., Negro integration leader, in a traffic case and ordered the case returned to the De Kalb county court for a lesser sentence.

Join in Settlement

The lunch counter agreement was announced by Ivan Allen Jr., president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, who said representatives of two department stores and several chains of drug and variety stores had joined in the settlement.

On behalf of Negroes, the agreement bore the signatures of several Negro leaders, including Martin Luther King, Sr., and Lonnie C. King, a spokesman for Negro college students active in the sit-ins.

Allen said the agreement calls for cessation of sit-ins and picketing at 75 stores, many of which have been closed because of the demonstrations, and operation of lunch counters in these places on a segregated basis for the time being.

Linked to Schools

Store operators promised however to introduce lunch counter integration as soon as the Atlanta public school system is integrated, an event now scheduled for this fall by school authorities.

The voiding of the sentence against Martin Luther King Jr. was based on a ruling that the De Kalb county court had exceeded statutory authority in imposing a 12 month sentence on King's plea of guilty to operating a car with an improper driver's license. The Court of Appeals said the maximum penalty is six months in jail plus a fine.

Atlanta Truce OKd by Stores And Negroes

ATLANTA, Ga., Mar. 8 (AP).—An agreement designed to tie desegregation of lunch counters at major downtown stores to integration of Atlanta public schools has bee nreached by downtown merchants and Negro leaders.

The agreement, announced yesterday, was hailed by white and Negro leaders as signaling the end of a year of sit-in demonstrations and picketing which have resulted in the arrest of a number of Negroes.

There was no immediate word as to whether the agreement will affect State charges facing sit-in demonstrators arrested for violating the State's antitrespass law.

Announcing accord on the issue were Ivan Allen, jr., president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and A. T. Walden, veteran Negro attorney who interrupted his recent retirement to participate in the negotiations.

Under the agreement, lunch counters, closed as a result of the sit-in demonstrations, will be reopened immediately on a segregated basis. Dining and other facilities will be desegregated within a reasonable time after desegregation of the Atlanta public schools.

The Atlanta School Board is under Federal Court order to integrate the 11th and 12th grades next fall.

The Negro leaders pladged to make every effort to end immediately lunch counter sit-in demonstrations, picketing and boycotts of downtown stores. Mr. Walden said the merchants also agreed to rehire where practicable the 500 to 600 Negroes laid off as a result of closing lunch counters and the boycott.

Mayor William B. Hartsfield said the agreement represented large concessions on both sides and said it "puts us all on our mettle in seeing that the school integration next September is brought about without any disorder and without outside interference."

He added a warning that outside rabble-rousers will not be tolerated.

"We have heard," Mayor Hartsfield said, "that the professional rabble-rousers around the South are planning to converge on Atlanta in September and we want to warn them now that we will tolerate no rabble-rousing, no disorder and will proceed to handle it with a firm hand and sternness. The time has come for these professional rabble-rousers to be put in their place and if it is necessary, Atlanta will do it in September."

Capitol Sit-In Curb Passes Senate, 30-0

The Georgia Senate Wednesday approved a bill which could prevent the recurrence of Negro sit-in demonstrations at the Capitol.

The Senate passed by a 30-0 vote a bill which limits the use of the Capitol Building, outside of its usual functions, to "refreshment stands" for state legislators and their guests.

Sen. Gordon Knox Jr., administration floor leader, said the amendment was being offered "for reasons known to all."

The cafeteria in the Capitol basement was closed follwing the sit-in demonstrations there.

In other actions the Senate passed five other bills and indefinitely postponed a resolution which opposed the proposed merger of the Atlantic Coastline and Seaboard Air Line railroads.

One bill passed by the Senate is aimed at prosecution of persons who organize juvenile theft rings.

The bill approved by a 38-0 vote allows the prosecution of stolen goods receivers to proceed where the thief is under 17 years of age or is insane.

The Senate approved by a 30-3 vote a bill to allow the Georgia Real Estate Investment Board to make more loans. The bill allows the board to refund loan application fees where loans are denied.

Other bills the Senate approved would put employes of the State Board of Corrections under the Employes Retirement System and permit retired employes to continue making payments into the system.

Meanwhile, the Senate Rules Committee cleared for action a bill which would provide for the purging of voter registration rolls every three years for failing to vote. The state law now provides for purging every two years.

Introduced in the Senate were bills to crack down on fraudulent advertising and one to permit corporations to negotiate loans above $2,500 without any restriction on interest rates.

The advertising measure provides fines of $200 to $1,000 or 20 days' imprisonment for using "untrue, deceptive or fraudulent" facts in advertising.

The bill would not apply to radio or television stations or newspaper and magazine publishers who use the advertisements "in good faith without knowledge" of their false content.

Sen. Howard Overby of Gainesville, author of the bill on corporation loans, said large corporations are sometimes willing to pay higher interest rates than are allowed by statutes when they need large sums of money.

1,500 Stage Ga. 'Sit-In' March

ATLANTA — (UPI) — Negro students marched on downtown Atlanta Wednesday and threw up picket lines in front of stores in a demonstration marking the first anniversary of sit-ins at segregated southern lunch counters.

A student leader, Lonnie King Jr., estimated the number of demonstrators at 1,500. Police gave no estimate of the number.

The group marched into the downtown area from the Morris Brown college campus a mile away.

Picket lines were strewn in front of stores covering a six-block area. Signs bearing "Jim Crow Must Go," and similar messages were carried by more than 100 demonstrators

Police said there were no disorders and none of the students were arrested.

ATTEND RALLY

The group, after picketing less than an hour, returned to the college to attend a rally in the school chapel.

King, recognized leader of the group, gave a short speech in which he called for renewed demonstrations.

King said boycotting and picketing of Atlanta stores was "effective" during the Xmas shopping period. But he said boycott activity "has slackened off" during the past few weeks.

"With Easter coming up," King said, "now is the time to revive our efforts. We can hold out longer than they can."

The sit-in movement began at an F. W. Woolworth store in Greensboro, N. C., Feb. 1, 1960.

Atlanta Mayor William B. Hartsfield indicated he considered Wednesday's activity merely a continuation of routine demonstrations which had been conducted on a day-to-day basis for the past month.

However, store owners said there was an unusual amount of parading and obviously a great deal more demonstrators than in the past.

By shortly after noon, long lines of hundreds of Negroes each began forming in informal parade fashion down sidewalks as the Negroes mustered their ranks for a return march to the campuses of a Negro university center here.

Rev. A. D. King Out On Bond In Traffic Case

ATLANTA, Ga. — (SNS)

The Rev. A. D. King, of Atlanta and pastor of a Newnan, Ga. church was lodged in Fayette County jail Saturday on a charge of driving under the influence of alcohol, the State Patrol said Tuesday.

Arresting Patrol Officers C. N. Hendrix and B. G. Williams stated that Rev. King admitted that he had been "drinking beer".

Trooper C. M. Stallings stated that Rev. King was arrested April 26 in Coweta County on charges of failing to report an accident and losing ocntrol of a vehicle.

Rev. King was later released from his latest charge when his father posted a $600 property bond.

Negro Integrationists Plan Largest Atlanta Meeting In History On Sunday At Jail

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Negro leaders of sit-in attacks on segregated lunch counters have called for the largest meeting of Negroes in Atlanta history Sunday to bolster the morale of students and ministers arrested for sit ins.

The mass meeting is to be held at the Fulton County jail where 77 students and eight ministers are being held. They have refused to make bond of $100 each after being arrested on charges of violating the state's anti-trespass law.

Plans for the Sunday rally at the jail were announced Wednesday night by the Rev. William Holmes Borders at a meeting called to demonstrate adult support of the sit-in demonstrations. An estimated 1600 were present at the Warren Memorial Methodist church.

Terming the anti-trespass law unjust the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., chairman of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference told the meeting the students and ministers were justified in violating any law they believe to be unjust.

He said that by going to jail the Negroes also are dramatizing the injustices which Negroes undergo in the United States and avoiding a costly legal battle to repeal the anti-trespass law.

King also warned that Georgia Negroes will not accept token integration of public schools on a permanent basis, declaring. "You can n more have token integration than you han have token democracy."

The eight ministers, seven Negro and one white, were arrested Wednesday when they took seats in the restaurant of the Terminal railroad station and refused to leave.

The Rev. Otis Moss Jr., 25, pastor of the Providence Southeast Baptist Church, who served as spokesman for the group, said they would remain in jail with the students already held for trial in Fulton County Criminal Court.

Moss said the group felt "compelled to join a protest against a sick, vicious and undemocratic society that condones segregation and discrimination."

The Rev. Ross W. Anderson who gave his address as Washington, D. C., and said he was a missionary - at - large from the biracial Koinonio Farms near Americus, Ga., told booking officers who asked his race:

"Just put me down as a human being."

Mrs. Clarence Jordan of Koinonia said Anderson is white and no longer is a member of the farm.

Five more Negro students were arrested Wednesday at Sumter, S. C., after a scuffle with police who broke up a march of 300 Negro students on Sumter's Main Street.

The students formed at Morris College, a Baptist supported institution about six blocks from the downtown area, and had marched only two blocks when Police Chief E. E. McIntosh advised them to disband.

When the leaders failed to halt police moved in and a reporter said five of the marchers were wrestled into police cars. The parade broke up after the arrests

Demonstration At Jail Called Off

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta Ga.
Jan 22 1961

A scheduled rally to support jailed sit-ins here has been called off after a "re-evaluation" of the situation, The Rev. William Holmes Borders, chairman of the Student-Adult Liaison Committee disclosed Saturday afternoon.

Rev. Borders said the meeting will be held instead today at Wheat Street Baptist Church at 3 p.m. with the Rev. B. Joseph as speaker.

The meeting was called off because the sheriff of Fulton County had indicated a mass rally could not be lawfully held on prison grounds, the minister said.

And official statement from the organization said:

"We have reconsidered the proposal to hold a mass prayer meeting at the Fulton County Jail on Sunday, February 19 after consultation with members of our committee whose concurrence was secured and due hereby cancel the said mass prayer meeting at the Fulton County Jail.

"We reaffirm our rights to hold such a meeting and we believe it is in keeping with our fundamental aims to pray always for guidance and deliverance from injustice and denial of human dignity.

"However, because of the urgent appeal to us by county and city officials, charged with the responsibility of maintaining law and order, and because we have never had the slightest desire to cause undue racial tension, we therefore, have decided not to hold the mass prayer meeting at Fulton County Jail as planned, but it will be held at Wheat Street Baptist Church at 3 p.m."

The Rev. William Holmes Borders, chairman of the committee had said earlier Friday afternoon the group would "reevaluate" its plans at a meeting during the evening. He said there has been "some mention" of the jailed students making bond following the Sunday rally.

Out at the Fulton County jail, Chief Jailer Carl Smithwick, Sheriff Ralph Grimes, Atlanta Police Chief Herbert T. Jenkins and Warden Carl Mills all advised against the demonstration.

Smithwick said "There is some tension already in the jail, and I feel that it's unwise for the demonstration to take place because we're overcrowded."

The reports of a possible Klan counter - demonstration came from Hartsfield. He said his main concern was for the security of the jail, which is a part of our system of law enforcement and as such is entitled to the same respect as the verdicts of the courts."

Deputy Appointments Frowned Upon

Atlanta Daily World p. 1
Atlanta Jour. Sat. 3-4-61

Grand Jury Hits Sit-Ins; Court Draws 39 More State Accusations

By STANLEY S. SCOTT

Thirty-nine additional criminal court accusations were processed Friday, March 3, against college sit-in demonstrators, accused of violating Act 497 of the General Assembly of Georgia, approved February 18, 1960.

Asst. Solicitor James L. Webb announced Thursday the filing of 26 accusations to swell the total to 65 students being charged with breaking the anti-trespass law.

The Thursday accusations were signed by H. J. Sprayberry, owner of Sprayberry's cafeteria on Peachtree St., scene of the first sit-ins last month. Affadavits were signed yesterday by Don Carlos operator of Denny's Grill, 66 Forsyth St., S. W., where students attempted to integrate eating facilities February 8 and 9.

John L. Kelley, Criminal Court solicitor meets weekly with the criminal court judges to draw up a calendar of cases set for trial the following week. It is expected that the sit-in cases will be heard within the next two weeks.

The approaching sit-in trials will mark the first time that the newly enacted Georgia anti-trespass law has been tested.

Affidavits were drawn up Friday against the following students in connection with demonstrations at Denny's Grill: Frank Smith, Jr., Charles Williams, John Alton Bryant, Julian W. Blackshear, Ralph L. Stephens, Eric A. Winston, Roland L. Turpin, Roy C. Crittendon, Wilbur M. Byrd, Johnny Bullock, Jr., Alton H. Stephens, Patricia Ann Tate, Bradley F. Watkins, L. Mae Sherman, Edith Simmons, Bozalene Smith, Harry J. Spencer, Barbara L. Middlebrooks, Florence Miller, Prince Martin, Jr., Louis H. Nevett, Nazetta O'Neal, Benjamin A. Hardeman, Joe E. Johnson, Vivian P. Handsford.

Others named were: Mary Lee Gholston, Adolphus Lee Campbell, William F. Cummings, Vivian Calhoun, Delores Aldridge, Marshall A. Barrett, Edward Baldwin, Marvin R. Anderson, Wilbert Dixon, Jacqueline Brown, Rebecca Brown, Patricia Simon, James J. Joyner, Willie J. Stewart.

GRAND JURY HITS SIT-INS AND DEPUTY SHERIFF SELECTIONS

The January-February Fulton County Superior Court Grand Jury released presentments Friday voiced against sit-in demonstrators and the manner in which Fulton County Deputy Sheriff's are selected.

Atlanta Jour.

The jurors stated, "This Grand Jury deplores the continuation of actions calculated to result in a violation of the law by an element of our community. We are not concerned here with the issues of segregation or integration, but rather with the serious consequences inherent in any flagrant and continued violation of law, or acts intended to bring about a violation of law. We recognized that any citizen has the right to disagree and demonstrate his opposition to any law or social custom through peaceful means. Efforts to gain equal rights within the law, however, are not consistent with the breaking of laws; nor is the violation of private property to gain these ends justifiable. To do so is to reason that only those laws with which we agree are to be supported, and that all others may be broken with impunity."

The Fulton Grand Jury further stated, "We are constantly impressed with the need throughout our community for a greater respect for law and order and the due process of law. It would appear to us that local dissident groups do a disservice to their cause and reflect upon the maturity and responsibility of their leadership by their encouragement of a disregard for law."

In disagreeing with the present method of appointing deputies, the jurors stated, "While more restraint appears to have been used in the appointment of deputies by the sheriff since January 1, 1961, this jury feels that some individuals are still being appointed who merely profess a need to carry a pistol. As pointed out by the September-October grand jury, gun carrying licenses may be obtained from the Ordinary.

The title of deputy sheriff implies a certain degree of authority. We feel that the general public assumes that so-called "special" deputies are vested with authority, and we are concerned that unjustifiable appointments tend to lessen respect for our professional law enforcement officers."

GEORGIA

LUNCH COUNTER
SAVANNAH, GEORGIA

To Rule On Savannah Sit-Ins Within A Month

ATLANTA, Ga. — (SNS) — The Georgia Court of Appeals is expected to make a ruling within a month or two regarding the appeals of five Negro sit-in demonstrators arrested in Savannah under the Georgia's 1960 trespass law.

The arguments in the case were heard by the Court of Appeal Judges here Thursday. They were faced with the basic question of whether a store owner may discriminate on the basis of race.

The state attorneys conceded that Savannah merchants had discriminated in refusing to serve Negroes, but they further argued that the merchants had that right.

The attorneys for the demonstrators however, contended that the 1960 trespass law is invalid because it is being, they said, used solely against Negroes.

The five demonstrators who are the subjects of the appeal were arrested in Savannah after they declined store managers requests to leave the premises. They were fined $100 each after conviction in Savannah. They were represented in the appeals court by Attorney E. H. Gadsden.

STATE ACTION

The state attorneys, led by Deputy Asst. Atty. Gen. Sylvan A. Garfunkel, argued that discrimination was made before the state stepped in. "What the state was doing," he said, "was arresting someone who was trespassing."

Garfunkel cited several federal court rulings upholding the right of a store owner to exclude Negroes.

But Attorney Gadsden said the Savannah demonstrators did not enter a store or restaurant which excluded Negroes, but were customers at stores which "only have discriminatory practice a t lunch counters.

Gadsden said the demonstrators' appeal was "not an attempt to make any person do business with anyone but to prohibit the state from punishing an act which is not in itself illegal."

He further argued that the 1960 trespass law "does not mention race, but that is only due to the ingenuity of the Legislature."

A decision on the case may be a month or two away, according to reports.

The court also heard appeals of two Savannah demonstrators who were arrested under an unlawful-assembly law.

Attoneys for the demonstrators argued that there was not evidence the two had assembled to commit an unlawful act. The state's attorney argued that the demonstrators knew their presence would cause the shut- down of the lunch counter and therefore had gathered for the purpose of disturbing the peace.

Court Confirms Convictions In Georgia Sit-Ins

Atlanta — The conviction of Negro sit-down demonstrators at Savannah were affirmed recently by the Georgia Court of Appeals.

Twenty-two were fined $100 each under a 1960 George act aimed specifically at such demonstrations. It makes it a misdemeanor to disobey an order of the owner to leave a place of business.

Counsel for the Negroes attacked the law as racially biased.

The appeals court said the only point at issue in this prosecution was whether the evidence justified the lower court verdict. It hald that the evidence was ample.

Ten were convicted under an unlawful assembly law. Their counsel had argued before the Court of Appeals that there was no evidence that they had assembled to commit an unlawful act.

The court, however, leaned toward the argument of the states' attorney that the Negroes knew their presence would cause a lunch counter shutdown and therefore had gathered for the purpose of disturbing the peace.

Walkout Wave In Savannah Slows

SAVANNAH, Ga. (UPI)—Threats of possible fines or imprisonment for parents appeared Thursday to have stemmed the wave of protests which threatened to empty the classrooms of every Negro high school in Chatham County.

Student and NAACP leaders had predicted that the number of Negro pupils not in school would number at least 3,500 by Thursday.

But nearly all of those who had walked out of Beach Senior and Beach Junior high schools returned to class and the protest never got off the ground at another.

All of the students were still out at Sol C. Johnson High School, where the boycott started when word got out that the Chatham County board of education was not renewing the contract of the school's popular principal, Harvard educated Al Cheatham.

But there were only about 10 per cent out at the two Beach schools and a scattered handful elsewhere for a total of about 1,400 — barely 40 per cent of the predicted number.

HEEDING WARNING

Benjamin Clark, the 17-year-old Johnson High junior who has spearheaded the protest with N. A. A. C. P. guidance, insisted that it would pick up momentum Friday. But Thursday's return to classes indicated Negro parents were heeding a warning by Sol. Gen. Andrew J. Ryan, Jr., that they would be liable for $100 fines or 30-day jail terms on truancy charges if the children stayed out of school.

The Johnson High parents were scheduled to meet Thursday night to talk the matter over. They were called together by Jose Williams, prominent Negro chemist. Williams also invited top city, county and school officials but none of them was expected to attend.

Williams charged that the situation worsened when the board of education allegedly "demanded that teachers of Sol Johnson call every parent and tell them to return their children to school." He said the parents responded by calling each other to pay no attention to the teachers' calls.

State Board of Education member Paul Stone of Waynesboro said in Atlanta that Chatham County was losing money because of the boycott and said he favored invoking the compulsory school attendance law calling for the fines and possible jail sentences.

NO JURISDICTION

Stone said that although state authorities have no jurisdiction in the matter, he favored local level action to prevent a huge loss of state funds for the Chatham County school system as a result of the boycott. Stone explaied that state school allocations are based on average daily attedance and the boycott could cause a sizable reduction n the county's allocation for next year.

Ryan held a conference with a special grand jury committee late Wednesday and then issued his warning. County School Supt. Leon McCormac added a warning of his own when he indicated in a statement that some Johnson High seniors might not graduate.

The battle between the all-Negro student body and the all - white board of educaton erupted Monday with the picketing of the board's headquarters by 60 Negro students. Twenty-three students and an adult minister were arrested and 21 of the students bound over to city court on charges of unlawful assembly and interfering with police duties.

Basis of the picketing was a protest against the board's dismissal of the 33-year-old Cheatham.

Cheatham resigned his $8,300-a-year job immediately instead of waiting until the end of the school year and his former students walked out of school.

REASONS NOT ANNOUNCED

Neither school officials nor Cheatham have commented on reasons behind the dismissal. But W. W. Law, state president of the N. A. A. C. P., said it was because the board considered Cheatham "too progressive" and because the Negro principal had been active in an organization which encouraged and guided Negro voting.

The Savannah Morning News on Thursday in an editorial accused the NAACP of "antagonizing the situation." The editorial charged " . . . the NAACP action . . . is shameful. Even more shameful is the NAACP effort to extend the student boycott beyond the boundaries of the school involved."

Some of the Johnson High students took advantage of their self-imposed school holiday Thursday to swing into action on another racial front. They started staging sit-in demonstrations at Savannah 10 cent stores about noon. Observers said groups of six sought service at segregated lunch counter miles to the south, it also would serve an entire region in west Georgia, State School Supt. Claude Purcell said.

Previous plans had called for placing the transmitter in the immediate Columbus area. Purcell said under that plan the station would serve little but the Columbus and Muscogee County schools.

The board named a delegation to seek the needed $200,000 from Gov. Vandiver. The board must certify in its application to the FCC that it has necessary funds to go through with the project.

No End Seen in Savannah

Boycott Enters 57th Week

By Trezzvant W. Anderson
(Courier Roving Reporter)

SAVANNAH, Ga. — With no apparent end in sight for the battle between the Savannah NAACP and boycotted white downtown merchants, the boycott has headed into its 57th week.

Easter mass meeting was featured by a speech by John F. Davis, president of the New Jersey State Youth Conference of the NAACP and a Lincoln University student leader. He was introduced by Jesse Blackshear, a local youth leader, as a great freedom fighter.

Mr. Davis assured the audience that the Northern Negro is behind the Southern Negro's movement. He deplored the fact that President Kennedy's priority bills did not include a civil rights bill and that the President could find but one Negro in America who was qualified for a cabinet post.

Mr. Davis urged Negroes to go to the polls and make his presence felt that way.

■

PRESIDENT Westley W. Law told of some "sit-in" incidents, one of which led to the first integrated use of the lunch counter at the H. L. Green store. At that store, three days before Easter, Roscoe White, a sit-inner, was sitting at the counter, when one of a group of white airmen bought him a coke and Roscoe sat at the counter and drank it.

At W. T. Grant's store, Mr. Law said, a young sit-inner, Gwendolyn Colbert, was struck, and white persons testified that the white woman accused of striking her did not hit her. Judge Stella Aiken refused to issue a warrant.

Mr. Law deplored the fact that some Negroes are still buying downtown in spite of the appeals of the NAACP to stop buying segregation.

Meanwhile, Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren was burned in effigy here, allegedly by White Citizens Council members, who also angrily charge Mayor Malcolm Maclean with holding secret meetings with Negro leaders.

Atlanta Sit-In Victory Predicted By January

Chicago Defender Chicago, Ill.
1-(7-13)-61
P. 9

Lunch counters in Atlanta department and variety stores will be opened to all citizens in January, a leader of the Committee On Appeal for Human Rights in the Georgia capital, told the Defender while on a visit to Chicago.

The youth leader, Kenneth Crooks, jr., Fort Walley, Ga., who is president of the graduate student body at A.U. said that efforts by liberal Mayor Hartsfield of Atlanta are directed toward a January break through. Crooks and Miss Yvonne Tucker, 18, a pretty coed who spent four days in jail after a sit-in, are here to raise funds to mimeograph and mail several thousands of letters in answer to queries about the student movement from all over the U. S.

Joseph H. Kline, jr., Chairman, Chicago Youth Committee on Civil Rights, interviewed with the southern students, said while his group also needs funds, it would help the Atlantans raise money. Contact has also been made with the American Friends Service Committee which has expressed interest.

The students praised the work in Atlanta of the Student-Adult Liaison Committee composed of student leaders, A.U. president Rufus Clement, and prominent insurance and real estate executives. The Rev. William Holmes Borders is chairman. Crooks said the Committee performed an invaluable function of bringing together leadership from the nearly 7,000 A.U. students and over 100,000 Negroes in the city.

After their expected success in helping to open the lunch counters, the student movement expects to work on opening up recreational facilities such as skating rinks, bowling alleys, etc.; and also to seek wider job opportunities for Negroes in Atlanta.

During the sit-ins the students were divided into four groups: those who would picket only ("There were thousands of those," Crooks added); those who would picket and sit-in but move when asked; those who would sit-in and if need be, go to jail, and those who would sit in, go to jail and refuse bail bond.

Miss Tucker, one of the toughminded fourth group, said the jail matrons were "nice, but the food was bad." Her parents were proud of the stand she took, she said. The Spelman junior is a psychology major.

Crooks, a senior at A.U.'s Graduate School of Business, said the Atlanta police have been, on the whole, fairminded and have afforded the demonstrators protection from violence by whites.

Crooks is staying with his sister, Mrs. Cynthia Carpenter of Maywood, and Miss Tucker with Miss Gladiola Hardy, 9375 Stewart st.

Contributions may be sent to "The Committee On Appeal for Human Rights or "Sit-Ins," Atlanta University Center, Atlanta, Ga.

Prolonged Sit-in Held In Drugstore

The Atlanta Journal Constitution
Jan 19, 1961

A small group of Negro students—who brought lunches and college textbooks with them—staged a prolonged sit-in demonstration Saturday in a downtown Atlanta drugstore which had quietly reopened its lunch counter.

The Negroes—student leader Lonnie C. King among them—arrived at the Lane-Rexall store at Peachtree and Ellis Streets shortly before 9 a.m. Saturday. The counter was closed and they were not served. They were still there five hours later and showed no signs of leaving.

One of the students said semester final examinations are currently in progress at the Atlanta University System and the drugstore provided a good place to study for them.

The students announced a week ago that they are currently limiting picketing activities to Friday afternoons and Saturday. However, a check Saturday afternoon of stores under the boycott seige turned up no signs of picket activity.

But a small group of robed Ku Klux Klansmen turned up downtown Saturday. They were distributing handbills announcing a segregation meeting scheduled for Jan. 28 at 8 p.m. at the Tower Theater.

Drug Counter Closes When Students Appear

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Jan 19, 1961

A drugstore lunch counter that had quietly reopened for white customers only was closed again when four Negro college students staged a sit-in demonstration at the downtown drug counter Monday, it was revealed Wednesday.

The youths entered the Lane-Rexall drugstore at Peachtree and Ellis streets just before 2:30 p. m. and took seats at the counter, where waitresses were busy serving seated white customers.

Signs proclaiming "fountain closed" were immediately posted by store managers who ceased service at the eatery and allowed no more food customers—Negro or white—to take seats.

The Lane-Rexall store was one of several downtown stores which were hit by demonstrators last October and November in efforts to end lunch counter segregation in Atlanta.

For a while, the Rexall store tried to keep its counters open for business by stopping operations whenever Negroes asked for service. But, it began giving take-out service only in mid-December and kept it up until recently when they quietly resumed lunch counter service on an all-white basis.

Legality Of Trespass Laws Used Against Sit-Ins Hit

The Louisiana Weekly
New Orleans, La.
Jan 21-61
P. 34

ATLANTA---(ANP)---A basic question raised by sit-ins—whether a store owner may discriminate on the basis of race was placed squarely before the Georgia Court of Appeals here last week.

The same legal question is pending before the Virginia Supreme Court and the United States Supreme Court.

The state conceded that Savannah merchants had practiced discrimination in refusing service to Negroes but argued that the merchants had that right.

Attorneys for the demonstrators argued, however, that Georgia's 1960 trespass law was being used solely against Negroes and that the arrests were therefore invalid.

Being argued were the cases of five sit-in demonstrators arrested in Savannah under the trespass law, convicted and fined $100 each.

The five were arrested after they declined store managers requests to leave the premises.

Negro attorneys contend the arrest was use of state power to enforce segregation.

But Deputy Assistant Atty. Gen. Sylvan A. Garfunkel cited several federal court rulings upholding the right of a store owner to exclude Negroes.

But Negro Attorney E. H. Gadsden contended that there is no clear precedent for these cases.

The Savannah Negroes did not enter a store or restaurant which excluded Negroes, he stated, but were customers at stores which "only have discriminatory practice at the lunch counters."

Gadsden said the Negroes' appeal was "not an attempt to make any person do business with anyone but to prohibit the state from punishing an act which is not in itself illegal."

Gadsden argued that the 1960 trespass law "does not mention race, but that is only due to the ingenuity of the Legislature.

A decision may be a month or two away.

Orders Ga. Probe Of Sit-Ins

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Ill.
1-(21-27)-61
P. 9

ATLANTA — (ANP) — Fulton Superior Court Judge George P. Whitman, sr., charged the January term grand jury last week to direct particular attention to the sit-in demonstrations in Atlanta.

About the sit-in operation, the judge cited law cases which held that property owners had the right to exclude persons from their property, that those who refused to leave were guilty of a misdemeanor, that their conspirators in such action should be treated as "principals."

Judge Whitman said the grand jury has no right to initiate civil actions on behalf of property owners, but should see that violators of criminal laws are prosecuted.

The judge sharply rebuked any attitude through which a person decides by his own conscience whether a law is just and should be respected and obeyed.

The judge condemned the bombing of the English Avenue school.

Negroes at Rally Cheer Call for More Support

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Mon. 2-26-61

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Several hundred adult Negroes rallying at the Wheat Street Baptist Church Sunday in support of the student sit-in movement cheered a demand for a speed-up in ending discrimination.

"Today is no time for hanging heads and dragging feet," declared the Rev. B. Joseph Johnson, one of eight ministers who spent a day in jail in sympathy with the students.

"Time alone does not solve problems," Johnson asserted. "Men work out difficult problems.

"The time is right when people get right . . . I do not share the view of those who say 'wait.' I am not a student of gradualism. The time is now."

CONTRIBUTE DOLLARS

Negroes in the audience, almost all adults, lined up to contribute several hundred dollars to support the student movement.

Originally, the Negroes had planned a march on the county jail to demonstrate their support of the students.

They were persuaded by pleas from Sheriff Ralph Grimes and other county officials that such a demonstration might upset other prisoners at the jail.

Fulton County Commissioner Jim Aldredge issued a statement Sunday afternoon praising the move as an act "for the best interests of all our citizens."

STUDENTS REPRESENTED

The students did not attend the movement but were represented by Miss Herschelle Sullivan, co-chairman of the Student-Adult Liaison Committee, who brought greetings from 87 jailed students.

"They say they will stay 'until'," Miss Sullivan declared.

She added that students would have preferred marching on the jail but "yielded to wiser judgment."

In his speech, Johnson called for "racial solidarity" to support the students.

"In the words of Georgia's most notorious race-baiter, Roy Harris, these students have guts," he asserted.

"They are in jail," he continued, "because they want to enjoy freedom.

SHOW THE WAY

"The new Negro," Johnson continued, "will not rest until all the indignities on the American scene are eradicated. Our young folks today are saying: 'Don't tell me so much. Just show me the way.'

"This is not a Borders movement. This is not a Lonnie King movement. This is not a Miss Sullivan movement. This is not a B. Joseph Johnson movement. This is a movement for Negroes throughout the Southland to hasten the day when we will enjoy our constitutional rights as Americans," Johnson said.

REFERRED TO LEADERS

(He referred to the Rev. William Holmes Borders of the What Street Church and to student leader Lonnie King as well as himself and Miss Sullivan.)

Borders told the group that "we feel the use to which this (trespass) law has been put is unconstitutional, undemocratic and un-Christian.

"This trespasse law and the use to which is being put needs federal testing. We are not going to tear this town up. We are going to build it up," Borders declared.

Besides Johnson, two other ministers who had been jailed, Walter McCall and Roosevelt Moore, spoke to the group.

Motion Filed For Continuance Of Sit-In Cases

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Fri. 3-10-61

A motion for continuance in the sit-in cases scheduled to be heard Tuesday, March 14, in Fulton County Criminal Court was filed Friday by Atty. D. L. Hollowell, counsel for the defendants.

The 26 sit-in demonstrators were due to be tried in Judge Charles Bruce's court next week to test Georgia's anti - trespass law. They have been accused by H. J. Sprayberry, owner of Sprayberry's cafeteria on Peachtree St., of violating Act 497 of the General Assembly of Georgia.

Atty. Hollowell asked the court for a continuance of the cases on the following grounds: (1) There are 26 defendants listed on the calendar of Tuesday, March 14, 1961 for trial before the Honorable Judge Charles G. Bruce; that the accusations in said cases have only reecntly been prepared and only came into the possession of counsel on or about March 6, 1961. (2) That counsel is scheduled to be on trial in another judicial circuit on Tuesday, March 14, 1961; that said case has been pending for several months.

Hollowell further stated in his petition that, "Because of the volume of cases (26 in all), counsel has not had sufficient time in which to prepare objections to the accusations, nor will there be sufficient time to prepare said objections or to make adequate preparation for trial of said cases prior to March 14, 1961.

John I. Kelley, Criminal Court Solicitor, stated that he met recently with a group of Negro leaders to discuss the trials in view of the Chamber of Commerce statement of agreement ending Atlanta sit-ins over lunch counters. Kelley stated that the men were at his office in an informal gathering Thursday.

26 Sit-Ins To Face Trials Here Tuesday

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Fri. 3-10-61

Twenty-six Fulton County Criminal Court accusations processed against Atlanta college sit-in demonstrators last week have been filed on the Criminal Court calendar, with the cases set to be tried March 14, in Judge Charles Bruce's court.

The students are accused of violating Act 497 of the General Assembly of Georgia, approved February 18, 1960.

Accusations accusing students of breaking the anti-trespass law were signed by H. J. Sprayberry, owner of Sprayberry's cafeteria on Peachtree St., scene of sit-ins this year.

Thirty-nine additional cases were signed by Don Carlos, operator of Denny's Grill, 66 Forsyth St., S. W., where students attempted to integrate eating facilities February 8-9.

The approaching sit-in trials will mark the first time that the Georgia anti-trespass law has been tested.

More than 70 sitin demonstrators were arrested this year in downtown eating facilities, protesting the practice of segregation.

Several ministers and doctors were also arrested on charges that they violated the Georgia anti-trespass law.

Asst. Solicitor James L. Webb announced that it is doubtful that complaints will be filed against the ministers and doctors.

The students arrested refused $100 bail and stayed in jail for more than two weeks. A petition was allegedly passed through portions of the Negro community with adults signing, declaring their support of the student movement. Students then accepted bail and were released from jail.

SIT-IN CASES TO BE TRIED

Sit-in cases to be tried Tuesday include the following students: Harold Andrews, William Beasley, Gene Edward Flowers, Marsha Goodwin, Leon Greene, Suzon Grimes, Wilford Hepburn, Frank Holloway, Richard Hope, Lonnie Cecil King, Jr., Harold Middlebrook, Ralph M. Moore, Daniel Mitchell, Ernest Moore, Charles Person, Johnnie Price, William Robinson, Charles Smith, E. Christine Sparks, Herschelle Sullivan, Lenora Taitt, Solomon Taylor, Yvonne Tucker, Leroy Washington, Robert Y. Watley, Laurine Weaver.

Sit-Ins Cited As Awakening Force In U. S.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Va.
Sat. 3-11-61

ATLANTA, Ga. —The student sit - in movement has accomplished more than people think, more than have 10 years of legislation, in that it has reawakened older Negroes and stirred the consciences of people, M. Carl Holman told an Atlanta University center Town Meeting last week.

The other members of the panel, which was assessing the successes, failures, and prospects of the movement, agreed with the editor of the Atlanta Inquirer. Lonnie King, chairman of the Committee on the Appeal for Human Rights, said that the stuents had disturbed the complacence of the "black bourgeoisie" and aroused the consciences of the Negro middle - class Margaret Long, columnist for the Atlanta Journal,, said that not many white people have avenues to say what they mean, but that the movement was causing them to think and, by taking thought, to add cubits, to their stature.

If segregation does not crumble, there will be many more years of the movement, Mr. King said, noting that the white man can stand years of litigation, but not direct action.

38a 1961

GEORGIA

JULY 1961
SAVANNAH- LUNCH COUNTER
SAVANNAH RESUMES DOWNTOWN SHOPPING

Savannah Resumes Downtown Shopping

The Louisiana Weekly

SAVANNAH, Ga. - This city's 60,000 Negro citizens began shopping in 18 downtown stores this week after an absence of 15 months, marking a high point in NAACP history here.

The "no buying" drive, sponsored by the NAACP, was launched in March of last year after several Negro students had been arrested for staging sit-ins against segregated lunch counters. These counters have now been integrated.

A citizens committee, appointed by Mayor Malcolm Maclean, negotiated with NAACP officials under leadership of W. W. Law, president of the local and state NAACP units. Mr. Law also served on the Association's National Board of Directors. A settlement opening the lunch counters to all customers was agreed upon.

Mrs. Mercedes Wright, co-chairman of the "Committee for Withholding Retail Patronage" reported that the Negro community is "extremely happy" and that 3,000 attended the victory mass meeting at St. Phillip's AME Church last week.

The 15-month NAACP drive in this 228 year old seaport city, the population of which is one-third Negro, has had many by-products:

-Negro voter registration is climbing and now stands at 12,500.

-Two Negro bus drivers have been hired for the first time.

-Jim Crow signs have been removed from buses.

-NAACP members have seated themselves in the front of buses without incident, thereby encouraging the rest of the Negro community to follow suit.

-City park facilities have been opened on a non-segregated basis following arrest of seven Negroes for playing basketball in previously all-white Macon Park. This action followed an NAACP petition of protest.

-Rev. Oliver W. Holmes, NAACP official (uncle of Hamilton E. Holmes, first Negro to enroll at the University of Georgia) was named by the city council to a five man park commission.

-One downtown variety store has been closed and two men's shops have moved out of the main shopping district, although both said their actions had nothing to do with the NAACP withholding drive.

-The Cloverdale, Ghana and Springfield Park segregated housing developments for Negroes are begging for tenants.

38a 1961

Five Arrested At Albany Terminal

Albany's Bus Depot became th center of attraction Wednesda afternoon when five persons we arrested while attempting to use a of the bus facilities in accordanc with the recent Interstate Com merce Commission ruling that a bus depots must integrate it facilities.

Three youths, members of th Albany Youth Council, NAACP Evelyn Toney, Eddie Wilson an Julian Carswell were arrested by Chief of Police Pritchett after they attempted to secure food in the bus terminal restaurant. Thirty minutes later they were bonded out by Mr. Thomas C. Chatmon and Dr. E. D. Hamilton.

The youths were charged with disorderly conduct, tending to create a disturbance. The youths had entered the section of the bus station that prior to November 1st had been reserved for white patron, but today there is no sign at the bus station indicating where whites or colored may enter giving indication that a person may use all of the facilities.

The youth entered the station, bought tickets to Tallahassee, Fla., and took seats. They were not disturbed until they went into the restaurant section. Wilson said he had ordered something to eat and the operator had started preparing it when the Chief of Police told the youths to come outside of the bus station. When they got outside the Chief told them if they re-enter the lunch room he would arrest them. They turned away with out a word and re-entered the place where upon they were arrested.

The three youths who are mem bers of the Albany Youth Council reported that at the time they entered the bus terminal things were relativly quiet with only a few persons present. Th bus station is located near the Negro section and a few Negroes gatherd to see what the Chief of Police had come to the bus station for since he is rarely seen at the bus station, it was reported. The youths deny that they were creating any disturbance and certainly their presence would not disrupt the peace and quiet of the city as was claimed by the Chief.

These three youths are not attending school during this quarter and cannot be expelled as it was stated that any student participating in any move of this kind might be expelled from any state institution.

Dean of Students, Minor of Albany State College was present later in the afternoon when hundreds of Albany State College students came to the bus terminal to leave for their Thanksgiving Holiday to be spent at their respective homes.

Two of Albany State College students, Bertha Gobel of Atlanta and Blanton Hall of Athens were arrested when they entered the section where the white people were seated.

Th bus terminal was a beehive of activity as a result of the earlier arrests. Hundreds of Negroes gathered outside the station while the students prepared to go home for the holidays.

Miss Gobel and Mr. Hall made personal decisions to remain in jail rather than accept bail of $100.

Charles Jones, director of the Albany Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, along with his staff of Messrs. Sherod and Reddick issued a statement following Wednesday's arrest: "Miss Gobel, in making her decision to stay in jail rather than posting bond, said 'I hope my stay in jail dramatically presents to the community of Albany and the nation the evil and inconvenience of segregation. We have a legal and moral right to use the facilities at the Bus Station as Interstate passengers. Those who should be arrested are those who would violently attack us and actually disturb the peace of the city."

The statement continues "— in a dingy cell on Thanksgiving day, sits a young girl and an innocent boy, in the squalor and filth of the city jail. In a dirty hole, with one unsanitary commode over which hangs a faucet - the only source of drinking water - she and he remain, head unbowed with an unfaltering trust that we who are on the outside are not idle but working and sacrificing for the community we want to build."

Trial has been set for these cases for Monday. Wilson and Carswell said they were searched, finger printed, photographed and treated like the hard criminals are treated But they did not mind if the treatment will help these cause of freedom.

GEORGIA

NOVEMBER

ALBANY- LUNCH COUNTER PROTEST COLLEGE EXPULSIONS

Negroes Picket Albany City Hall

Constitution State News Service

ALBANY — Several hundred Negro students and adults picketed City Hall here Monday in protest over the arrest and conviction of five Negroes who attempted to desegregate the lunch counter at the Trailways bus terminal here last week.

Some 300 students in the group later marched twice on the Albany State College administrative office with a petition protesting expulsion of two students who took part in the Trailways sit-in.

In recorders court, Judge Abner Israel tried each of the five separately, found each guilty of disorderly conduct and meted out $100 fines, an 15-day suspended sentences to each.

ALL PAID FINES

Court records showed all five paid their fines and were released.

The two students expelled from Albany State, Blanton Hall of Gainesville and Bertha Gobel of Atlanta, had remained in jail since last Wednesday, rather than post bond, to protest segregation of the terminal.

At the trial, Albany Police Chief Laurie Pritchett testified that he had ordered the arrest of the Negroes because he believed their presence in the bus station lunchroom would create a disturbance which could have developed into a serious situation.

NAACP ATTORNEY

The defendants were represented by NAACP attorney D. L. Hollowell of Atlanta and C. B. King of Albany.

Hollowell argued that under an ICC regulation banning segregated terminal facilities, the defendants had a legal right to use the terminal lunchroom.

He further argued that the arrests were made in violation of the 14th Amendment of the U.S Constitution.

The demonstrators — estimated at 300-400—assembled at 9 a.m shortly before the trial began They sang "We Shall Overcome' and other hymns.

Assistant Police Chief J. J. Lairsey then read the group a city ordinance prohibiting obstruction of sidewalk traffic.

After a brief consultation among themselves, the students then formed a long column and marched around City Hall for about half an hour chanting "Freedom, freedom."

Negro Role Plays Up Albany Vote

Record Turnout Indicated Today

By WILLIAM HANNAH
Constitution State News Service

ALBANY—Reports that Albany Negroes plan to stage a mass write-in campaign in Monday's city election have led political observers here to predict a record voter turnout.

The city election, which is normally a routine function, to elect winners of the Nov. 13 Democratic primary, has drawn unusual interest in the wake of last week's Negro demonstration at city hall in protest of the arrest and conviction of five Negro students who attempted to desegregate the Albany Trailways Bus Terminal restaurant facility.

The five Negroes—all students at Albany State College—were convicted in Recorder's Court on charges of disturbing the peace and drew $100 fines and 15-day suspended sentences. Two of the students were subsequently expelled by college authorities for their part in the bus station sit-in.

MAYOR ON BALLOT

Listed on Monday's general election ballot will be Albany Mayor Asa D. Kelley, Mayor pro tem Buford Collins, First Ward commission candidate T. H. McCollum and Fourth Ward candidate W. C. Holman Jr.

Saturday white registered voters received an unsigned postcard warning them that the Negroes would write in candidates in Monday's election.

The card said: "Warning . . . Unless you vote Monday, Dec. 4, you may have a Negro mayor and mayor pro tem. Negro groups are going to write in a Negro candidate for these offices. Do not fail to vote."

PLEA FOR VOTING

City Democratic Executive Committee Chairman Charles Foster said Monday's vote may be the largest in the city's history.

"I sincerely hope the people do turn out in full force Monday to ratify their selections in the primary," he said.

Dr. W. G. Anderson, a Negro osteopath who is the leader of the "Albany Movement," a coalition of local Negro groups, denied Friday that there will be a write-in vote for Negro candidates in the city election.

FEAR GOP WRITE-IN?

"It is my personal opinion," he declared, "that the Democrats fear a Republican write-in vote. It is a scheme to arouse the citizenry of Albany.

A petition from the "Albany Movement" calling for the desegregation of all public institutions in the city was rejected by the city commission last week.

Albany Republican Chairman Russell Kaliher said his organization has no plans to sponsor a write-in candidate in Monday's election.

GEORGIA

SEPTEMBER
ATLANTA- LUNCH COUNTERS INTEGRATED

Restaurants at Stores Here Are Integrated Peacefully

The Atlanta Constitution p.1
Rec. 9-29-61

A seven-month-old agreement to desegregate eating facilities in dozens of department and chain variety and drug stores here was placed peacefully into effect Thursday afternoon.

Atlanta Ga.

No disturbances were reported. In most downtown stores observed by reporters, white patrons paid scant attention to the Negro customers.

At a few counters, some white customers reportedly left when Negroes sat down and were served.

By prior arrangement, Negroes on the first day waited until after the peak of the lunch-hour traffic to seek service.

Many of the Negroes who put the agreement to test Thursday were college students whose sit-ins, boycotts and jail-ins had precipitated the desegregation compromise last March. A few adults also were served.

At Rich's four well-dressed young Negro women entered the Magnolia Room at approximately 2:07 p.m.

They were promptly seated and served soon afterward.

There were fewer than 50 white customers in the dining room at that time. Most did not appear to notice the entrance of the Negroes.

About the same time, Negroes began eating at facilities in other stores which had signed the March agreement.

Besides Rich's, signers included Davison's, Sears-Roebuck, Woolworth, McCrory, Grant, Walgreen, Jacobs, Kress, Kresge, H. L. Green, Newberry and Lane.

75 STORES

One Negro student said there were approximately 177 counters in some 75 stores (including branches) covered by agreement, and that students planned to test the agreement in almost all of them.

Negroes desegregated Rich's dining facilities at Lenox Square Thursday afternoon and returned to the dining room in the downtown store Thursday night.

The Southern Regional Council reported Thursday that Atlanta was the 104th city to desegregate lunch counters as a direct result of sit-ins since the movement began in February, 1960.

Last March, negotiators had agreed upon Oct. 15 as the final deadline for lunch counter desegregation here—provided public schools were desegregated peacefully—but it was understood that the agreement might be carried out earlier.

NOT TOLD TIME

The decision to put it into effect Thursday was announced to those involved only Thursday morning.

Even the planning committee of more than 30 business executives and Negro leaders who met Wednesday afternoon were not told the exact date. That decision was left in the hands of a three-man committee.

Reliable sources reported the reason for withholding the date from the planning committee was that previous decisions consistently had been "leaked."

STUDENTS MEET

Informed about 10 a.m. Thursday, Negro student leaders called a meeting about 1 p.m. at a church to work out last-minute details for putting the agreement into effect.

The March agreement ended nearly a year of anti-segregation demonstrations by Negroes.

In March, 1960, barely more than a month after the first "sit-in" in North Carolina, Negro students applied the technique here. Many were arrested but never were brought to trial.

FACILITIES WERE CLOSED

The sit-ins were dropped for several months but started again last fall. Mayor William B. Hartsfield then intervened and arranged a 30-day truce while trying to work out a settlement. He failed, and the sit-ins were renewed.

Most stores late in the fall closed their dining facilities, thereby halting the sit-ins, but Negroes organized boycotts and continued picketing.

The matter came to a head early this year when students began sitting in at other restaurants and, when arrested, staying in jail rather than posting bond.

MADE AGREEMENT

Finally, veteran Negro attorney A. T. Walden was called into negotiations. Together with attorney Robert Troutman Sr. and Atlanta Chamber of Commerce president Ivan Allen Jr. (now mayor-nominate), he worked out an agreement whereby the demonstrations were ended with a promise to desegregate this fall.

Late Thursday, Opie L. Shelton, executive vice president of the Atlanta Chamber, issued this statement from the planning committee, which had agreed that news would be released through the chamber office:

"Today marked the peaceful desegregation of the lunch counters of most of Atlanta's department stores, variety stores and drug stores. Negotiations between the merchants and their Negro customers have been in progress since February, and agreement had been reached some weeks earlier by the negotiators, but the actual implementation was delayed in order to prevent the issue from becoming involved in school desegregation and the political campaigns."

Atlanta Restaurants, Lunch Stands Integrate Peacefully

The Montgomery Advertiser p.1
Rec. 9-29-61

ATLANTA (AP) — Several lunch counters and restaurants in Atlanta stores were desegregated Thursday, six months after a truce was reached between merchants and Negro student sit-in leaders.

Montgomery Ala.

No incidents were reported.

Negroes were served in the dining facilities of at least six stores shortly after the noon rush hour.

Four young Negro women, one of them the sister of the first Negro student admitted to Georgia Tech, were seated for lunch in the tea room of Rich's, the city's largest department store.

Simultaneously, Negroes were served at Davison's, another department store, and at the lunch counters of four variety stores.

A total of 182 Negro and white demonstrators were arrested last spring when they sought to break the color bars at store eating facilities. They were charged with violating an anti-tresspass law which the legislature had enacted after the sit-ins began in other states.

Negro leaders threatened to boycott stores which maintained segregated eating facilities, but a truce was arranged whereby the lunch counters and restaurants would remain segregated until after the city's schools were integrated and the Negroes would drop their bycott threat.

Nine Negro students entered previously white high schools Aug. 30.

Atlanta Integrates Restaurants Calmly

The New York Times p.1
Rec. 9-29-61

By CLAUDE SITTON
Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Sept. 28 — Negroes were admitted without incident today to restaurants, lunch counters and other facilities in many of this city's drug, variety and department stores.

This major step toward ending racial discrimination was carried out without advance public notice under a carefully prepared plan. It grew out of an agreement reached last March by merchants and Negro representatives.

Rec. 9-29-61

Charles Black, chairman of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, said racial barriers had been dropped at 177 eating places in seventy-seven establishments. He estimated that some 300 Negroes had been served.

New York, N.Y.

The committee represents the college students who began anti-segregation protest demonstrations here in March, 1960. It said in a statement that it was pleased with the development.

"Reports we received of today's action indicate that Atlanta is a city too busy growing to hate," the group said. "We are sure that this same attitude will prevail as Atlanta continues to progress."

New York Times

A committee spokesman noted that rest rooms, beauty parlors in some cases, and other facilitise were desegregated with lunch counters and restaurants.

Action Without Fanfare

Rec 9-29-61

One large department store, Franklin Simon, opened its lunch counters to Negroes without notice two weeks ago.

The action by the larger group of merchants followed by four weeks the peaceful admission of nine Negroes to white schools here. This marked the first desegregation below the college level in Georgia.

At least 104 cities in Southern and border states have opened eating facilities to all as the result of student demonstrations, according to a spokesman for the Southern Regional Council. The council, a biracial group seeking to promote equality for all, has just completed a survey of progress in this field.

Atlanta is the largest city in the southeast to make the change since the recent wave of sit-in demonstrations began Feb. 1, 1960, in Greensboro, N. C.

Some whites voiced complaints, others walked away from lunch counters after noticing seated Negroes, but there were no reports of trouble. A drugstore waitress probably summed up the attitude of most whites.

"I don't like it, but I guess it's best that it went off as it did," she said.

A white man was quoted by a reporter as having said, "I'm 89 years old and I've got nothing against them, but I'll do without before I spend a nickel where I have to sit by them." However, he finished his soda before walking out.

Atlanta in 'Most Sweeping Action'

Eating Places Integrate Peacefully

ATLANTA—This city has joined 103 other Southern cities in integrating its lunch counters and rest rooms.

Seventy-seven stores (including branches) with almost 200 different facilities (lunch counters and dining rooms, rest rooms and beauty parlors) opened their facilities to Negroes in what was described as "the most sweeping action in the history of the sit-in movement."

The action came as the result of an agreement signed six months ago by student leaders, leading Negroes, and downtown merchants.

■

THE AGREEMENT was signed after an intensive campaign was waged against the downtown area. Led by the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights (COAHR), the Atlanta University Center student group that has initiated anti-segregation protests here since March, 1960, college students and some adults began an all-out attack on Atlanta's segregated downtown stores.

● A boycott was called by the student group, and at one time over 1,500 people manned a massive picket line enclosing the entire downtown area.

During the fall and winter, students adopted the "jail without bail" technique, and filled the city's jails. Atlanta received international attention when Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was arrested with a group of students and joined them in jail.

■

NEGROES ATE at Rich's, the South's largest department store; at Davisons, a division of Macy's; at three F. W. Woolworth stores; two W. T. Grant Stores; two Lane-Rexall stores, two H. L. Green stores; two Walgreen stores, at Kresge's, Jacob's, Newberry's, and at a Sears and Roebuck store.

● The agreement also covered integration of rest rooms and beauty parlors, as well as all dining facilities.

The Committee On Appeal For Human Rights issued this statement after the first day of peaceful integration:

● "We are pleased to receive reports of today's peaceful desegregation of public facilities in many of Atlanta's stores.

Reports we received of today's action indicates that Atlanta is a city too busy to hate. We are sure that this same attitude will prevail as Atlanta continues to progress."

Negroes, Whites Dine in Atlanta

By Joseph
Special to The Christi

Atlanta

For the first time in the memory of the eldest Atlantans, Negroes dined quietly along with white customers Thursday in a number of downtown restaurants and lunch counters operated by department and chain stores.

No one was arrested. There were no disturbances, although detectives had been assigned to some of the stores as a precaution. It was reported that in one place a few white customers walked out when Negroes were seated. Otherwise both races accepted the situation matter-of-factly.

The integration of restaurants or lunch counters in 13 stores was carried out with no advance publicity. Negro diners, mostly students from the colleges of the Atlanta University Center who had led the "sit-ins" last spring, began arriving at the eating places around 2 p.m. after the noon rush was over. There were also a few adults.

Seated Quietly

In the Magnolia Room of Rich's Department Store four well-dressed Negro women inaugurated the store's desegregation policy. They were seated quietly at a table, and white diners gave them only casual glances.

Atlanta now has desegregated some of its restaurants, its schools, golf courses, parks, public library, and buses. Despite warnings by the Ku Klux Klan element that any of these events would cause violence in the streets, Atlantans find that life goes on pretty much as it did before.

Plans for Thursday's desegregation of restaurants were worked out the previous day at a conference of Negro leaders and white businessmen. However, the time when desegregation would be put into effect was not announced. It was around noon Thursday when the Negro students received word that they might appear at the eating places which were party to the agreement.

Pact Culminated

Thus there was brought to culmination a pact made last March between Negro student and adult leaders on one side and white merchants on the other.

The agreement at that time was that eating facilities at the 13 stores—all of which had experienced several "sit-ins" last winter—would be desegregated following the integration of Atlanta's public schools, and not later than Oct. 15.

Leaders in making the agreement, under which Negro student leaders pledged to stop their "sit-ins" were veteran Negro attorney A. T. Walden and Ivan Allen Jr., then president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

13 Stores Involved

Just a week ago Mr. Allen was elected Mayor of Atlanta in a run-off primary against Lester Maddox, one of the leaders of Georgians Unwilling to Surrender (GUS), a militant segregationist group, receiving nearly two-thirds of the 100,000 votes cast. The impending city elections as well as integration of the schools Aug. 30 was a reason for the delay last March in abandoning color lines in the restaurants.

The 13 businesses affected are either department, chain drug, or chain 5-and-10-cent stores which sell many things besides food. They are Rich's, Davison's, Sears - Roebuck, Woolworth, McCrory, Grant, Walgreen, Jacobs, Kress, Kresge, H. L. Green, Newberry, and Lane.

Thus far no institutions selling only food have been desegregated in Atlanta, although the restaurants at Atlanta Municipal Airport, operated by a private contractor, were desegregated by a federal court nearly two years ago on the grounds that they were a public facility and were on city-owned property.

Result of 'Sit-Ins'

It was understood that the 13 firms which agreed to desegregation operate a total of 75 stores with 177 lunch counters or dinning rooms throughout Atlanta. Negroes appeared Thursday only at those in the midtown area. Students said they would test integration at others later.

Dropping of the color barriers in restaurants of the 13 firms resulted from a "sit-in" movement started more than a year ago by Negro students who were members of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, organized at the Atlanta University Center.

Lonnie King, then a student there and now attending Howard University in Washington, D.C., led the student movement.

The students also organized a boycott against the stores which was joined in by many adults between October, 1960, and March of this year when the "sit-in" movement was at its height. A total of 186 students and adults were arrested and jailed for violating Georgia's antitrespass law.

Many refused to make bail as a matter of principle. As a result of intervention by Mr. Allen and some of the white merchants, all were released before formal trial.

According to the Southern Regional Council, Atlanta is the 104th city to desegregate some of its lunch counters since the wave of "sit-in" demonstrations started early in 1960.

Savannah Lunch Counter Accord Held 'Giant Step'

The Atlanta Journal and Constitution, Sun., 7-9-61 p6

Return of Economic Vitality Seen as Desegregation Result

Atlanta, Ga.

Combined From Wire Reports

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 8—Leaders of the white and Negro races today announced an end to segregation at downtown lunch counters here. The move was hailed as a giant step toward return of economic tranquility to this troubled port city.

Fifteen months ago, Negroes announced a boycott of downtown businesses. They said they would not resume normal buying until the lunch counters were desegregated.

In an agreement announced by a group of prominent Savannahans, downtown lunch counters will be opened to Negroes and the Negroes in turn will lift their boycott.

* * *

THE AGREEMENT is supposed to be binding on all eating places in downtown stores and in the bus and rail terminals but does not affect cafes and restaurants.

Similar moves have already been made in Jacksonville, Fla.; Winston-Salem, N. C.; Richmond, Va.; Nashville, Tenn., and Galveston and San Antonio, Texas, in the wake of Negro sit-ins.

Just how large a part the boycott has played in Savannah's financial woes cannot be measured in exact terms. The city was hurt badly by the transfer of 2,000 Air Force personnel. And economy in general has been slack throughout the nation.

Five smaller stores in the area have recently gone into bankruptcy.

While the boycott's effect on employment has been purely speculative, observers noted Savannah recently was designated an area of severe unemployment, with joblessness above the 6 per cent mark.

* * *

ONE POSSIBLE indicator is that for the first four months of 1961, nine Georgia cities indicated spending ahead of the corresponding months of 1960.

During this same period, seven Georgia cities reported that their sales declined over the corresponding period of 1960. Savannah's decline was 6 per cent, the highest among the group except for LaGrange, which was down 11 per cent.

There is little question that the Negro refusal to buy goods hurt in Savannah.

"There wouldn't have been an agreement to desegregate the lunch counters if it hadn't," said one store manager.

The Chamber of Commerce declined to comment on the boycott and its effect on the city's economy.

"We had no part in the settlement and would not care to discuss it," a chamber spokesman said. "The boycott began a year ago Easter and it would be difficult to pin down its effectiveness since we had a recessionary tendency at the time."

Henry Goldberg, president of Levy's of Savannah, leading department store, was more direct.

* * *

"IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to say how much business was lost percentagewise by the boycott, but it had a substantial effect on the whole economy of Savannah," he said.

He added:

"The effectiveness, by store, was dependent on the Negro traffic in a particular store . . .

"Forty per cent of Savannah's population is Negro and whenever such a segment of the population is trying to hurt a community's economy it is bound to have some effect. Of course, the Negroes don't have 40 per cent of the buying power.

"Savannah business last year was off generally, but there was also the contributing factor of the loss of Air Force personnel so no one can tell really how much business was lost due to the boycott.

* * *

"THERE HAS BEEN a gloomy, depressed financial air about the city and it is now hoped that this outlook will change."

James Grimsley, manager of an H. L. Green store, said that the boycott had been "depressive." Another Green spokesman said that "it had a definite effect, especially on the stores with luncheonettes."

Only one store manager, who declined to identify himself, said that the boycott had no effect on his business. He said that sales had been normal at his Kress 5&10.

Mayor Malcolm MacLean congratulated those who had worked out the agreement. He called it a fair and reasonable approach to the problem.

"The agreement puts us all to a test in seeing that this solution is brought about without any disorder or outside interference," he said.

* * *

THE BOYCOTT was to have ended today. No date was announced for desegregating the lunch counters.

Negroes have also gained access to previously all-white municipal golf courses and public libraries and integrated seating rights on city buses.

Negroes also have succeeded in getting members of their race hired as full fledged policemen.

The agreement announced Saturday didn't touch on other demands by the Negro Leadership, such as employment practices by local merchants.

"The committee worked on only one thing—the local eating facilities," said a committee spokesman, the Rt. Rev. Albert R. Stuart, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Georgia.

"We believe in the community, Negro and White," Stuart said. "We feel confident people will say: 'Yes, it's a good thing this was done'."

* * *

BISHOP STUART said word of the agreement would be spread from pulpits of all Negro churches in Savannah.

Business was conducted in the usual way Saturday. There were no reports of immediate attempts by Negroes to put the desegregation aggreement into effect.

The Negroes began their drive to integrate the lunch counters with sit-in demonstrations that led to rioting on St. Patrick's Day of 1960, and again on St. Patrick's Day of 1961.

During this period police made more than 100 arrests. Most of those arrested were Negroes charged with violating a 1960 Georgia anti-tresspass law.

This law makes it a misdemeanor to refuse to leave an establishment when asked to so by its owner or manager.

Negotiations to end the boycott were begun several weeks ago by the citizens committee, composed of business and industrial leaders, housewives and church men of most denominations, but no government officials.

Counter Segregation Ends For Negroes In Savannah

The Montgomery Advertiser p. 1

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP)—Leaders of the white and Negro races Saturday announced an end to segregation at downtown lunch counters. The move was hailed as a giant step toward return of economic tranquility to this troubled port city.

Fifteen months ago, Negroes launched a boycott of downtown businesses. They said they would not resume normal buying until the lunch counters were desegregated. Sun. 7-9-61

COUNTERS OPENED

In an agreement announced by a group of prominent Savannah citizens, lunch counters will be opened to Negroes and the Negroes in turn will lift their boycott. Montgomery

Just how large a part the boycott has played in Savannah's financial woes cannot be measured in exact terms. The city suffered a blow in the transfer of 2,000 Air Force personnel. But there is little question that the Negro refusal to buy goods hurt.

"There wouldn't have been an agreement to desegregate the lunch counters if it hadn't," said one store manager.

NO COMMENT

The Chamber of Commerce declined to comment on the boycott and its effect on the city's economy.

Mayor Malcolm MacLean congratulated those who had worked out the agreement. He called it a fair and reasonable approach to the problem.

No agreement was reached on other demands by the Negro leadership, such as employment practices by local merchants.

Whites Threaten Boycott In Savannah Integration

SAVANNAH (AP) — The report of an agreement to permit integration of downtown lunch counters brought a threatened boycott from two white groups.

Negroes have been boycotting downtown stores for more than a year in an effort to force lunch counter integration. A citizens committee began negotiations several weeks ago to end the Negro boycott.

The Rt. Rev. Albert R. Stuart, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Georgia, announced Saturday that downtown lunch counters would be opened to Negroes and the latter would lift their boycott.

Under the agreement the Negro boycott would end immediately. No definite time was set for desegregating eating places.

Two white groups met Saturday night and formed committees to investigate the reported agreement to open lunch counters to Negroes. A spokesman said 7€ persons representing the Chatham Citizens Council and the Association of Southern Patriots passed resolutions. The white groups will do selective buying, if lunch counters are integrated, the spokesman said.

In addition the white groups threatened to stop all tipping to Negroes in stores.

38a 1961 GEORGIA LUNCH COUNTER * SAVANNAH

15-Month Battle for Dignity

Savannah Boycott Smashes Lunchroom Bias in Stores

The Pittsburgh Courier B 3 Sat 1-22-61

SAVANNAH, Ga.—Negro boycotters and their leaders, as the price for desegregation of lunchrooms, drinking fountains and washrooms in stores, voted to end the 15-month "Broughton Street Boycott" at their 71st mass meeting since the boycott began.

● W. W. Law, state and local president of the NAACP, told them "in a spirit of goodwill and cooperation" the Negroes who negotiated with the citizens' committee to end the boycott "endorse and recommend you lift the 15-month-old boycott and that all Negro citizens be urged to shop wherever they can do so with dignity and self respect."

Wild applause greeted this statement, followed by Curtis Cooper, chairman of the boycott committee, moving the recommendation be accepted.

■

THE VOICE vote was taken with those in favor signifying so by saying "Thank God." There was no dissent.

● Following the vote, Law stated, "There will be no shouting and dancing in Moscow tonight. Democracy can work. This is our home and we want Savannah to be the finest city to be found anywhere in the world."

It has been announced by the Rt. Rev. Albert R. Stuart, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Georgia and spokesman for a citizens' group working for the end of the boycott, that it would end when the agreement was made public.

He also said the Negroes would be told from church pulpits that they were free to shop where they pleased.

Almost 1,000 Negroes attended the meeting at 4 P.M. in the St. Philip AME Church on W. Broad St.

● "We had planned to stage sit-ins this summer at every lunch counter using returning students, in relays if necessary, when the white committee (to end the boycott) asked this not be done and we promised to hold off," Mr. Law said.

"Already stores on Broughton Street have begun removing signs from water fountains, rest rooms, powder rooms and lounges. Many stores are now beginning to use courtesy titles (Mr., Mrs. and Miss) in their correspondence with us."

● "But there wouldn't have been an agreement to desegregate if the boycott hadn't hurt," he said.

Mr. Law than castigated the inaction of the Chamber of Commerce and stated the boycott would have been over long ago if the Chamber had actively worked towafd this end.

■

HE RIDICULED statements in the press minimizing the financial impact of the boycott. He also ridiculed those Negroes who spoke against the boycott and predicted:

● "Our next battle site isn't too far from here but I promised the (boycott) committee a few weeks rest."

The train and bus depots are just down the street a few blocks from the church where the meeting was held. Several times during the two-hour meeting Law referred to possible future action to enforce rights and seemed to be hinting at these places as targets. He also mentioned by name several merchants who still were not using courtesy titles in their correspondence with Negroes and stated this would be taken care of.

Law told those present to wait for word before integrating.

At a time when it will attract little attention, a disciplined group will begin the process, he said. "Later from the pulpits and at mass meetings a general announcement will be made."

Mayor Malcolm MacLean congratulated "all sides" on their "fair and reasonable approach."

"Savannah has joined other Southern cities such as Jacksonville, Atlanta, Winston-Salem, Richmond, Nashville, Galveston and San Antonio. The agreement puts us all to a test to seeing that this solution is brought about without any disorder or outside interference."

4 Lunch Counters Serve Negroes Without Incident at Savannah

The Atlanta Constitution B1 Sat 1-22-61

Constitution State News Service

SAVANNAH — Managers of four department store lunch counters confirmed that groups of Negroes had been served food Friday afternoon at previously white-only facilities without incident. The stores involved were Levy's, Walgreen, Kress and Woolworth.

Atlanta Jrn

Observers said the Negroes came in and were served about 4 p.m. A group of "three or four" appeared at each counter about the same time and stayed about 20 minutes. White patrons were present in each case and continued to eat after the Negroes appeared.

The desegregation of department store lunch counters Friday was apparently the result of an understanding reached two weeks ago between Savannah merchants and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. At that time, Negroes agreed to end a 15-month boycott of merchants provided they would be served at white lunch counters at an unannounced date.

Paine Students Push Sit-Ins, Two Injured

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Ill.
Dec. 31-Wed-Jan-6-61
P. 1

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Virtually all the 384 students at Paine college here are involved in a campaign of public demonstrations to end lunch counter segregation.

Sit-ins at dime stores are continuing, although two of the Negro students have been injured in attacks by hoodlums, and city policemen have refused to provide protection.

The students are asking that citizens of good will everywhere join them in urging the City Police Department to provide equal protection for all people.

Stores where sit-ins have taken place include Woolworth, H. L. Green, and McClellan. The latter has closed its lunch counter.

The first sit-in occurred Dec. 9, and William Didley, a Paine student from Cordele, Ga., was injured when white hoodlums roaming the store pushed him into a what-not counter.

Didley was hurt again during a sit-in at Woolworth on Dec. 13, when he reached out to try to deflect a knife aimed at another student, James Stevens, Brunswick, Ga.

Stevens was walking along on aisle near the lunch counter when about nine young white men closed in on him and began beating him. Stabbed in the head with the knife, Didley's hand was cut also, and both he and Stevens had to have stitches. Neither retaliated in any way.

Silas Norman, chairman of the student steering committee which is coordinating the demonstrations, and Miss Sylvia Ryce, another committee spokesman, said the students saw the hoodlums with knives before the attack and reported it to police but that no police protection was forthcoming either before or during the attack. In fact, they said, policemen who had been in the area disappeared when the attack began.

On Dec. 14, a student committee met with Augusta Mayor Millard Beckum. They said he claimed he was unaware of what had been happening downtown but said his policy was to provide equal protection. However, he told the students they would have to go through "channels" — taking their protest first to the police chief and, if unsuccessful there, to the Civil Service Commission.

Meantime, some of the same students had picketed President Eisenhower as he played golf in Augusta, Saturday, Dec. 10. Miss Ryce said they first sent the President a telegram asking to see him without publicity since it was Human Rights Day. However, they were told by presidential aides that they could not see the President.

"We then conducted an orderly demonstration from 3:15 until 5 p.m. near the golf course," Miss Ryce said. "We were protesting the fact that Eisenhower chose to play golf instead of considering the question of civil rights on Human Rights Day." One of the picket signs carried by the students said "Golf vs. Civil Rights."

The recent demonstrations are the first lunch counter sit-ins in Augusta. However, last May Paine college students rode the city buses integrated and 11 were arrested. These cases are still pending in the courts.

The students ask that protests against the lack of police protection be sent to Police Chief Green, Police Headquarters, Augusta, Ga., and to Mayor Millard Beckum, Augusta.

52 Sit-Ins Post Bail In Switch of Tactics

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Dec. 22-Thurs-60

The Negro student sit-in movement apparently shifted emphasis Thursday from demonstration to negotiation as the last 52 students in jail came out on bond.

A. T. Walden, veteran Negro attorney who recently agreed to negotiate between the students and downtown merchants, issued a statement saying the students left jail because they believed they had achieved their purposes of expressing opposition to segregation and rallying older Negroes to their side.

DUPLICATE STATEMENT

A similar statement was issued by the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, student sit-in organization.

Walden said the students "shall henceforth walk arm and arm with their elders in a supplemental strategy which has been developed by the composite counsel and judgment of youth and age."

Walden reported "progress" in negotiations with merchants but would make no prediction about their outcome.

Meanwhile, Fulton Criminal Court Sol. John I. Kelley said trials for the demonstrators probably will begin within the next two weeks.

PREFERS KING TRIAL

Kelley said he would prefer to try sit-in leader Lonnie King first but that the final decision would depend on a conference of court officials.

The soliciter said he expected that if any student is convicted, there will be a constitutional test of Georgia's anti-trespass law.

IN ALL FORMS

Walden in his statement said the students here and throughout the country are "unalterably opposed to segregation and discrimination in any and all forms based solely upon race or color. . . .

"They feel that they are rendering the highest service to their beloved America as well as to the world when they merely insist that their country shall make a living reality of the Christian concepts upon which our democratic republic was founded . . ." Walden added.

The attorney explained that the students' "jail-not-bail" movement was designed to overcome the "seeming complacent, somnolent acquiescence in the status quo" by some of their elders and "demonstrating to the rest of the world that they are righteously dissatisfied with things as they affect their future destiny . . .

"These young people harbor malice and ill will towards no one of any race. They desire that nothing be taken away from any person or people, save the self-righteous superiority complex possessed by too many and the pride which goeth before destruction and the haughty spirit which precedes a fall," Walden said.

Call Off Rally, Officials Ask

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Dec. 21-Wed-60
P. 1

Negro leaders have been asked to call off a big rally scheduled for Sunday outside the Fulton County jail it was revealed here Friday. Mayor Hartsfield called the plan a "grave mistake," and stated he shared Fulton Commissioner James Aldredge's apprehension about what might happen inside the jail if there was a demonstration outside.

The Student - Adult Liaison Committee was reported debating whether or not to change its plans. The possible change in plans, reported pushed by pleas from city and county sources was revealed after threats of intervention or at least counter demonstraions were talked by the Ku Klux Klan.

The Rev. William Holmes Borders, chairman of the committee had said earlier Friday afternoon the group would "reevaluate" its plans at a meeting during the evening. He said there has been "some mention" of the jailed students making bond following the Sunday rally.

The minister would decide after the meeting whether to go ahead with the rally, cancel it or shift the site. The idea of the demonstration is to boost the morale of 30 Negroes who have chosen to stay in jail rather than make bail, he said.

Out at the Fulton County jail, Chief Jailer Carl Smithwick, Sheriff Ralph Grimes, Atlanta Police Chief Herbert T. Jenkins and Warden Carl Mills all advised against the demonstration.

Smithwick said "There is some tension already in the jail, and I feel that it's unwise for the demonstration to take place because we're overcrowded."

The reports of a possible Klan counter - demonstration came from Hartsfield. He said his main concern was for the security of the jail, which is a part of our system of law enforcement and as such is entitled to the same respect as the verdicts of the courts."

The mayor said he was asking the police department to "act fairly, but most firmly," in handling the situation.

Nine Sit-Ins Post Bonds In Atlanta Cases

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Dec. 22-Thurs-61
P. 1

Nine students Tuesday afternoon were reported to have posted bonds of $100 each and secured release from the Fulton County jail, it was reported. The students, part of a group who had participated in local sit-ins, had earlier refused to post bond. The students were not immediately identified. Three others posted bonds last week and were released from jail pending trial on charges lodged aganst them under the state's anti-trespassing law.

Atlanta's Terminal Station was the scene of a sit-in arrest Tuesday when Rev. Fred C. Bennette, Jr., 32, attempted to receive service in the restaurant.

Rev. Bennette, identified as a college student at Morris Brown. Police Capt. J. L. Mosley stated that he had been informed that Rev. Bennette had arrived by train from Jacksonville.

Capt. Mosley said that the minister had been asked to leave the restaurant twice by the manager and refused. He was then arrested under the Georgia anti-trespass law.

Eight Atlanta ministers were arrested last week at the Terminal Station for sit-in activity, and joined 77 student sit-in demonstrators in jail after refusing to post bond.

The preachers posted bond the following day with the student's choosing to remain in County Jail rather than pay bond.

Sit-In Prisoners Pack Atlanta Jails As Sheriff Orders Cots, Double Beds

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 18.—Negro sit-in demonstrators Wednesday filled the Fulton County jail to capacity and Sheriff Ralph T. Grimes ordered in cots, double-deck beds, mattresses and blankets to take care of the expected overflow.

The number of Negro inmates rose to 410 by mid-afternoon, Grimes said. This included 357 men, slightly below the capacity of 364, and 62 Negro wemen compared to the official capacity of 52.

Grimes said the temporary bedding for overflow inmates could take care of "quite a few" but he said another wave of mass arrests may force him to transfer overflows to other jails.

By mid-afternoon jail records showed there were 78 inmates charged with participating in Negro sit-in demonstrations.

The sit-iners could get out on $100 bond each but most have refused to post bond in protest against segregation. Only four of the 82 sit-iners jailed had posted bond through late Wednesday.

Grimes said farming out prisoners because of an overflow had never, to his knowledge, been done before in Georgia.

King Hails Negro Students And Ministers Jail For Sit-Ins

Hit Call For Black Supremacy Of Negro Muslims

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 18.—Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., internationally famed non-violence leader, stirred an overflow audience of over 2,000 Atlantans, who spilled out of Warren Memorial Methodist Church onto the landings and street outside with a brilliant and impassioned exposition of the cause for which eight ministers a few hours before had joined 77 sit-in students in Fulton County Jail.

Twenty minutes before the scheduled starting time student leaders were forced to limit admission to women as Benjamin Brown of the Committee on the Appeal for Human Rights led the audience in some of the songs associated with the student movement.

"Jail-going is a creative way of dramatizing the Negro's indignities and injustices," Rev. King said. "It is not just publicity for publicity's sake." Calling the roll of history's great periods, Dr. King asserted that he could think of no time more in which he would rather have lived than the present and no community of fellowship he would prefer to that of the students and ministers now imprisoned in the Fulton County Jail because they "went to jail willingly rather than submit to an unjust law."

Stating that just laws should be obeyed by all; unjust laws by none, the SCLC leader cited New Orleans and the doctrines of nullification and interposition as examples of anarchy. He disavowed the aims of Muslims and other "Black Supremacists," saying that "Black Supremacy is not God's design." The aim of the non-violent movement, he declared, is "not to defeat the white man, but to win his friendship and understanding."

He defined an unjust law as one which (1) degrades human personality, (2) stands in the way of God, and (3) is enforced as a code upon the minority by the majority, which does not enforce it upon itself.

Rev. Samuel Williams, president of the Atlanta Branch NAACP, told of visiting the students in jail and told of those who were so determined that not even illness and discomfort could turn them from their purpose. "They are willing to stay not for days, or weeks, or months, but for as long as it will take to erase the evil of segregation," he said. He described the ministers' attitude as being "we will lie where they lie, sit where they sit, stand where they stand, die with them if necessary."

Rev. M. L. King, Sr., student leader Lonnie King and Rev. William Holmes Borders, Chairman of the Student-Adult Liaison Committee, also spoke in support of Atlanta's desegregation movement and asked their hearers to continue the downtown boycott until solutions to the problems of segregation in eating facilities and jobs had been arrived at.

Will Try Sit-Ins, Sol. Kelley Says

John I. Kelley, solicitor of the Fulton County Criminal Court, stated in an interview yesterday that, "Everything in the long run yields to right and justice," and that the recently arrested sit-inners will receive court hearings as soon as the cases can be drawn up.

When asked about the court's position in relation to the sit-in arrests last year, Kelley said, "It's been my position that the demonstrators are all out on bond and that's something in the past."

Kelley further stated that he had been informed that students have stated an interest in getting a test case before the courts to determine the legality of sit-ins at private facilities.

"Ordinarily it takes about three weeks depending on the length of the disposition to get the cases before the courts. The recent arrests are under process now and the cases are being drawn up and will come before the courts in due time," Kelley stated.

Solicitor Kelley said that the courts have held that private individuals have a right to choose their customers.

He said that he felt due consideration of the rights of all citizens when their civil rights have been infringed upon will help to resolve the racial issue.

Kelley stated that the statute of limitations on cases that are left pending not filed for hearing before they are considered dead is two years. He said that, "A prosecutor and I are charged with the responsibility of drawing up affidavits to present the cases before the courts."

8 Negroes Make Bond; Another Seized in Cafe

Eight Negro students arrested during the past three weeks of sit-ins here abandoned their "jail-not-bail" campaign Tuesday, posted $100 bonds each and were released.

And another student, arrested Tuesday of violating the trespass law in refusing to leave the Terminal Station restaurant, likewise posted bond rather than remain in jail.

The eight were visited by student leader Lonnie King before they left the jail. Some 70 still remain in jail, however.

The student who was arrested Tuesday and released on bond was identified by police as Fred C. Bennette Jr., 32, a ministerial major.

Lt. O. W. Jordan said Bennette arrived early Tuesday by train from Jacksonville, Fla.

The Negro's attorney, H. T. Ward, asked restaurant manager C. C. Harrison at a police court hearing whether he knew that Bennette was an interstate traveler. Harrison said he did not.

38a 1961 GEORGIA ATLANTA- LUNCH COUNTER

After Three Days On Bread And Water

'Jail-In' Strikers Eat Heartily

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Eight Negro demonstrators in a disciplinary cell at the York County Prison Camp accepted and ate second helpings Monday of the full meal given every third day to prisoners on bread and water.

Prison Superintendent Charles C. Maloney disclosed that it was the second tour of disciplinary confinement for the eight, the first for a "sing-in" refusal to work and the second for a sit-down protest.

It was learned that some of the Negroes previously identified as students after their arrests for sit-in demonstrations hardly qualified as students. At least two are employes of organizations seeking racial goals.

All told, 11 young Negro men chose confinement, "Jail - No Bail," at the prison camp rather than post appeals bonds of $100 on their convictions of trespassing at white lunch counters in downtown Rock Hill. Of the 11, one has been transferred to the York County Jail, two were on the camp sick list and eight are in the disciplinary cell.

In addition, two Negro coeds, also convicted of trespassing, are confined in the York County Jail.

Prison authorities said that the eight showed no indication Monday of giving up their sit-down protest against what they termed overwork and the transfer of one of their companions, John Alexander Gaines, to the jail.

They will be released, Maloney has said, "when they show us they are ready to go to work and obey orders."

York County Supervisor J. Ed Allen said the eight consumed second helpings of the meal offered them Monday: cabbage, peas, beans, bread and meat. Bread-and-water prisoners get a full meal every third day and this was the third day of their disciplinary confinement. The eight are in one cell, rather than in solitary cells.

Meanwhile, three men arrested on breach of the peace charges after a scuffle Saturday following a "sympathy" demonstration for the jailed students withdrew the charges they had brought against each other. In Rock Hill Recorder's Court, Paul David Dietrich, 29, white, of Washington and Franklyn Hunt, 21, Negro reporter for the Baltimore Afro-American, of Washington, dropped their charges against George Morgan, 22, of Rock Hill. Morgan, a white spectator at the demonstration, in turn, dropped the charges he had filed against Dietrich and Hunt.

The Congress on Racial Equality (CORE), in New York, telegraphed President Kennedy protesting the disciplinary action against the Negroes in the prison camp and identifying one of them as a full-time field secretary for CORE. The telegram said:

"Since Feb. 17 eight members of CORE, including Field Secretary Thomas Gaither, have been in solitary confinement . . . for refusing to stop singing hymns during their morning devotions.

"This interference in the personal and religious freedom of these young Americans piles one illegality upon another. South Carolina officials, acting under the guise of police power, have done violence to the constitutional concepts of equality before the law and freedom of religious observance."

To judge from official statements from prison authorities, however, the CORE telegram signed by national director James Farmer confused the two periods of disciplinary confinement and the reasons for it.

Maloney said they were given a half-day in the disciplinary cell early last week for refusing a guard's order to stop singing and leave their cells for the regularly scheduled work period.

On Friday, Feb. 17, Allen said the eight "struck on the job. They just sat down and refused to work." After returning to the camp, Allen continued, "they began a hunger strike."

The eight were identified as Gaither and these Friendship College students from the Rock Hill area: Robert Lewis McCullough, James Frank Wells, Clarence H. Graham, Willie Edward McCleod, David Williamson, Mack Cartier Workman and Willie Thomas Massey.

The two other confined demonstrators, Joseph Charles Jones of Charlotte, N.C., and Charles Melvin Sherrod of Virginia Union University, Richmond, were on the sick list, Jones with a pulled ligament in his arm and Sherrod with an ulcerated stomach.

Jones, previously reported to be a student at Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte, was identified by school officials Monday as an employe of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, an organization in Nyack, N.Y., proclaiming "the unity of the worldwide human family."

The school officials said that Jones, a former student, had not enrolled during the current school year until Jan. 30, a week before his arrest in Rock Hill.

In Atlanta, officials at Spelman College said that Ruby Doris Smith, one of the two young women in jail, was not enrolled, although she had been a student previously. The second young woman, Diane Judith Nash, is a student at Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn.

In reply to questions about singing by the Negroes in the prison camp, Supt. Maloney said:

"They sang every time they were in the stockade, night, morning, other times. Sometimes for hours at a time. They called it a 'sing-in.' "

'Jail-Ins' A Problem For Atlanta; Cost City $1,000 Monthly

ATLANTA. — (ANP) — While Rock Hill, N. C., may have been chosen as the focal point for the "sit-in" movement, attention last week centered on this city where 33 Negro students and ministers have been arrested and taken into custody as result of anti-segregation demonstrations.

In the wake of the increased efforts on the part of demonstrators, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., called on southern Negroes to violate segregation laws and accept jail sentences as the way to dramatize the indignities and injustices Negroes are subjected to in the south.

"We plan to stand up for justice until we turn America upside down," King told a three hour mass meeting in Atlanta. "Segregation is slavery covered with niceties," he declared.

Supports Movement

King, speaking in behalf of those arrested in Atlanta, said the demonstrations will go on "until every Negro can walk the streets of Atlanta and the South in dignity and honor."

The Atlanta sit-ins, arrested in recent weeks, have announced their intention to remain in jail to dramatize their fight for integration and have made no attempt to raise the $100 bonds under which each is held.

With the jailing of eight Negro ministers last week, the jail was filled to capacity.

Atlanta authorities have reported that it costs $1,000 per month to feed the jailed demonstrators. In addition to this, they claim that providing study arrangements for the students is a problem. Visitors bring books and assignments to the students and carry completed lesson assignments back to classrooms.

In other events last week, four Negro sit-in demonstrators forced the closing of a downtown drug store lunch counter. There were no arrests.

Three Post Bond

The Lane-Rexall lunch counter was closed when two Negroes, a boy and a girl, entered and sat separately at the counter. They were joined shortly by another couple.

Some white patrons left immediately, but four white women remained to finish their orders.

Meanwhile, three of the 86 demonstrators jailed during the lunchroom sit-ins the previous week posted bond after staying in jail over the weekend.

The entire group originally refused bond in an effort to dramatize their protests against segregated lunchroom practices.

The Negroes who posted bond and left jail were identified by Chief Jailer Carl W. Smithwick as Willie J. Stewart of Tarpon Springs, Fla.; Ralph L. Stephens of North Carolina and Roy Carver Crettenden of Columbus, Ga.

54 JAILED STUDENTS RELEASED ON BONDS

At approximately 10:45 Thursday morning, 54 college sit-in demonstrators posted $100 bonds and began leaving Fulton County jail after having been arrested February 7, & 9, in a wave of downtown sit-ins attacking segregation in privately owned eating facilities.

In a press conference at Frazier's Cafe Thursday morning Lonnie King, Jr., president of the Student Committee, issued a statement giving the following reasons for the students accepting bail after two weeks in jail: (1) "Direct petitions and thousands of requests from Negro leaders and other adults both in and out of our community pledging unwavering support of the students and their campaign to break down lunch counter segregation and job discrimination. (2. The assurance felt by the students that they have now succeeded in dramatizing the need for unified action against injustice through their willingness to go to jail. The firm belief that genuine, meaningful negotiations are now underway with Atty. A. T. Walden, Rev. William Holmes Borders, and student leaders playing vital roles."

The student press release was signed by: Lonnie King, Jr.; Herschell Sullivan, 22, vice president of the student group and senior at Spelman College; Leonora Taitt 22, Spelman senior; Daniel Mitchell 19 Clark College junior; E. Christine Sparks, 20, Clark College junior.

Atty. Walden, appearing at the press conference on behalf of Adult Liaison Committee, stated that, "Many adults in the community signed a petition urging the students to accept bail. "Literally hundreds signed the petition. I would say that about half the ministers signed the petition," Walden stated.

The number of arrested sit-in demonstrators reached a total of 90 students and eight ministers. The local ministers stayed in jail overnight, refusing to post bail and some of the students accepted bail for various personal reasons, dwindling the total to the 54 that were released Thursday.

When questioned about the type of meals and treatment in jail, Mitchell said, "The treatment in jail was fine, I have no complaints." Miss Taitt said, "The treatment in jail was fine, the meals were fine." Another jailed student told newsmen that she might have gained a pound.

THE STATEMENT

Atty. Walden issued a statement on behalf of Rev. Borders and himself, representing the Adult Committee, which said in part: "The seventy - odd students of the Atlanta University System, all members of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights recently arrested and incarcerated in Fulton County jail charged with violation of Georgia's anti - trespass law, having decided to give bond and be released, have requested the undersigned, negotiator for said committee, to impart to the community and to the world their objectives underlying the motivations for having engaged in sit-ins, stand-ins, kneel-ins and jail-ins, the reasons for their decisions to give bail."

"These students, along with their fellow conferees throughout the nation, are unalterably opposed to segregation and discrimination in any and all forms based solely upon race or color, realizing that racial segregation is the idol God of those who deny and disrespect the essential human dignity of some of God's children regardless to the inherent worth of the individual."

"They do not believe that the moral, spiritual and intellectual fiber of the youth of the white South are so fragile and brittle that they would disintegrate by the ordinary human contact with the youth of any other race. They believe that if the elders of the youth of the white south would cease indoctrinating and contaminating them with the views and philosophy of race dominant in the mid 19th century, that the youth of both races would amicably resolve all racial problems before the babes at the breasts of to-day's mothers shall have attained their majorities."

"Feeling that both of their double purposes have been accomplished, these students have accepted bail and shall henceforth walk arm and arm with their elders in new strategy which has been developed by the composite counsel and judgement of youth and age," the statement said.

The adult statement indicating that the students have pledged to work with their elders in resolving the sit-in issue, caused one newsman to pose the following question, "Do you have any plans for future demonstrations?" Miss Sullivan replied that, "We have not as yet made future plans."

Meanwhile, Solicitor John Kelley, of Fulton Criminal Court, stated to the Atlanta Daily World, said that these sit-in cases would be brought to trial as speedily as possible.

Say Sit-Ins Beat 100 Years Of Law

ATLANTA, Ga. — The student sit-in movement has accomplished more than people think, more than have 100 years of legislation, in that it has reawakened older Negroes and stirred the consciences of people, M. Carl Holman told an Atlanta university Center Town Meeting last week.

The other members of the panel, which was assessing the successes, failures, and prospects of the movement, agreed with the editor of the Atlanta Inquirer.

Lonnie King, chairman of the Committee on the Appeal for Human Rights, said that the students had disturbed the complacence of the "black bourgeoisie" and aroused the consciences of the Negro middle-class.

WHITES 'THINK'

Margaret Long, columnist for the Atlanta Journal, said that not many white people have avenues to say what they mean, but that the movement was causing them to think and, by taking thought, to add cubits to their stature.

If segregation does not crumble, there will be many more years of the movement, King said, noting that the white man can stand years of litigation, but not direct action.

Although King scored the coldness of some older Negro leaders to ward the movement, Holman said that 100 percent support is not important. "It is debasing to think that Negroes act 100 percent and it is good to be questioned both within and without the race.

Both he and Miss Long observed that young Negroes have discovered the power to shape events and have also brought white students into the movement.

Progress will be shown in some places, Holman said, but the important thing is to decide what is the highest good, "peace, love, Cadillacs, split-level houses, or freedom. To the students, freedom is the highest goal."

Ga. Sit-Ins Investigated

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

(Courier Press Service)

ATLANTA, Ga.—Presiding Superior Court Judge George P. Whitman Sr. has told the Fulton County Grand Jury to investigate the Negro student sit-ins, with an eye on violations of city or state laws and possible indictments, if any have been violated.

Citing the 1960 anti-trespass law, Judge Whitman told jurors it is up to them to determine if the law is being violated. If so, there should be indictments, he said.

Obviously hitting at Dr. M. L. King Jr., Judge Whitman flayed those who would urge violations of laws because they are immoral. "The paramount issue is between the law and those who place themselves above the law and flaunt its mandates," he said.

400 Picketing Negroes Mark First Sit-In Here

The Atlanta Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Several hundred Negro university students celebrated the first anniversary of the sit-in movement Wednesday with a two-hour-long picketing of the downtown area here.

The demonstration, executed with military-like precision, was described by police as orderly.

Six of the students who police said were obstructing a sidewalk were taken to police headquarters, lectured briefly and then released.

Thurs, 2-2-61

Otherwise there were no incidents reported.

Negro student leader Lonnie King said the demonstration had a three-fold purpose:

To commemorate the first anniversary of the nation's first sit-in (in Greensboro, N.C.), to call renewed attention to segregation practices in Atlanta and to restore vigor to the Negroes' months-long boycott of downtown stores which have had segregated eating facilities.

BEGAN ON CAMPUSES

Wednesday's demonstration began on the campuses of the Atlanta University System, where singing students gathered and then at 11 a.m. marched approximately two miles to town.

Capt. J. L. Moseley said the procession was "very orderly." The Negroes — estimated by police at 400—observed traffic lights and did not block through-traffic.

As they reached Rich's, about 30 students pulled off from the main body and, spacing themselves at regular intervals, marched around the building.

CARRY SIGNS

Most carried signs decrying segregation with such slogans as "Don't Buy Segregation."

Morris Brown senior Leroy Washington, carrying a clip-board with a map of the downtown area, ordered various groups to their respective picket areas as the procession continued.

The Rev. A. D. W. King, brother of integration leader Martin Luther King Jr., circled downtown in an automobile equipped with a two-way radio.

Six students at the corner of Broad and Alabama streets were taken into custody briefly after warnings from Det. Capt. R. E. Little not to block the sidewalk.

Shortly before 1 a.m., the students began retracing their course back to the campuses.

Before they left for downtown, University President Dr. Rufus Clement had warned Lonnie King against any "disturbance." He counseled negotiation but did not attempt to stop the demonstration.

College Students March Downtown

Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Approximately 300 college students from the Atlanta University System and several white students, converged on downtown Atlanta yesterday, celebrating the first anniversary of the student sit - in movement that began in Greensboro, N. C., one year ago yesterday.

Thurs 2-2-61

The student demonstrators marched in an orderly manner from Atlanta's westside college campuses, with a group of pickets dropping out at one department store.

Only hitch in the mass picketing came when Captain R. E. Little, Jr., head of Atlanta's Police Security Squad, detained six demonstrators at police headquarters.

When questioned by this reporter as to arrests during the demonstration, Captain Little stated that "four men and two women questioned the law concerning my demands for them to move on and not block traffic. I had no time to cite the law with all of the people congregated in that one area." Capt. Little stated further, "I felt it wise to take them to the station and explain the law rather than have a crowd assemble downtown."

Lonnie King, student leader of the movement, stated that, "The overall purpose of the demonstration was to point to the Negro adult community the fact that the students have not given up their fight for freedom."

King stated that the demonstration was not geared towards any one particular business, but the the entire area downtown. He said that the student leaders are willing to negotiate if the business firms show a sincere desire.

STUDENTS DETAINED

Demonstrators detained by police included: Rev. A. D. Williams King, Benjamin Brown, Clark College senior; Ruby Smith, Spelman College junior; Amos Brown, Morehouse College sophomore, and two other students from Clark College.

Negroes at Nashville, Tenn., and Greensboro, N. C., where the first sit-ins occurred, lined up outside segregated theatres and demanded admission. They were turned away, or in some instances box offices were closed.

At Orangeburg, S. C., at least 10 Negroes were jailed in connection with sit-in demonstrations. Police said the protests were continuing and more arrests were expected.

Edward B. King, Jr., administrative secretary of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, said students had been asked to "rededicate themselves" to the desegregation effort.

Police jail suspect in 'cashing in' on sit-ins

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

ATLANTA — A night club bouncer, who decided to cash in on the Atlanta student movement by collecting large sums of money under false pretenses, faced cheating and swindling charges following his arrest here last week.

Oct 21 61

Rogers Martin, 21, was identified by detectives as the man who represented himself as an agent of the student movement and had collected more than $251.95 from various sources, including some 75 business establishments.

Detectives Howard Baugh and C. J. Perry said Martin admitted under questioning that he was not connected with the Atlanta student movement, and that he had used the funds he collected "entirely for his own use".

* * *

BAUGH AND PERRY said that Martin had been arrested for similar actions in 1960, and that he was put under 18 months probation as a result of trials revolving around earlier cases.

In the latest incident, Detective Baugh reported that he was able to uncover the work of Martin through the aid and efforts of bona fide members of the student movement groups in Atlanta.

"In searching the subject," the detectives said, "we found a small gold badge marked Special Deputy Sheriff, and also a .38 calibre revolver. The badge is being held as evidence."

Baugh said the incidents complained of had been going on since the beginning of this year, and up until Jan. 15.

100 students stay behind bars as drive is launched

By CHESTER M. HAMPTON

ATLANTA — "We are prepared to stay here until . .." said a coed, one of 80 Atlanta students jailed last week in a series of sit-downs. The students were bound over to the Fulton County grand jury in city court.

They chose to remain in jail for two weeks until the hearing rather than put up $100 bail.

"We will make the jails overflow," is the way Lonnie King, leader of the Atlanta sitdowners, explained the drive last week that resulted in 100 students imprisoned in three cities.

In the first week of its second year, the sitdown movement showed two new facets. One was the more widespread practice of staying in jail rather than paying fines or bail; the other was the expansion of the movement to Deep South restaurants not connected with variety or department stores.

The Atlanta arrests were all made in restaurants and lunch-counters operating independently of stores. All variety and department stores in the city had shut down their lunch counters after previous sitdown demonstrations.

* * *

LONNIE KING, the 24-year-old leader of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, spoke to the AFRO Saturday as he was in the midst of plans for a Saturday afternoon picketing demonstration.

On Sunday, Atlanta demonstrators formed a motorcade and visited the 17 students jailed in South Carolina. These students, enrolled at Friendship Junior College, were jailed after a sitdown in Rock Hill.

Refusing bail, they were sent to the York County prison where they must serve 30-day work sentences.

The Atlanta motorcade, along with similar student groups from Nashville and other student centers, first wound through Rock Hill before making it to the York County prison in time for visiting hours.

Also in jail are four white and two colored sitdowners in Lynchburg, Va. Arrested and fined $100 for staging a sitdown, they chose to serve 30-day terms rather than pay fines.

* * *

THE ATLANTA students were arrested in a series of sitdowns staged in the downtown area.

On Tuesday, 17 sitdowners were arrested in the office building cafeteria. The following day, 20 were arrested at another restaurant. Thirty - one were taken to jail awaiting grand jury action after they refused to post bond.

Mr. King and Miss Herschelle Sullivan, co-chairman of the group, posted bond so they would be free to direct future activities.

On Thursday, 39 more were arrested and on Friday, ten more were arrested. The total number of those choosing to stay in jail was 80.

On Thursday, Mr. King served a five - hour jail sentence on a contempt of court charge. Attending a hearing in the court of Judge James Webb, he noted that the courtroom was segregated.

He and two others moved to the side occupied by white persons. When told to move by the bailiff, they asked what law was being violated. Judge Webb ordered the trio arrested. When all other cases were disposed of, he called them up before him. He dismissed Mr. King's two companions on the grounds that Mr. King was the leader.

He told Mr. King, "You are coming into court seeking something and yet you have no respect for the court itself."

He sentenced him to serve five hours which, he said, was the longest sentence he could give him.

TEN FRIENDSHIP COLLEGE students having been arrested the week before, four more staged a sitdown at a local drug store. They joined those already in prison.

The Lynchburg students were arrested in a sitdown last month. When tried on Monday, they pleaded guilty to a trespassing charge and chose to serve 30 days in jail.

Two of the white students are women enrolled at Randolph - Macon College for Women; the others attend Lynchburg College. The two colored students attend Virginia Theological Seminary.

An interracial group staged a sympathy demonstration outside the jail after they were locked up.

ELSEWHERE ON THE SITDOWN FRONT:

Four colored and four white sitdowners were arrested and fined $10 each after a sitdown in an Oklahoma City, Okla. restaurant.

The North Carolina Supreme Court upheld trespassing convictions and $25 fines for two sitdowners who demonstrated at McLellan's Variety Store.

In Brownsville, Tenn., Sheriff S. T. Hunter ordered five white Michigan students out of town because "they were in the colored section of town and I didn't think that was a good place for them to be." The students had brought food and clothing to "Tent City" residents.

In Charlotte, N.C., over 50 Johnson C. Smith students demonstrated in front of two local movie theaters. City officials attempted to negotiate but theater managers held firm to the segregation policy.

Theaters in Chapel Hill were also picketed during the showing of "Porgy and Bess."

Dr. William C. Finch was named dean of Vanderbilt University's divinity school to replace Dr. Robert Nelson who resigned last year, along with several other faculty members.

They protested the ousting of the Rev. James Lawson from the student body after he was involved in a sitdown. The new dean was formerly president of Southwestern University in Georgetown, Texas.

39 More Choose Jail in Atlanta As New Sit-In Tactic Spreads

By CLAUDE SITTON
Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Feb. 9—Thirty-nine more Negro students went to jail here today after having staged demonstrations in segregated private restaurants. Others promised to follow them tomorrow.

The refusal of the arrested students to post $100 bonds on trespassing charges raised the number involved in the South's so-called "jail-in" movement to eighty-nine. Seventy are in the Fulton County (Atlanta) prison.

Thirteen Negro students from South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee and Georgia are serving thirty-day terms in the York County jails near Rock Hill, S. C. Four whites and two Negroes are serving similar sentences in Lynchburg, Va.

Today's demonstrations in Atlanta, which has not desegregated its lunch counters, were similar to those on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The proprietors of two restaurants and the police warned the students to leave or face arrest under the state's new anti-trespassing law. When they refused they were taken to the city jail, singing their theme song, "We Shall Overcome."

Following Municipal Court hearings this afternoon, the students were bound over to the Fulton County grand jury for trial. When they declined to post bond, they were transferred to the county jail.

Herschelle Sullivan, co-chairman of the Student Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, said the sit-in demonstrations would continue tomorrow. "We want to get a few more students in jail," she asserted.

Miss Sullivan expressed hope that the mass trek to jail would bring intervention by President Kennedy.

News of the additional arrests caused jubilation among the thirty-one students already in the county jail. The two-story, new brick and concrete structure is situated in a warehouse district of northwest Atlanta.

The Florida Civil Liberties Union asked the United States Supreme Court yesterday to review two lunch-counter sit-in cases from Florida, according to the American Civil Liberties Union.

The Florida organization told the court that conviction of the sit-in participants had violated their rights of free speech and liberty to seek contracts privately by persuading the store to serve them food. The group's petition for a writ of certiorari suggested the need for a Supreme Court ruling on the sit-in question.

The petition was prepared for a group of Negro students who were refused service at a F. W. Woolworth's lunch counter at Tallahassee last Feb. 20 and four white students who sought food service for Negroes in the same store last March 12. In both instances, the petitioners were arrested and were convicted of disorderly conduct, breach of the peace and unlawful assembly.

Jack Carroll, jailer in charge of the evening shift, said the maximum capacity of the prison was 801. About 700 persons were lodged there tonight and authorities said the mattress supply was running low.

Fulton Jail Now Full; Cots For Halls Ordered

By ED ROGERS
United Press International

Negro sit-in demonstrators Wednesday filled the Fulton County jail to capacity and Sheriff Ralph T. Grimes ordered in cots, double deck beds, mattresses and blankets to take care of the expected overflow.

The number of Negro inmates rose to 419 by mid afternoon, Grimes said. This included 357 men, slightly below the capacity of 364, and 62 Negro women compared to the official capacity of 56.

Grimes said the temporary bedding for overflow inmates could take care of "quite a few" but he said another wave of mass arrests may force him to transfer overflows to other jails.

By mid-afternoon jail records showe dthere were 78 inmates charged with participating in sit-in demonstrations.

The sit-iners could get out on $100 bond each but most have refused to post bond in protest against segregation. Only four of the 82 sit-iners jailed had posted bond through late Wednesday.

Grimes said farming out prisoners because of an overflow had never, to his knowledge, been done before in Georgia.

Transfers of individuals or small groups occur in almost routine fashion but these are made for security reasons and not because of overflows, Grimes said.

Grimes warned there was no possibility of stalemating the arrests by jamming the jail because of almost unlimited space available in other jails of the state.

"The other sheriffs will be glad to help, I'm sure," Grimes said.

Fulton County would be forced to pay board for the transferred prisoners at rates set by the various sheriffs, usually about $2 a day per prisoner. Fulton County's charge is $1.75 per day.

38a 1961

GEORGIA

ATLANTA- LUNCH COUNTER
(ATTACK CASE REPORTED FALSE)

Attack Case Reported To Be False

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta (Ga.) Daily World 1-14-61

An Atlanta laborer admitted in police court Friday that his tale of being attacked and beaten by three youths last month after making a purchase in a downtown store area was totally false and was not based upon true facts.

Charged before a judge for making a false report, the defendant, who identified himself to police as Allen E. Tillman, 27, listed at an Ashbridge St., N. W., address, was given a 60-day suspended sentence in Recorders Court, Judge James Webb presiding.

Tillman came to court charged with disorderly conduct-disturbance, police said, and left with the 60-day suspended sentence, and a stiff judicial rebuke from Judge Webb.

Prosecuting officers complained to the judge that Tillman's story caused them to lose some 50 to 75-man hours in investigating his stories about the incident.

Detective Captain R. E. Little said Tillman told three versions about how he was injured during the course of police investigation, but, the officer said, none of the tales could be substantiated under a probe that consumed some 50-man hours.

The judge remarked that Tillman could have "made up" another story to cover up for his trouble other than a tale that would cost the city and the taxpayers so much time and effort in investigation.

Webb said he "tempered" the sentence against Tillman because of the defendant's "previous good record," but warned "If you decide to get out of trouble again, don't involve the entire City of Atlanta in your troubles. Get out of trouble some other way."

During the hearing, Captain Little testified that Tillman reported to police that he had purchased a pair of shoes at a store on Peachtree St. the afternoon of December 10.

Following the purchase, Little said he was told, Tillman was followed to a service station on Simpson Road, N. W., where three men allegedly jumped him, beat him, snatched the shoes he had bought for his child and fled.

When police then, Little said, the three attackers had told him, "You know better than to go down there."

Later, Little testified, the defendant retracted his previous version and said, instead, that he was involved in a scuffle with the boy friend of a woman he was once friendly with himself.

Still later, Little said, Tillman changed his story again, and said, this time, that he went to a club after work on December 10, "got to drinking, fell and hit his head against the pavement."

At any rate, Little said, the shoes ended up missing.

Little said Tillman told him that he made up the original story because he didn't want to have any trouble about the shoes from his wife at home.

The third version was for a like purpose. The second version was given, Little said he was told, because Tillman didn't want his employers to know that he was a drinker.

After telling his story about the beating to his employers, they started a collection and raised enough money to buy another pair of shoes for Tillman's child.

Judge Webb suggested to Tillman that there were a "lot of stories you could have told besides that. Why did you settle on that particular story about being beaten by the demonstrators?"

Tillman's reply was, "Well . . ." and his voice dropped off and finally he fell into silence without ever giving a direct answer to the judge's query at that point.

In answer to a pointed question from Judge Webb, Tillman admitted in open court that the student and adult pickets in the downtown area where he bought the shoes had "nothing to do with it."

In court Friday, Tillman stuck by his third story that he had fallen while on a drunken binge at a Simpson club.

Captain Little, however, said that even that story had not been confirmed during his investigation of the matter.

At the time of his original report to police on December 22, Tillman was quoted as saying that his wife had called police immediately after the incident on December 10, but that nothing more was done about it.

Later on, in a signed statement, Little testified, the wife admitted that no call had been placed by her to police. Little further recalled that his check of all available police records revealed no telephone call about such an incident at the time it allegedly occurred.

Little said that one discrepancy in Tillman's story put his investigators on guard.

Under further probing by the judge, Tillman admitted outright that he had "lied" to police about the incident.

At that point, Judge Webb went into his rebuke, saying that the city had been put to a lot of trouble "because of your false report."

Tillman was held on a disturbance charge after police apprehended him at a Jonesboro Rd., address Friday morning. He was arrested by Captain Little, along with Detectives W. B. Blackwell and J. G. McEntire, all members of the police department's special security force.

Tillman pleaded guilty to the charge against him in court, and admitted to the 60-day suspended sentence imposed upon him by Judge Webb without protest.

38a 1961

GEORGIA

ATTORNEY A.T. WALDEN

ATLANTA- LUNCH COUNTER

Walden Says He Will Negotiate With Merchants

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta Daily

Attorney A. T. Walden, retired lawyer who has worked in several civil rights cases, Wednesday confirmed reports that he has been asked to re-open negotiations with downtown store merchants for settlement of the sit-in dispute of many months.

Thurs. 2-16-61

Mr. Walden told reporters he had accepted the job, but has "hardly begun" work as yet.

The attorney said the request came from student body leaders at Atlanta colleges, but the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights had no voice in the request. However, he indicated the student organization is going along with his efforts.

Walden said that if he succeeds he feels students now choosing to remain behind bars will make bail. "A lot of them seem to want to stay there, but I believe that if I do any good they might get out."

Asked why he was chosen to attempt to bring about new negotiations, Walden said, It seems they had confidence in me. They hadn't been inclined to listen to anyone."

NEGROES REQUEST PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S AID IN JAILINGS

Negroes Ask Kennedy Aid In Jailings

Jackson Daily News
Jackson Miss.
d. 2-8-61

ATLANTA (AP) — Negro leaders are asking U.S. Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy to investigate the jailing of 13 Negro college students who tried to eat at a white cafeteria.

Seventeen Negroes were arrested in Tuesday's sit-in, but four were released after testifying they had not been asked to leave the cafeteria.

The arrests were made under a state law requiring anyone to leave private property at the request of the owner or manager.

Two of those jailed later posted $100 bonds and were released, but a jailer said Tuesday night that the other 11 "have expressed no desire to post bond."

Nineteen Negroes entered the Sprayberry Cafeteria just before noon. H. J. Sprayberry, owner and manager of the cafeteria, said most of them managed to go down the serving line and pick up food before he ordered the line and the cash register closed down.

He said he asked the Negroes, who proceeded to tables, to leave and then called police. Some of the students testified at a court hearing that they were about to leave when arrested.

38a 1961

Appeal Court Hears Savannah Sit-In Case

any person do business with anyone but to prohibit the state from punishing an act which is not in itself illegal."

RIPS TRESPASS LAW

Gadsden argued that the 1960 trespass law "does not mention race, but that is only due to the ingenuity of the Legislature."

A decision may be a month or two away.

The court also heard appeals of two Savannah sit-in demonstrators who were arrested under an unlawful-assembly law.

Negro attorneys argued that there was no evidence the two had assembled to commit an unlawful act. The state's attorney, on the other hand, argued that the Negroes knew their presence would cause the shut-down of the lunchcounter and therefore had gathered for the purpose of disturbing the peace.

E. H. Gadsden.

STATE ACTION

The state attorneys, led by Deputy Asst. Atty. Gen. Sylvan A. Garfunkel, argued that discrimination was made before the state stepped in. "What the state was doing," he said, "was arresting someone who was trespassing."

Garfunkel cited several federal court rulings upholding the right of a store owner to exclude Negroes.

But Attorney Gadsden said the Savannah demonstrators did not enter a store or restaurant which excluded Negroes, but were customers at stores which "only have discriminatory practice at lunch counters."

Gadsden said the demonstrators' appeal was "not an attempt to make any person do business with anyone but to prohibit the state from punishing an act which is not in itself illegal."

He further argued that the 1960 trespass law "does not mention race, but that is only due to the ingenuity of the Legislature."

A decision on the case may be a month or two away, according to reports.

The court also heard appeals of two Savannah demonstrators who were arrested under an unlawful-assembly law.

Attorneys for the demonstrators argued that there was not evidence the two had assembled to commit an unlawful act. The state's attorney argued that the demonstrators knew their presence would cause the shut-down of the lunch counter and therefore had gathered for the purpose of disturbing the peace.

Counsel for the Negroes attacked the law as racially biased.

The appeals court said the only point at issue in this prosecution was whether the evidence justified the lower court verdict. It held that the evidence was ample.

Ten were convicted under an unlawful assembly law. Their counsel had argued before the Court of Appeals that there was no evidence that they had assembled to commit an unlawful act.

The court, however, leaned toward the argument of the state's attorney that the Negroes knew their presence would cause a counter shutdown and therefore had gathered for the purpose of disturbing the peace.

Atlanta Ga.

To Rule On Savannah Sit-Ins Within A Month

The Georgia Court of Appeals is expected to make a ruling within a month or two regarding the appeals of five Negro sit-in demonstrators arrested in Savannah under the Georgia's 1960 trespass law.

The arguments in the case were heard by the Court of Appeal here Thursday. They were faced with the basic question of whether a store owner may discriminate on the basis of race.

The state attorneys conceded that Savannah merchants had discriminated in refusing to serve Negroes, but they further argued that the merchants had that right.

The attorneys for the demonstrators, however, contended that Georgia's 1960 trespass law was being used solely against Negroes and that therefore invalid.

Being argued were the cases of five Negro sit-in demonstrators arrested in Savannah under the 1960 trespass law, convicted and fined $100 each.

The five were arrested after they declined store managers requests to leave the premises.

STATE POWER ABUSED?

Negro attorneys contend the arrest was use of state power to enforce segregation.

But Deputy Assistant Atty. Gen. Sylvan A. Garfunkel contended otherwise:

"The discrimination—and there was discrimination—was all made before the state stepped in," he argued. "What the state was doing was arresting someone who was trespassing."

Garfunkel cited several federal court rulings upholding the right of a store owner to exclude Negroes.

But Negro attorney E. H. Gadsden contended that there is no clear precedent for these cases.

The Savannah Negroes did not enter a store or restaurant which excluded Negroes, he stated, but were customers at stores which only have discriminatory practice at the lunch counters."

Gadsden said the Negroes' appeal was "not an attempt to make

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Convictions In Sitdowns Affirmed

The conviction of Negro sit-down demonstrators at Savannah were affirmed Wednesday by the Georgia Court of Appeals.

Twenty-two were fined $100 each under a 1960 Georgia act aimed specifically at such demonstrations. It makes it a misdemeanor to disobey an order of the owner

The Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta, Ga.

GEORGIA

ATLANTA- LUNCH COUNTER
CITY HALL

City Hall Lunch Counter Suit Loses In U.S. District Court

Atlanta Daily World p.1
Atlanta Journal

By JOHN BRITTON

The second of three federal court suits filed jointly last year attacking segregated lunch counters in downtown public buildings has been thrown out of U.S. District Court in Atlanta by a federal judge's order.

The second suit to be tossed out of federal court on a summary judgment motion by the defendants involved an action attempting to break down alleged segregation barriers at the City Hall Cafeteria. 12-7-61

Federal Judge Sloan Tuesday issued a three-pronged order denying injunctive relief to the petitioners, dismissing the civil suit and granting to the defendants their motion for summary judgment in their favor.

The suit attacking alleged segregation practices at the City Hall cafeteria was filed in U. S. District Court here on August 3, 1960 by John L. Gibson and Andrew Phillips, both students in the Atlanta University Center.

The attack on City Hall lunch counter practices was one-third of a three-suit convoy that was marched into federal court last August by students who contended that they had been refused food service at three public buildings solely because they were Negroes.

The other two actions attacked segregated eating practices at cafeterias located at the State Capitol building and the Fulton County Courthouse.

The court, under Judge Sloan's ruling, threw out the suit against the State Capitol cafeteria on Oct. 4, 1960.

RENDERED MOOT ACTION

That suit was dismissed, the judge ruled, because the permanent closing of the state eating facility had apparently rendered the action "moot."

The third action against a cafeteria located in the Fulton County Courthouse is the only such action still pending here. Nothing further has been recorded in that case since defendants in the action filed their answers to charges listed in the students' original complaint.

The [illegible] authorities named in that action took defensive measures other than asking [illegible] ruling on the city suit.

Tuesday, Judge Sloan said it appeared that the cafeteria involved is being operated exclusively for the service to City Hall employes and their guests.

This would make the cafeteria operated in compliance with a resolution passed by the Atlanta Board of Aldermen on August 15, and later approved by the mayor, restricting the use of the cafeteria to City Hall employes and their guests.

CITED FEDERAL RULING

The judge cited a federal ruling that held "A court of equity will not afford an injunction to prevent in the future that which in good faith has been discontinued in the absence of any evidence that the acts are likely to be repeated in the future."

Judge Sloan said he was satisfied, under the evidence before him, "that no discrimination because of race is now being practiced or will be practiced in the future (at the City Hall cafeteria.)

The plaintiffs in the suit, the judge noted, sought neither damages nor declaratory judgment, but asked for an interlocutory and permanent injunction restraining the defendants from making any distinction based upon color in regard to service at the City Hall Cafeteria.

"The sole function of an action for injunction," Judge Sloan ruled, "is to forestall future violations."

"Under these facts the issuance of an injunction would serve no useful purpose and there appears no likelihood that the conduct complained of in the complaint will recur," Judge Sloan said.

INJUNCTION DENIED

"The renewed motion of defendants for summary judgment is granted, the issuance of an injunction as prayed for is denied and the complaint is hereby dismissed" the judge concluded.

The latest action was a ruling on the third attempt by the defendants to secure summary judgment in their favor. Twice before, their similar bids were refused by Judge Sloan because, he said, they had not sufficiently shown to the court that segregation was no longer being employed in service at the cafeteria despite the facility's restriction to employes and their guests.

Defendants in the City Hall cafeteria action were listed in the petition as Mayor William B. Hartsfield, Police Chief Herbert T. Jenkins and Alton B. Okarma, owner of the cafeteria facility involved in the action.

The dismissal of the suit came after Okarma filed affidavits with the court swearing that his is complying with the Board of Aldermen's resolution of August 15, 1960, and that no segregation is practiced at the cafeteria now, nor is there any intention to do so in the future.

Four Under Bond After Seeking Food At Terminal Cafe

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta Jour.
Wed 1-11-61

Four students of the Atlanta University Center Tuesday afternoon were held under $100 bonds each to await trial in Fulton County Criminal Court on charges arising from their attempts to get food service at a restaurant located in Terminal Station last month.

The group, two men and two women, unsuccessfully attempted to persuade the presiding Recorders Court judge to dismiss the cases against them on the strength of a Supreme Court ruling in a similar case that originated in Virginia.

The judge refused o dismiss the cases, it was reported, on the grounds that only probably cause needed to be shown in his court, and that he would not go into the constitutionality of the law under which the students were arrested.

Those held under bond awaiting trial were identified in court and police records as Miss Mary Ann Smith, 20, of a Fraser St., S. E., address; Miss Ruby Doris Smith, 18, of a Fraser St., S. E., address; Robert Felder, 22, of a McDonough Blvd. address, and John L. Gibson of a Chilton Dr., N. W., address.

Defense attorney A. T. Walden cited to Judge R. M. Jones the Supreme Court ruling in a Virginia case that held, Walden said, that to prosecute persons for exercising their rights under interstate commerce was unconstitutional.

The students were arrested on December 11 at Terminal Station after arriving in Atlanta from Birmingham, Ala., it was reported. They sought service at the train terminal restaurant, but were refused.

They were reportedly asked to leave the eatery by management personnel, but refused to do so. They were later arrested and taken into custody by police Captain C. C. Hamby.

They were charged with violating the 1960 Georgia statute that makes it mandatory to leave the premises when the management of a store demands such action.

The students were all out of jail under bond Tuesday night, according to Attorney Walden.

The cases against the four latest students will join more than a hundred others that are presently lying dormant in the Criminal Court solicitor's office.

The other cases represent prosecutions carried out against students arrested in March, 1960, sit-in-demonstrations as well a demonstrators nabbed in October of the same year.

3Ga 1961

GEORGIA CITY HALL CAFETERIA

Cafeteria Integrated, Negroes' Suit Voided

The Atlanta Constitution
Thurs., 1-12-61 p. 6

U.S. District Judge Boyd Sloan has dismissed a suit to desegregate the city hall cafeteria here.

Judge Sloan said evidence in the case indicates that the cafeteria is being operated on a non-segregated basis.

Atlanta, Ga.

FILED IN AUGUST

The suit was filed in August by two Negro students after a sit-in attempt at the cafeteria. It asked for an injunction against racial distinctions at the cafeteria.

After the suit was filed, the city closed the cafeteria to everyone except city hall employes and their guests. At the same time, the city opened the cafeteria to 12 Negroes on the city hall payroll.

Judge Sloan said, "there appears no likelihood that the conduct complained of in the complaint will recur." Judge Sloan cited an affidavit filed by the cafeteria lessee saying that "no discrimination because of race is now being practiced or will be practiced in the future."

EARLIER OVERRULINGS

Judge Sloan twice overruled similar city motions for a summary judgment.

The city hall suit was one of three filed last August to desegregate cafeterias in public buildings here. A suit to desegregate a small capitol cafeteria was dismissed after the cafeteria was closed. A suit to desegregate the courthouse cafeteria is still pending.

38a 1961

GEORGIA

Atlanta Eat Spots to Integrate

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Leading Atlanta department, variety, and drug stores have agreed to desegregate their lunch counters and other facilities.

This goal, for which Negro college students have struggled for the past six months, will become a reality early next fall shortly after the integration of the 11th and 12th grades in the Atlanta city schools.

Meanwhile Negro leaders have agreed, so far as it lies within their power, to call off sit-ins, boycotts, picketing, or other reprisals against stores maintaining segregated lunch counters until the integration deadline.

This is the gist of a surprise statement issued jointly Tuesday by Ivan Allen, Jr., president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and a group of Negro leaders, both students and adults. The agreement was whipped into final form at a meeting of Negroes and white merchants at the chamber the previous evening.

Secret Sessions

Negotiations leading to the agreement were secret, and the public had no inkling that a settlement of the long controversy between Negroes and merchants was impending.

Prime mover in the negotiations to end the sit-in demonstrations, which have been staged periodically since early last fall and have resulted in the arrest of several hundred Negroes, was A. T. Walden, prominent Atlanta Negro lawyer, businessman, and political power. Semiretired, Mr. Walden recently consented to aid the Negro students in working out a compromise with the merchants.

He disclosed Tuesday that first he had sought the cooperation of a prominent white Atlanta attorney, Robert B. Troutman, Sr., a friend of his for many years. Together they sought the cooperation of Mr Allen and the Chamber of Commerce in approaching the merchants.

Several weeks ago, as reported in The Christian Science Monitor, the Negro student movement appeared to have reached a stalemate. Sit-in demonstrations were being held periodically, but their only result seemed to be the jailing of a group of students.

Counsel Called In

White merchants appeared to be adamant in their stand against desegregation. It was about this time that the Negroes sought Mr. Walden's counsel and assistance.

Interestingly, the merchants based their agreement on action of the Georgia General Assembly and the Atlanta Board of Education in opening other areas of integration.

The statement, after referring to "the fine relationship that has existed between the races for a long number of years," said: "In order to establish good relationships, the leading merchants have stated it is their decision to carry out in lunchrooms and other facilities the same patterns as have been recognized and evidenced by:

"1. Actions of the 1961 General Assembly of Georgia (which repealed the state's school segregation laws).

"2. The admission of qualified students to the University of Georgia.

Linked to School Issue

"3. The decision of the Atlanta Board of Education to comply with the orders of the federal court—all relating to the public school issues in Atlanta and as are finally decided upon in the public school issues in Atlanta.

"The Negro leadership has stated that every effort will be made to eliminate all boycotts, reprisals, picketing, and sit-ins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible.

"Each party is fully cognizant of the limitations of its own commitments on behalf of any group other than that it specifically represents."

[Mayor William B. Hartsfield said, "This agreement puts us all on our mettle in seeing that the school integration next September is brought about without any disorder and without outside interference," the Associated Press reported.

Stabilizing Move

[Ivan Allen, Jr., president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, said the agreement would mean a return to normalcy for downtown business and pave the way for peaceful desegregation of eating facilities.

[Mr. Walden, Negro attorney and special negotiator in the settlement, said the agreement means that all sit-ins probably are over.

[Mr. Walden said Negroes who lost their jobs because of the shutdown of lunch counters and because of the Negro boycott of stores will be rehired where practicable. He estimated 500 to 600 Negroes had been affected by business dropoffs growing from the boycott.]

Negro signers of the agreement included both students and prominent adults. Among them, aside from Mr. Walden, were Lonnie King, head of the Atlanta unit of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee; the Rev. Dr. William Borders, chairman of the student-adult liaison committee, and the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., widely known Negro protest leader.

Key Stores Included

Stores party to the agreement were Rich's, Davison's, Woolworth's, McCrory's, Grant's, the Walgreen Company, Jacob's Pharmacy, S. H. Kress & Co., Sears, Roebuck & Co., Kresge's, S. H. Green Company, Newberry's and Lane-Rexall Drug Stores.

All the merchant signers operate department, drug, or variety stores which maintain restaurants and/or lunch counters where the Negro students have staged sit-ins. All have departments selling commodities other than food where Negroes are welcome customers. None of the parties to the agreement operate restaurants alone.

With one exception—a small restaurant near Rich's — the Negro students have confined their demonstrations either to the stores listed earlier or to eating facilities in buildings occupied by offices of federal, state, county or city governments or rail, bus, or air lines. Hundreds of other restaurants in Atlanta have not been affected.

There is only one technical loophole in the merchants' agreement. The opening of their eating facilities to Negroes is based on integration of the Atlanta public schools, scheduled to take place in September. If that should not be carried out, the present agreement would not be binding.

But as the Atlanta Board of Education already has submitted an integration plan which has been approved by the United States District Court here, the prospect of a failure appears remote.

Integration Leader Wins Appeal

By the Associated Press

Atlanta

The Georgia Court of Appeals has voided a 12-month traffic sentence given integration leader Martin Luther King, Jr., and returned the case of De Kalb County Court for sentencing in accordance with the misdemeanor law.

The Misdemeanor Statute provides for a sentence of six months in jail, six months in a public works camp, $500 fine, or all three.

King was fined $25 and sentenced to 12 months in a public works camp for driving without a Georgia license. The sentence was probated. King was arrested later after taking part in a sit-in demonstration and that arrest brought a four-month jail term for violation of probation.

The Court of Appeals held that since the 12-month sentence was void, part of it could not be reimposed.

100,000 Afro-Americ back sit-ins

ATLANTA, Ga. — One hundred thousand university students of Canada and thousands of others in England, Wales and Northern Ireland have expressed solidarity with and moral support of the colored and white students now serving jail and chain gang sentences in South Carolina and Virginia.

Communications released Saturday by the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee show this in strongly worded cables to Governor Lindsay Almond of Virginia and Governor Ernest Hollings of South Carolina.

The National Federation of Canadian University Students condemned "state violation of human rights," and called student imprisonment "unjust."

* * *

CABLES FROM THE National Union of Students of England, Wales and Northern Ireland to the Governors of Virginia and South Carolina declared "students everywhere (are) united against continuation of immoral practice" of racial discrimination.

Letters reporting the actions taken by the two student groups were also received at the SNCC office. The one from the Canadian group, read as follows:

"We have learned with deep regret of the recent imprisonment of students in South Carolina and Georgia for their peaceful efforts to wipe out the shame of racial segregation in those states. We would like to express our solidarity with you in this task and assure you of our moral support."

The other from British students stated:

"We have received information about the arrests in Carolina and Virginia of students, and their subsequent imprisonment, as the result of their noble acts defending the very legitimate principles of student equality and total absence of discrimination on racial grounds."

THE LYNCHBURG SIX — Shown are the first six persons convicted for protesting racial segregation at Patterson's drug store in Lynchburg, Va. (Left to right) Kenny Green, Terrell Brumback, Miss Rebecca Owen, Miss Mary E. Bentley and Miss Barbara Thomas.

BRUTALITY VICTIM? — Miss Mae F. Moultrie, Morris College student, is shown in Community Hospital where she was treated for injury received during recent demonstration in Sumter, S.C.

Atlanta Stores Agree To End Segregation Of Eating Facilities

ATLANTA, Ga., March 7 (UPI).—Major Atlanta department and variety stores agreed Tuesday to gradually desegregate their eating facilities.

Sit-in leaders and the city's merchants reached the agreement after months of demonstrations at downtown stores that had a policy of segregated eating places.

No deadline for a start toward desegregation of the facilities was announced except that it would begin at the time the city's schools are desegregated. This is scheduled next fall.

VICTORY FOR NEGROES

Although the eating facilities will be reopened for the present on a segregated basis, Tuesday's action appeared to be a major victory for the Negro groups.

Attorney General Eugene Cook said the State would be "helpless" to enforce its new anti-trespass law—under which Negro sit-inners have been arrested by the score—if management of stores refuse to cooperate or if they "voluntarily submit to racial integration."

SUSTAINED PRESSURE

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which announced the agreement, said the 17 stores and chains representing approximately 50 individual stores would gear their desegregation on the admission of the first Negroes to white public schools here.

The settlement was reached after sustained pressure by Negroes in the norm of sit-ins, picketing and boycott at department and variety stores that had segregated eating places.

The agreement specified that:

1. Leading merchants have decided to carry out "the same patterns" as those recognized by the 1961 Georgia Legislature in repealing segregation laws, by the University of Georgia in admitting Negro students and by the Atlanta School Board in complying with Federal desegregation orders.

2. Negro leaders will "make every effort' to "eliminate boycotts, reprisals, picketing and sit-ins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible."

The agreement emphasized, however, that parties to the settlement could be responsible only for themselves and could not force their stand on others.

Atlanta Mayor William Hartsfield congratulated "all sides upon a fair and statesmanlike approach to this situation."

Negroes Agree To End Sit-Ins

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Wed. 3-8-61

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Downtown merchants and Negro leaders announced a pact Tuesday which promises to end Atlanta's year-long sit-ins and boycotts, and sets a target date for desegregating lunch counters.

Under terms of the agreement, luncheon facilities in department, drug and variety stores will reopen on a segregated basis this week.

Dining and other facilities would be desegregated within "a reasonable time" after desegregation of Atlanta's public schools—presumably next fall.

ANNOUNCED JOINTLY

The accord was announced jointly by A. T. Walden on behalf of Atlanta's Negro leadership and Ivan Allen Jr. for the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

Signers of the agreement on behalf of the Negroes included leaders of all major adult and student interests.

Retail stores signing the pact included Rich's, Davison's, and Sears, as well as chain and local drug and variety stores which have been targets of sit-ins.

TO RE-HIRE EMPLOYES

Walden also revealed that merchants have given assurance that some 500 to 600 Negro employes laid off during the sit-ins will be re-hired where practicable.

He said the lay-offs were the result of the closing of lunchrooms and the reduced volume of trade during the three-months-long boycott and not any act of retaliation on the part of merchants.

Davison's announced its mezzanine lunchroom will re-open Thursday and its basement facilities Friday. Most of Rich's lunchroom facilities will be open Friday.

Allen, who took part in negotiations as president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, hailed the agreement as "progressive."

Walden said it represented major concessions on both sides.

Mayor Hartsfield called it a "statesmanlike solution . . . in the very best traditions of dynamic and growing Atlanta."

Citing rumors that trouble-makers from other states may come to Atlanta in September "to make a segregation circus at our expense," he warned "that they will be handled most sternly."

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who was in Detroit and did not sign the agreement, called the plan workable and urged its support.

Gov. Vandiver appealed for continued voluntary segregation "as the best solution under which the harmony, the progress and the peaceful conditions of the state can be maintained."

Sit-ins and boycotts began here in the latter part of March, 1960. After a spate of demonstrations at that time, activity dropped off until last fall. A 30-day truce was called while Hartsfield attempted negotiations, but sit-ins and an intensified boycott of the downtown area began again after Thanksgiving. It was then that most department, drug and variety store lunch counters were closed.

It was only a few weeks ago that Walden was called into negotiations by the students, many of whom were then remaining in jail rather than take bail.

A retired attorney with a long string of civil rights victories to his credit, Walden enlisted the aid of attorney Robert Troutman Sr., who in turn called Allen into negotiations.

Retail stores signing the agreement were: Rich's, Davison's, Woolworth's, McCrory's, Grant's, Walgreen Co., Jacobs Pharmacy, S. H. Kress & Co., Sears, Roebuck & Co., Kresge's, H. L. Green Co., Newberry's and Lanes.

Negro leaders who signed were. Dr. William Holmes Borders, pastor of the Wheat Street Baptist Church and chairman of the Student-Adult Liaison Committee; Walden; Dr. M. L. King Sr., pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church; attorney Leroy R. Johnson, member of the Atlanta Negro Voters League executive committee; Q. V. Williams, executive committee of the Empire Realty Board and member of the Advisory Committee on Urban Renewal.

Also Jessie Hill Jr., actuary, Atlanta Life Insurance Co.; Mrs. P. Q. Yancey, housewife representative on the Student-Adult Liaison Committee; the Rev. O. M. Moss, pastor of Providence Baptist Church; Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University; Lonnie C. King, chairman of the students' Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, and Miss Herschell Sullivan, vice chairman of the CAHR.

The agreement reads as follows:

"We feel that the fine relationship which has existed between the races for a long number of years should be reinstated in Atlanta in every way as soon as is possible. In order to re-establish good relationships, the leading merchants have stated that it is their decision to carry out in lunchrooms and other facilities the same patterns as have been recognized and evidenced (1) by actions of the 1961 General Assembly of Georgia; (2) the admission of qualified students to the University of Georgia, and (3) the decision of the Atlanta Board of Education to comply with the orders of the federal court—all relating to the public school issues in Atlanta and as are finally decided upon in the public school issues in Atlanta. The Negro leadership has stated that every effort will be made to eliminate all boycotts, reprisals, picketing and sit-ins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible. Each party is fully cognizant of the limitations of its own commitments on behalf of any group other than that it specifically represents."

Later in the day the Chamber of Commerce issued a "clarifying statement" saying the original statement meant the lunchrooms will be reopened on a segregated basis "pending a final decision on the Atlanta school issue and that they will then follow the pattern of that decision."

Following the settlement Mayor Hartsfield proclaimed March "Shop Downtown in Atlanta Month."

"Atlanta has always been a friendly city," the mayor said. "In these troublesome days, our slogan has been 'We're too busy to hate anybody.'

Let us put this into effect and make downtown Atlanta full of people shopping and trading as we have done in the past," Hartsfield urged.

Atlanta Sit-In Drive Ended With Pledge of Integration

The New York Times
New York, N.Y.
Wed. 3-8-61
Page 1

Special to The New York Times

ATLANTA, Ga., March 7—Negro leaders and business men agreed here today to a formula for desegregation of lunch counters and other store facilities. In return for an immediate end to sit-ins and other boycotts, the stores agreed to end discrimination at the time of desegregation of local schools, expected in the fall.

Meanwhile, the Georgia Court of Appeals here up held the conviction of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on a traffic violation. However the court voided as excessive a sentence of one year imposed on the integration leader.

The settlement of the lunch-counter controversy was announced by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

Many to Get Jobs Back

Negroes agreed to make "every effort" to end sit-ins, picketing and boycott of downtown stores. Major department, drug and variety store merchants agreed to "follow the pattern" of "a final decision" in the Atlanta school desegregation case.

The merchants said they would reopen on a segregated basis lunch counters and dining facilities closed for three months as a result of sit-ins and other demonstrations.

A. T. Walden, a Negro lawyer who served as special negotiator, said the agreement also that 500 or 600 Negroes who had lost jobs in stores affected by sit-ins would get them back where practicable.

Mr. Walden said setting of a "time certain" for desegregation was a factor in the acceptance of the agreement.

The agreement has the effect of putting additional emphasis on the school issue. On the other hand, chamber spokesmen said, it assures a calmer mood for school integration.

Public schools are under Federal Court order to put into effect a desegregation plan for the eleventh and twelfth grades in time for school openings this fall.

Stores included in the agreement are Hrch's, one of the South's largest department stores, Sears-Roebuck & Co.; Davison's, an affiliate of Macy's; Woolworth, McCrory, S. H. Kresge, H. L. Green, Newberry and Grant variety stores, and Walgreen, Jacob's and Lane drug stores.

Probation Issue 'Nullity'

In its ruling on Dr. King, the Court of Appeals said its action made a "nullity" of a revocation of probation of the sentence ordered by a DeKalb County Judge.

The judge, Oscar Mitchell, ordered the revocation after Dr. King was arrested last year on sit-in charges.

The case now goes back to Judge Mitchell's court for resentencing, the court said.

"The probationary feature of the sentence being void, the defendant was not under probation at the time he allegedly committted the crime for which the purported probationary sentence was sought to be revoked," the court held here today.

The agreement ending the demonstration said that "the fine relationship which has existed between the races for a long number of years should be reinstated in Atlanta in every way as soon as is possible."

The merchants agreed to desegregate "lunchrooms and other facilities" in "the same patterns" that "are finally decided upon in the public school issues in Atlanta."

The Negro leaders said that "every effort will be made to eliminate all boycotts, reprisals, picketing and sit-ins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible."

Each party said it was "fully cognizant of the limitations of its own commitments on behalf of any group other than that it specifically represents."

The Chamber of Commerce later announced:

"This statement means in principle that the lunchrooms will be reopened on a segregated basis pending a final decision in the Atlanta school issues and that they will then follow the pattern of that decision."

Segregationist Pays Tribute To Sit Iners

The Louisiana Weekly
New Orleans La
Sat. 3-4-61
P 13

Atlanta-(ANP)-The miracle of the sit-ins occurred here last week.

The high priest of lily whiteism, arch-segregationist Roy Harris, paid tribute to Negro youngsters who are conducting sit-in demonstrations here in an effort to break down jim crow patterns in the community.

Referring to the several score Negro college students now overflowing the jail here for their participation in sit-in demonstrations, Harris, who advocates violence if necessary to prevent integration said:

"You've got to hand it to them", speaking at a meeting of Georgians Unwilling to Surrender he declared.

"They're willing to go to jail for their beliefs."

"And if we're to win this fight," he continued, "White people have got to have the guts to standup and fight."

The Augusta lawyer said he has "always wanted to see one Southern governor who had the courage to let a federal judge put him in jail" for refusing to obey a court integration decree.

Still discussing jailing, Harris said "They can't put you in jail" for refusing to associate with Negroes or whites who associate with Negroes.

If they won't let us have segregation in seating, we can have social segregation," he said. "All it takes is what's on that emblem--'GUTS" as he pointed to the organization's name and initials.

Discussing Martin Luther King, Jr.'s recent remarks that "unjust" laws should not be obeyed , Harris commented.

ATLANTA ACCORD AROUSES DISPUTE

New York Times
New York N.Y.
Sun 3-12-61

Date to Desegregate Lunch Counters Called Unclear—Sit-Ins Are Dropped

By CLAUDE SITTON

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, March 11—Negro students agreed today to refrain from further picketing and sit-In demonstrations against white merchants. But a settlement that promised an end to the city's year-long lunch-counter desegregation dispute still appeared to be in jeopardy.

At a meeting this morning, seventy-five students decided to continue a boycott of the downtown area until the counters had been desegregated. They have been promised adult support.

A sizable number of those present favored a resumption of the sit-ins. This would have closed the eating facilities that were reopened on a segregated basis following an announcement of the pact Tuesday by a biracial committee.

A solution is widely conceded to be crucial to Atlanta's racial peace and public school desegregation unmarked by violence. Moreover, business men are eager to end the boycott, which began last Thanksgiving after earlier negotiations had collapsed.

The crux of the problem lay in the settlement terms made public. Ivan Allen Jr., president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, had said that the agreement provided for desegregation to follow the admission of Negroes to white classrooms here. This is scheduled next September under a Federal Court order.

1,500 Attend Meeting

However, the Negro negotiators, led by A. T. Walden, a retired lawyer, explained to a mass meeting last night that the lunch-counter move was in no way contingent upon the school question. This was confirmed by white involved in the talks.

Mr. Walden and others told the 1,500 persons who attended the meeting at Warren Memorial Methodist Church that a specific date had been agreed upon. One speaker, apparently through a slip of the tongue, said the action would be taken in September. It is known that the date fixed is in October.

The meeting was called in an effort to win Negro acceptance of the settlement. Students and young adults had shown rising dissatisfaction over its terms. The opposition centerd on the reopening of the counters and the tentative assurance given by the Negro leaders that the boycott as well as the demonstrations would be stopped.

Dr. King Makes Plea

Only an impassioned speech by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. saved the older men from an outright repudiation of their leadership. Dr. King, who led the 1956 Montgomery, Ala. bus boycott, is co-pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and a leading exponent of passive resistance to desegregation.

Developments at the church dramatized the division within the Negro community between those supporting a go-slow policy and the youthful advocates of militant action. It was obvious that the latter group was predominent.

One speaker nodded toward students sitting in the choir who were among the more than eighty-five who initially refused to post bonds after being arrested for sit-in violations and went to jail. He said the negotiators should ask themselves if "you thought those students were playing." He then asserted:

"When we talk about going downtown to desegregated lunch counters, we're not begging, we're buying. I don't see how in the name of heaven any self-respecting Negro can go downtown under these circumstances."

The crowd gave an uenthusiastic response to such prominent elder statesmen of the community as the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr., the Rev. William Holmes Borders and the Rev. Samuel Williams, head of the Atlanta branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

At one point, they shouted down Mr. Borders when he urged them to hear one explanation of the negotiators' actions. They were similarly unreceptive to the remarks of the others.

The turning point came when one young Negro called for their repudiation. Benjamin Brown, a student leader, came to their defense. But it was Dr. King who turned the tide.

He pointed out that not one lunch counter in the Deep South had been desegregated.

"Even if desegregation does not take place before next September, Atlanta will be involved in the first break-

'Sit-Ins' Urged to Broaden Program

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat. 4-1-61

ATLANTA—Roy Wilkins has called on the college community here to extend the spirit of the sit-ins to a four-point program for attaining first-cass citizenship.

The NAACP executive secretary addressed a student assembly at Spelman College, one of the centers of the local sit-in movement.

Mr. Wilkins praised the students for bringing the problem of racial discrimination in Atlanta to the attention of the American public.

"When white men and women in a Deep South state sit down to negotiate on the abolition of racial segregation in public eating places, this in itself is a significant advance," he said.

Settling The Sit-In Issue

The agreement reported Tuesday by representatives of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, leading downtown merchants and leaders of the Sit-In Movement over lunch counter segregation seems to settle the issue.

The substance of the agreement, according to reports, is that the stores concerned would re-open the lunch counters as operated in the past, but would desegregate them by next fall when the Atlanta public schools remove their racial restrictions. Employees laid-off as a result of the lunch counter closings would be re-employed. A large number of Negroes were among them.

The Negro leaders of the Movement would call-off the boycott, picketing and sit-ins and help to bring back a condition of normalcy in the city as soon as possible.

Desegregation of the public schools is the most important issue and all responsible citizens should work to relieve tensions and help to provide an atmosphere which will permit the change with smoothness.

The resolution of the sit-in question should be good news to both sides because no long drawn out controversy would serve the true interest of either. We have always felt that the settlement of issues by negotiation and voluntary agreement is in the best interest of all concerned.

In resolving the issue here by agreement, leaders of both races have set an example which might be followed in other communities where a similar controversy exists.

Atlantans discuss sitdown movement

ATLANTA — The student sit-in movement has accomplished more than people think, M. Carl Holman told an Atlanta University Center Town Meeting last week.

The other members of the panel, which was assessing the successes, failures, and prospects of the movement, agreed with the editor of the Atlanta Inquirer.

Lonnie King, Chairman of the Committee on the Appeal for Human Rights, said that the students had disturbed the complacence of the "black bourgeoisie" and aroused the consciences of the colored middle-class.

Margaret Long, columnist for the Atlanta Journal, said that not many white people have avenues to say what they mean, but that the movement was causing them to think and, by taking thought, to add cubits to their stature.

* * *

IF SEGREGATION does not crumble, there will be many more years of the movement, King said. He noted that the white man can stand years of litigation, but not direct action.

Although Mr. King scored the coldness of some older leaders toward the movement, Mr. Holman said that 100 per cent support is not important.

"It is debasing to think that colored persons act 100 per cent," he said.

Both he and Miss Long observed that young colored persons have discovered the power to shape events and have also brought white students into the movement.

Progress will be slow in some places, Mr. Holman said split-level houses, or freedom. but the important thing is to To the students, freedom is decide what is the highest the highest goal." good, "peace, love, Cadillacs,

Accusations Drawn Against 26 Sit-Ins

Assistant Solicitor James L. Webb announced Thursday that Fulton County Criminal Court has drawn up accusations against 26 college sit-in students, charging that they violated the state's anti-trespass law, by demonstrating at racially segregated eating facilities last month in the downtown area.

Webb further stated that the accusations Thursday were signed by H. J. Sprayberry, owner of the Sprayberry's Cafeteria on Peachtree St., scene of the first demonstration last month.

It has been reported by the solicitor's office that accusations are being drawn up and readied to ign against more than 80 students, ministers and doctors that were arrested and charged with violation of the trespass law.

Criminal Court Solicitor John I. Kelley stated that he expected to meet with Judge Charles Wofford and Judge Charles G. Bruce to set a trial date for the students.

Kelley indicated that the trials if set routinely, will probably be placed on the calendar for trial week after next. He stated that it will be up to the attorneys for the defendants to decide whether to try the cases separately or as a group.

The solicitor said that his office has decided to charge the sit-inners arrested last month with violation of the antitrespass act only because the law has recently been upheld by the Georgia Court of Appeals.

It is expected that the anti-trespass law will be taken to the U. S. Supreme Court, if held to be legal under Georgia law. Many students stated that the sit-ins were repeated to focus national attention on the fact that the Fulton Criminal Court refused to draw up accusations in the cases to test the law.

Solicitor Kelley stated in an interview two weeks ago to Stanley S. Scott, Atlanta Daily World reporter, that the cases would be filed in the near future.

The more than 70 arrested students refused to make $100 bail and decided to stay in jail until last week, when they yielded to adult citizens, to accept bail.

The students who have been processed for trial so far have been identified as: Harold Andrews, William Beasley, Gene Edward Flowers, Marsha Goodwin, Leon Greene, Suzon Grimes, Wilford Hepburn, Frank Holloway, Richard Hope, Lonnie Cecil King, Jr., Harold Middlebrook, Ralph M. Moore, Charles Person, David Mitchell, Ernest Moon, Johnnie Price, William T. Robinson, Charles Smith, E. Christine Sparks, Lenora Taitt, Solomon Taylor, Herschelle Sullivan, Yvonne Tucker, LeRoy Washington, Robert Y. Watley and Laurine Weaver.

Nine Sit-Ins Post Bonds In Atlanta Cases

ATLANTA, Ga.—(SNS)—Nine students Tuesday afternoon were reported to have posted bonds of $100 each and secured release from the Fulton County jail, it was reported.

The students, part of a group who had participated in local sit-ins, had earlier refused to post bond. The students were not immediately identified. Three others posted bonds last week and were released from jail pending trial on charges lodged aganst them under the state's anti-trespassing law

Atlanta's Terminal Station was the scene of a sit-in arrest Tuesday when Rev. Fred C. Bennette, Jr., 32, attempted to receive service in the restaurant.

Rev. Bennette, identified as a college student at Morris Brown. Police Capt. J. L. Mosley stated that he had been informed that Rev. Bennette had arrived by train from Jacksonville.

Capt. Mosley said that the minister had been asked to leave the restaurant twice by the manager and refused. He was then arrested under the Georgia anti-trespass law.

Eight Atlanta ministers were arrested last week at the Terminal Station for sit-in activity, and joined 77 student sit-in demonstrators in jail after refusing to post bond.

The preachers posted bond the following day with the student's choosing to remain in County Jail rather than pay bond.

Sit-In Trials Reset For May

ATLANTA, March 13 (AP)—Trials of 58 Negro sit-in demonstrators originally scheduled for next week have been postponed until May 9, Fulton Criminal Solicitor John I. Kelley said today.

Kelley said this means that the trials of all 84 Negroes defendants arrested in recent Atlanta sit-in demonstrations now have been delayed.

He already had announced that 26 other Negroes, originally scheduled for trial tomorrow, will be tried by Judge Charles Bruce, April 25.

Kelley said the Negroes' attorney filed a motion asking for the postponement because he would be tied up in other courts next week.

Author foresaw Atlanta victory

WASHINGTON

Author Lillian Smith said a settlement in the Atlanta "jail without bail" struggle to desegregate lunch counters was in the making Tuesday before the news broke that an agreement had been actually reached.

"It's reported that a settlement will be reached after Easter," Miss Smith told the AFRO after her speech before the National Workshop for Religious Liberals at All Souls Church.

"Students have stirred Atlanta, and the whole South for that matter, as nothing else has," she said of the sitdown movement.

"Those young people who went to jail made Atlanta very uncomfortable. In following civil disobedience, they take the attitude that if you break the law you will have to go to jail."

She referred to anti-trespass laws under which some 200 students were jailed recently in the struggle that has gone on continuously since last fall.

* * *

THE SETTLEMENT called for complete desegregation of all downtown Atlanta eating facilities beginning this fall when the school system is slated to be desegregated.

Miss Smith told the audience at All Souls Church. "There aren't hundreds of our students, but thousands of them who are making a political and moral impact by stirring the conscience of the South as nothing else has done."

She said the movement has enabled whites for the first time to discuss openly the desegregation problem.

The White Citizens Council, however, is carrying on what she described as "organized terror" by way of threats over the telephone and whispered warnings in the streets.

Threats are made in the streets in New Orleans in the school desegregation struggle, she said. "If you don't take your child out of that school, your home will be bombed."

* * *

MISS SMITH stated that the two embattled New Orleans schools were not among 17 that had PTA agreement for desegregation.

"It seems that the two were chosen to make desegregation fail," she said.

About the University of Georgia, she said, the fact wasn't publicized that white girls in their pajamas lined up in the dormitory to hiss Cnarlayne Hunter when she was expelled under mob pressure.

"This worried many other students and members of the university faculty," she said.

* * *

MOST OF the girls had shown friendly interest in Miss Hunter until mob violence erupted, Miss Smith said.

Her explanation for this reversal was:

"Very few white people now who haven't been indoctrinated in such a way that secretly they fear themselves as human beings and fear to talk with one another and with mankind about the personal and the individual that means so much."

She said, "Segregation was built up by our politicians in the South.

"You hear a great deal about the breakdown of communications between the races, but I say it is harder to get one Southerner (white) to communicate with the others."

* * *

SHE SAID the great danger in the world today is that leaders of the rising non-white nations will resort to racism that goes deep down into man and loves to live with his anxiety.

"They can become great powers the way our Southern politicians have held every one of us," she said.

Some 300 delegates from over the country registered for the three-day meeting that ended Tuesday.

On various subjects, they heard a list of speakers that included Justice William O. Douglas, Sens. Joseph S. Clark, John Sherman, Paul H. Douglas, Harrison A. Williams and Hubert Humphrey.

The New York delegation from the Community Church, the Rev. Donald Harrington, pastor, consisted of the following:

Mrs. Maude Veal, Miss Beatrice Worthy, Mrs. Lealine Tucker, Mrs. Marion Maurer, Miss Mae Tabbonon and Isaac McNatt, regional director of the Unitarian Fellowship for Social Justice.

Other delegates were Mrs. James T. Wiley, Yellow Springs, Ohio; Miss Karen Schmitt, Indianapolis; Mrs. Kenneth J. Smith, Long Island, N.Y.; Mrs. Elizabeth A. Brandstatter, Syoret, N.Y.

Glenn Brown, Davenport, Iowa; Pruutt Townsend, Boston and Tom Williams, Columbia, S.C.

Atlanta Mayor bars rabble-rousers

ATLANTA, Ga. — There will be no "segregation circus" here next September, Mayor William Hartsfield vowed, last week as downtown merchants and a number of anti-segregation groups agreed to a pact to end lunch counter segregation next fall.

Mayor Hartsfield promised that if out of state trouble-makers come to Atlanta, "they will be handled most sternly."

The community leaders and business men agreed to the desegregation pact, March 7.

The agreement calls for an immediate end of the sitdown demonstrations and boycotts of the stores and desegregation of the lunch counters when public schools are desegregated next fall.

* * *

OTHER DETAILS of the agreement included the following:

(1) Colored leaders must make every effort to end the sitdown demonstrations and boycotts of downtown stores.

(2) White merchants must begin, "where practical" rehiring some 500 to 600 workers who lost their jobs during the demonstrations.

Meanwhile, the lunch counters of stores which were closed during the demonstration are to be reopened on a segregated basis.

THE AGREEMENT was signed by 14 stores and 11 colored adult and youth leaders.

The stores signing the pact were Rich's, the largest in the city; Davidson's, an affiliate of Macy's in New Ycrk; Woolworth, McCrory's, Grant's, Walgreen Co., Jacob's Pharmacy, Kress, Sears and Roebuck, Kresge's, H. L. Green Company, Newberry's and Lanes.

The leaders who signed were Dr. William H. Border, pastor of Wheat Street Baptist Church; A. T. Walden, counsel for the sitdowners; Dr. M. L. King Sr., pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church; Leroy R. Johnson, attorney, member of the Atlanta Negro Voters League's executive committee.

Also, Jesse Hill Jr., actuary, Atlanta Life Insurance Co.; Mrs. P. Q. Yancey, Student - Adult Liaison Committee; the Rev. O.M. Moss, pastor, Providence Baptist Church; Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president, Atlanta University; Lonnie C. King, chairman, Students' Committee on Appeal for Human Rgihts, and Miss Herchell Sullivan, vice chairman of the students' group.

Following the settlement, Mayor Hartsfield designated March "Shop Downtown in Atlanta Month."

Settlement In Atlanta Lunch Counter Sit-Ins

ATLANTA, 3 (UPI) — Atlanta Negro leaders called off sit-in demonstrations and boycotts of segregated stores Tuesday in return for a pledge from leading merchants of future desegregation of lunch counters.

Lunch counters in the city's two leading department stores and in 11 drug and variety chains representing about 75 stores — many of which have been closed by sit-ins — were to reopen Thursday on a segregated basis. Desegregation apparently will not begin until the Atlanta public school system is integrated, probably this fall.

In another victory for Negro integrationists Tuesday, the Georgia court of appeals ruled a 12-month jail term handed Martin Luther King Jr. for driving without a proper license was in error.

The appeals court ordered Judge Oscar Mitchell of the DeKalb county criminal court to resentence King.

King had paid a $25 fine on the charge, but was arrested for violating probation after he was jailed for taking part in a sit-in demonstration.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce made the announcement. It was subscribed to by officials of the stores involved and by Dr. Martin Luther King Sr., father of the well-known Negro integration leader, and by Lonnie C. King, leader of Negro college students who have conducted intensive protests against lunch counter segregation.

Other Negro leaders also signed and agreed to use their influence to stop all Negro demonstrations.

There was no clear-cut announcement about the date for desegregation.

Later in the day the Chamber of Commerce issued a "clarifying statement" saying the original statement meant the lunchrooms will be reopened on a segregated basis "pending a final decision on the Atlanta school issue and that they will then follow the pattern of that decision."

"We feel that the fine relationship that has existed between the races for a long number of years should be reinstated in Atlanta in every way as soon as is possible," the statement said.

The statement appeared to be a clear-cut victory for the Atlanta segment of the widespread sit-in movement.

The announcement was subscribed to by Atlanta's two major department stores and by 11 chain drug and variety stores. It came one day after the Georgia legislature adjourned for the year.

The statement said "leading merchants have stated that it is their decision to carry out in lunch rooms and other facilities the same pattern as has been recognized and evidenced" by admission of two Negro students to the University of Georgia, decision of the Atlanta school board to comply with federal integration orders this fall and actions of the late Georgia general assembly in repealing the state's massive resistance anti-segregation laws.

"The Negro leadership has stated that every effort will be made to eliminate all boycotts, reprisals, picketing and sit-ins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible," the statement said.

The statement was subscribed to by Rich's and Davison's department stores, by the Walgrens, Jacobs, and Lane's drug chain and by the Woolworth's, McCrory, Grants, S. H. Kress, Kresge, H. L. Green and Newberrys variety chains. Sears Roebuck also signed.

Accurate assessment of the economic damage suffered by the stores has been difficult but the boycott has at times appeared to be highly effective in a city where about one-third of the population is Negro.

Apr 1961

GEORGIA

LUNCH COUNTER

Boycott by adults in Atlanta gives support to sitdowners

The Afro American
Baltimore, Md.
3-4-61

ATLANTA — (ANP)—The fight for human dignity in this city has developed into a full scale, all out cold war involving all segments of the colored community.

Because of their dramatic aspects, the sit-in demonstrations and the decision on the part of young people to remain in jail have been highlighted in the press, radio and television of the nation.

However, the adult elements of the colored community are waging a quiet, undramatic struggle along economic lines that is showing remarkable success.

It is the boycott of the downtown stores that have enjoyed colored patronage for many years.

* * *

MERCHANTS CONCEDED that the boycott of the down-down area has been almost 100 per cent effective.

Department store sales in the central-city area for the full week period ended Feb. 4 were down 12 per cent from last year, the Federal Reserve Bank reported.

The receipts of some variety stores have shown a far greater drop.

Leading merchants have said that they are willing to desegregate their lunch counters, a move that is considered inevitable. But they argue that they cannot do so because Richs, Inc., the city's largest department store, has refused to go along.

* * *

RICH'S IS a family operation that had an excellent reputation among colored persons prior to the sit-in dispute. This was because of the family's many gifts to colored educational and charitable causes and the store's courteous treatment of colored shoppers.

Rich's was the first major store in Atlanta to address colored patrons as "Mr." and "Mrs."

But on a walk through the spacious first floor recently it was possible to find only two colored persons — one customer and a candy counter clerk. There were few white customers, too.

Shortly after the sit-in controversy began, Richard H. Rich, president of the store, and Frank H. Neely, the board chairman, were said to be willing to desegregate once the school desegregation problem had been solved.

However, they took no action after Governor Vandiver and the Legislature cleared the way for local communities to comply with federal court rulings.

* * *

SEVERAL ATTEMPTS have been made to reach both Rich and Neely. A subordinate, who declined to permit the use of his name, refused to outline the store's present position.

"We'd rather not talk about it," he said. "We're in a dilemma." He also said, "there's not going to be any change in the immediate future."

Other merchants have said that they would lose many white customers to Rich's if they led the way in desegregating lunch counters. Some observers have called this view questionable. Meanwhile, most agree that every downtown merchant is suffering.

"The most important thing that can be done is to convince the power structure that this situation can ruin the downtown area," one executive said.

"The effect is not going to be confined to the retail stores. It will hit the banks, the office supply concerns, the insurance firms, the real estate interests and all the rest."

Sit-ins Ease On Picketing, Boycotts Go On

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
3-5-61

By FRED POWLEDGE

The hard core of Atlanta's Negro sit-in movement has agreed to suspend picketing and other demonstrations at downtown stores, even though its 75 members are dissatisfied with a lunch counter desegregation agreement worked out for them last week.

These college students and their adult sympathizers plan in the meantime to continue their boycotts against stores which practice segregation, although they have been promised that the bars will be dropped by next fall.

* * *

THE STUDENTS—not a formal organization, but about 75 individuals who have taken part in sit-ins for the past year—met Saturday morning and made the choice.

This came a few hours after the students' leaders—the people who made the agreement with the merchants—were severely tested in a public meeting attended by 2,000 persons. The sit-in movement held together, some said afterwards, because integration leader Martin Luther King Jr. put out a strong, last-minute plea for unity.

Those who disagreed with the pact, signed Monday by 17 leading merchants and 11 Negro students and adults, said that before Friday night's meeting they were considering further sit-ins and picketing. Now, they said, there is little sentiment for this.

A press release issued Tuesday and explanations of it by a chamber and a Negro spokesman said that the lunch counters would be desegregated next fall after the city's schools are desegregated.

The Rev. Samuel Williams, head of the Atlanta branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Friday night that the agreement was not an "if and when" thing at all.

"It is agreed," he said, "that desegregation of the lunchrooms and other facilities will take place no later than next fall, regardless of what occurs in connection with public school desgregation."

The agreement also says, according to a press release issued Tuesday, that lunch counters will remain open and segregated until the merchants choose to desegregate them, and it binds the Negro signers to an effort to eliminate all boycotts, sit-ins, reprisals or other demonstrations.

* * *

THE STUDENTS who met Saturday morning had been meeting all week to mull over their protest. They disagreed with the agreement's provision for desegregation six months from now, and they did not like the provision for segregated counters until then.

"There was definitely a strong feeling this week that the students should resume the sit-ins and picketing," said Carolyn Long, one of the sit-in leaders, after Saturday's meeting.

"But the public meeting Friday night helped us, to a certain extent, to come to a decision."

She said Mr. King's call for unity had a strong effect on the students. "Unity," she said, "is the most important thing now. We realized that."

Savannah Eyes End of Year-Long Meets, Boycotts

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
3-11-61

SAVANNAH, Ga.—Sunday, March 12, will be a "super" Sunday in this Coastal Empire capital city, for it will mark the 52nd weekly mass meeting and the 52nd week of boycotting aimed at local merchants on West Broughton Street by a redoubtable NAACP branch, headed by Wesley W. Law, who is also state prexy.

'For one full year now the attack has been on, and is being relentlessly carried on with the hope that the future will bring capitulation on the part of the merchants who have lost tremendously in Negro business, because they refuse to desegregate their facilities. The NAACP is expected to arrange for a very special program to celebrate mass meeting No. 51, climaxing the year's efforts.

■

THE 51st MASS meeting was held Sunday at First Evergreen Baptist Church on East Bolton St., near East Broad. The 50th meeting, held Feb. 26, at historic Tremont Temple Baptist Church was a unique meeting and deserves special narration.

At that meeting the son of the minister, L. S. Stell Jr., delivered the invocation, with more than a thousand persons overflowing the church into the street outside.

Then came pretty Mrs. Mercedes Wright, called "the sweetheart of the boycott movement," with an unusual personality fitted for getting the point over. When Mrs. Wright asked that everyone who had boycotted Broughton St. for the past 50 weeks raise their hand, one thousand hands shot into the air and remained uplifted, like a truncheon or a club against all that is indecent in this era.

When the member of the boycott committee asked how many would continue to withhold patronage from Broughton St. merchants for another year, not one hand wavered, but each one remained aloft, firm and unmovable. Mrs. Wright pointed out that no NAACP requests had been met and the fight must go on.

Main speaker for this meeting was Leola Clinton, a young high school student from Greenville, S. C., a participant in the student protests in that city.

■

AMONG OTHER points scored by Miss Clinton was one in which she pointed out that Negro mothers "are doing much to aid this insult against decency by dragging their children to the rear of buses, and in this very young formative stage of being, teach them a deep sense of insecurity and inferiority that will last a lifetime.

She flayed apathy on the part of the Negro professional business men who decline to take leading roles in the fight for freedom. Her speech drew much applause. Rev. J. M. Benton, pastor of Tremont Temple, told the group that adults cannot allow the youth to fight this battle alone. It was an interesting meeting.

But all eyes are now turned toward next Sunday, when the boycott and mass meetings roll into their 52nd week—one full year. What's ahead is the big question on every tongue now.

■

Malcolm MacLean Friday ordered Savannah's city-owned parks integrated. The Mayor also named a Negro minister, the Rev. O. L. Oliver, to be a member of the City Park and Recreation Board to fill a vacancy already existing on that body. His action was hailed by NAACP officials as a tremendous step forward.

LUNCH COUNTER AGREEMENT REACHED, PLEDGE SIT-IN END

Atlanta Daily World

Chamber Of Commerce Issues "Agreement"

Atlanta, Ga. Wed 3-8-61

Atlanta was promised relief from its uneasy position of "sit-ins" over segregated lunch counters and other facilities Tuesday, after major Atlanta department and variety and drugstores agreed to desegregate them by next fall. The timetable would not be beyond desegregation of city public schools slated this fall. The Chamber of Commerce issued the statement of agreement.

The statement came from a group of leading white merchants and representatives of the Negro community, both adults and students. Both promised to exert every effort to reestablish an atmosphere of "good racial relationship" and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible.

An unofficial source said the lunch counters were reopening on a segregated basis, but that some businesses would desegregate voluntarily within the next few week. It was reported that much of the "truce" was secured with the agreement that Atlanta's school desegregation issue is the key to the lunch counter openings on a general basis, although several chain -operated stores are reportedly ready to comply with national policy. School desegregation is under court order for this September 1961.

Although the eating facilities will be re-opened for the present on a segregated basis, Tuesday's action appeared to be a major victory for the Negro groups pressing for desegregation.

Attorney General Eugene Cook said the state wodlu be "helpless" to enforce its new anti - trespass law under which Negro sit-inners have been arrested by the score - if management of stores refuse to cooperate or if they "voluntarily submit to racial integration."

CONGRATULATED "ALL SIDES"

Atlanta Mayor William Hartsfield congratulated "all sides upon a fair and statesmanlike approach to this situation."

The mayor served notice on "professional rabblerousers from outside the city they will be dealt with most sternly" in the event of trouble in the city's desegregation transition.

"The community affected and the people of the state must now look to all citizens to exercise the same restraint which they have demonstrated over the years in not creating or provoking intolerable conditions which might tend to generate violence," Gov. Ernest Vandiver said of the development.

The complete Atlanta Chamber of Commerce Stateemnt follows:

"We feel that the fine relationship which has existed between the races for a long number of years should be reinstated in Atlanta in every way as soon as is possible. In order to reestablish good relationhips, the leading merchants have stated that it is their decision to carry out in lunchrooms and other facilities the same patterns as have been recognized and evidenced (1) by actions of the 1961 General Assembly of Georgia (2) the admission of qualified students to the University of Georgia, and (3) the decision of the Atlanta Board of Education to comply with the orders of the Federal Court—all relating to the public school issues in Atlanta and as are finally decided upon in the public school issues in Atlanta. The Negro leadership has stated that every effort will be made to eliminate all boycotts, reprisals, picketing and sit-ins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible. Each party is fully cognizant of the limitations of its own commitments on behalf of any group other than that it specifically represents."

ATLANTA RETAIL STORES PARTY TO AGREEMENT:

Rich's
Davison's
Woolworth's
McCrory's
Grant's
Walgreen Company
Jacobs' Pharmacy
S. H. Kress and Co.
Sears, Roebuck and Co.
Kresge's
H. L. Green Co.
Newberry's
Lane's

NEGRO LEADERS PARTY TO AGREEMENT:

Dr. Wm. Holmes Borders, Pastor of Wheat Street Baptist Church, and Chairman of Student - Adult Liaison Committee.

Attorney A. T. Walden, Special Negotiator, Chairman of Atlanta Negro Voters League.

Dr. M. L. King, Sr., Pastor, Ebenezer Baptist Church and Member of Student - Adult Liaison Committee.

Leroy R. Johnson, Attorney-at-Law, Member of Executive Committee Atlanta Negro Voters League.

Q. V. Williamson, business - man Executive Committee, Empire Realty Board) Member, Advisory Committee on Urban Renewal

Jesse Hill, Jr., Actuary, Atlanta Life Insurance Company.

Mrs. P. Q. Yancey, Housewife, Member of Adult - Student Liaison Committee.

Rev. O. M. Moss, Pastor, Providence Baptist Church.

Dr. Rufus E. Clement, President, Atlanta University.

Lonnie C. King, Chairman Committee on Appeal for Human Rights.

Miss Herschell Sullivan, Vice Chairman, Committee on Appeal for Human Rights.

Judge Puts Off Sit-In Charge Against Negro Demonstrators

The Montgomery Advertiser

Montgomery, Ala.

ATLANTA (AP) — Trial of sit-in charges against 34 Negro demonstrators was put off indefinitely Monday at the request of the prosecuting attorney.

Two Fulton County criminal court judges granted the postponement after Solicitor John I. Kelley reported that he had been given to understand that there will be no repetition of sit-ins.

Joining in asking the continuance was President Ivan Allen Jr. of the Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber coordinated negotiation of an agreement to desegregate department, drug and variety store eating places this fall.

Allen told the judges that the problem has now been solved and merchants feel that postponement of the trials would help to improve race relations.

Also agreeing to the continuance were operators of three eating places where the Negroes were arrested for violating the new Georgia Anti-Trepass Law. One said, however, that he was agreeing only to postponement and not to dismissal.

Prosecutor Kelley said if there are any future sit-ins he will move at once to bring the charges to trial. Judge Charles Bruce said he and Judge Charles Wofford likewise will insist that the conditions of postponement be carried out to the letter.

Bruce observed that he and Wofford feel that a postponement will serve the best interests of justice.

Sit-In Trials Are Continued

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta Jour.
p. 1

By STANLEY S. SCOTT

Atlanta merchants and attorneys for sit-in demonstrators met in Fulton Criminal Court Monday morning to hear a motion for continuance of the sit-in cases for an indefinite period of time.

Jan. 4-25-61

Judges Charles G. Bruce and Charles C. Wofford, after hearing plaintiffs in the case, "agreed that the motion would serve the best interests of justice," and ordered a continuance in the sit-in trials originally scheduled for today.

Criminal Court Solicitor John L. Kelley told the court that, "Mr. [illegible] Sprayberry, owner of a cafeteria on Peachtree St., scene of sit-in demonstrations, had come to his office and stated that he had met in conference with a group of gentlemen from the Chamber of Commerce and agreed to go along with their recommendations to not press the charges."

However, Kelley stated that Sprayberry wanted to go on record as saying he had the right to serve whomever he pleased.

SIT-IN COUNSEL READS CONTINUANCE MOTION

Attorney D. L. Hollowell, representing the sit-in students read the motion for continuance, which stated in part:

"Movants show that foregoing 26 cases are listed on the calendar of Tuesday, April 25, 1961; and, that a large number of similar cases are scheduled for trial in this court during the ensuing week."

"That the City and County of Fulton is experiencing unusual growth in population, industry and commerce as well as in prestige as an important regional city; that the problems inherent in the issues of the subject accusations are among those which must be ameliorated in order to effect a smooth transition of the said City of Atlanta from that of being a great city to that of becoming an even greater city."

Atty. Hollowell, in stating that the motion, "is not filed merely for the purpose of delay, but filed in the interest of justice," stated that: "It is believed that the justice which society has a right to expect and this Court has a duty to dispense would be justly served if this Honorable Court further continued the respective cases for an indefinite period of time and made timely disposition of them as in its judicious wisdom seemed just and fair in light of all the circumstances."

A group of merchants, representing the larger business interests in the city, represented by Ivan Allen, president of the City Chamber of Commerce, spoke before the court expressing their desire to effect a harmonious disposition of the sit-in cases.

BUSINESS LEADERS VOICE CONCURRENCE

Mr. Allen, principal in the "agreement" that was reached a few weeks ago between Negro and whites to stop student demonstrations, after it was agreed to desegregate downtown eating facilities in the Fall, stated "It is our feeling that a great atmosphere has been created between the races in this town. The problems facing us several months ago have now been eliminated."

The Chamber of Commerce leader said "Relations are better in Atlanta presently than they have been for some time ,and we have the best race relations in the South here in Atlanta."

Attoney A. T. Walden, mediator for sit -in students in their efforts to gain concessions from the downtown merchants stated befoe the judges: "I am glad of the opportunity to concur with Mr. Allen. We have spent many countless hours on this project realizing what a great city we have."

Walden further stated that, "Life is a compromise, we have given and taken in this situation." He said, "There has been wonderful cooperation on the part of all groups, the students, merchants, Chamber of Commerce and everyone."

I very strongly urge the court and concur with these gentlemen on a continuance, Walden said.

Joseph Ross, presidet of Davison-Paxon department store, stepped before the courthouse microphone and said, "A fundamental change is taking place, and an attempt to solve our problems is being made."

C. S. Semple, vice president of Rich's department store, made a brief statement saying, "On behalf of Rich's we would like to say that we concur with the motion for continuance."

Other department store representatives concuring with the latest efforts to dispose of the cases included: H. B. Thompson, public relations director for Woolworth's Robert Woods, attorney for Sear's Roebuck and Co.

Merchants of privately owned establishments, scene of the student demonstrations, were on hand to express their desire for a continuance of the cases.

One of the storeowners said, "I'll go along. I believe the sensible thing at this time would be to go along."

Judges Bruce and Wofford recessed the court for five minutes after hearing parties in the case, and convened the hearing by stating:

"After careful consideration, it is agreed that it would serve the best interest of justice, in view of the fact that statements have been made by merchants in addition to the motion read, therefore, it is so ordered."

MARKS SECOND CONTINUANCE HERE

Trials for the more than 80 sit-in demonstrators was originally scheduled to start March 14, but a continuance was granted the students March 10, on a motion by Atty. D. L. Hollowell.

Yesterday's action by the court, granting continuance of the cases for an indefinite period of time, indicates that the disposition of the sit-in cases will depend on the outcome of promised voluntary lunch counter integration in the Fall.

On the other hand, Sol. Kelley said Monday, "We have made it crystal clear, that if anymore sit-ins take place, we will take the present cases on the calendar for trial."

26 in Sit-Ins Face 2 More Counts Here

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Thurs, 3-30-61

Fulton Criminal Court Solicitor John I. Kelley said Wednesday that he will redraw accusations against 26 sit-in demonstrators to include two additional counts.

Kelley said that in addition to trespass charges against Negroes who participated in sit-ins, the accusations will charge disturbing the peace. Kelley said one count will charge that the demonstrators were guilty of "statutory violation of breach of peace."

COUNTS EXPLAINED

This count, Kelley said, contends that two or more persons gathered together to violate the law are guilty even though no one asked them to leave the premises.

The other count, according to Kelley, will charge that the Negroes were guilty of disturbing the peace because both property owners and law enforcement officials asked them to leave and they refused.

TRIAL APRIL 25

Kelley said that conviction on either one of the two additional counts will allow punishment for only one count. He said that the new accusations present a more formidable case against the defendants and are drawn with an eye to recent Georgia Supreme Court decisions which have upheld convictions of demonstrators.

Trial for the 26 Negroes charged with violations in connection with demonstrations at Sprayberry's Cafeteria is scheduled for April 25 in the court of Criminal Court Judge Charles G. Bruce.

Public Doesn't Know What to Do

Disunity in Atlanta!

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat 3-25-61

ATLANTA, Ga.—Last week's angry student repudiation of the agreement signed between a special negotiating committee and white merchants representing 70 to 75 stores that promised desegregation of Downtown lunch counters by next fall, has left many Negro citizens here in a genuine state of confusion.

People don't know whether to go downtown and shop or to stay away from the white stores, as a result of the student action at the hectic Friday night mass meeting.

The students voiced overwhelmingly their decision to continue to boycott the stores, in spite of the committee's signed agreement.

■

CHAGRIN COULD be seen on the faces of most of the committee members present, even though several of them had tried hard to explain to the students and the public that newspaper stories carried in local white dailies were inaccurate and that the issue in no way depended upon public school desegregation, or anything else.

The confusion caused by these stories in the daily papers created such an air of tension that the committee was compelled to alter its plans and make public certain aspects of the agreement it had planned to keep silent.

A prepared statement was distributed at the mass meeting and read by Rev. Samuel Williams, president of the local NAACP branch.

■

THE PERTINENT paragraphs read as follows:

(1) It is not true that the integration of the lunch rooms and other facilities is left to some uncertain "if-or-when" situation; nor is it true that it is dependent upon the settlement of the public school desegregation issue.

The FACTS are: It is agreed that desegregation of the lunch rooms and other facilities will take place not later than next fall, regardless of what occurs in connection with public school desegregation.

It is not required of any merchant that he must wait until this final date if he sees fit to procee earlier with the orderly desegregation of his facilities.

These were the basic points in the agreement, but, despite the emphasis placed upon them by the committee members, the students said the boycott would continue. At the same time, the agreement was already signed by both sides and was apparently in effect.

To find out the status of things at the week-end, The Courier questioned Atty. A. T. Walden, who spearheaded the negotiations and agreement. Colonel Walden said that as far as the committee was concerned the agreement was in effect, but that the students had voiced their intention of continuing the boycott. It was indicated that the sit-ins and picketing would be halted.

Incidentally, student leaders Lonnie C. King and Hershelle Sullivan, co-chairmen of the student movement, and both signers of the agreement, both resigned their posts with the student movement, but the students refused to accept their resignations and reelected them to office.

Reveal Inside Story Of Atlanta 'Sit-In' Victory

By AL KUETTNER

ATLANTA—(UPI)—Negroes were told Saturday that they have won complete victory in their campaign to desegregate facilities in Atlanta department and variety stores.

It was the most significant civil rights victory in the long sit-in movement that began in Greensboro, N. C., nearly two years ago.

A crowd estimated at more than 2,000 cheered the news but denounced one phase of an agreement worked out with Atlanta merchants which delays the implementation date until fall.

It took the silver voice of integration leader Martin Luther King jr., to calm angry voices that had accused their leaders of becoming "turncoats" and to restore order to a packed house in a Baptist church.

No vote was taken during the tumultuous meeting but there was strong sentiment for continuing a boycott of stores until the segregation barrier is lifted.

LED FIGHT

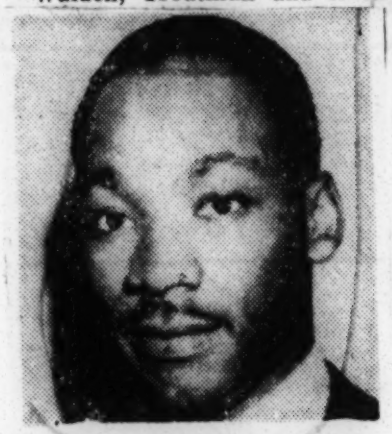
Atty. A. T. Walden, who was instrumental in negotiating with white leaders an end to the city's 14-week sit-in movement, predicted after the meeting that most of the city's Negroes would go along with the settlement.

Walden, who at 75 recently retired from active law practice, was the key figure in the settlement negotiations. With friends on both sides of the racial fence, he began building communications as the first tep toward a solution.

Walden called on an old white friend, Atty. Robert B. Troutman. The two then enlisted the support of businessman Ivan Allen, jr., president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Allen had recently come out strongly for an open schools policy in a controversy between federal court orders desegregating Atlanta schools.

Allen's urging that Atlanta schools be kept open regardless of desegregation and regardless of a state law closing integrated schools swung a big segment of business leaders into that camp. The State Legislature soon voted at the request of Gov. Ernest Vandiver to abandon the law.

Walden, Troutman and Allen



REV. MARTIN L. KING

formed a committee of three on the sit-ins and soon began holding a series of meetings with the parties involved. At several sessions up to 10 Negroes sat down with representatives of 17 stores or chains.

EXACT PROMISE

They hammered out a "memorandum of agreement" that included a promise by the stores to gradually adopt a desegregation policy in their eating places as integration comes to Atlanta schools. This is scheduled to begin this fall.

The Atlanta sit-ins began on a regular basis last Thanksgiving weekend and cut sharply into Christmas business at big department stores. Many downtown stores had closed tea rooms and lunch counters and scores of Negroes were jailed for violating the state's anti-[illegible]ss law.

[illegible]ials of 17 stores or chains and 11 Negroes worked out the agreement which called for:

—Desegregation of eating and all other facilities in the affected stores in the Fall, regardless of whether Atlanta schools are integrated then.

—Re-hiring of most Negroes released when the eating places closed.

—Further meetings to provide for "orderly desegregation" of the facilities.

In return, the Negro leadership pledged to work for a complete end to boycotts and picketing which have accompanied the sit-ins.

Walden, who has fought the Negroes' civil rights battle in the courts for half a century, urged compliance with the delayed action agreement.

"What difference does a few months make when we have been fighting for this 100 years?" he said.

38a 1961

GEORGIA

17 Negroes Arrested for Atlanta Sit-in

Philadelphia Inquirer

United Press International

integration troubles flared on both sides of the Mason-Dixon line Tuesday.

Seventeen Negro students were arrested in Atlanta, Ga., for staging a lunch counter sit-in demonstration, and in New Rochelle, N. Y., the City Board of Education voted to appeal a Federal ruling ordering the Lincoln Elementary School to be desegregated.

At Oxford, Miss., eight highway patrol plainclothesmen were stationed at the University of Mississippi's administration building after a rumor swept the campus that Negroes would try to enroll in classes.

The Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) announced in New York that demonstrations would be staged in "sympathy" with 13 Negro students sentenced to jail terms in Rock Hill, S. C., for refusing to leave a segregated lunch counter.

Student leader Edward King, of Atlanta, urged that Rock Hill be made the next battleground for integration. He called on "all who share the conviction of the students to go to Rock Hill and join them at the lunch counters and in jail."

Lonnie King, another student leader in the southern movement, was among the 17 arrested in Atlanta Tuesday. They were charged under the State's trespassing act when they refused to leave a cafeteria.

They had picked up food as they moved through the line; but when they got to the cashier their money was refused.

The vote by the New Rochelle board to appeal a Federal integration ruling followed a public meeting Monday night at which several speakers voiced opposition to the appeal.

Parents of eight Negro children, who filed the original suit, charge that Negroes in a particular section of the city have been allowed to register only at the New Rochelle-Lincoln Elementary School, which is 94 percent Negro.

They also declared their children were receiving a substandard education at the school.

Despite repeated reports of imminent integration attempts at the University of Mississippi, school officials said late Tuesday that no proper applications had been received.

6 More Students Arrested Here

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta Ga.

Refuse Bonds

Sat. 2-11-61

Six more students were arrested here Friday and jailed in lieu of $100 bond each, bringing to 70 the number now lodged in the Atlanta city jail as sit-in demonstrations continued against the city's segregated eating facilities.

The six arrested Friday never got to stage a sit-in. They were arrested when they refused to move from a strip of sidewalk in front of a coffee shop.

Restaurant Manager George Comb called police when the Negro students refused his orders to move and as each again refused to leave they were bundled into police cars and carted off to join the large group of their fellow students already lodged in the jail.

The latest arrests represented a slowdown in the week's activity. There were 29 arrested Thursday, 20 Wednesday and 17 Tuesday. This totals to more than the 70 now behind bars but several of those arrested the first day were later released and then arrested again.

The only student who has posted the $100 bond needed for freedom has been integration leader Lonnie King.

A court official said the students, all young men and women attending Negro colleges in the Atlanta area, may have to spend up to three weeks in jail before their cases come up before the next term of court.

A jail official noted that it might be necessary to bring in additional mattresses before then or have some of the students sleep on blankets if they continue to demonstrate, get themselves arrested and refuse to post bond.

Police Arrest 10 Students as Sit-Ins Wane

The Atlanta Constitution

Atlanta, Ga.

Sat. 2-11-61

By KEELER McCARTNEY

Ten Negro college students were arrested Friday as sit-in demonstrations, in an attempt to force integration of downtown restaurants, slowed in the fourth consecutive day of the newest drive.

Municipal Judge James Webb ordered all held under $100 bonds for Fulton Criminal Court on charges of violating the Georgia anti-trespass law.

Only one actually gained entrance to an eating establishment, officers said, and he was quickly removed after being instructed to leave by the owner.

GUARDS POSTED

Restaurant owners posted guards at the doors to turn away students, following the lead of a cafeteria owner in the Peachtree-Seventh Building where demonstrators first appeared Tuesday and returned again Wednesday.

The latest arrests brought to 32 the number of students who have been bound over this week under the anti-trespass law. Only two have posted bond.

Threats of overcrowded conditions at the Fulton County jail eased somewhat as a group of prisoners under sentence were moved out to Tattnall Prison at Reidsville and the county supplied additional mattresses for the jail.

ROOM FOR 100

A survey showed the jail could accommodate approximately 100 more than the 700 prisoners on hand Friday.

The demonstrations Friday were directed at a coffee shop at 1 Forsyth St., SW, and a grill at 66 Forsyth St., SW — the same two places where 39 students were arrested Thursday.

Lt. M. A. Hornsby said students first appeared at 66 Forsyth St. and finding the door barred most of them moved on to 1 Forsyth Street.

OTHERS NAMED

Elroy Embry, 33, of Ragland, Ala., a student at the Interdenominational Theological Seminary, walked into the 66 Forsyth St. grill behind a white patron, was asked to leave and was then placed in custody.

REPEATED SCENE

Hornsby said five others—Isaac John Miller, 17, Ft. Valley; Betty Vanusa Stevens, 18, Raleigh, N.C.; Willie Randolph Bryant, 17, of Mt. Pleasant, Tex.; Robert Travis Jr., 21, Vidalia, and Arthur Jackson Pindle, 18, Fayetteville, N.C., appeared at 1 Forsyth St. and were refused admittance.

The group stood on a concrete apron between the sidewalk and the restaurant door, Hornsby said. He stated in court he was told the apron was private property included in the restaurant lease.

Hornsby said Capt. J. L. Moseley ordered all persons standing on the apron — white and Negro —to leave and that all except the five obeyed.

Four others appeared later at

ATLANTA— LUNCH COUNTER

1 Forsyth St. and the same scene was repeated, Sgt. C. J. Strickland said. They were listed as Gwendolyn Wells, 20, of 2793 Morris Dr.; Gwinnett Rhodes, 19, of 1079 Coleman St., SW.; Birdie Hix, 20, 82 Linkwood Rd., and Bessie Smith, 21, 648 McGruder St., all Spellman students.

Gwinnett Rhodes, spokesman for the group, told the court: "We only went there to eat. The manager told us that was private property, where he made his living, and he did not want us there."

ASKS DISMISSAL

Attorney H. T. Ward moved for dismissals on the grounds police action was discriminatory and a violation of the freedom of assembly. Webb overruled the motions.

Meanwhile, the mass demonstrations which police had expected did not develop and the drive in its fourth day at least had slowed considerably. Seventeen were arrested Tuesday and 13 bound over; 20 were bound over Wednesday and 39 on Thursday.

Negroes Stage Foot-Stomping Rally In Atlanta

Charleston, S. C.

ATLANTA (AP)—Hundreds of Negroes, warned not to gather around the county jail, staged a foot - stomping church prayer meeting instead Sunday in sympathy for jailed sit-in demonstrators.

The state anti-trespass law under which 80 Negro students were arrested recently was called "unconstitutional, undemocratic and un-Christian" by one speaker, the Rev. William Holmes Borders.

"The current philosophy of the Southern white man is to keep the Negro down," said another speaker, the Rev. B. Joseph Johnson, who was released on bail after the series of sit-ins last week and the week before.

"After the Negro grows the food in the field, harvests it, prepares it and serves it, some white folks want to sit down and eat it all by themselves," Borders said to a burst of applause and stamping of feet.

"I'd be ashamed to look that white and act that black," he added.

Atlanta Arrests Negroes In Cafe

Birmingham Post Herald

Birmingham, Ala.

ATLANTA, Feb. 7 (AP)—Police arrested 17 Negro youths today in a cafeteria in an office building leased to Federal government agencies.

Nineteen Negroes appeared about 11 a.m. and 10 managed to go down the cafeteria line and be served before the establishment was closed.

H. J. Sprayberry, owner and manager of the cafeteria in the Peachtree-Seventh Bldg., twice asked the Negroes to leave. Lonnie C. King, leader of the demonstrators, said "We'll leave" and then tried to discuss the matter with Police Capt. J. F. Moseley.

At that point Sprayberry said he wanted the Negroes arrested and they were herded into three police cars and taken to city jail.

Two of the demonstrators today were freed when one said he had not heard Sprayberry's request to leave and the other said he was putting on his coat to obey.

Shortly after the arrests, Negro leaders wired Robert Kennedy, U. S. attorney general, to investigate the situation.

Some Students Make Bond In Sit-In Arrests

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Wed. 2-15-61

The Lane-Rexall lunch counter at Peachtree and Ellis Streets was closed Monday after four Negroes attempted to receive service. No arrests were made.

The counter has given infrequent service since it was a target of sit-in activity early last fall.

No sit-ins have been reported in the city this week. Three of the 80 students jailed last week refusing bond were released after posting bonds of $100 each.

The three released are: Willie J. Stewart, Tarpon Springs, Florida; Ralph L. Stephens of North Carolina, and Roy Carver Crettenden of Columbus, Ga.

20 Negroes Hauled To Jail After Atlanta Sit-In Moves

ATLANTA (AP) — Twenty Negroes were arrested Wednesday after further restaurant sit-in efforts and a leader said they went to jail prepared to stay there in a "moral protest" effort.

The sit-ins occurred at Sprayberry's Cafeteria, where 17 Negroes were arrested Tuesday, and at Denhy's Grill in downtown Atlanta.

Among those arrested were two of the students who had charges against them for Tuesday's sit-ins dismissed.

The Negroes who took part in the latest demonstrations were arrested after managers of the eating places asked them to leave and the Negroes refused.

Shortly after they were jailed, Lonnie King, the chairman of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, announced the moral protest movement. He said the 20 Negroes went to jail with the idea that they would refuse bond if offered it, and remain in jail. They were charged with violation of the state's anti-trespass law.

The arrests occurred as 11 Atlanta Negro college students arrested Tuesday were telling a city judge they will "stay in jail as a moral conviction." They refused to post $100 bond in their arrest for trying to eat in the white cafeteria.

The students were among 17 arrested in the earlier demonstration. Four were released when they testified they had not been asked individually to leave.

Two others, King and Herschelle Sullivan, 22, of Pittsburgh, Pa., said they posted $100 bond because they felt they were needed out of jail to handle affairs involved in the arrest.

The committee Tuesday appealed to U.S. Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy to investigate the jailings.

10 More Negroes Jailed In Sit-Ins In Atlanta

By The Associated Press

Atlanta, Feb. 10.—Negro demonstrators tried unsuccessfully again Friday to break the traditional Southern policy of segregated eating facilities.

Police arrested 10 at a coffee shop and a grill in downtown Atlanta.

The arrests brought to 86 the number of Negroes taken into custody. Before Friday, 70 Negroes were held in jail awaiting Criminal Court action on charges of violating the State's antitrespass law—a measure to curb desegregation demonstrations.

The Negroes, mostly students at the Atlanta University Center, have elected to remain in jail rather than go free on bond.

'It's Worth Anything'

One of them, Leon Greene of Morris Brown College, said he hated to miss school but, like the others, felt the cause is worth the trouble. "It is worth anything to do this," he said.

Dan Calbos, owner-manager of Denny's Grill, had a different view. His restaurant has been the scene of Negro sit-ins for several days.

"For the life of me I can't see what they're driving at," he said. "I'm sympathetic with some of their objectives, but there's a stopping point to everything."

Calbos, who is of Greek descent, said he has "no personal grudge against the Negro students."

"But they're not going to establish a new way of life down here by coming in with a club," Calbos said.

The Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, a Southwide Negro student organization with headquarters here, reported that Carl Braden, Louisville, publisher of The Southern Patriot, had given considerable help to the committee in the sit-in movement.

17 Sit-Ins Arrested

New Racial Strife Hits North, South

By United Press International

New integration troubles flared on both sides of the Mason-Dixon line Tuesday.

Seventeen Negro students were arrested in Atlanta, Ga., for staging a lunch counter sit-in demonstration, and in New Rochelle, N.Y., the city board of education voted to appeal a federal ruling ordering the Lincoln Elementary School desegregated.

At Oxford, Miss., eight highway patrol plainclothesmen were stationed at the University of Mississippi's administration building when a rumor swept the campus that Negroes would try to enroll in classes.

The Congress of Racial Equality announced in New York that demonstrations would be staged in "sympathy" with 13 Negro students sentenced to jail terms in Rock Hill, S.C. for refusing to leave a segregated lunch counter.

Lonnie King, another of the student leaders in the Southwide movement, was among the 17 arrested in Atlanta Tuesday. They were charged under the state's trespassing act when they refused to leave a cafeteria.

Students "Unhappy" In Atlanta Desegregation,

Atlanta, Ga. — Approximately 75 Negro students from Atlanta area colleges have indicated their "dissatisfaction" over a decision to delay stand-ins with a promise by white merchants to integrate in September by continuing announced plans of an "economic boycott."

The students, however, agreed to refrain from picketing and stand-in demonstrations at the request of Negro leaders. The city had been marked by desegregations protests for over a year's period.

An agreement was reached between white merchants and the Negro leaders last Tuesday for the desegregation of public accommodations beginning with the integration of public schools. The merchants later agreed to desegregate facilities regardless of the outcome of school integration in September.

Adult Support

The student leaders reportedly have been promised adult support in the boycott. Many of the students favored a resumption of the sit-in demonstrations until the area is desegregated.

The decision has placed the settlement of the sit-in crisis in jeopardy. Negro leaders had announced in a mass meeting at Allen Memorial church that "the stores would desegregate eating and "all other facilities."

The agreement was reached after 14-weeks of every-day sit-in and stand-in activity conducted by Negro students. Negro leaders negotiated wtih representatives of 17 firms and chains representing about 50 individual stores.

King Pleads

A solution to the sit-in problem is widely considered crucial to the success-integration of the public schools of Atlanta. Businessman, reportedly, are anxious to end the six-month economic boycott.

Negro leadership of Atlanta had come under considerable fire in the negotiations. Only an impassioned plea by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., pastor of Ebenezer Bapitst Church and Montgomery Bus Boycott leader, saved a split in the Negro ranks over the decision to stop the demonstrations.

8 Ministers Seized in Sit-In, Now to Remain in Fulton Jail

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta Ga.

By KEELER McCARTNEY

Eight ministers were arrested in a restaurant in the Terminal Station Wednesday and ordered held for Fulton Criminal Court on charges of violating the Georgia anti-trespass law.

Thurs. 2-16-61

The Rev. Otis Moss Jr., 25, pastor of Providence Southeast Baptist Church, who served as spokesman for the group, said they would remain in Fulton County jail with 77 students already bound over on similar charges.

P. 10

The move by the ministers—seven Negro and one white—came as veteran Negro attorney A. T. Walden confirmed reports that he had been asked to reopen negotiations with downtown merchants in an effort to settle the restaurant sit-in dispute.

Walden, who came out of retirement to accept the assignment, said he "had hardly begun work on it." He said, however, he felt if he could reopen negotiations the 85 now in jail would accept bonds.

Elsewhere in Atlanta Wednesday, three Negro students sat-in at the lunch counter at Lane's drugstore at Broad and Alabama streets, SW, forcing the counter's closing. There were no arrests. The counter has operated only sporadically since sit-ins began last fall.

With the Negro ministers in the demonstration at the Terminal Station restaurant was the Rev. Ross Waldron Anderson, 60, of 208 Auburn Ave., NE.

In reply to routine questions from police, the Rev. Mr. Anderson said he was "a member of the human race." He identified himself as an ordained Methodist minister and a missionary worker from Washington, D.C.

In court, the tall, gaunt Anderson, with moustache and goatee, told municipal Judge James Webb, "I was segregated when pleas were called because I didn't know what the law was."

"In this critical period of history if we go on denying the laws of God and man, civilization as we know it will be destroyed," he declared.

The Rev. Mr. Moss, speaking quietly and calmly, told the court the ministers . . . "had nothing but love in their hearts for the man who refused them service, the policeman who arrested them and the judge before whom they stood."

"Hunger is a part of the human makeup," he said. "We were hungry in body and hungry in spirit to be treated like men.

"We are not lawless. We believe in the Constitution of the United States, we believe in God and in the power of redemptive suffering. We entertain no hatred towards anyone."

Told by Judge Webb that bond was set at $100, the Rev. Mr. Moss replied: "We do not desire to make bond."

KINGS ATTEND

The Rev. Martin Luther King Sr., and his two sons, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., and the Rev. A. D. King, were courtroom spectators during the hearing. The Rev. A. D. King was arrested recently in Fayette County on charges of drunk driving, police said.

In addition to Moss and Anderson, those held were identified as the Rev. Benjamin Joseph Johnson, 49, pastor of Mt. Calvary Baptist Church; the Rev. Walter Raleigh McCall, 37, pastor of Providence Baptist Church; the Rev. Joe Dell Grier Jr., 31, pastor of Fort Street Methodist Church; The Rev. Joseph Everhart Boone, 38, pastor of Bush Memorial Congregational Church; the Rev. Albert Lee Dunn, 26, pastor of Fountain Memorial African Methodist Episcopal Church and the Rev. Roosevelt Wilson Moore, 47, pastor of Gordon Road Methodist Church.

Lt. J. F. Johnson said he answered a call to the restaurant shortly before noon and found the group seated at a counter. He said the restaurant manager, Clude C. Harrison, requested them to leave and when they refused he placed them in custody.

Harrison testified that he asked the group to move from the counter to a section for colored or a dining room at the back and they refused. Harrison said he informed them if they did not he would have to call the police and added he understood one to say that they had come there to be arrested.

The Rev. Mr. McCall, in his statement to the court, denied anyone saying that they had gone there to be arrested.

Eight Ministers Out On Bond In Sit-Ins In City

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta Ga.

Seven Negro ministers, who were arrested Wednesday after attempting to gain entry at a Terminal Station restaurant, got out on bond after less than 24 hours behind bars. A white minister, who was arrested at the same time, made bond shortly after them.

Meanwhile three more students were arrested after attempting a sit-in at the Coffee Shop, 1 Forsyth St., S. W. They were identified as Jesse J. Harris, 21, of 31 Yonge St., S. E., student at Atlanta University, and Spelman students, Roberta Smith, 18, of Washington, D. C., and Runelle Lawrence, 18, of 174 Silver Springs Circle, S. W.

The ministers left 76 demonstrators in jail. The religious leaders posted bonds of $100 each.

Bail Is Refused

Atlanta Daily World

Eight Ministers Arrested At Terminal Station Here

Thurs. 2-16-61

By STANLEY S. SCOTT

Seven Negro ministers and one white Methodist Missionary preacher were arrested by police Wednesday morning at the Atlanta Terminal Station after attempting to receive food service inside the restaurant.

The ministers appeared in city court before Judge James E. Webb at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon and were bound over to a higher court on $100. bonds. However the ministers chose to refuse bail and join 77 student sit-iners at the County Jail. The students were arrested during sit-in activities last week.

ARRESTED MINISTERS

Those arrested included: Reverends B. J. Johnson, Sr. Greater Mount Calvary Baptist Church; Otis Moss, Jr., Providence Baptist Church in South Atlanta; J. E. Boone, Congregational (Rush Memorial); Walter R. McCall, Providence Baptist Church on Maher St, J. D. Greer, Jr., Fort Street Methodi t Church; Albert Dunn, ITC student; R. W. Moore; R. W. Anderson, (white) Methodist Missionary from Washington, D. C.

Rev. Anderson, white minister arrested with the Negroes, stated to observers when they inquired about his race, "Just mark me down as a member of the human race." Rev. Anderson's address was listed as Washington, D. C. and one wire service had his residence listed in Americus, Ga.

He told Judge Webb, "I don't know what the law is that we were supposed to have broken. But our whole civilization will soon be destroyed unless we start trying to live as brothers."

Atlanta Sit-ins Halted; Stores Vow Bias End

N. Y. World-Telegram and Sun
New York, N. Y.

United Press International

ATLANTA, March 7.—Atlanta Negro leaders called off sit-in demonstrations and boycotts of segregated stores today in return for a pledge from leading merchants of future desegregation of lunch counters.

Date 3-7-61

Lunch counters in the city's two leading department stores and in 11 drug and variety chains representing about 75 stores—many of which have been closed by sit-ins—will reopen Thursday on a segregated basis. Desegregation apparently will not begin until the Atlanta public school system is integrated, probably this fall.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce made the announcement. It was subscribed to by store officials and by Dr. Martin Luther King Sr., father of the Negro integration leader, and Lonnie C. King, leader of Negro college students who have conducted intensive protests against lunch counter segregation.

Other Negro leaders also signed, and agreed to use their influence to stop all Negro demonstrations.

There was no clear-cut announcement about the date for desegregation. But it was tied to the forthcoming desegregation of the city's public school system.

"We feel that the fine relationship that has existed between the races for a long number of years hould be reinstated in Atlanta in every way as soon as is possible," the statement said.

Atlanta Sit-In Tension Imperils Peaceful Integration of Schools

The New York Times
New York City

By CLAYDE SITTON

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Feb. 18—"We're like lemmings marching off the cliff," a prominent business executive said.

His remark reflected the growing feeling here that many residents have a false sense of security toward the city's racial problems.

This executive and some other persons believe that tension aroused by the dispute over lunch-counter desegregation has already lessened the chance for peaceful desegregation of the schools next September under a Federal court order.

Moreover, extreme segregationists apparently have singled out this metropolitan complex of 1,000,000 persons as a major battleground in their fight against integration.

Atlanta is regarded as one of the South's most progressive cities. Its race relations have generally had an even tenor. This is attributed in part to the efforts of Mayor William B. Hartsfield and an alert police force.

Most whites apparently have little sympathy with the activities of the bitter-end segregationists. However, observers contended that the Negro student demonstrations, which began here last March, might bring a crisis to the city.

Frustrated by the merchants' refusal to remove racial barriers in restaurants and at lunch counters, the students have become increasingly militant. More than seventy-five are now in jail as a result of their refusal to post bonds on trespass charges growing out of the demonstrations. Many adult leaders have voiced support for them.

Merchants conceded that a Negro boycott of the downtown area had been almost 100 per cent effective. Department store sales in the central-city area for the full week period ended Feb. 4 were down 12 per cent from last year, the Federal Reserve Bank reported. The receipts of some variety stores have shown a far greater drop.

Since the sit-ins began, a Negro school has been bombed, the Ku Klux Klan has trooped through the business section twice and a small group of anti-Semites has started distribution of hate literature.

Leading white supremacists from Little Rock, New Orleans and other Southern cities have paraded across the speaker's platform of a new segregationist organization. This is Georgians Unwilling To Surrender, or GUTS, as its members call it.

One such speaker was William Simomns, executive secretary of the Mississippi Citizens Council and secretary of the Citizens Council of America. "Atlanta is practically the nerve center in the South for the integration movement," he told the new organization.

Major Test Predicted

Liberal whites also see an important skirmish developing. Harold C. Fleming, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, said:

"As school desegregation nears in Atlanta, the forces of organized bigotry in the South are clearly concentrating their efforts here. The apostles of anti-Negro, anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic prejudice are gathering for what they evidently see as a major test of their extremist doctrine."

Events at a meeting of Georgians Unwilling to Surrender Thursday night at the Tower Theatre seemed to bear out this conclusion. The audience included Calvin F. Craig, Georgia Grand Dragon of the U. S. Klans, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc.; J. B. Stoner, an avowed anti-Semite and head of the Christian Knights of the Ku Kux Klan, and at least four of the five persons indicted for the bombing in 1958 of Temple, house of worship for Atlanta's largest Jewish congregation.

Before the program began, copies of The Thunderbolt were distributed. This organ of the National States Rights party is pubilshed by W. R. Fields. He described himself as a Birmingham, Ala., chiropractor who was once in "the reducing-salon business" in Louisville, Ky.

One article in the four-page paper said:

"The Jews have long believed that they would have to integrate Atlanta before they could integrate the rest of the South."

Two inside pages recounted the murder of an Atlanta girl in 1913 and the subsequent lynching of Leo Frank. The headline read:

"Leo Frank Case and Today's Jewish Rape of the South."

Lester Maddox, a local restaurant operator and chairman of Georgians Unwilling to Surrender, said that The Thunderbolt had not been approved for distribution. Nevertheless, the program that followed had anti-Semitic overtones as well as tirades against Negroes.

The first speaker was Roy V. Harris, once a political kingmaker in this state who now heads the Georgia States Rights Council. He denounced Gov. S. Ernest Vandiver and the Legislature for discarding the state's policy of massive resistance to desegregation.

Favors Going to Jail

I've always wanted to see one Southern Governor who had the nerve and the courage to let the Federal Government put him in jail," he said.

The keynote address was made by Leander Perez, former District Attorney of St. Bernard and Plaquemines Parishes (counties) in Louisiana. He is a guiding light of the Ctzens Council movement there. He once spoke at a council rally in New Orleans that preceded an anti-desegregation riot.

Mr. Perez called out the names of a number of prominent members of the legislative, executive and judicial branches of the Federal Government, while some in the audience shouted "Communist Jews." He referred to these officials as "another pinko," "that Zionist," "a smart mulatto," and that "eighteen-time Commie front member."

Mr. Perez said that the sometimes violent protests over desegregation in New Orleans marked "one of the most worthy demonstrations of a freedom-loving people." This was greeted by whoops and rebel yells.

"How would you like it if your little girl came back home ravished from a forced racially integrated school?" he asked.

Assails Government

When he said, "The national Government is the enemy of our people," the audience shouted, "Yes! Yes!"

Without segregationist political leadership, he contended, Southerners have no choice "but to rise up in physical opposition."

As the crowd left the theatre, a detective remarked, "The rats were sure coming out of all the holes tonight." He estimated that at least 25 per cent of those in the audience were Klansmen.

The activities of Georgians unwilling to surrender and similar groups present a potentially dangerous problem. Arthur J. Levin, director of the southeastern regional office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, called on responsible residents to seek a solution to this problem by eliminating the cause.

The New York Times

FIGHTS INTEGRATION: Leander Perez, a former district attorney in Louisiana, who addressed a meeting of Georgians Unwilling to Surrender, held last Thursday in Atlanta.

"Bigots feed on tensions and crises, in which atmosphere they can best peddle their hysteria of lies, distortions and false predictions," he said. "Therefore, it becomes imperative that the real leadership—economic, civic, religious, educational — resolve whatever tension and crises exist in the community so that we can get on with our business of growth and prgroess."

Leading merchants have said that they are willing to desegregate their lunch counters, a move that is considered inevitable. But they argue that they cannot do so because Rich's, Inc., the city' largest department store, has refused to go along.

Rich's is a family operation that had an excellent reputation among Negroes prior to the sit-in dispute. This was because of the family's many gifts to Negro educational and charitable causes and the store's courteous treatment of Negro shoppers. Rich's was the first major store in Atlanta to address Negroes as "Mr." and "Mrs."

Few Customers in Store

But on a walk through the spacious first floor this week it was possible to find only two Negroes—one customer and a candy counter clerk. There were few white customers, too.

Shortly after the sit-in controversy began, Richard H. Rich, president of the store, and Frank H. Neely, the board chairman, were said to be willing to desegregate once the school desegregation problem had been solved. However, they took no action after Governor Vandiver and the Legislature cleared the way for local communities to comply with Federal court rulings.

Several attempts have been made to reach both Mr. Rich and Mr. Neely. A subordinate, who declined to permit the use of his name, refused to outline the store's present position.

"We'd rather not talk about it," he said. "We're in a dilemma." He also said, "There's not going to be any change in the immediate future."

Other merchants have said that they would lose many white cusomers to Rich's if they led the way in desegregating lunch counters. Some observers have called this view questionable. Meanwhile, most agree that every downtown merchant is suffering.

"The most important thing that can be doneis to convince the power structure that this situation can ruin the downtown area," one executive said. "The effect is not going to be confined to the retail stores. It will hit the banks, the office supply concerns, the insurance firms, the real estate interests and all the rest."

Negroes' Stand Is Firm

The Negroes' determination has been reiterated by their leaders, Lomnie C. King Jr., chairman of the Student Committee on Appeal for Human Rights; the Rev. William Holmes Borders, chairman of the Student-Adult Liaison Committee and pastor of Wheat Street Baptist Church, and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and symbol of the student movement.

Mr. Borders has served notice on white that Negro adults are giving full support to the sit-ins. "Right now the community wouldn't go to Heaven without the students," he once said.

Those familiar with the present situation have made these points:

¶Peaceful school desegregation depends upon a calm and harmonious climate of race relations.

¶Negroes will not end their protests without assurance of desegregation by a specified and reasonably early date.

¶A continued stalemate will increase the militancy of both the protest movement and the segregationists.

"The city's business leadership has so far failed to recognize the dangers of the unresolved sit-in dispute both to the local economy and to law and order," Mr. Fleming of the Southern Regional Council said.

"Peaceful school desegregation will depend in large measure on Atlanta's joining more than one hundred other Southern cities int he orderly settlement of the sit-in protests by opening eating facilities to all."

'Jail-ins' Now Replacing 'Sit-ins' In New Desegregation Drive in South

The Washington Post
Washington, D.C.
Date 2-11-61
Page A1

A program of "jail-ins" has apparently begun across the South as part of the "sit-in" demonstrations aimed at cracking segregation practices in public places.

In Atlanta, 70 Negroes were in jail yesterday after they refused to post $100 bonds when they were arrested during restaurant sit-ins.

In Rock Hill, S. C., 13 Negroes are serving 30-day jail sentences rather than pay $100 fines after being convicted of trepass during sit-ins.

In Lynchburg, Va., where two white and four Negro students are serving 30-day sentences stemming from a sit-in, there is talk of "filling the jail full" as the only effective protest against segregation.

Started With Meeting

Much of the effort seems to have grown from a meeting last Sunday in Atlanta of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. Four of the Committee's leaders went directly from that meeting to Rock Hill where they sat-in, and were arrested and convicted.

When they went to jail, the Committee's headquarters in Atlanta urged all Southern students to join the "jail, no bail" movement.

On Tuesday, 17 Negro students were arrested in a sit-in in Atlanta. On Wednesday, 20 more were arrested and on Thursday, another 39. Of the 76, 70 stayed in jail by refusing to put up bond. The jailer said he was almost out of space.

One of the leaders of the group, Herschelle Sullivan, a student at Spelman College, put up bond so she could organize more students. Appealing to all students to join in a "struggle for human dignity," she said, "The students in jail have said that they can stand it in there as long as other people can stand it out here."

Behind the "jail-in" drive is the desire of the students to reviltalize the "sit-in" movement which has been less active in recent weeks and to dramatize to the Kennedy Administration segregation practices throughout the Nation.

Movie Walk-in Set

In other events:

• A group of Texas students called for a Southwide walk-in at movie theaters on Sunday. In Nashville, Tenn., on Thursday, about 100 Negroes and a few whites were turned away at segregated theaters.

• In New Rochelle, N. Y., attendance at a predominantly Negro elementary school was off about a third Friday. The boycott, organized by a parents' committee, protested the School Board's decision to appeal a court ruling requiring desegregation of the school.

• In Cleveland, eight students are picketing the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity house at Baldwin-Wallace College because the chapter has refused to sign a statement opposing racial and religious qualifications for membership.

• In Virginia, plans are being laid for the filing of a court case arguing that Federal funds must not be given to institutions which practice racial segregation.

• In Chicago, 10 Negro physicians filed suit against 56 hospitals which they say bar Negroes from their medical staffs.

• And in Athens, Ga., one of the first two Negro students at the University of Georgia has been invited to join the local Episcopal Church.

NEGROES' JAIL-IN MAY BE CANCELED

The New York Times

Atlanta Leaders Indicate Purpose Is Accomplished in Rousing Community

New York, N.Y.

By CLAUDE SITTON

ATLANTA, Feb. 10—While some 100 persons have gone to jail deliberately in a drive to break down racial barriers at Southern lunch counters, a student leader indicated today that the movement might be stopped.

Ten Negroes were arrested in Atlanta today at two private restaurants. The fourth consecutive day of demonstrations brought to eighty the total number imprisoned here.

Thirteen other Negroes, including four regional leaders of the sit-in movement, are serving thirty-day sentences following arrests in Rock Hill, S. C. Four whites an dtwo Negroes are serving similar terms in Lynchburg, Va.

Atlanta student leaders said they were calling a meeting to determine whether the so-called "jail-in" should continue. Herschelle Sullivan, co-chairman of the Student Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, said:

"We think that we have accomplished our purpose."

She said the purpose was "to arouse the community." While a number of Negro adults have expressed concern and support for the students, she said, only a few whites have done so.

Show of Strength Urged

A regional group, the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, has called for a show of strength at Rock Hill. Miss Sullivan said Atlanta students might go there Sunday with others from elsewhere in the South to visit the prisoners.

But she said none was expected to demonstrate in an effort to join them in jail, as the regional committee had urged.

Miss Sullivan and Lonnie C. King Jr., chairman of the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, were arrested on trespassing charges Tuesday. They posted $100 bonds, however, explaining that they were needed to direct the movement.

The eighty students in the Fulton County (Atlanta) Jail have refused to post bonds pending trials on charges of violating a new street trespass law. The statute makes it a crime to remain in a private establishment after having been asked to leave by its proprietor.

Only one of the ten arrested today actually entered a restaurant. The others were seized just outside a coffee shop. The manager contended that a paved area between the door and the sidewalk was private property.

78 Sit-In Prisoners Pack Jail Here; Sheriff Orders Cots, 2-Deck Beds

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Date Thurs. 2-16-61
Page 1 & 10

Negro sit-in demonstrators Wednesday filled the Fulton County jail to capacity and Sheriff Ralph T. Grimes ordered in cots, double-deck beds, mattresses and blankets to take care of the expected overflow.

The number of Negro inmates rose to 419 by mid-afternoon, Grimes said. This included 357 men, slightly below the capacity of 364, and 62 Negro women compared to the official capacity of 52.

Grimes said the temporary bedding for overflow inmates could take care of "quite a few" but he said another wave of mass arrests may force him to transfer overflows to other jails.

By mid-afternoon jail records showed there were 78 inmates charged with participating in Negro sit-in demonstrations.

The sit-iners could get out on $100 bond each but most have refused to post bond in protest against segregation. Only four of the 82 sit-iners jailed had posted bond through late Wednesday.

Grimes said farming out prisoners because of an overflow had never, to his knowledge, been done before in Georgia.

Fulton County would be forced to pay board for the transferred prisoners at rates set by the various sheriffs, usually about $2 a day per prisoner. Fulton County's charge is $1.75 per day.

"I'd let all sleep on the floor that I could possibly put there first, then put them in jails around the state," Grimes said.

Say Sit-In 'Complete' Success

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.
Date 2-17-61

ATLANTA 2 (UPI) — Negroes were told here Friday night that they have won complete victory in their campaign to desegregate facilities in Atlanta department and variety stores.

It was the most significant civil rights victory in the long sit-in movement that began in Greensboro, N.C., nearly two years ago.

A crowd estimated at more than 2,000 cheered the news but denounced one phase of an agreement worked out with Atlanta merchants which delays the implementation date until fall.

It took the silver voice of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. to calm angry voices that had accused their leaders of becoming "turncoats" and to restore order to a packed house in a Baptist church.

No vote was taken durng the tumultuous meeting but there was strong sentiment for continuing a boycott of stores until the segregation barrier is lifted.

Negroes "Stick Together"

Attorney A. T. Walden, who was instrumental in negotiating with white leaders an end to the city's 14-week sit-in movement, predicted after the meeting that most of the city's Negroes would go along with the settlement.

The Atlanta sit-ins began on a regular basis last Thanksgiving week-end and cut sharply into Christmas business at big department stores. Many downtown stores had closed tea rooms and lunch counters and scores of Negroes were jailed for violating the state's anti-trespass law.

Officials of 17 stores or chains and 11 Negroes worked out the agreement which, according to Friday night's announcement, called for:

—Desegregation of eating and all other facilities in the affected stores in the fall, regardless of whether Atlanta schools are integrated then.

—Re-hiring of most Negroes released when the eating places closed.

—Further meetings to provide for "orderly desegregation" of the facilities.

In return, the Negro leadership pledged to work for a complete end to boycotts and picketing which have accompanied the sit-ins. They tried mightily last week to live up to their pledge.

Walden, who has fought the civil rights battle in the courts for half a century, urged compliance with the delayed action agreement.

"What difference does a few months make when we have been fighting for this 100 years?" he said.

MERCHANTS AND SIT-INS; NATURE AND AID

Atlanta's sit-in stalemate was announced settled last week with an agreement signed by both sides.

The historical legislature of '61 ended on a high note, leaving behind its monuments of open schools and budgetary legislating.

And there were sure enough tornadoes.

Compromise

With the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and Negro Atty. A. T. Walden handling negotiations, merchants and Negro leaders signed an agreement ending the year-old sit-in campaign which saw numerous demonstrators arrested and helped cause a slump in downtown trade.

According to the original announcement, the stores agreed to desegregate after the schools here are desegregated, meanwhile opening sit-in closed eating places on a segregated basis. Some 500 to 600 Negroes would regain jobs as a result. The students agreed to try to end sit-ins, picketing and the adult-participating boycott.

By week's end, dissatisfaction by some Negroes had been heard, and at a mass meeting Friday night, Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. urged unity in a speech that seemed to dissuade proponents of "wildcat" sit-ins. The Negro leadership at the meeting said lunch counter desegregation does not hinge on school desegregation, as originally announced by the chamber, but was agreed on for this fall regardless.

Sit-in trials, expected next week and apparently not to be dropped as a result of the agreement, were postponed in Fulton Superior Court for six weeks. A new charge, disturbing the peace, was added because, Solicitor John I. Kelley said, this was the charge in the case the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear.

Other Fronts

Judge W. A. Bootle, on request of the University of Georgia, gave an explanatory ruling that his desegregation decree means Negroes at the University are entitled to all privileges, including eating in the cafeteria. Charlayne Hunter, who has requested the latter, said she will wait until spring quarter to exercise it.

Judge Jesse Wood, charging the new grand jury, urged more peace and cooperation in racial matters. . . . The famous M. L. King Jr., traffic case was sent back to Judge Oscar Mitchell's court by the Court of Appeals. The court said the original sentence was too long and hence revocation of probation of it was nullified.

Atlanta School Supt. John Letson spoke plainly on the effect of new school laws: They take desegregation out of courts and legislative bodies and put it squarely to the people. He urged they handle it with dignity or pay a "terrible price" for generations to come.

Georgia's Negro population increased slightly during the last decade, but not proportionately with other states. We dropped from first to third place in Negro population. The total: 1,122,596.

Session Adjourned

"Serenity prevails," said Gov Vandiver. "Georgia's schools and colleges are open . . ." A "growing vitality," said Rep James Mackay about the legislature.

These were comments on the history-making repeal of segregation laws, which pitted state power against federal, and adoption of local option measures permitting integration, and on the battle of the budget which saw a great show of legislative independence but ended with the governor still strongly in control of fiscal matters.

In closing hours, meanwhile, there was passage of a resolution backing the federal aid to education measure—which could mean an extra $700 a year for Georgia teachers. (GEA official Frank Hughes meanwhile said five Georgia congressmen would vote for it; three might, and two—James C. Davis and E. L. Forrester—wouldn't.)

Other last-minute action: passage of Democratic primary date changing, and shelving of the bill to repeal compulsory attendance at integrated schools.

Among the other monuments left behind were passage of legislation for tax equalization, and to study county unit reapportionment and the state's criminal law code, and against drag racing and dangerous drugs.

Failing to pass were possibly needed bills on fireworks control, speed traps and taxing mixed drinks, and a possibly not needed sovereignty commission to study and propagandize on integration.

Heading into the wild blue per diem were members of 64 interim study committees. Work of such bodies last year cost $295,000.

Our Governments

W. O. Brooks, speech writer for governors and astute student of Georgia-style political science, was named to the Pardon and Parole Board as part of an otherwise expected shift: William H. Kimbrough went to the Public Service Commission from whence Matt McWhorter went full-time to the Stone Mountain Memorial Assn. Mrs. Rebecca Garrett was named parole board chairman.

Speakers at a Municipal Affairs workshop in Athens urged over and over again that city officials need to get rid of lethargy and ignorance of industry is to be attracted. Only trouble: Attendance was reported sparse.

The point of no return is almost here on rapid transit, said Glenn E. Bennett of the Metropolitan Planning Commission, and the Atlanta chamber intensified its campaign to keep us from missing the fast boat.

Twenty Fulton schools will be built on a $3,300,000 bond sale. . . . A fancy motel bid got the nod for first sale of Atlanta urban renewal land. . . . The Georgia Supreme Court ruled profit-making church property can be taxed.

Insurance Commissioner Zack Cravey announced approval of an auto insurance fee hike schedule which he said would mean lower rates for some because of a provision rewarding drivers with no accident records.

A statewide move for more training schools (to get children out of common jails) and for a youth commission was launched in Atlanta by juvenile court advisers and judges and other groups.

The Economy

Ford workers were laid off again this week. BOP workers will get it again next week. DeKalb joined counties participating in the federal surplus food program for needy folks.

Federal medicare will be available to Georgians only if Gov. Vandiver dips into the surplus for matching funds, and there is no money for matching funds in another federal measure to aid children of unemployed folks.

Georgia Power will build the nation's largest steam-electric generating plan near Milledgeville. First unit will cost $42,000,000.

Town and Country

Tornadoes struck around Ringgold and near Macon, with no injuries or deaths but a million dollars in property damages . . . Contracts were signed for wederal disaster aid to flood-hit areas in west Georgia. It'll probably amount to around $2,000,000.

Farms, declining in number, doubled in value in Georgia, making us fifth in the nation at $16,000 average per farm.

Georgia an dthe South need to restore the balance of trade in ideas, and must look to universities for leadership, said Emory President S. Walter Martin at a dinner of the Newcomen Society of North America, signal honor for the school.

A wallaby sort of like a kangeroo), given to the zoo, kicked an alderman on arrival . . . Holiday on Ice came to delight children and other lovers of color and costumery and continous skating.

Atlanta Stores, Sit-In Agreement Is Reached

ATLANTA, March 7 (UPI)—Major Atlanta department and variety stores agreed today to gradually desegregate their eating facilities.

Sit-in leaders and the city's merchants reached the agreement after months of demonstrations at downtown stores that had a policy of segregated eating places.

No deadline for a start toward desegregation of the facilities was announced except that it would begin at the time the city's schools are desegregated. This is scheduled to begin next Fall.

Segregated

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook said the state would be "helpless" to enforce its new anti-trespass law—under which Negro sit-inners have been arrested by the score — if management of stores refuse to co-operate or if they "voluntarily submit to racial integration."

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which announced the agreement, said the 17 stores and chains representing approximately 50 individual stores would gear their desegregation on the admission of the first Negroes to white public schools here.

Agreement

Although the eating facilities will be re-opened for the present on a segregated basis, today's action appeared to be a major victory for the Negro groups pressing for full desegregation.

The settlement was reached following sustained pressure by Negroes in the form of sit-ins, picketing and boycott at department and variety stores that had segregated eating places. Many downtown stores, including the big Rich's and Davison's department stores and most dime stores, closed tea rooms, snack bars and lunch counters during the sit-in effort which began here during Thanksgiving week-end of 1960.

There was no estimate of the monetary loss suffered during the controversy but it was considerable, mainly during the Christmas season when the boycott by Negroes was at its height. Another similar drive had been planned by them for the Easter shopping season.

The sit-in settlement came just one week before the scheduled trials of 26 Negroes who were arrested under the state's anti-trespass law.

Atlanta Stores Will Integrate

Most Department And Drug Store Counters To Allow Equal Service

By United Press International

ATLANTA, March 7. — A group of leading Atlanta merchants and Negro leaders announced Tuesday that Negroes would be allowed to eat at most department and drug store lunch counters and would call off their sit-in movement.

The statement, released by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, appeared to be a clear-cut victory for the Atlanta segment of the widespread sit-in movement.

The announcement was subscribed to by Atlanta's two major department stores and by 11 chain drug and variety stores.

Also Signing

Also signing were Dr. Martin Luther King Sr., father of the well - known Negro integration leader, and Lonnie C. King, Negro student leader.

The statement came one day after the Georgia Legislature adjourned for the year.

The statement said "leading merchants have stated that it is their decision to carry out in lunch rooms and other facilities the same pattern as has been recognized and evidenced" by admission of two Negro students to the University of Georgia, decision of the Atlanta school board to comply with Federal integration orders this fall and actions of the late Georgia General Assembly in repealing the state's massive resistance anti-segregation laws.

"The Negro leadership has stated that every effort will be made to eliminate all boycotts, reprisals, picketing and sit-ins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible," the statment said.

The lunch counters will reopen Thursday on a segreated basis but will be integrated when the Atlanta public school system is integrated, probably this fall.

Sears Signs Too

The statement was subscribed to by Rich's and Davison's Department Stores, by the Walgrens, Jacobs, and Lane's Drug chains, and by the Woolworths, McCrory, Grants, S. H. Kress, Newberrys variety chains, Sears Roebuck also signed.

Accurate assessment of the economic damage suffered by the stores has been difficult but the boycott has at times appeared to be highly effective in a city where about one-third of the population is Negro.

The agreement affected about 75 Atlanta stores.

Integration In Atlanta Stores Set

ATLANTA, March 7 (UPI)—Major Atlanta department and variety stores agreed today to gradually desegregate their eating facilities.

Sit-in leaders and merchants reached the agreement after months of demonstrations at downtown stores that had a policy of segregated eating places.

No deadline for a start toward desegregation of the facilities was announced except that it would begin at the time the ctiy's schools are desegregated. This is scheduled to begin next fall.

Although the eating facilities will be reopened for the present on a segregated basis, today's action appeared to be a major victory for the Negro groups pressing for full desegregation.

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook said the state would be "helpless" to enforce its new antitrespass law—under which Negro sit-inners have been arrested by the score —if management of stores refuse to cooperate or if they "voluntarily submit to racial integration."

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which announced the agreement, said the 17 stores and chains representing approximately 50 individual stores would gear their desegregation on the admission of the first Negroes to white public schools here.

The lunch counters will reopen Thursday on a segregated basis but will be integrated when the Atlanta public school system is integrated, probably this fall.

Atlanta Stores Agree To End Lunch Counter Segregation

Negroes Halt Sit-In Demonstrations

Atlanta, Ga. Mar. 7 — A group of leading Atlanta merchants and Negro leaders announced today that Negroes would be allowed to eat at most department and drug store lunch counters here and would call off their sit-in movement.

The lunch counters will reopen Thursday on a segregated basis but will be integrated when the Atlanta public school system is integrated, probably this fall.

The statement, released by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, appeared to be a clear-cut victory for the Atlanta chapter of the widespread sit-in movement.

The announcement was subscribed to by Atlanta's two major department stores and by 11 chain department stores and by 11 drug and variety chains representing about 75 stores.

Also signing were Dr. Martin Luther King Sr., father of the Negro integration leader, and Lonnie C. King, Negro student leader.

The statement came one day after the Georgia Legislature adjourned for the year.

Atlanta Stores to End Dining Segregation

ATLANTA, March 7 (UPI) Major Atlanta department and variety stores agreed today to gradually desegregate their eating facilities.

Sit-in leaders and the city's merchants reached the agreement after months of demonstrations at downtown stores that segregated their eating places.

The desegregation would begin at the time the city's schools are desegregated. This is scheduled next fall.

The eating facilities will be re-opened for the present on a segregated basis, but today's action appeared to be a major victory for the Negro groups.

Attorney General Eugene Cook said the State would be "helpless" to enforce its new anti-trespass law—under which Negro sitters-in have been arrested by the score—if stores refuse to cooperate or if they "voluntary submit to racial integration."

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which announced the agreement, said the 17 stores and chains representing approximately 50 individual stores would condition their desegregation on the admission of the first Negroes to white public schools here.

The settlement was reached following sustained pressure by Negroes in the form of sit-ins, picketing and boycott at department and variety stores. Many downtown stores, including the big Rich's and Davison's department stores and most dime stores, closed tea rooms, snack bars and lunch counters during the demonstrations which began during Thanksgiving week-end.

There was no estimate of the monetary loss suffered during the controversy but it was considerable, especially during the Christmas season when the boycott by Negroes was at its height.

Atlanta Halts Sit-In Activities

ATLANTA, Ga. — (SNS) Atlanta was promised relief from its uneasy position of "sit-ins" over segregated lunch counters and other facilities Tuesday, after major Atlanta department and variety and drugstores agreed to desegregate them by next fall. The timetable would not be beyond desegregation of city public schools slated this fall. The Chamber of Commerce issued the statement of agreement.

The statement came from a group of leading white merchants and representatives of the Negro community, both adults and students. Both promised to exert every effort to re-establish an atmosphere of "good racial relationship" and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible.

An unofficial source said the lunch counters were reopening on a segregated basis.

It was reported that reliably the "truce" was secured with the agreement that Atlanta's school desegregation issue is the key to the lunch counter openings on a general basis, although several chain -operated stores are reportedly ready to comply with national policy. School de egregation is under court order for this September 1961.

Although the eating facilities will be re-opened for the present on a segregated basis, Tuesday's action appeared to be a major victory for the Negro groups pressing for desegregation.

Attorney General Eugene Cook said the state would be "helpless to enforce its new anti-trespass law under which Negro sit-inners have been arrested by the score if management of stores refuse to cooperate or if they "voluntarily submit to racial integration."

CONGRATULATED

"ALL SIDES"

Atlanta Mayor William Hartsfield congratulated "all sides upon a fair and statesmanlike approach to this situation."

The mayor served notice on "professional rabblerousers from outside the city they will be dealt with most sternly" in the event of trouble in the city's desegregation transition.

"The community affected and the people of the state must now look to all citizens to exercise the same restraint which they have demonstrated over the years in not creating or provoking intolerable conditions which might tend to generate violence." Gov. Ernest Vandiver said of the development.

The complete Atlanta Chamber of Commerce Statement follows:

"We feel that the fine relationship which has existed between the races for a long number of years should be reinstated in Atlanta in every way as soon as is possible. In order to reestablish good relationships, the leading merchants have stated that it is their decision to carry out in lunchrooms and other facilities the same patterns as have been recognized and evidenced (1) by actions of the 1961 General Assembly of Georgia; (2) the admission of qualified students to the University of Georgia, and (3) the decision of the Atlanta Board of Education to comply with the orders of the Federal Court—all relating to the public school issues in Atlanta and as are finally decided upon in the public school issues in Atlanta. The Negro leadership has stated that every effort will be made to eliminate all boycotts, reprisals, picketing and sit-ins and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible. Each party is fully cognizant of the limitations of its own commitments on behalf of any group other than that it specifically represents."

ATLANTA RETAIL STORES PARTY TO AGREEMENT:

Rich's
Davison's
Woolworth's
McCrory's
Grant's
Walgreen Company
Jacobs Pharmacy
S. H. Kress and Co.
Sears, Roebuck and Co.
Kresge's
H. L. Green Co.
Newberry's
Lane's

NEGRO LEADERS PARTY TO AGREEMENT:

Dr. Wm. Holmes Borders, Pastor of Wheat Street Baptist Church, and Chairman of Student - Adult Liaison Committee.

Attorney A. T. Walden, Special Negotiator, Chairman of Atlanta Negro Voters League.

Dr. M. L. King, Sr., Pastor, Ebenezer Baptist Church and Member of Student - Adult Liaison Committee.

Leroy R. Johnson, Attorney-at-Law, Member of Executive Committee Atlanta Negro Voters League.

Q. V. Williamson, business - man Executive Committee, Empire Realty Board) Member, Advisory Committee on Urban Renewal.

Jesse Hill, Jr., Actuary, Atlanta Life Insurance Company.

Mrs. P. Q. Yancey, Housewife Member of Adult - Student Liaison Committee.

Rev. O. M. Mo[illegible] Pastor, Providence Baptist Church.

Dr Rufus E. Clement, President, Atlanta University.

Lonnie C. King, Chairman Committee on Appeal for Human Rights.

Miss Herschell Sullivan, Vice Chairman, Committee on Appeal for Human Rights.

Atlanta Stores Agree To End Segregation

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Negroes scored a major victory in their sit-in movement Tuesday when business leaders in the Deep South city of Atlanta agreed to end segregation in downtown stores next fall.

The settlement will become effective in September, when Atlanta public schools are scheduled to begin integrating under federal court order.

Negro leaders agreed, in the meantime, to urge their followers to stop all sit-in demonstrations, boycotts and picketing at department stores, restaurants and lunch counters.

In another development in Georgia's capital city, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. won a legal victory of sorts when the State Court of Appeals ruled he was illegally sentenced to a year in jail on a traffic charge.

But King, long-time champion of Negro civil rights, could still be sent to jail for six months in the case which attracted national headlines and brought an expression of sympathy from John F. Kennedy when he was campaigning for president.

King could possibly get a suspended sentence on the charge of driving without a Georgia license when the case goes back to the lower court.

Atlanta Stores Integrate Eating

Policy To Start in Fall When Negroes Enter White Schools

By The Associated Press

Atlanta, March 7. — Major Atlanta department and variety stores agreed Tuesday to gradually desegregate their eating facilities.

Sit-in leaders and the city's merchants reached the agreement after months of demonstrations at downtown stores.

No timetable for a start toward desegregation of the facilities was announced except that it would begin at the time the City's schools are desegregated. This is scheduled to begin next fall.

Although the eating facilities will be reopened for the present on a segregated basis, Tuesday's action appeared to be a major victory for the Negro groups.

Law Held Unenforceable

Attorney General Eugene Cook said the State would be helpless to enforce its new antitrespass law—under which Negro sit-in demonstrators have been arrested by the scores—if stores "voluntarily submit to racial integration."

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which announced the agreement, said the 17 stores and chains representing about 50 individual stores would gear their desegregation on the admission of the first Negroes to white public schools here.

Many downtown stores, including Rich's and Davison's department stores and most dime stores, closed tea rooms, snack bars, and lunch counters during the sit-in effort that began during Thanksgiving weekend of 1960.

The agreement specified:

1. Leading merchants have decided to carry out "the same patterns" as those recognized by the 1961 Georgia Legislature in repealing segregation laws, by the University of Georgia in admitting Negro students, and by the Atlanta School Board in complying with federal desegregation orders.

2. Negro leaders will "make every effort" to "eliminate boycotts, reprisals, picketing, and sit-ins, and to bring back a condition of complete normalcy as soon as possible."

All Sides Congratulated

Atlanta Mayor William Hartsfield congratulated "all sides upon a fair and statesmanlike approach to this situation."

The Mayor served notice on "professional rabble rousers from outside the city they will be dealt with most sternly" in the event of trouble in the city's desegregation transition.

Governor Ernest Vandiver said:

"The community affected and the people of the state must now look to all citizens to exercise the same restraint which they have demonstrated over the years in not creating or provoking intolerable conditions which might tend to generate violence."

Vandiver again appealed for voluntary segregation as the "best solution" for race relations.

38a 1961

ILLINOIS

LUNCH COUNTER

Young, White Chic Sympathizer Safe

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.
Jan. 1-6-61

CHICAGO. — (ANP) — The teen-age daughter of the president of Chicago Theological seminary, whose family thought she had gone to the South to lend her support in the integration fight, has been found safe in West Palm Beach, Fla.

The Rev. Dr. Howard Schomer reported here last week that his daughter, Karin, 16, had been located. She had been missing since December 8, disappearing after leaving her home for a Christmas shopping tour in this city's Loop.

Dr. Schomer said his daughter was seeking "personal independence" by running away, and not trying to join the racial integration movement in the South "as we thought had been the aim of her trip."

38a 1961

INDIANA LUNCH COUNTER- DESEGREGATED

Sit-Ins End Bias At Indiana Cafe

Chicago Defender

Michigan City — Fifteen teenagers Saturday staged a successful sit-in that ended 11 years of racial discrimination at a restaurant in the shadow of the court house and police station.

Chicago, Ill.

The owner of Brownie's Griddle at 401 Franklin, George Brown, ordered the group served after they "blocked" every booth in the restaurant from white customers for more than an hour.

B-2-(11-17)-61

The first team of three teenagers to enter, light-complexioned youths, were served by waitresses in what apparently was a mistake. When the second group entered five minutes later the employes realized both groups were Negroes and refused to serve the second.

The remaining youngsters came in groups of three at five minute intervals and occupied every booth. The apparently frustrated employes called for Brown.

Meanwhile the youths sat — and white customers coming in declined to join any of them at a booth.

P 13

The history making movement, sponsored by a local citizens committee, was planned the night before, according to president Richard Hatcher, an attorney.

SPACES RESERVED

He said in the past when sit-ins have been attempted Negroes were told the spaces were reserved. When they refused to leave, police were summoned and the Negroes were arrested for disturbing the peace.

Brown has contended he would lose business if he served Negroes, Hatcher told the Defender.

Taking part in the demonstration were Richard Whitlow, Lois Johnson, Jaunita Dandridge, Barbara Lavis, Delores Nance, Marie Chambers, Ernest Mayo, Ann Walker, Clyde Wllams, Alecia Farmer, Versilee Amico, Burton Evans, Donald Fly, Joyce Davis and Irma McNeal.

According to Hatcher, Brown has stated before "something needs to be done," but he has refused to change his policy.

38a 1961 KANSAS LUNCH COUNTER

Trade Boycott

Drive Against Bias Set By Kansas U. Students

Journal and Guide

Norfolk Va.

Date 3/18/61

LAWRENCE, Kans. (ANP) Petitions calling for boycott of business places refusing service to Negroes are being circulated on the campus of University of Kansas here.

One thousand students have signed the plea, which urges the K. U. All - Student Council to adopt a strong anti-discrimination resolution.

SPONSOR of the movement is the Civil Rights Council, which has been conducting a test of taverns and other establishments to find out whether they will serve Negroes.

Police have jailed 19 students, Negro and white, who staged a sit-in in a small bar. They were detained four hours but no charges were filed.

Since then the city and campus police have taken a "hands off" attitude.

OFFICIALS at K U. have made it clear no disciplinary action would be taken against those who take part in demonstrations so long as they were non - violent and with the law.

Organizer of the civil rights group is Michael Landwehr, a junior, from Brooklyn, N.Y.

LINES ARE being drawn in in the controversy. The students seem determined to push the sit - ins where discrimination appears and business men appear equally determined to "hold the line."

Kansas has a civil rights law which went into effect a year and a half ago. It provides a maximum fine of $1,000 for any place of public accommendation which discriminates because of race or color. Many county law enforcement officers take the attitude that taverns and bowling alleys are exempt from this law.

Human-Rights Group To Probe Central Students' Complaint

Charge Meals Curbed For 12

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 10 (AP)—A complaint that 12 Negro students of Louisville's Central High School were refused service at a Lexington restaurant was presented Friday to the Kentucky Commission on Human Rights.

The complaint said that the students and their vocal music instructor, Miss Alyce K. Holden, were in Lexington for a gathering of the 600-voice all-state chorus last month.

Inquiry Ordered

Miss Holden said in a memorandum:

"We feel that our students should not have to face such situations in the future. If they are accepted in the All-State Chorus, then they should be allowed the same privileges."

A commission member, Charles Steele, Louisville, presented the complaint on behalf of Atwood S. Wilson, principal of Central High.

The commission instructed its executive director, Galen Martin, to investigate the incident and report his findings later.

Martin was also instructed to draw up a procedure and policy by which the commission could handle such complaints in the future.

In a memorandum to Wilson, Miss Holden said the students' problem of eating was solved easily in the daytime, for the University of Kentucky campus cafeterias were open to all persons, regardless of race.

'Met Difficulty'

However, at night after rehearsals, she added, "We met with difficulty which proved embarrassing and quite unnecessary."

Miss Holden related that on two nights she and the students were served in their cars at a drive-in restaurant.

On the third night, with rain pouring down, the group was told it could not be served inside the restaurant, she said.

A waitress brought one student food in a bag, but the student refused to accept it, Miss Holden related. She said they later ate at the bus-station snack bar.

Agree To Newsletter

In other action, the commission:

1. Voted approval of a monthly newsletter.

2. Discussed the possibility of better informing itself by bringing in consultants at a monthly workshop.

3. Agreed informally that it should hold a state-wide workshop for persons participating in similar commissions locally.

4. Talked about the possibility of conducting surveys and fact-finding studies to learn more about intergroup relations.

5. Discussed ways in which it could promote greater use of Negroes for jury duty.

Kaufman's, Stewarts Shut Down Tea Room Opens Monday After Demonstrations

Restaurants located in two of the largest Fourth Street department stores closed earlier this week following stand-in demonstrations by groups of white and Negroes but reopened Monday morning.

Pickets belonging to the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) and the Civil Rights Commission of the AMEZ Church conducted the stand-ins at Kaufman's of Kentucky, 427 S. 4th and Stewarts Dry Goods Company, Fourth and W. Walnut, protesting segregated eaitng facilities.

The Charl-Mont tea room at Kaufman's closed after demonstrated gathered outside a retaining chaining at 12:30 p.m. Saturday. Included in the group was AMEZ Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker and David West, a CORE member.

Two Hour Pickets

The demonstrators remained at Kaufman's for two hours when they left at 2:30 to set up similiar pickets at Stewart's basement cafeteria. The Kaufman restaurant closed at 2 p.m.

Roy Gardner, Executive Vice-President of Kaufman's, stated that he had nothing further to add to previously stated policy of the department store on integration. "We," said Gardner, "have not closed the door to integration and will desegregate our restaurant when the rest (Fourth Street store) do so."

Gardner said that this had consistently been the policy of Kaufman's and in all probability would continued to be so. He said that the tea room reopened Monday after the demonstrations.

Bishop Tucker stated that it was his opinion that Kaufman's attitude prior to the demonstrations was that if the stand-ins would stop they could come "to an agreement on desegregation. The Bishop added that this was not done which was the reason the stand-ins were resumed.

The cleric also said that Gardner had told him and West that rather than desegregate before the rest of the stores, he would cease, they could come room."

Saturday marked the first time that Stewart lunch room had been closed during a demonstration. The picketeers were again restrained by a chain in front of the entrance o the restaurant.

Bishop Tucker

Bishop Tucker said that an official who had been called to he scene by employees durin, he Stewart demonstration made side remark that "you (demonstrators) are endangering obs of Negroes at the store."

The demonstrators said that Saturday's stand-ins would begin anew the demand for public accommodations for Negroes in Louisville. Earlier in the week. demonstrators lined up in front of the United Artists theater.

CORE members siad that two white woman told them during he Stewarts demonstration that hey were unaware of the reasons for the pickets and if they knew would not have gone in o eat."

Bishop Tucker said that a white Attorney whom he knew described the incident as regrettable, and stated that it was a 'shame something like this could happen here."

The majojrity of the five and ten department stores including Grants, Woolworth Kresge's, McCory's, Pennys, Sears, and W. T. Grant's desegregated their lunch counters as long as six years ago. Kaufman's of Kentucky and Stewarts have been exceptions.

Peace try fails, pickets march again

LOUISVILLE, Ky. —Sit-down demonstrations were resumed here Friday after a breakdown of negotiations which had been going on 13 days.

Many pickets, including a number of whites, appeared in the downtown section.

"The steering committee was very disappointed that it could not report substantial progress . . . so we had to recommend the march," Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker of the AME Zion Church reported.

In Louisville, Ky.—

Negroes prepare nothing new drive

By the Associated Press

A "nothing new for Easter" campaign protesting segregation is being prepared in Louisville Ky., to keep the city's 75,000 Negroes from shopping in downtown stores during the Easter season.

The Rev. W. J. Hodge, president of the local chapter of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, called for the boycott to begin Monday and continue through April 3, the normally heavy Easter shopping time.

The minister said Negroes are being asked not to shop for clothing at all during that period. He estimated Negroes account for about $18 million worth of business a year in downtown Louisville.

Hodge said the protest was designed to "secure services in restaurants, hotels and theaters and job opportunities in all stores." He also said it was a result of refusal of service to Negroes who participated in a stand-in in downtown restaurants.

About the time the minister was announcing plans for the shopping boycott yesterday, 14 youths were arrested during a demonstration against downtown stores and theaters. Police charged them with disorderly conduct and delinquency for allegedly blocking entrances at three movie houses.

FOR THE THIRD straight night white hecklers attacked Negroes seeking entrance to all-white theaters in downown Nashville, Tenn. As the demonstrators marched back to their meeting place in a church, the white youths threw stones and eggs. No one was injured.

Police last night prevented a recurrence of the scuffling of the two previous nights when white youths attacked the Negroes with fists, sticks and umbrellas. When the demonstrators began their march last night police were stationed along their route and the white youths fled when they saw the officers waiting.

One demonstrator, Harvey Hunter, a student at Tennessee A & I University, was arrested on a charge of breaking a theater box office window. He was released under $250 bond.

At Rock Hill, S. C., a Negro minister was among three persons arrested during a disturbance at an anti-segregation demonstration in front of a drug store in the racially tense city, scene of recent disturbances.

CHARGED WITH breach of the peace, police said, were the Rev. C. A. Ivory, pastor of Hermon Presbyterian Church and president of the Rock Hill Chapter of the NAACP; Paul Dietrich, 20, a white man from Washington, D. C., and George A. Beckley, 26, a Negro from Rockville, Md.

The three were jailed in lieu of $100 bond each and said they would not post bond under the "jail, no bail" policy of recent demonstrators.

Eight Negro college students staged sit-ins at lunch counters for white persons in the downtown area of the South Carolina capital at Columbia. No arrests were reported.

Meanwhile, Ernest A. Finney Jr., of Sumter, S. C., an attorney for several Negroes arrested in recent demonstrations, met with members of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division in Washington.

The Department said the attorney gave the government lawyers information about the situation in South Carolina. A department spokesman said, "This information is being evaluated." He declined elaboration.

JUVENILE COURT Judge O. Raymond Cundiff at Lynchburg, Va., sentenced 16-year-old Madaline E. Thompson of nearby Madison Heights to 30 days in jail for violating the state's anti-trespass law during a recent sit-in. The sentence was appealed and she was released under $1000 bond.

The judge said youngsters involved in comparable future cases would receive "similar or even harsher sentences, as the case may demand." He said he was not going to have juveniles doing what adults could not do.

At Atlanta all the jailed Negro student sit-in demonstrators were free on bond after a two-week stay in the county jail which they said was designed to dramatize the need for unified action. All told, 84 were arrested. The last group of 54 posted bond yesterday.

White Cross-Burning Victim Remains Sit-In

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Undeterred by a flaming cross burnt on the lawn of her parents home Lynn Pfuhl, a white member of Louisville CORE, participated in a CORE stand-in just one week later and was herself arrested by police.

Lynn and four other members of CORE, Kenneth Miller Ragni Cunningham, William Buchanan and Lawrence Williams, were arrested and charged with trespassing as a result of a stand-in at Stewarts Dry Goods co. Police have not arrested the vandals responsible for the cross burning.

The five CORE members face trial on the trespass charge on March 2. They have been conducting stand-ins at Stewarts, a member of Associated Dry Goods Corp., and at Kaufmans since last spring.

MAN BURNED

Herman Pfuhl was burned at his home when all of the family was absent. A neighbor called the police when she noticed the fire.

Pfuhl turned the remnants of the cross, which was made of paper wrapped in rags and soaked with gasoline, over to the police for investigation.

This was not the first time that Pfuhl had been subject to vandalism because of his daughter's CORE activities. Prior to the cross burning his car windows had been broken and gas siphoned out. "It is my personal conjecture," said Pfuhl, "that the same vandals are responsible." There were no threatening notes.

Staff Photo

PERSONAL SERVICE from Louisville's chief of police, William Bindner, was received by Frank Stanley, Jr., a Louisville integration leader, at demonstration on Fourth Street yesterday afternoon. Neither spoke as Bindner steered Stanley to a patrol wagon. Stanley, charged with disorderly conduct, was released on bond.

White girl picket gets larger bail

(SPECIAL TO AFRO)

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Miss Connie Bradford, a student from Atlanta, Ga., who joined anti-segregated pickets here, was placed under $1,000 bail while bail of $500 was set for six colored held on similar charges as the girl.

The pickets were arrested April 15 on charges of "obstructing traffic" in front of stores on Canal St.

Two week ago, Miss Bradford was quoted as saying white shoppers spat on her and told her:" You are a disgrace to the white race."

Six members of New Orleans CORE remained in jail rather than accept bond while picketing the Woolworth and McCrory stores. CORE offered to furnish bond for all.

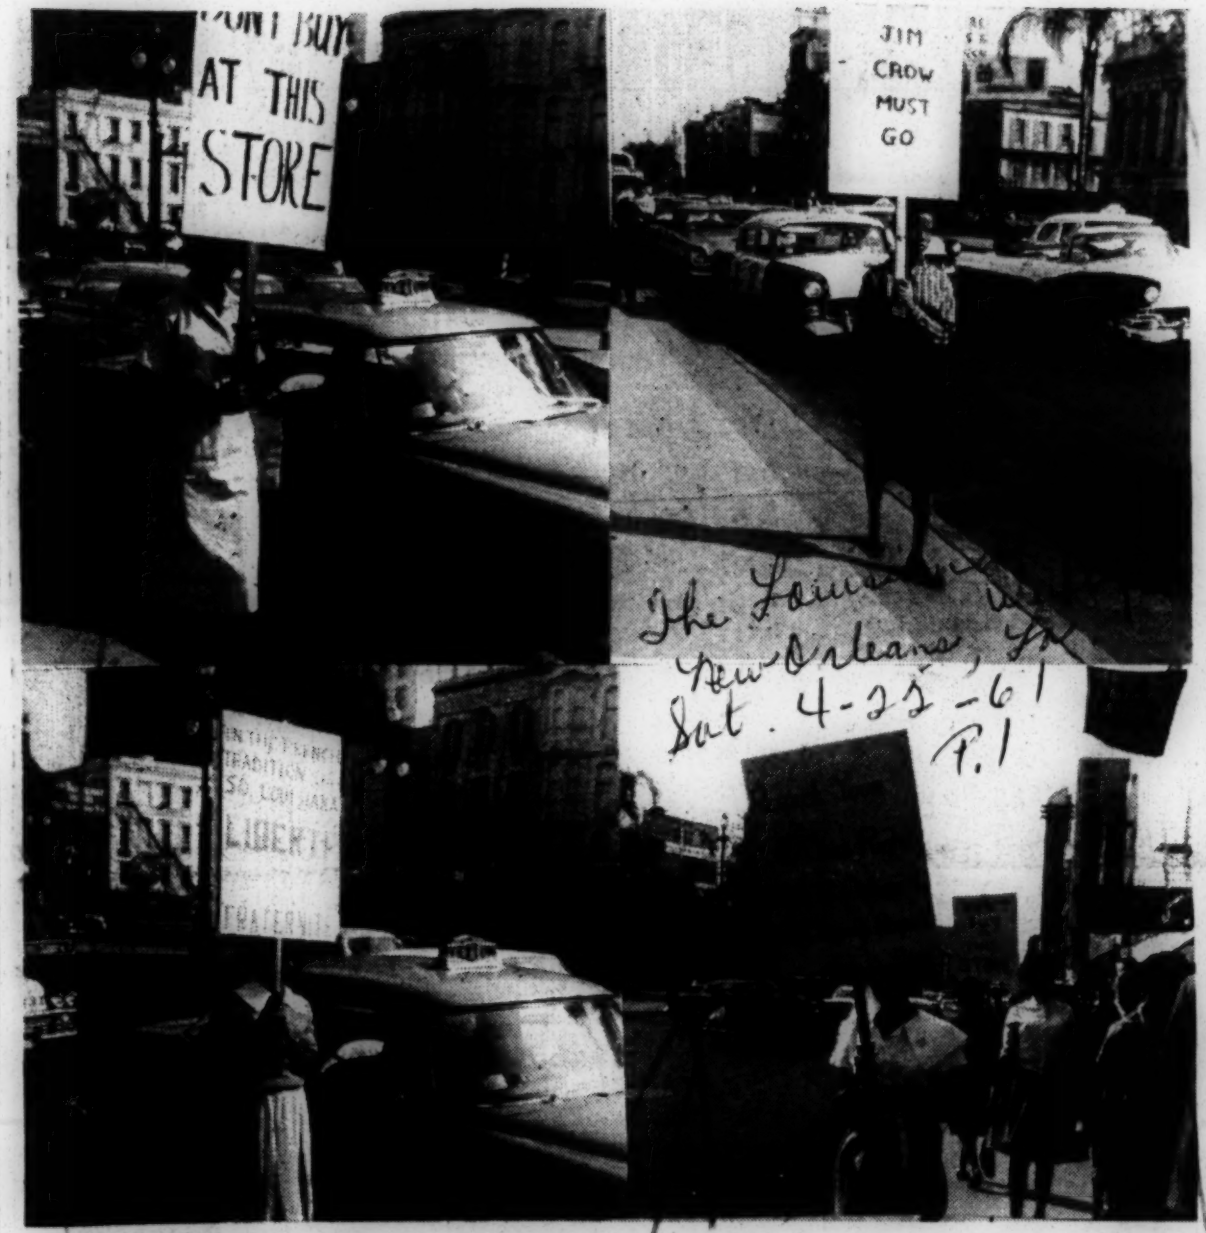
Julia Aaron, Miss Bradford, Dave Dennis and Jerome Smith were arrested, April 17.

CORE Chairman Rudolph Lombard reports that CORE members are making door-to-door visits to break the virtual news blackout on the arrests.

* * *

CORE NATIONAL Director James Farmer wired a protest to Attorney General Robert Kennedy that said in part:

"This is another in a long series of attempts by New Orleans officials to prevent CORE members from exercising their Constitutional rights of speech and assembly. Urge immediate investigation and strong action. Supporting documents on way to you. We are prepared to meet with you or your representative on short notice."



'CORE' MEMBERS JAILED --- Members of the Congress of Racial Equality are shown picketing one McCrory and two F. W. Woolworth Stores in New Orleans as a protest against segregated lunch counters Monday. Shortly after these photographs were made police arrested five CORE members on a state charge of "obstructing free and normal passage of sidewalks. Four were still in jail at press time, the fifth, a white co-ed, was paroled shortly after being arrested.

CORE Pickets Say 'Jail No Bail' After Arrest

Five members of the Congress of Racial Equality were arrested Monday as four of them picketed two Canal Street stores while a fifth was engaged in making their photographs. Police made the arrests in the rear of the F. W. Woolworth Store at Iberville and North Rampart Streets.

Booked at the First District station with violation of a state act which prohibits the "obstruction of free and normal passage of sidewalks" were: Constance Bradford, white, 19, of 28 McAlister Pl.; Doris Jean Castle, 20, 917 No. Tonti; Julia Aaron, 20, 4008 Jumonville; Dave Dennis, 20, Dillard University campus; and Jerome Smith, 21, 917 1/2 No. Tonti. Dennis and Smith were additionally charged with failure to move on.

The arrest of the five, in the first police action against pickets since March 11, has been protested by Rudolph Lombard, local CORE chairman, in a letter to Mayor deLesseps S. Morrison.

Miss Bradford, who was arrested while photographing the four pickets, was paroled shortly after her arrest. Dennis, Smith, Miss Aaron and Miss Castle adopted the "jail no bail" slogan and were still in custody at press time.

The Louisiana Weekly learned that the latter four were taken from the First District station to police headquarters where they were fingerprinted, photographed and placed in the line-up Tuesday.

It was learned, too, that CORE members had been advised March 11 that they would not be arrested providing they placed not more than four pickets in a square block, that they did not interfere with persons entering or leaving the stores, and that the pickets walked as close to the curb as possible.

Lombard said, in his letter to the mayor:

"Because the New Orleans police have once again abridged and denied the rights of citizens of this community to peacefully picket and demonstrate against segregation at lunch counters, CORE, in the name of Justice and Freedom, demands the immediate release of these persons arrested for picketing the Woolworth and McCrory's Stores.

"The right to peacefully picket does not depend on its 'political popularity' but on its constitutional guarantee in accord with the precepts of Democracy."

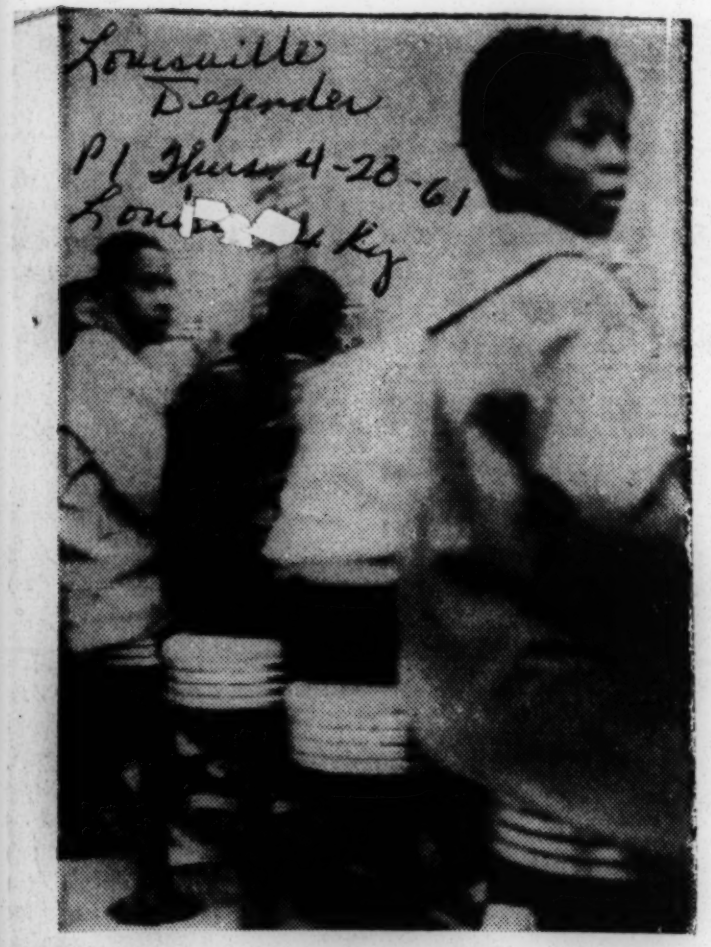
Statements were made by Smith and Dennis for the Louisiana Weekly.

Smith said, "We chose to remain in jail because we believe that our sacrifice and suffering will win support for the boycotting of those stores which refuse to serve Negroes at all lunch counters."

Dennis declared, "It takes courage to stay in jail, but the time has come when segregationists can no longer use the threat of jail to frighten those who fight for liberty and equality."

Prior to March 11, a number of CORE pickets and several members of the Consumers League of Greater New Orleans were arrested for demonstrating against jim crow lunch counters and biased hiring policies. Four CORE members subsequently found guilty in Criminal Court and their convictions are presently under appeal.

A representative of CORE told the Louisiana Weekly that the five persons were arrested as they picketed the Iberville Street rear door of Woolworth's where many Negroes had been observed sneaking in to be served. CORE had picketed the front entrance of the store on Canal Street several weeks, he declared, but police said the Iberville Street sidewalk was too narrow for the same type of demonstration.



SITTING-IN-NEGRO STUDENTS resumed sit-in demonstrations at downtown restaurants Saturday resulting in the desegregation of 17 additional establishments. Above students occupy seats at the California Orange Bar, 310 South 4th Street. They were served reluctantly.

STUDENTS SET UP PICKET LINES outside the White Swan Restaurant, 566 South 5th, after they were refused service. The students returned to the restaurant three times during this week to fine the entrance blocked by an employee of the esatblishment to prevent entering.

THE COLONNADE CAFETERIA, located in the basement of the Starks Building, 4th Street near West Walnut, served students immediately. The Colonnade Cafeteria was the biggest restaurant desegregated during the four-day demonstrations by students and adults here.

Students Integrate 17 Restaurants In 4 Days

Negro leaders intensified integration efforts here Tuesday as police arrested 38 students and one 19 year old adult conducting sit-in demonstrations protesting segregration at restaurants in the downtown area.

Prior to the arrests the demonstrations, which were resumed last Saturday after a months layoff as a protest against the "slow progress of intgeration talks," resulted in the desegregation of 17 restaurants previously segregated.

The students were arrested late Tuesday conducting a stand-in at the Kupie Double Burger, 436 S. 5th when the manager called the police. They were charged by police with breach of the peace and delinquency.

Charles W. Rhodes, of 1026 Cedar, was charged with breach of the peace by police and in a warrant sworn by Robert F. Whitehouse, owner of the restaurant. He was released under $100 bond.

The juveniles were arrested by Captain George McAlesse the Second District, which embraces the downtown area, when they refused to identify themselves. Police said McAlesse sought the names so Whitehouse could swear out warrants of invasion of privacy.

Whitehouse closed the restaurant moments later when 85 students entered the restaurant to resume the sit-ins.

Crime Prevention officers said that 20 of the students were released to their parents. The remaining n[illegible]n, who were arrested fo[illegible]econd time, were taken t[illegible]irens Center, 316 E. Ches[illegible]

In wh[illegible]y be a sit-in record, studen[illegible]in and picketed the Ch[illegible]owl, 616 W. Broadway and [illegible]e White Swan Restaurant, [illegible]6 S. 5th, until midnight Tuesday.

Approximately 75 students occupied all seats at the Chile Bowl at 4 pm in the afternoon and sat quietly as the manager refused them service. The manager then turned off lights announcing that he was closing. The students sat in the darkened restaurant until leaving at 12. Owner Frank Ressnier said he would integrate the Chile Bowl today.

Locked Doors

The manager of the White Swan locked the door of the restaurant shortly after the appearance of the students. The restaurant then employed a merchant policemen until students left.

Rhodes' case may result in the first jury trial in Police Court. Judge Hugo Taustine sustained a motion by defense attorneys for the trial and set June 25 as the date for the case to be heard.

Attys. J. Earl Dearing, Neville M. Tucker and Charles J. Lunderman, who represented the juveniles obtained a writ from Judge Blakey Helm last Tuesday night for a hearing on their release at 1 pm yesterday at Children's Center.

Juvenile Court Judge Henry J. Triplett, however, paroled the students in the custody of the parents at their arraignment at 10 p.m. yesterday morning. A hearing was set for June 22 in Juvenile Court.

Negro leaders cited the fact that only 115 out of 125 restaurants in downtown area were desegregated and the slow progress made by the Mayor's emergency integration committee as reasons for the "stepped-up" move for integration.

Establishments which served the students included:

California Orange Bar, No. 3, 310 S. 4th; Knotty Pine Restaurant, 434 W. Chestnut; Harley's Sandwich Shop, 428 W. Chestnut; Burger Boy, 3rd and W. Chestnut; J & P Diner, 421 S. 3rd. Times Restaurant, 307 W. Liberty; Barbecue Heaven Steak House, 514 S. 5th; Bright Spot Hamburger, No. 2, 915 S. 5th.

Country Kitchen, No. 1, 738 S. Fifth, Dandee Hamburgers, 454 S. 5th; Coffee Pot, 429 W. Broadway; Whizz Hamburgers, 427½ W. Broadway; Country Kitchen No. 3, 421 W. Broadway; Sarotaga, 128 W. Chestnut and the Colonnade Cafeteria, Starks Building.

De Camillis Restaurant, 451 S. Third, informed students who sought service that it would be a $2 minimum charge. Students said that manager told them that was the amount of the average check a the Italian catery.

Six other restaurants refused service to the Negro students. They were: Coffee Shop, 504 S. 3rd; Music Man Restaurant, 511 W. Walnut; Whizz Restaurant, 744 S. 5th; Dizzy Whizz, No. 2, 216 W. Broadway and Franklin Way Restaurant, 663 Armory Place.

Several of the restaurants served the students without delay. Student leaders would send one or two students into an establishment to "test" the policy and then—if refused would re-enter with a larger group for the sit-in.

Those serving immediately were the Burger Boy; J & P Diner; Bright Spot Hamburger, The Country Kitchens; Dandee Hamburgers; Coffee Pot; Sarotaga and the Colonnade.

Police were called to the scene at the Dizzy Whizz No. 2 Monday. A patrol wagon arrived on the scene during picketting at the Dizzy Whizz but the manager changed his mind about swearing the warrants after confering with police.

Police Called — Girl Pushed

Students were subjected to verbal abuse during an attempted sit-in and picketing at the W and F Coffee Shop. As the student set up picket lines, persons inside and out began name calling. One girl student was pushed and a group leader was also pushed from the premises.

The demonstrations, in which over 200 students participated, was the first since a resumption of talks between the Mayor's Committee of Negro leaders in mid March.

A statement issued by the Rev. W. J. Hodge, Frank L. Stanley, Jr. and Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker, co-chairmen of the Steering Committee, said, "most of the restaurants have refused to negotiate and we have met with a stone wall. In the past weeks of calm and quiet the number of desegregated restaurants has not increased.'

The Negro leaders stated that a desegregated downtown Louisville was not unrealistic in comparison with St. Louis, which integrated 200 establishments within 3 weeks, Kansas City, 121 and Oklahoma City' 116 in a like period.

Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell issued a statement saying that it was "regrettable that the demonstrations had resumed when they were getting along so fine with negotiations at many of the places."

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., of Atlanta, Georgia, the famed Montgomery, Alabama bus boycott and conferred with integration leaders yesterday.

Dr. King then addressed students, who have been conducting the sit-in demonstrations, at Quinn Chapel AME Church, 912 W. Chestnut.

Negro leaders and members of the Mayor's Committee will fly to St. Louis, Missouri, Monday to the integration movement there. A member of the Mayor Committee will furnish the transportation. The trip was at the suggestion of Negro leaders.

King Speaks

Stanley added 'more than merely a surprising distress — it is an appaling disturbance to note that the Mayor has not had the good judgement of a public official — nor the respect of an American citizen to publically congratulate the 17 resaturants who have desegregated over the past four days as the result of thepeaceful sit-ins.

"In absence of the Mayor's committee producing progress, we are going to continue to use our own methods in the relentless struggle for integration until the entire downtown area is desegregated. There is no turning back from the sit-ins or the non-buying campaign until our goal is realized."

21 Arrested As Negroes Demonstrate Anew At Six Downtown Eating Places

The Courier-Journal Louisville Ky.

A7.14-2261

13 Are Held After Sit-In On Market

Negroes aimed more demonstrations at six downtown eating establishments yesterday, but did not gain service at any of them. In the 3½ hours of picketing and sit-ins, 21 persons were arrested.

Thirteen Negroes were arrested at the Williams Food Shop, 440 W. Market, on charges of breach of peace brought by the owner, Mrs. Sherry Williams.

Allen Shirrell, the manager, said Negroes took seats and refused to leave when requested.

Picket On Sidewalk

Five Negroes were arrested on breach-of-peace charges by merchant police at the W. & F. Coffee Shop, 504 S. Third. Negroes were denied entrance to the place. Several picketed on the sidewalk in front.

The largest number of pickets assembled at the Blue Boar Cafeteria, 410 W. Walnut. Doors were guarded by merchant police, who denied admission to the Negroes but admitted white patrons.

In contrast to shoving and pushing there by Negroes and merchant police during demonstrations Thursday, the Negroes picketed in orderly fashion. Several lined up in front of the doors, but they stepped aside to allow white patrons to enter.

Incidents Reported

However several incidents were reported yesterday.

A bottle and an ash tray apparently were thrown from windows in buildings near the Blue Boar. The bottle narrowly missed Frank Stanley, Jr., co-chairman of the Negro steering committee leading desegregation efforts.

A white man pushed two Negro boys and knocked a girl to the ground as he entered the Blue Boar. They were not injured.

White Woman Joins Pickets

A well-dressed white woman, who would identify herself only as being from France, joined the Negro pickets at the Blue Boar, saying she was "tired of injustice." She said she was denied admission to the place when she tried to take some of the Negroes inside with her.

The woman later told police that a white man had grabbed her coat, but she declined to press charges.

One juvenile was arrested outside the Blue Boar on a breach-of-peace charge brought by merchant police.

The Kupie Double Burger, 456 S. Fifth, locked its doors when a Negro group approached, but continued to admit white patrons. About 25 youths picketed the place. No arrests were mad theere.

'Broke His Promise'

Robert Whitehouse, co-owner, was asked why he served Negroes during a sit-in there last Saturday and then denied them service this week.

He said he understood that Stanley had promised not to resume sit-ins there if the Negroes were served once.

"He (Stanley) broke his promise and I do not intend to serve them," Whitehouse said.

Denial From Stanley

Stanley denied he had broken a promise. He said that after Whitehouse agreed to serve Negroes Saturday, he told the co-owner that one or two Negroes would return to test the policy early this week. When they did and were refused service, Stanley said, the sit-ins resumed, resulting in arrests.

There was shoving and pushing by Negroes at the Kupie as they attempted to enter when white patrons were admitted. One juvenile injured his shoulder, but declined treatment. A 2-by-6-foot window in the entrance way was broken during the demonstration.

One juvenile was arrested on a breach-of-peace charge by merchant police at the White Swan, 566 S. Fifth. Pickets were set up there after the Negroes were denied entrance. Merchant police guarded the door.

Statement Issued On Bars

At the Music Man, 511 W. Walnut, the door was locked before the Negroes arrived. Pickets later were set up outside.

Earlier yesterday the Rev. A. D. Pinckney, pastor of Plymouth United Church of Christ, a Negro church at 1630 W. Chestnut, issued a statement clarifying comments Thursday on sit-ins in bars.

"Some misunderstanding of my position as a minister and as an individual has arisen as a result of a quotation in The Courier-Journal attributed to me at a meeting of the executive committee of the (Louisville) Council of Churches. I should like to clarify my position in this matter.

'Behind Entire Principle'

"I am not only 100 per cent behind the children who are participating in the struggle for integration and individual self-respect.

"I am also 100 per cent behind and in favor of the entire principle involved and the struggle by which its achievement is being sought, whether the struggle be made by children, adults, whites, blacks, rich, or poor.

"As a churchman, I am also anxious that the atmosphere not be clouded by any attempts to bring the question of liquor and children into the same basket. This, I understand, has not been done, despite contrary inferences."

Four Negroes Listed

Among those arrested yesterday were four Negroes considered adults (18 years of age or over). All were charged with breach of peace. They are:

John Spurley, 18, of 3370 Du Valle Drive, at W. & F. Coffee Shop; LaVerne Downs, 18, of 1816 Cedar; Henrietta Woodson, 30, of 1166 S. 41st, and Mattie Mitchell, 47, of 2128 W. Madison, all at Williams Food Shop.

In Police Court yesterday charges against 20 persons arrested at restaurants Thursday were continued for hearing June 1.

All Free On Bond

The appearance of the defendants, all at liberty under bond, were entered by attorneys. The 20 included Frank Stanley, Jr.

The attorneys filed a motion for hearing by jury in the 20 cases. Judge Hugo Taustine has not decided whether to grant jury trials in Police Court, and he said he had no comment on yesterday's motions.

Singing, Marching Negroes Again Demonstrate In City

Breakdown In Talks Is Signaled

Businesses Integration Response Hit

Antisegregation demonstrations were resumed in downtown Louisville late yesterday by more than 200 singing, marching Negro youths supported by a sprinkling of whites.

The 45-minute demonstration apparently signaled a breakdown—at least for the present—in negotiations that have been going on the past 13 days in an effort to bring about a "planned integration" of remaining segregated businesses.

Resumption of the demonstrations—the first since February 24—were forecast when a steering committee representing Negro interests met with the Mayor's Emergency Integration Committee.

'Progress Has Been Made'

The committee reported it "has been unable to completely reconcile all of the conflicting emotions" involved in the drive for desegregation.

"Nevertheless," the report continued, "significant progress has been made in general and almost unhoped for progress has been made in specific instances."

After the 2½-hour closed conference at City Hall, representatives of the Negroes—which include some white leaders—issued a statement expressing "disappointment at the response of the Louisville downtown business community" to integration efforts.

Not 'Definite Enough'

The statement declared that progress toward desegregation has not been "definite enough."

Shortly after the representatives of the Negro steering committee left City Hall the decision was made to call for a new demonstration.

About 400 youths convened at Quinn Chapel A.M.E. Church, 912 W. Chestnut, where—after a prayer session—they went to the downtown business district.

'Very Disappointed'

"The steering committee was very disappointed that it couldn't report substantial progress . . . so that we had to recommend the march," reported Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker of the A.M.E. Zion Church.

Whether the demonstrations will be continued was uncertain.

Bishop Tucker and the Rev. W. J. Hodge, president of the Louisville chapter of the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People, said that decision was to be made last night at a meeting at the Lampton Street Baptist Church.

'Going On For Years'

The Mayor's emergency committee had no statement to make on the reaction of the Negro representatives to its progress report. The progress report itself was not released after the demonstration resumed on Fourth Street.

In releasing the report, Hoblitzell expressed "bitter disappointment" at the turn of events.

"I am just sick over it," he declared. "If they would just give people a little time this would all work out. What can they expect of this committee in less than two weeks? This problem has been going on for years."

Hits 'Use Of Children'

Hoblitzell was particularly bitter that the demonstrations were being carried out by youngsters he said were led to action by adults.

"This type of demonstration is morally bad, influencing young people to do things like this," he said. "I think it is a shame to use children this way."

Hoblitzell said he is convinced that the breakdown in the integration negotiations and the resumption of demonstrations is the result of "a contest for recognition" among various Negro groups and individuals.

Members Neatly Dressed

Although adults who accompanied the marching demonstrators said 400 youngsters took part, a reporter's quick count showed 225 to 250 participating.

Members of the group were neatly dressed and well-behaved. Police Capt. George McAleese said no arrests were made by the 25 or 30 officers on duty because "everything has been orderly."

On Fourth the youngsters moved in single file, with the adults on the side. They kept well over on the right side of the sidewalk and regular pedestrians passed without noticeable incident or comment.

One incident marred the march. Some of the youngsters had crossed Walnut at Fourth on the east side and halted just north of the Starks Building entrance.

Worker Is Run Into

A teen-age boy ran to catch the others and knocked down Miss Dorothy Higgins as she left the Starks Building, where she is an office employee.

Miss Higgins, of Jeffersonville, was helped to her feet, apparently unhurt. She protested to a motorcycle policeman across the street who she said made no comment. The policeman said later he did not see the incident.

The marchers carried signs, many of them professionally printed with the inscription:

"Support Nothing New for Easter—N.A.A.C.P."

Other Signs Noted

Other hand-lettered signs carried such messages as "First-class taxpayers, second-class citizens" and "Don't buy here, this store practices discrimination."

The marchers represented the Congress of Racial Equality, the Non-Partisan Registration Committee, and the N.A.A.C.P., according to spokesmen.

The ministers were mostly from the Interdenominational Ministerial Association, a group representing all Negro churches except the Baptists. There was also a Baptist minister present.

Committee Praised

Before the demonstrations yesterday, the mayor's integration committee was commended by directors of the Louisville Chamber of Commerce for "efforts to find orderly solutions to the problem" of downtown segregation.

It was noted that six members of the 10-member Mayor's committee, including Chairman Dillman A. Rash, are chamber directors.

The chamber resolution stated that "The future growth and development of the area is dependent upon solutions of many problems, one of which is racial integration."

It said "the work of the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Integration has reflected favorable national press coverage on this problem for Louisville."

Final Line Altered

During a 40-minute discussion, which was closed to the press, directors altered the final line of a version of the resolution approved by the chamber executive committee. The original version commended Mayor Hoblitzell, his committee, "and all who are working with them in their efforts to find and implement an orderly plan of integrated business practices."

The final version omitted reference to "integrated business practices" and substituted "orderly solutions to the problem."

L. Eugene Johnson, a chamber director, said later that he spoke in favor of the change in wording and explained to the other directors that he felt integration would damage his business. He is president of Blue Boar Cafeteria Company.

Has Three Places Here

Johnson's company has three cafeterias here, two of them downtown, and other cafeterias in Nashville and Memphis. None of them are desegregated, Johnson said. The company closed an integrated cafeteria in Cleveland, for various reasons, Johnson said.

Johnson said he abstained from voting on the amended chamber resolution, but that there were no "no" votes.

William H. Goepper, candidate for mayor backed by the City-County Citizens Republican Organization, yesterday amplified on his views toward Mayor Hoblitzell's committee.

Amplifies Account

Goepper, in a joint appearance with the three other candidates Wednesday night, said he was not ready to endorse the committee. The other candidates did endorse it.

In a statement yesterday Goepper said:

"I would like to amplify the bare account in this morning's Courier-Journal concerning the question asked me about whether I was ready to endorse the Mayor's committee on integration, as it was made to appear by inference that I was not in favor of integration.

"The truth is this, that if I am elected mayor and the Board of Aldermen running with me, I will not have to have a committee called into action under pressure to see that I do the right thing morally in regard to human relationships.

'Group Noble In Cause'

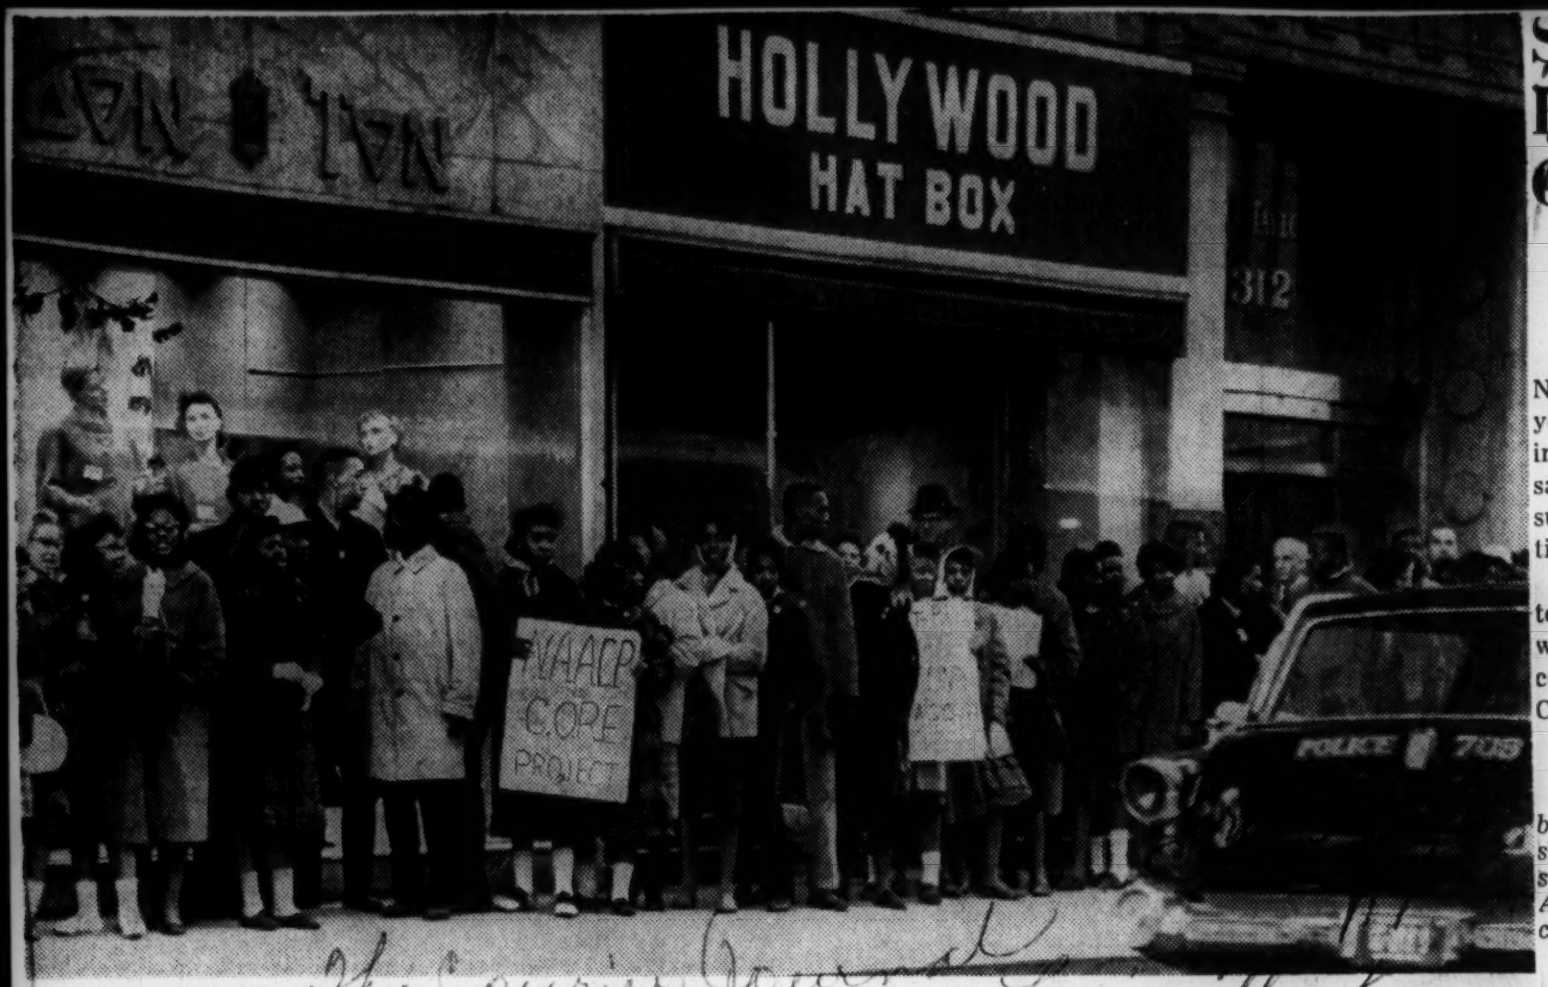
"I consider this committee formed quickly under pressure as a group noble in cause, which has taken the hot chestnuts of the Democrats out of the fire for the Democrats have had many years to accomplish this purpose, and it is my belief that a gradual integration could have been brought about without the necessity of a pressure group, jailing of our citizens, boycotting of business, or big headlines in the papers if the desire and purity of purpose had been prevalent in the hearts of certain people. Therefore, I do not disagree with the findings of the Mayor's committee, but do disagree with the method used."



The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Staff Photo

MARCHERS MASSED . . . A segment of a group of about 250 youngsters who demonstrated on Fourth Street yesterday is shown between Liberty and Jefferson. Members of the group sang almost constantly as they walked in an orderly manner through the downtown section.

Mid-City-Integration Talks Resume Today

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Oct. 3-18-61

Negotiations on downtown integration will resume this morning after a nine-day interruption.

Governor Combs, in his third meeting on the Louisville racial question yesterday, mediated an agreement for the Negro steering committee and the Mayor's emergency committee on integration to meet at 10 a.m. at City Hall.

The agreement was reached at a conference in Combs' office in Frankfort attended by Mayor Hoblitzell and six Negro integration leaders. The closed meeting lasted an hour. Negro leaders visited Combs Wednesday and the Governor attended a meeting of the Mayor's committee Thursday.

Says Calmness Wanted

In downtown Louisville, the integration front was quiet yesterday. Negro demonstrations were suspended for the second straight day.

The Rev. W. J. Hodge told about 300 Negro youths gathered at Quinn Chapel A.M.E. Church about today's scheduled negotiations and said: "We want our conversations to be carried on in calmness and in quiet."

He said: "But because we have not attained our goal we will meet here again on Monday." He instructed them to continue the Negro buying strike against downtown stores.

To Name Chairman

Neither Hoblitzell nor Combs will attend today's negotiations. Hoblitzell left yesterday on a previously scheduled trip to Tulsa, Okla., with Lieutenant Governor Wilson Wyatt to try to bring a future convention of the National Junior Chamber of Commerce to Louisville.

Hoblitzell designated Thomas A. Ballantine to call today's meeting. The committee has been without a chairman since Dillman A. Rash resigned this week as chairman but not as a member. It is made up of white business and civic leaders. Hoblitzell said the committee would elect a temporary chairman for today's meeting.

Negro leaders meeting with the Governor and the Mayor yesterday were Mr. Hodge, the Rev. F. G. Sampson, Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker, the Rev. D. E. King, Frank Stanley, Jr., and J. Earl Dearing.

Rally Is Planned

A meeting of the Congress of Racial Equality is set for 5:30 p.m. today at Emmanuel Baptist Church, 648 S. 10th.

A "Let's Meet for Freedom" rally is to be held at 5 p.m. tomorrow at West Chestnut Street Baptist Church, 18th and Chestnut.

A white Baptist editor yesterday advised Baptist churches to "be prepared for a thoroughly Christian consideration" of applicants for membership, whether Negro or white.

Churches should base their attitude toward the applicant on whether he "seriously feels his Christian experience can be best realized by this church," said C. R. Daley, editor of The Western Recorder. The paper is the weekly publication of the General Association of Baptists in Kentucky.

Daley proposed in an editorial that names of potential members, white or Negro, be referred to a church membership committee for recommendation to the church at its monthly meetings. This would give time to determine "whether or not the request is simply a test case" and whether the individual is sincere.

Segregation Protests Called Off

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Tues. 3-21-61

But They'll Resume If Talks Bog Down

Downtown demonstrations by Negroes were called off again yesterday, but spokesmen of an integration steering committee said demonstrations would resume if integration negotiations don't show progress.

The Negro steering committee will meet at 2 p.m. today with the Mayor's emergency committee on integration at City Hall.

350 Hear Minister

A steering committee member, the Rev. W. J. Hodge, speaking to some 350 Negro students at Quinn Chapel A.M.E. Church yesterday, declared:

"We have said all along we are not demonstrating for the sake of demonstration. We are demonstrating to make a reality of the things we ought to have.

"But if there is no progress, we move from negotiation to what?" he said.

"Demonstrations," the students shouted.

Mr. Hodge is president of the Louisville branch of The National Association for The Advancement of Colored People.

Mayor Hoblitzell is expected to be at today's City Hall meeting. On Thursday he'll leave for Florida on vacation.

Student Speaks

Another speaker at the Quinn Chapel meeting was Rex Brown, a second-year student at Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary and a member of the seminary students' social-action committee.

Brown noted that seminary students had endorsed integration of businesses, and said the students would contact students at other colleges here to back the integration move.

Brown also noted that two white students from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary attended yesterday's meeting.

Statement Issued

Integration support also came yesterday from the Louisville Clericus, a group of Episcopal clergymen. The group issued this statement:

"Resolved, that we the members of the Louisville Clericus, call upon all persons in the Louisville area, especially the members of our church, to work together in charity and forbearance, toward the establishment, without racial discrimination, of full opportunities in fields such as education, housing, employment, and public accommodations, reminding the members of our church that concern on their part to support the elimination of racial segregation is implied in the action of the general convention in 1958."

38a 1961

KENTUCKY

BOYCOTT

LUNCH COUNTER

Easter Buying Boycott Planned

Chicago Defender

Chicago Ill.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — (UPI)— The Louisville chapter of the NAACP has planned a Negro "shopping vacation" in the downtown area during the Easter season, following new arrests of stand-in demonstrators.

B-(4-10)-61

Police arrested 14 Negro youths who staged stand-in demonstrations in front of three downtown theaters, department store lunch counters and restaurants protesting racial segregation.

The 11 youths and three girls, all arrested in front of theaters, were charged with disorderly conduct delinquency. They were accused of blocking the entrances to the theaters.

One theater closed its box office during the demonstration and a second moved its box office into an inner lobby.

The Rev. W. J. Hodge, president of the local chapter of the NAACP, said the stand-in arrests prompted the proposed shopping vacation, set to begin Monday and last through April 3.

New Orleans Core Members Get 60 Days

New Orleans, La. — Sixty day jail sentences and fines of $350 were handed out to four New Orleans CORE members, convicted of Criminal Mischief. Criminal District Judge Bernard Cocke gave the defendants the option of paying the fine or of serving an additional 60 day prison sentence.

The arrests of CORE Chairman Rudolph Lombard, Oretha Castle, Cecil W. Carter, Jr., and L. Sidney Goldfinch grew out of a sit-in at a McCrory lunch counter September 17. Goldfinch is also charged with Criminal Anarchy and faces a possible sentence of ten years. No date has been set for the trial of that charge.

Attorneys Lolis P. Elie and John P. Nelson, Jr. filed notice of appeal on the Criminal Mischief conviction. They alleged that Judge Cocke erred in refusing to allow testimony to prove McCrory's to be in interstate commerce and to show a conspiracy between McCrory management and the New Orleans Police. Such a conspiracy would make the arrest unconstitutional state support of private discrimination.

The CORE attorneys indicated that they would appeal to the Louisiana Supreme Court and ultimately to the United States Supreme Court.

4 Sit-Ins To Appeal 60 Day Jail Sentence

The Louisiana Weekly
New Orleans, La.

Three Negroes and a Tulane University instructor, were sentenced by Judge J. Bernard Cocke of criminal district court Tuesday to serve 60 days in jail and pay $350 fines each for participating in the recent Canal Street McCrory lunch counter sit-in demonstration.

The trio of Negroes sentenced were Rudolph Lombard, Miss Oretha Castle and Cecil Carter, Jr., along with Tulane instructor, Sydney L. Goldfinch, Jr.

Their attorney filed notice of appeal to the Louisiana Supreme Court and said the four would post bail of $750 each. This was the amount fixed by Judge Cocke, to remain at liberty until the high court rules.

The quartet was charged with criminal mischief as the result of the sit-in last September 17 at the lunch counter of a local department store, 1005 Canal.

According to Attorney John P. Nelson, Jr., in serving notice of appeal, the conviction was a miscarriage of justice and violated the constitutional rights of the defendants.

The defense attorneys said the law under which the four were convicted was enacted "to implement and further the state's policy and custom of forced segregation for the races in public places."

At press time, Mrs. Moore had no information as to whether or not the man who shot at her, had been captured.

GROUP IN SIT-IN GETS JAIL, FINES

The Times Picayune
New Orleans, La.

Tulane Instructor One of Four Sentenced

A Tulane university instructor and three Negroes were sentenced Tuesday in criminal district court to serve 60 days in jail and pay $350 fines each for participating in a Canal st. sit-in demonstration.

Judge J. Bernard Cocke sentenced the four after convicting them recently of a criminal mischief charge. The sit-in occurred Sept. 17 at the lunch counter of McCrory's department store, 1004 Canal.

Sentenced were: Sydney L. Goldfinch Jr., Rudolph Lombard, Oretha Castle and Cecil Carter Jr. Goldfinch is white while the other three are Negroes.

Attorney John P. Nelson Jr. served notice of appeal. Judge Cocke ordered that the four would be allowed freedom if each would post a $750 bond until the Louisiana state supreme court rules on the case.

Nelson and the three other attorneys, Robert F. Collins, Nils R. Douglas and Lolis E. Elie, alleged that the record "shows error to their (the defendants') prejudice, a miscarriage of justice, and same constitutes a violation of their contitutional rights, and they are desirous to appeal to the . . . supreme court of the state of Louisiana. . . ."

Judge Cocke set Feb. 1 as the deadline for the appeal and he increased the bail for each defendant from $250 to $750.

Goldfinch is a Tulane graduate student and philosophy instructor.

Dixie Congressman head of House probe of sit-ins

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Rep. Edwin E. Willis of Louisiana heads a Congressional subcommittee which will quiz supporters of Southern sit-in demonstrators at hearings in San Francisco.

The Dixiecrat Congressman is a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities which has summoned 40 persons to appear before the subcommittee between May 10 and 13.

Willis comes from one of the worst areas of Louisiana, so far as voting rights are concerned. He was also a leader in raising large sums of money to support Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas in his efforts to keep non-white children out of previously all-white schools in Little Rock.

A wide variety of people have been summoned to the California hearings. The only thing they have in common is that they have been active in organizing picket lines, boycotts, and other active support for the resistance movement in the South.

The San Francisco hearings recall similar proceedings held in Atlanta, 1958. At that time Willis was a member of a subcommittee that quizzed Southern integration workers.

First Sit-In Appeals Reach Supreme Court

The News Courier
Charleston, S. C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three groups of Negro students arrested at lunch counters in Baton Rouge, La., filed the first appeals Tuesday to reach the Supreme Court as a result of prosecution of sit-in demonstrators in the South.

In three separate appeals the Negroes asked a final ruling by the high tribunal that the arrests violated their constitutional rights.

The appeals said that sit-in demonstrations raised the fundamental issue whether a state may use its power "to compel racial segregation in private establishments which are open to the public—and to stifle protests against such segregation."

Arrested Negro Sit-Ins Appeal to U.S. Tribunal

The Florida Times-Union
Jacksonville, Fla.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—Three groups of Negro students arrested at white lunch counters in Baton Rouge, La., today filed the first appeals to reach the Supreme Court as a result of prosecution of "sit-in" demonstrators in the South.

In three separate appeals, the Negroes asked a final ruling by the high tribunal that their arrests violated their constitutional rights.

The appeals said that "sit-in" demonstrations raised the fundamental issue whether a state may use its power "to compel racial segregation in private establishments which are open to the public—and to stifle protests against such segregation."

The arrests and convictions in Baton Rouge, the appeals contended, "if allowed to stand would be completely subversive of the numerous decisions throughout the federal judiciary outlawing state enforced racial distinctions."

The Negroes were arrested at lunch counters in two drug stores, and the Greyhound bus station in Baton Rouge. The appeals were filed by 17 students, each of whom was sentenced to four months in jail. Three months of the sentence might be suspended by payment of a $100 fine.

High Court Gets First Sit-In Cases

Atlanta Daily World

By CHARLOTTE G. MOULTON

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The first lunch counter sit-in cases to reach the Supreme Court have been filed by 16 Negro students at Southern University in Baton Rouge, La.

The three appeals related to sit-in demonstrations in the Greyhound bus station, Kress's store and Sitman's drugstore. The students were convicted under a Louisiana law which makes it a crime to commit any act "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

The outcome of the cases could lay down legal guide lines for handling the sit-in issue throughout the South. But even if the court agrees to hear the appeals, arguments are not likely to be scheduled until next term beginning in October.

Before the high court announces whether it will accept or reject the petitions, Louisiana has 30 days in which to respond. The Louisiana Supreme Court affirmed the convictions Oct. 5.

The students were sentenced to four months in jail with the provision that three months might be suspended upon payment of $100 fines and costs.

In the case of the two students at Sitman's drugstore, the appeal said no one complained of their presence and the manager did not call police. Police Capt. Robert Weiner, who made the arrest, said the officer on the beat informed him of the situation.

Kress's store has no signs indicating segregated lunch counters, but the store has a rule in this respect. Police were called after the seven students refused to move to the colored section.

A waitress in the Greyhound station told the students they would have to go "on the other side" to be served.

First Sit-In Case Reaches High Court

Jackson Daily News
Jackson, Miss.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first lunch counter sit-in cases to reach the Supreme Court have been filed by 16 Negro students at Southern University in Baton Rouge, La.

The three appeals related to sit-in demonstrations in the Greyhound bus station, Kress's store and Sitman's drugstore. The students were convicted under a Louisiana law which makes it a crime to commit any act "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

The outcome of the cases could lay down legal guidelines for handling the sit-in issue throughout the South. But even if the court agrees to hear the appeals, arguments are not likely to be scheduled until the term beginning in October.

The students were sentenced to four months in jail with the provision that three months might be suspended upon payment of $100 fines and costs.

High Court Gets First Sit-In Cases

Miami Herald

By CHARLOTTE G. MOULTON

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The first lunch counter sit-in cases to reach the Supreme Court have been filed by 16 Negro students at Southern University in Baton Rouge, La.

The three appeals related to sit-in demonstrations in the Greyhound bus station, Kress's store and Sitman's drugstore. The students were convicted under a Louisiana law which makes it a crime to commit any act "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

The outcome of the cases could lay down legal guide lines for handling the sit-in issue throughout the South. But even if the court agrees to hear the appeals, arguments are not likely to be scheduled until next term beginning in October.

Before the high court announces whether it will accept or reject the petitions, Louisiana has 30 days in which to respond. The Louisiana Supreme Court affirmed the convictions Oct. 5.

The students were sentenced to four months in jail with the provision that three months might be suspended upon payment of $100 fines and costs.

In the case of the two students at Sitman's drugstore, the appeal said no one complained of their presence and the manager did not call police. Police Capt. Robert Weiner, who made the arrest, said the officer on the beat informed him of the situation.

Kress's store has no signs indicating segregated lunch counters, but the store has a rule in this respect. Police were called after the seven students refused to move to the colored section.

A waitress in the Greyhound station told the students they would have to go "on the other side" to be served.

Court Kills Louisiana Race Bars

Tribunal Agrees On Fall Review Of Dixie Sit-Ins

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday rejected all efforts to balk or delay public school integration in Louisiana.

It agreed also to hear the appeals of 17 Negro students convicted in connection with sit-in demonstrations at lunch counters in Baton Rouge, La. Arguments will not be heard until next fall.

These will be the first appeals to be heard by the high court growing out of a wave of demonstrations and arrests during lunch counter sit-ins in the South.

The court's present actions in Louisiana school cases actually were foretold Dec. 12. At that time the court said, in effect, that all Louisiana devices designed to forestall integration in public schools were legally worthless.

DECEMBER COMMENT

The court made the December comment in refusing to delay effectiveness of a ruling by a special three-judge federal court in New Orleans striking down a spate of anti - integration laws passed by the Louisiana Legislature.

In unanimously affirming this and another decision the Supreme Court Monday merely listed the cases by number and said the lower court was affirmed.

One ruling by the three-judge court was given last Nov. 30. It threw out a package of integration laws.

The other one, handed down last Aug. 29, ordered control of the schools taken out of the hands of Gov. Jimmie H. Davis and given back to the New Orleans Parish School Board. It also directed the board to compy with an order last May 16 by U.S. Dist. Judge J. Skelly Wright to integrate the first grade last fall. That ruling also struck down a dozen Louisiana laws as unconstitutional on their face.

REQUEST DENIED

In addition to upholding the two orders of the three-judge court, the Supreme Court turned down a request by the New Orleans school system that it be allowed to operate on a segregated basis until the legal controversy between the federal and state governments was finally settled.

In still another action Monday involving race, the court agreed to review a decision by the Virginia Supreme Court that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People unlawfully solicited legal business for its attorneys in Virginia.

The law was passed at an extra session of the Virginia General Assembly in 1956 at a time Virginia was committed to "massive resistance" to public school integration.

Only two weeks ago, the Supreme Court refused to hear a sit-in case appeal filed by eight Negroes and four white persons arrested during sit-in demonstrations in Tallahassee, Fla. The court gave no explanation but some observers speculated it may have been because the 12 had not carried their case to Florida's highest courts before appealing to the Supreme Court.

ALARM PUBLIC

The Baton Rouge Negro students were convicted and given four-month sentences under a Louisiana law which prohibits the commission of "any act in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public." The students denied doing anything to disturb or alarm the public.

But Atty. Gen. Jack P. F. Gremillion of Louisiana, in opposing a Supreme Court review, said the students "deliberately proceeded to intrude on the private property of other citizens to engage in unwanted demonstrations. To uphold their right to do so is to trample the rights of all other citizens."

In other actions Monday, the court:

1. Rejected an appeal by Mrs. Vi Murphy, a reporter for the Colorado Springs (Colo.) Gazette-Telegraph, who received a 30-day contempt sentence for refusing to disclose a news source to the Colorado Supreme Court.

Justice William O. Douglas said he favored reviewing the case.

2. Refused to reconsider its Jan. 23 decision upholding the right of censors to see motion pictures before their public showing.

The ruling was against Times Film Corp., which had refused to submit the film "Don Juan" to Chicago censors.

3. Ruled that state trial courts must determine whether a confession was made voluntarily without regard to truth or falsity of the confession.

The ruling reversed the conviction of Harold D. Rogers, 59, a Negro under death sentence in New Haven, Conn., for a robbery slaying.

High Court Will Rule On Sit-Ins

By Charlotte G. Moulton

WASHINGTON. — (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to hear arguments and decide legal issues surrounding local arrests of sit-in demonstrators in the South.

The court did so by accepting three appeals from 16 Negro students who were arrested and convicted in Baton Rouge, La., a year ago this month. It was the first time the court had agreed to hear arguments about the demonstrations.

The demonstrators were found guilty and given jail sentences for disturbing the peace in demonstrations at three stores. Two weeks ago, the high court refused to accept an appeal by a group of white and Negro sit-in participants who were convicted at Tallahassee, Fla., on local trespassing statutes.

Arguments in the Baton Rouge case will be heard sometime next fall. The resulting opinion is likely to set a legal pattern for sit-in case will be heard sometime next

The Baton Rouge case was brought to the Supreme court by 16 Negro students at Southern university as three separate appeals.

The three appeals accepted by the court related to demonstrations in March, 1960, at the Greyhound bus station, Kress's department store and Sitman's drug store.

The students were arrested by Capt. Robert Wiener of the Baton Rouge city police. They were convicted in the East Baton Rouge parish district court of disturbing the peace.

Louisiana law makes it a crime to commit any act "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

On Oct. 5, 1960, the state supreme court affirmed the conviction. All 16 students were sentenced to four months in jail, with a proviso that three months of the sentence would be suspended upon payment of a fine of $100 and cost.

The main theme of the legal argument was whether the state may use its police power to enforce racial segregation in a place of business open to the general public.

The Negroes rely on a 1948 Supreme Court decision that racially restrictive real estate covenants are not enforceable in court.

The students were represented in the Supreme Court by lawyers for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Opposition to Supreme Court review of the case was filed by Louisiana State Attorney General Jack P. F. Gremillion and District Attorney Sargeant Pitcher Jr., of Baton Rouge.

"There can be no doubt in the mind of the court, or anyone else, that the demonstrations involved herein were deliberately planned and organized," the state's brief said. "....Neither can there be any doubt that the manager and owner of the stores in question did not want any such demonstration on their private property

"Furthermore, there can be no doubt that these (students) knew that their unlawfully remaining on private property could foreseeably result in violence and disorder.

"Instead of lawfully and peaceably expressing themselves by picketing, by the use of newspapers, radio and television, or by mass meetings on private property to which they had been invited, (they) deliberately, and as part of a well organized nation-wide plan, proceeded to intrude on the private property of other citizens to engage in unwanted demonstrations. To uphold their right to do so is to trample the rights of all other citizens."

The NAACP lawyers conended:

—The students were denied the "due process of law" guaranteed in the constitution because they were convicted "on a record barren of any evidence of guilt."

—The law is vague and indefinite and does not furnish an adequate standard of guilt.

—The students were unconstitutionally denied liberty of expression.

AWAIT SIT-IN CASE OUTCOME IN LOUISIANA

WASHINGTON (ANP) —Court observers interested in a Supreme Court reaction to the sit-in demonstrations are anxiously awaiting the outcome of a sit-in case now before the high tribunal involving 17 Louisiana Negroes.

This case, unlike the Florida sit-in appeal denied by the high court last week, has run the full course in state courts. The Supreme Court has not yet said whether it will hear arguments in the Louisiana case.

The two-pronged issue involved — which has been widely debated by lawyers across the nation in addition to those for and against sit-ins — is chiefly this: Does the law dealing with trespass of "private" property outweight the rights of one who enters a "public" facility as an invitee who may make purchases in one department but is denied service in another, in this case at the lunch counter.

Some southern store operators contend their businesses are private. Sit-in supporters, on the other hand, declare that these stores are open to transact business with the public and accept Negro patronage in all departments except the lunch counters

The import of the action by the Supreme Court last week was not made clear. The coure merely said it would not hear the appeal. Observers speculated the refusal may have been based, at least partially on the fact that the case had not gone through Florida's highest courts. The appeal came to Washington from the circuit court for Leon county, which affirmed the municipal court.

JAN.1961
LUNCH COUNTER- Baton Rouge
3 SEPARATE APPEALS (SUPREME COURT)

High Tribunal Ruling Asked After Sit-Ins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three groups of Negro students arrested at white lunch counters in Baton Rouge, La., Tuesday filed the first appeals to reach the Supreme Court as a result of prosecution of sit-in demonstrators in the South.

In three separate appeals, the Negroes asked a final ruling by the high tribunal that their arrests violated their constitutional rights.

The appeals said that sit-in demonstrations raised the fundamental issue whether a state may use its power "to compel racial segregation in private establishments which are open to the public—and to stifle protests against such segregation."

The arrests and convictions in Baton Rouge, the appeals contended, "if allowed to stand would be completely subversive of the numerous decisions throughout the federal judiciary outlawing state enforced racial distinctions."

The Negroes were arrested at lunch counters in Sitman's Drug Store, the Kress store and the Greyhound bus station in Baton Rouge. The appeals were filed by 17 students, each of whom was sentenced to four months in jail. Three months of the sentence might be suspended by payment of a $100 fine. All of the groups attended Southern universities.

The students were convicted under a Louisiana law which prohibits the commission of "any act in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

High Court Will Review Louisiana Sit-in Cases

The Supreme Court has agreed to review a group of sit-in cases arising in Louisiana. The hearing, to be held next fall, will be the first in which the Court has considered whether states can use their police powers to enforce a store owner's desire to segregate his customers at lunch counters.

In orders entered yesterday in other civil rights cases, the Court affirmed decisions issued last November and December by a lower court in the New Orleans school desegregation struggle and agreed to review Virginia's barratry law.

The sit-in cases developed in Baton Rouge a year ago this month when students from Southern University there demanded service at white lunch counters in a restaurant, a variety store, and a bus station.

Fifteen were arrested and convicted of disturbing the peace under a law that makes it a crime to act in "such a manner as to unreasonably disturb and alarm the public."

The outcome of these cases will affect dozens of other sit-in cases that are pending on appeal in lower courts across the South, including Maryland and Virginia. It could have a decisive impact on private segregation practices throughout the Nation.

The convictions are being attacked on the grounds that there was no evidence that anyone in Baton Rouge was alarmed by the demonstrations, that the State law is too vague, and that it is unconstitutional for a state to enforce racially discriminatory practices adopted by businesses open for general public use.

It is the tihrd point that carries major importance. The State says it must have power to enforce these practices if the store owner has a constitutional right to serve only those whom he chooses to serve. If it cannot enforce this choice, the State says, the store owner will resort to violence.

The Court has never ruled either on the state's power to enforce or the owner's right to discriminate.

In the New Orleans school case, the Supreme Court summarily affirmed actions of a three-judge court in declaring many acts of the Louisiana Legislature unconstitutional and in enjoining many State officials from interfering with desegregation in the New Orleans schools.

The orders that were upheld also allow the Justice Department to take a broader than normal role in the cases and called interposition and unconstitutional doctrine.

The Supreme Court's action ends any possible doubt that may have hung over the legal end of the New Orleans problem. It opens the door, for example, for the School Board there to pressure local banks to resume their normal practice of lending the Board money. The banks have declined on the ground that there was still a legal question pending in the courts.

Law Aimed at NCAAP

The Virginia barratory law, which the Court will also review next fall, is one of a series of 1956 statutes aimed at the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The Virginia Supreme Court upheld it as a legitimate measure to strengthen the State's laws on the solicitation of business by attorneys.

The law is aimed, primarily, at keeping the NAACP from encouraging the filing of school-desegregation cases. The NAACP says it is not soliciting business for its attorneys and argues that the law will put it out of business in Virginia.

When the Virginia Court upheld this law, it struck down a companion statute that made it illegal for anyone to advise anyone else about filing a lawsuit. The lower court said that was clearly unconstitutional.

U.S. Will Hear Sit-In Appeals

Baton Rouge Case To Come Before Supreme Court For Consideration

From The Commercial Appeal Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, March 20. — The Supreme Court moved Monday toward a further clarification of laws governing "sit-in" demonstrations by anti-segregationists.

The court agreed to consider appeals by Negro youths who were convicted in Baton Rouge, La., of violating a state law after they staged demonstrations in three public eating places.

Two weeks ago the Supreme Court refused to consider appeals by eight Negro and four white youths convicted of violating a city ordinance during demonstrations at a Woolworth lunch counter in Tallahassee.

Convictions Stand

The Supreme Court's refusal to intervene let the Talahassee convictions stand and had the effect of acquiesence in the way the cases were handled by the Tallahassee police and the lower courts.

The court's decision in the Louisiana case will add to the scant and disputed "body of law" that is applicable to "sit-in" demonstrators.

The Louisiana case involves three separate incidents in which Negro students entered public eating places that served both Negroes and whites but in separate sections.

The establishments were a restaurant, a bus station lunch counter, and a variety store lunch counter.

In each instance, the Negroes took seats in the section reserved for whites, refused to move to the Negro section, and were arrested.

They were convicted of violating a Louisiana state law that prohibits various acts as well as "any other act" committed "in such manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

Jail Plus Fines

The Negro youths were directed to serve four months in jail, or to serve one month and pay $100 fines plus court costs.

Points raised in the appeal include absence of evidence the Negroes disturbed the peace, the "vagueness" of the Louisiana law, and an argument that the state law, as applied in the case, violated the due process and equal protection guaranties of the Fourteenth Amendment.

In the Tallahassee case, the demonstrators took seats at a lunch counter where only whites were served. They refused to leave, even after they were asked to do so by the mayor.

They were arrested and convicted of violating a city ordinance that prohibits acts of disorderly conduct, breaches of the peace, and unlawful assembly.

A decision in the Louisiana case is not expected for several weeks.

Order, Private Property, Sit-Ins

The caption above lists ingredients to be explored when the Supreme Court hears appeals of three Negro students, and by implication 14 others, arrested in Baton Rouge following a sit-in demonstration.

The students sat down at privately-owned white establishments and sought to be served. They were arrested, convicted, fined and sentenced to 60 days under a Louisiana law prohibiting commission of "any act in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

Negro plaintiffs argued, fundamentally, that the state could not enforce segregation, therefore could not criminally penalize them for expression of dissatisfaction at "being relegated to second class status in public establishments." The term "public establishments" also is sure to be at issue.

This case may recall a series of cases culminating in 1948 Supreme Court decisions outlawing state enforcement, through courts, of restrictive covenants involving private housing contracts. Restrictive covenants in these cases embraced agreement among property purchasers and sellers not to transfer property to Negroes or persons other than Caucasians.

The Supreme Court ruled that, under the 14th Amendment, states, courts, couldn't enforce such covenants or contracts. It held they could be entered into privately. In brief, property owners, sellers and/or buyers, could agree in transfer of deeds to bar others than a given race. But if this covenant were broken, those considering themselves at grievance couldn't get remedy in the courts.

In a real sense, the high court is now being asked to determine something akin to this situation. Very roughly, it can be put: Can Louisiana courts, acting under a law governing disturbance, or what it considers disturbance, arrest and convict persons entering a privately-owned commercial establishment generally open to the public, but by custom—not law—barring Negroes, this at the wish of the property owner, whatever his motivation, personal conviction or accession to local attitudes.

If, theoretically, the Negroes' plea that state laws cannot be used to prevent them expressing dissatisfaction by intruding into a privately-owned area, the court, again theoretically, might rule that the lunchroom might bar Negroes, but that state courts or laws couldn't be used to uphold such barring.

If it so held, the court would leave in a vacuum the matter of law and order, for sit-ins have resulted in violence. It could leave the question as to what recourse in law a property owner had to prevent literal trespass.

The case could get the country down to grips with a fundamental issue involving alleged denial of claimed individual rights as against traditionally enforceable property rights of other individuals.

SIT-INS AWAIT COURT VERDICT

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U.S. Supreme Court has agreed for the first time to rule on appeals of Negroes arrested during the wave of sit in demonstrations protesting lunch counter segregation in the South.

Present plans are to hear arguments in the fall on the appeals of 17 college students convicted in connection with sit-ins at Baton Rouge, La.

The students were given four-month sentences under a Louisiana law which prohibits the commission of "any act in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public." The students denied this.

DELIBERATE INTRUSION

But Atty. Gen. Jack P. F. Gremillion of Louisiana contended the students "deliberately. . . . proceeded to intrude on the private property of other citizens to engage in unwanted demonstrations. To uphold their rights to so do is to trample the rights of all other citizens."

Two weeks ago the high tribunal refused to hear a sit-in case appeal filed by eight Negroes and four white persons arrested in Tallahassee, Fla. The court gave no explanation but some observers speculated it might have been because they had not carried their case through all state courts first.

In another action Monday, the Supreme Court affirmed lower federal court orders striking down Louisiana efforts to balk or delay public school desegregation in that deep South state.

The court also turned down a request by the New Orleans School Board that it be allowed to maintain segregated schools until litigation between the federal government and the state is finally settled.

In Georgia, Negro coed Charlayne Hunter became the first member of her race ever to use the dining facilities at the 175-year old state-supported University of Georgia.

The Negro took advantage of a federal court ruling allowing use of such facilities by eating supper in a student cafeteria in Snelling Hall on the campus at Athens. She was accompanied by two other coeds and a male student. No incidents were reported.

Earlier in the day the Hunter girl and Hamilton Holmes, the other Negro student attending university, completed registration for the second quarter without incident.

MOB LECTURED

In Savannah, Ga., Judge George E. Oliver told 19 defendants in city police recorder's court that Savannah authorities would not tolerate mob action and violence. The 19 were among 41 persons arrested during racial violence after a St. Patrick's Day parade.

The Rev. L. F. Griffin of Farmville, Va., a member of the NAACP, wrote the Civil Rights Commission that closing of public schools in Prince Edward County, Va., "represents a complete abdication of all that democracy stands for. It is very depressing, to say the least to be constantly aware that we live in the only place in the United States that has no public schools."

Prince Edward public schools were closed two years ago rather than desegregate. White children now attend private segregated schools but no provision was made for Negroes.

Louisiana Sit-In Case Now Before U.S. Supreme Court

SU 15 Move To Challenge 'Conviction'

The Louisiana Weekly New Orleans, La

WASHINGTON (ANP) -- The sit-in movement, which was declared by the Associated Negro Press to be the nation's number one story for 1960, has provoked a legal question which was placed before the United States Supreme Court last week.

Attorneys for the NAACP filed three petitions at the court and said the cases in question raise this "fundamental issue:"

"May the State use its power to compel racial segregation in private establishments which are open to the public and to stifle protests against such segregation."

CHALLENGE CONVICTION OF STUDENTS

The lawyers are challenging the conviction of 15 Negro students for sitting at a lunch counter in Baton Rouge, La. This marks the first time legal tests arising from the sit-in campaign in the South have reached the high tribunal.

Counsel, terming the case one "of widespread public importance," said they could set a precedent for pending prosecutions of sit-in demonstrators in eight other states.

The Louisiana students were convicted of "disturbing the peace." Each was sentenced to four months in jail, with the proviso that three months of the sentence would be suspended on payment of a $100 fine and costs. They are free pending appeal.

The Louisiana cases are different from some other sit-in tests - and more favorably situated legally for the Negro students - becuase there is no charge of trespass.

POLICE PRESS CHARGES

That is, the store's management did not ask to have the students prosecuted as trespassers. According to the petition, the arrests were solely a police idea. Thus there is no conflict in the cases between the students' rights and the property rights of the store.

What the students were convicted of violating was a Louisiana statue that makes it a crime to act "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public." The State courts found that the continued presence of the Negro students at the "white" counter might have caused such alarm.

The petitions in the Supreme Court say the convictions were unconstitutional on any of four grounds as follows:

1. They say there was no evidence of any public disturbance or alarm. The court held just last year in a case involving a Louisville man that convicting a man of loitering and disturbing the peace without any evidence denied him due process of law.

2. The statue is attacked as unconstitutionally vague.

3. The arrests and convictions are said to be unconstitutional restrictions on freedom of expression.

4. The petitions say the arrests were an unconstitutional method of enforcing racial discrimination.

1960 Sit-Ins Bring Issue To High Court

The Black Dispatch Oklahoma City, Okla

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—The sit-in movement, which was declared by the Associated Negro Press to be the nation's number one story for 1960, has provoked a legal question which was placed before the United States Supreme Court last week.

Attorneys for the NAACP filed three petitions at the court and said the cases in question raise this "fundamental issue":

"May the State use its power to compel racial segregation in private establishments which are open to the public and to stifle protests against such segregation?"

Challenge Convictions

The lawyers are challenging the conviction of 15 Negro students for sitting at a lunch counter in Baton Rouge, La. This marks the first time legal tests arising from the sit-in campaign in the South have reached the high tribunal.

Counsel, terming the cases one "of widespread public importance," said they could set a precedent for pending prosecutoions of sit-in demonstrators in eight other states.

The Louisiana students were convicted of "disturbing the peace." Each was sentenced to four months in jail, with the proviso that three months of the sentence would be suspended on payment of a $100 fine and costs. They are free pending appeal.

The Louisiana cases are different from some other sin-in tests—and more favorably situated legally for the Negro students—because there is no charge of trespass.

Police Press Charges

That is, the store's management did not ask to have the students prosecuted as trespassers. According to the petition, the arrests were solely a police idea. Thus there is no conflict in the cases between the students' rights and the property rights of the store.

What the students were convicted of violating was a Louisiana statue that makes it a crime to act "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public." The state courts found that the continued presence of the Negro students at the "white" counter might have caused such alarm.

Convictions "Unconstitutional"

The petitions to the Supreme Court say the convictions were unconstitutional on any of four grounds as follows:

1. They say there was no evidence of any public disturbance or alarm. The court held just last year in a case involving a Louisville man that convicting a man of loitering and disturbing the peace without any evidence denied him due process of law.

2. The statute is attacked as unconstitutionally vague.

3. The arrests and convictions are said to be unconstitutional restrictions on freedom of expression.

4. The petitions say the arrests were an unconstitutional method of enforcing racial discrimination.

High Court To Rule On Sit-In Case

The Call K.C., Mo. Fri. 1-13-61

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The first lunch counter sit-in cases to reach the Supreme Court have been filed by 15 Negro students at Southern University in Baton Rouge, La.

The three appeals are related to sit-in demonstrations in the Greyhound bus station, Kress's store and Sitman's drugstore. The students were convicted under a Louisiana law which makes it a crime to commit any act "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

The outcome of the cases could lay down legal guidelines for handling the sit-in issue throughout the South. But even if the court agrees to hear the appeals, arguments are not likely to be scheduled until next term beginning in October.

Before the high court announces whether it will accept or reject the petitions, Louisiana has 30 days in which to respond. The Louisiana Supreme court affirmed the convictions Oct. 5.

The students were sentenced to four months in jail with the provision that three months might be suspended upon payment of obtained by the Taylor team in Philadelphia, to prevent the Rev. Leonard C. Carr of Philadelphia, treasurer of the convention, and the Rev. Theodore J. Jemison of Baton Rouge, the secretary, from disbursing any funds of the convention or removing any of its records, was dismissed by the Philadelphia Common Pleas court, Dr. Jackson pointed out.

This act left the Jackson faction in complete control of all convention properties and monies.

Dr. Jackson said that the Taylor faction was operating under the constitution of the National Baptist Convention, USA, and because of this, would have to "absolve" itself before coming back to the convention he presides over. Jackson told the ministers that he would give every ounce of $100 fines and costs.

In the case of the two students at Sitman's drugstore, the appeal said no one complained of their presence and the manager did not call police. Police Capt. Robert Weiner, who made the arrest, said the officer on the beat informed him of the situation.

Kress's store has no signs indicating segregated lunch counters, but the store has a rule in this respect. Police were called after the seven students refused to move to the colored section.

A waitress in the Greyhound station told the students they would have to go "on the other side" to be served.

U. S. Supreme Court Agrees To Hear Sit-In Case; Backs End Of La. "Package" Laws

Will Probe Va. Law NAACP Says Is A Destroyer

By CHARLOTTE G. MOULTON

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday accepted its first sit-in case, paving the way for a precedent-making decision on the anti - segregation lunch counter demonstrations that have been conducted throughout the South.

The test case was brought by 16 Negro students who were convicted of disburbing the peace in Baton Rouge, La., last year. The high court will hear arguments on their appeals sometime next fall and later hand down a ruling that could set a legal pattern in the protests.

The sit-ins first came to public attention in February, 1960, and since then have been carried out in various communities in the North and South by both whites and Negroes, most of them college students.

In some areas, the protesters have won their fight for seating at department store and other eating facilities. In other cities, arrests have been made under local or state ordinances.

After Sit-In Demonstrations in Baton Rouge, the 16 Negro students from Southern universities were arrested after sit-in demonstrations at a Greyhound bus station, Kress' department store and Sitman's drug store.

They were convicted in the East Baton Rouge Parish District Court under a state law which makes it a crime to commit any act" in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

All 16 demonstrators were sentenced to four months in jail with a proviso that three months of the sentence would be suspended upon payment of a fine of $100 and costs. The state supreme court affirmed the conviction.

In appealing to the federal supreme court, lawyers for the students contended the state had no right to use police power to enforce racial segregation in a place of business open to the general public. The argument stemmed from a 1948 Supreme Court decision which held that racially restrictive real estate covenants were unenforceable in court.

Louisiana Atty. Gen. Jack P. F. Gremillion and Baton Rouge Dist. Atty. Sargeant Pitcher, Jr., opposed supreme court acceptance of the case.

ARGUMENTS OUTLINED

The brief declared that neither the manager nor owners of the stores wanted the demonstrations on their property and that the students had not availed themselves of peaceful picketing, use of news media or mass meetings on private property to which they had been invited.

Gremillion and Pitcher said that to uphold the right of the sit-in demonstrators "is to trample the rights of all citizens."

On the other hand, the lawyers for the students argued they were denied due process of law and liberty of expression because the Louisiana statute is vague and indefinite and does not provide an adequate standard of guilt.

In other actions, the court also:

—Agreed to examine a Virginia law which the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, NAACP, contends may destroy it in the state. The controversy centers around a Virginia court ruling which held that the NAACP was "engaged in the unlawful solicitation of legal business' when its attorneys participated in anti-segregation legal battles.

—Affirmed a lower federal court ruling which threw out a package of Louisiana state laws aimed at preventing the integration of New Orleans schools. The laws were enacted at a special session of the legislature last year.

— Agreed to look into a copyright dispute between Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover and Public Affairs Press which centered around the claim of the famed atomic submarine expert that he is entitled to copyright speeches so that they cannot be quoted or used in a book without his permission.

Supreme Court To Hear Louisiana Sit-In Case

Washington, D. C. — The U. S. Supreme Court has decided to hear arguments from attorneys representing 17 Negro students of Southern University who have been arrested and sentenced to 4-month terms during sit-in demonstrations in Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

The cases involving the Negro youths will be the first test of the wholesale jailing of Negro and white youths in the South for participating in stand-ins, sit-ins, and anti-segregation picketing. A date for the hearings was not determined by the court.

The high tribunal issued an order directing a hearing on the case Monday afternoon. The court said that 3 hours would be allowed for the attorneys' argument on merits of the case. Three seperate appeals are before the court.

Attorneys for the students contended in the appeals that a state had no power to compel segregation of the races. They argued that Louisiana, therefore, could not impose criminal penalties for anti-segregation against being relegated to the status of second class citizens in public establishments.

Denied Due Process

The appeals also asked that the Supreme Court rule that the students were denied their rights as guaranteed by the equal protection and due process amendments of the U. S. Constitution.

The students contended that a State may not use its power to compel racial segregation in private establishments which are open to the public, and has no power "to stifle protests against segregation."

The Negroes were all students at the time of their arrests, at Southern University. They were sentenced o four months imprisonment after being arrested during demonstrations at lunch counters at Stiman's Drugstore, Kress Deparement Store and the Greyhound Bus station, all at Baton Rouge.

Supreme Court Takes Sit-In Case

The Florida Times-Union

WASHINGTON, March 20 (UPI)—The Supreme Court today accepted its first sit-in case, paving the way for a precedent-making decision on the integration lunch counter demonstrations that have been conducted throughout the South.

The test case was brought by 16 Negro students who were convicted of disturbing the peace in Baton Rouge, La., last year. The high court will hear arguments on their appeals sometime next fall and later hand down a ruling that could set a legal pattern in the protests.

The sit-ins first came to public attention in February 1960, and since then have been carried out in various communities in the North and South by both whites and Negroes, most of them college students.

In some areas, the protesters have won their fight for seating at department store and other eating facilities. In other cities, arrests have been made under local or state ordinances.

In Baton Rouge, the 16 Negro students from Southern universities were arrested after sit-in demonstrations at a Greyhound bus station, Kress's department store and Sitman's drug store.

They were convicted in East Baton Rouge Parish District Court under a state law which makes it a crime to commit any act "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

All 16 demonstrators were sentenced to four months in jail with a proviso that three months of the sentence would be suspended upon payment of a fine of $100 and costs. The Louisiana Supreme Court affirmed the conviction.

In appealing to the U.S. Supreme Court, lawyers for the students contended the state had no right to use police power to enforce racial segregation in a place of business open to the general public. The argument stemmed from a 1948 U.S. Supreme Court decision which held that racially restrictive real estate covenants were unenforceable in court.

In other actions, the court also:

Agreed to examine a Virginia law which the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) contends may destroy it in the state. The controversy centers around a Virginia court ruling which held that the NAACP was "engaged in the unlawful solicitation of legal business" when its attorneys participated in anti-segregation legal battles.

Affirmed a lower federal court ruling which threw out a package of Louisiana state laws aimed at preventing the integration of New Orleans schools. The laws were enacted at a special session of the legislature last year.

Agreed to look into a copyright dispute between Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover and Public Affairs Press which centered around the claim of the famed atomic submarine expert that he is entitled to copyright speeches so that they cannot be quoted or used in a book without his permission.

Decided to hear arguments in a complex legal snarl stemming from Venezuela's attempt to extradite former president and strong man Marcos Perez Jimenez.

Declined to hear an appeal by Mrs. Vi Murphy, a Colorado Springs newspaperwoman, who drew a 30-day contempt of court sentence for refusing to reveal a news source.

Sit-In Case To Supreme Court

Atlanta Daily World

The sit-in movement which began in Greensboro, N.C. and ignited a protest that has a chain reaction throughout the nation, will be argued before the U.S. Supreme Court next fall.

What is to be determined is a test case involving 16 Negro students who were convicted of disturbing the peace in Baton Rouge, La. They were convicted in East Baton Rouge Parish District Court under a state law which makes it a crime to commit any act "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

The issue before the High Court is far more significant and precedent-making than the legalisms of disturbing the peace, trespassing or the state's using its police power to enforce racial segregation.

More specific is the determination whether a privately owned business is subject to the same interstate regulations that govern public transportation, business, utilities and so forth.

The U.S. Supreme Court will have an opportunity to study these issues in the bold and stark relief of social change and as to whether fortifications of the law have been erected as a barrier against a civil and human right.

With the forum of law and the concept of a changing society, the U.S. Supreme Court has grasped the horns of the sit-in dilemma and will resolutely study the issues, so that a legal pattern will be established.

Supreme Court to hear three sitdown cases

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

The Supreme Court Monday decided to review three sitdown cases which arose in Baton Rouge, La. In taking these cases, the court indicated that a substantial Federal question is involved.

Unlike the Tampa, Fla. sitdown cases which the court refused to review two weeks ago, these cases present no precedural questions.

Convictions in the Baton Rouge cases were upheld by the Louisiana Supreme Court. The Tampa cases did not reach the Florida Supreme Court.

In each of the three Baton Rouge cases, students at Southern University were arrested for violating a state law which makes criminal "any other act" committed "in such a manner as to unreasonably disturb or alarm the public."

• • •

THE STUDENTS in each case merely requested non-segregated service at three different public lunch counters in stores which otherwise welcomed them as customers.

No disturbances occurred in any of the cases.

The students in each case were convicted and sentenced to four months in prison, three months of which might be suspended upon payment of a $100 fine and costs.

In the Mary Briscoe case, the students on March 29, 1960 sought service at a lunch counter in the Greyhound bus station. The waitress told them that since they were colored "they would have to go to the other side to be served."

The students staged a sitdown. The police were called. Police Capt. Robert Weiner asked the students to move. They refused and were arrested.

• • •

IN THE JOHN Burrell case, a group of students were seated at the lunch counter in Sitman's Drug Store. One of them ordered coffee. Colored patrons are served in the drug store section but not at the lunch counter.

The manager did not call police and did not know who called them. The police captain who made the arrests was told by the officer on the beat that two colored persons were sitting at the counter.

In the third case, a group of students staged a sitdown at the white lunch counter in Kress' variety store. The store maintains separate lunch counters for white and colored patrons.

The cases are of widespread public interest and many similar cases are pending in state and federal courts.

The NAACP told the high court that: "If the decision of the Louisiana Supreme Court is allowed to stand, it will undermine numerous U.S. Supreme Court decisions striking down enforced racial segregation."

High Court to Rule on Southern Sit-Ins

Will Hear 'Sit-in' Cases

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to hear arguments and decide legal issues surrounding local arrests of sit-in demonstrators in the South.

The court did so by accepting appeals from 16 Negro students who were arrested and convicted in Baton Rouge, La., a year ago this month. It was the first time the court had agreed to hear arguments about the demonstrations.

The demonstrators were found guilty and given jail sentences for disturbing the peace in demonstrations at three stores. Two weeks ago, the high court refused to accept an appeal by a group of white and Negro sit-in participants who were convicted at Tallahassee, Fla., on local trespassing statutes.

The court gave no explanation but some observers speculated it may have been because the 12 had not carried their case to Florida's highest courts before appealing to the Supreme Court.

Arguments in the Baton Rouge case will be heard next fall. The resulting opinion is likely to set a legal pattern for sit-in cases throughout the South.

The court also:

AGREED to examine a Virginia law which the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People contends may destroy it in the state.

AFFIRMED a lower federal court ruling which threw out a package of Louisiana state laws aimed at preventing the integration of New Orleans schools. The laws, including an "interposition" statute, were enacted at a special session of the legislature last year.

AGREED to look into a copyright dispute between Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover and Public Affairs Press which centered around the famed atomic submarine expert's claim that he is entitled to copyright speeches so that they cannot be quoted or used in a book without his permission.

U. S. Supreme Court Affirms N. O. School Desegregation

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The U. S. Supreme Court, in an 11-word statement rejected all of Louisiana's efforts to balk or delay public school integration.

It agreed also to hear the appeals of 17 Southern University students convicted in connection with sit-in demonstrations at lunch counters in Baton Rouge in March and April, 1960. Arguments will be heard next fall.

The Supreme Court's action, in effect, struck down a sweeping series of acts passed by the Louisiana Legislature designed to prevent integration of the New Orleans public school system.

The court's action of last week in the Louisiana school cases actually were foretold Dec. 12. At that time the court said, in effect, that all Louisiana devices designed to forestall integration in public schools were legally worthless.

■

THIS COMMENT was made when the court refused to delay the effectiveness of a ruling by a special three-judge Federal Court in New Orleans knocking down a spate of anti-integration laws passed by the Louisiana Legislature.

Said the Supreme Court last week in the suit originally entitled Oliver B. Bush et al v. the Orleans Parish School Board et al: "The motions to affirm are granted and the judgements are affirmed."

The Bush case was filed in the Federal Court at New Orleans on Sept. 5, 1952 by Atty. A. P. Tureaud.

The lower court tribunal which handed down the decisions in New Orleans last year consisted of Chief Judge Robert T. Rives of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and District Judges Herbert W. Christenberry and J. Skelly Wright.

The Louisiana sit-in convictions

Supreme Court Action, Shift To Job Emphasis Top News For Week On Sit-In Front

By Associated Negro Press

Biggest news on the sit-in front was the decision last week of the Supreme Court to review a group of Louisiana cases next fall. The outcome could have a decisive impact on segregation practices not only in the South but throughout the country.

But while awaiting the court's action of the Baton Rouge cases, students and adults supporting the anti-segregation movement continued demonstrations in various parts of the nation. One noticeable trend was the shift of emphasis from lunch counters to a fight for equal employment in two cities.

In Kansas City, Mo., 100 persons from two civic organizations picketed eight retail stores where it was claimed Negroes have been limited to menial jobs.

And in Elkhart, Ind., a group of more than 50 Negroes staged a demonstration in front of the offices of Mayor Frank J. Parmater against job discrimination.

Lloyd Saville, a professor of economics at Duke university, Durham, N. C., spoke out against job discrimination at a conference on national goals.

* * *

GREENVILLE.—(ANP)—A petition requesting the repeal of a section of the City Code regulating serving of meals to whites and Negroes in public places has been preesented to Mayor J. Kenneth Cass, with copies sent to managers which the U. S. Supreme Court has agreed to review involves three cases of 17 students of Southern University.

In each case the students sought service at lunch counters designated for whites and were arrested by Baton Rouge police. They were later convicted of disturbing the peace and were sentenced to four months in jail.

of three leading variety stores in the city.

The petition was prepared by Negro Attorney Donald Sampson and states that one section is a "clear example of police power which may be inconsistent with Constitutional liberties and business ethics.

* * *

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — (ANP)— Gov. Bert T. Combs entered recent integration talks at city hall as Negro students and adults substituted prayer for demonstrations. After the meeting, the governor told newsmen, "It was a very informative discussion . . . We're going to play it by ear."

In Juvenile Court, Judge Henry Triplett overruled a defense motion that he vacate the bench in trials of 17 youths and one adult arrested in demonstrations and postponed trials of their cases.

About 450 Negro students and adults met as usual but instead of marching downtown again, they spent the period singing and praying on the general theme of brotherhood.

* * *

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—(ANP) A white man slugged a Negro Episcopal priest and an elderly white woman was injured as an aftermath of Chattanooga's latest theatre stand-in demonstration.

In addition nine young Negroes who tried to buy tickets to a white movie theatre were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

38a 1961

SENTENCES

LOUISIANA LUNCH COUNTER- NEW ORLEANS

Four 'Sit-Ins' Sentenced

NEW ORLEANS—Four collegians, three Negro and one white, were sentenced last week in Criminal District Court to serve 60 days in jail and pay $350 fines each for participating in a Sept. 17 "sit-in" at the lunch counter of McCrory's Department Store on Canal St. Attorneys for the four say they will appeal the sentence.

Lunch Counter Protest First in Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss., July 11 (UPI)—Two Negro boys staged Mississippi's first lunch counter "sit-in" today in this deep South city, scene of repeated anti-segregation demonstrations in recent weeks.

The youths took seats at a lunch counter in a downtown drug store shortly after noon. Police arrested them.

Jackson has been the chief target of the "Freedom Riders." In addition, there have been recent demonstrations by Negroes protesting segregation at the city's main library, the zoo, a park and on city buses.

In Little Rock, Ark., four freedom riders remained in jail today while their lawyer prepared a defense to a breach of the peace charge.

Municipal Judge Quinn Glover delayed their trial until Wednesday on motion of Thad Williams, a Negro attorney. The four were arrested last night before a jeering crowd after they entered a white-only intra-state bus waiting room.

Two Stage Sit-In At Jackson Store

Youths Quietly Arrested At Noon Hour

JACKSON, Miss., July 11. — (UPI)—Two teenage Negroes staged Mississippi's first lunch counter "sit-in" Tuesday.

The youths walked into the integrated Walgreen's Drug Store during the noon hour and sat at the store's segregated lunch counter.

Waitresses ignored them but a police officer entered the store as a crowd of whites began gathering and ordered the youths to leave.

They refused and were arrested for breaching the peace.

They were identified as Lu[illegible]vaghen Brown, 16, and Jimmy Travis, 18, both of Jackson.

Jackson, chief target of the massive "freedom ride' campaign, has been swept with anti-segregation demonstrations in recent weeks at Parks, swimming pools and other public places but Tuesday's demonstration was the first of its kind.

Earlier Tuesday, 53 convicted "Freedom Riders" were transferred from jails here to the state penitentiary.

Authorities began moving the riders to the penitentiary's maximum security cellblock after the riders' campaign almost filled the jails. The latest tranfer left only 10 riders in jail and boosted the rider population at the penitentiary to 128.

Of the 227 riders arrested here, 84 have been released on bond, one was released as a juvenile and three are held for youth court.

Jackson's newly-formed nonviolent movement issued a statement late Tuesday charging officers refused to let parents of local riders visit them in the Hinds County Jail during visiting hours Sunday.

It said parents asked why they could not see the riders and were told by an officer, "I don't have time to be bothered."

"Some of the parents have taken food and clothing to their sons, but these have not been received," the statement claimed. "In addition, some riders have not received medicine that was left for them."

STUDENT DENIES SIT-IN CHARGE

Ole Miss Candidate Hits at Citizens Council

By W. F. MINOR
(Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

OXFORD, Miss. — An Ole Miss senior charged Friday the Citizens Council and some state officials circulated a "vicious" report in an attempt to link him with pro-integration forces.

Billy C. Barton of Pontotoc, said the move was apparently being waged against him to prevent his election as editor of the Mississippian, the Ole Miss student newspaper.

Barton produced copies of letters originating from the Citizens Council in Jackson and sent out by the state sovereignty commission which accused him of taking part in a sit-in demonstration last summer in Atlanta and of being a member of the NAACP.

The 20-year-old student said he worked on the Atlanta Journal last summer and while there was assigned to assist another reported in covering a sit-in at a downtown store.

DENIES CHARGE

"Anybody who has said that I was a participant in any such sit-ins is an outright liar," Barton declared in a statement.

Barton called "preposterous" a charge that he was a member of the NAACP—an accusation which was passed along to Gov. Ross Barnett.

He said he exchanged correspondence with Gov. Barnett to correct the report, but that he received no satisfaction from the governor.

In a letter to him, Barnett said the NAACP report was told to "a member of my staff" while he was on the university campus.

Barnett told him to correct the report on the campus and added, "Certainly you realize that I have no control over reports circulated by students."

REPORT SENT

The state sovereignty commission, of which Barnett is chairman, earlier sent to the Ole Miss campus, under a covering letter from Albert Jones, commission director, a report from a Citizens Council source that Barton was "very dangerous" and was selected for "advanced training" by integration forces.

The Citizens Council "confidential report" on Barton was based on information which it said was supplied by the executive secretary of the States' Rights Council of Georgia, an affiliated organization of the Citizens' Council.

It said that the material on Barton was furnished by "an informant planted on the staff" of the Atlanta Journal who "had Barton under observation for some time."

The Citizens Council letter said that Ralph McGill "editor of the Atlanta Journal," had "taken Barton under his wing and has offered him a permanent position on the Atlanta Jourlay after graduation from Ole Miss."

NAME BLOCKED OUT

McGill is not editor of the Atlanta Journal, but was formerly editor of the Atlanta Constitution. Barton said in his statement Friday he never met McGill during his summer work on the Journal.

The letter from the Citizens Council said that Barton's relation with McGill "means that Barton is well regarded in left-wing circles as a promising young man, and has been selected for advanced training."

The writer of the Citizens Council leter, whose name was blocked out on a copy sent out by the sovereignty commission, added:

"I regard this information as important, and very releaving. It indicates the painstaking efforts of the pro-integration people to plant sympatthizers in key positions on our college campuses, where they can exert a maximum influence on student opinion."

'FRIEND OF EAST'

Previously in the letter, the Citizens Council source said Barton is a "close friend" of P. D. East, publisher of the Petal paper, Petal, Miss., which has lampooned the Citizens Council for several years.

The letter said also that Barnton had the "strong support" of Dr. James Silver and a liberal group of faculty members on the campus.

"During three years at the university," Barnton said Friday, "I have had only one class under Dr. Silver."

Recently, accuations that Barnton took part in three sit-in demonstrations in Atlanta and other charges listed in the Citizens Council letter were contained in a "report" made by Mrs. Sarah McCorkle, director of womens' and youth activities of the Citizens Council, furnished to some legislators and others.

SUITS POSSIBLE

Jones, director of the sovereignty commission, refused to confirm for reporters Friday that he received the Citizens Council "confidential report" on Barton and sent it to a source on the Ole Miss campus.

'If I did receive it, I could not say whom it came from," Jones declared. "I guess you 'might just say, no comment."

Barton said Friday he is considering launching libel and slander proceedings against "at least two persons, on the of damaging reports circ against him.

SAY SOVEREIGNTY COMMISSION TO BLAME FOR SIT-INS HERE

Oxford, Miss., Mar. 27. — The State Sovereignty Commission is squarely and directly to blame for Mississippi's first Negro sit-ins, in Jackson Monday, a member of the State Legislature said here Tuesday.

Rep. Philip D. Bryant said the commission sends speakers north "and they tell their audiences glowing tales of racial harmony, with no sit-ins, no wal suits pending and the like. What do we expect?"

Bryant, of Oxford, called for an urgent reappraisal of the Sovereignty Commission which was set up by the legislature to campaign for racial segregation.

He sharply criticized State Sen. Hayden Campbell of Hinds County for advocating more tax money to send segregation boosters to northern cities.

"Sen. Campbell, I don't believe, has stopped to think about the far-reaching implications of his statement," the Fayette County representative said.

Such speakers are "an open invitation and a challenge" to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Bryant.

"They have to come into Mississippi now and try something just to save face. The best way to handle segregation is to keep our mouth shut. Every speaker who leaves Mississippi is just holding up a target for the NAACP to shoot at."

Sen. Campbell said the commission speaker's bureau trips to the north to teach segregation were the "best bargain" in the budget. The bureau has spent more than $10,000 since it was set up last June.

Rep. Bryant said the legislature has "created a monster and it's going to be the job of all of us in the next session to put a harness on it."

TOUGALOO COLLEGE PLANS NO ACTION AGAINST SIT-IN STUDENTS

Tougaloo, Miss., March 29 — Dr. A. D. Beitell, President of Tougaloo Southern Christian College here, said Tuesday, according to reports that the College plans no disciplinary action against any of the nine students arrested in the sit-in demonstrations at the Jackson Municipal library Monday morning.

Dr. Beitell who was in Atlanta attending a conference when the incident took place returned to the College immediately after being informed of the incident, and the arrest of the nine students by Dr. A. A. Branch, Dean of the College.

The President visited the students Tuesday while they were being held under arrest in the city jail some hours before they were released on bond later in the afternoon. According to reports, Dr. Beitell said that he visited the students in order to discuss with them an up-coming examination and to make arrangements for their taking the examination at a later date.

The nine students were releused on bonds of $1000 each late Tuesday afternoon signed by Rev. R. L. T. Smith, Sr., and his son R. L. T. Smith, Jr., operator of the Valley Street Grocery, and John W. Dixon a retired letter carrier.

No integrationist, student plans suit

OXFORD, Miss. (ANP)— Accused by the Citizens Council and State Sovereignty Commission of being an integrationist and leading three Atlanta sitin demonstrations, a University of Mississippi journalism student says he is ready to bring suit for libel and slander against at least two persons.

Bill Barton, 20, of Pontotoc, Miss., declined to name the two but indicated that one was a Citizens Council worker and the other a top State Sovereignty Commission official.

Barton, who is a first semester senior and managing editor of the campus newspaper, said the two persons and legislators and a "high state official" circulated "malicious lies" about his activities as a reporter for the Atlanta Journal last summer, in hopes of blocking his election as editor of the Ole Miss student newspaper.

FIVE CORE LEADERS ARE UNDER ARREST IN MISSOURI

Columbia, Mo. Dec. 31 — Two University of Missouri Faculty members and three students all members of CORE were arrested this weekend for trespassing at Clark's Luncheonette on complaint of the owner Fred Clark.

The five are out on $10 Bonds and trial has been set for January 10th. The group will be represented by CORE National Chairman Charles R. Lodham.

CORE has been working to integrate Clark's which is located in downtown Columbia since last March. Attempts to negotiate failed—Mr. Clark claiming there was nothing to discuss. Before the sit-ins the CORE group picketed Clark's twice weekly.

Those arrested included John D. Schopp, assistant professor of Astronomy; Edward Tomich, instructor in Sociology; Miss Julia Ann Skinner, 19; Miss Carolyn Blanch Gnojewski, 20; and Malvin Lee West, 22.

Schopp said he, West, and Miss Skinner and Miss Gnojewski went into Clark's about 9:30 a.m. and took a booth. Miss Skinner and West are Negroes. Clark then came up and said, "We are not going to serve you."

Schopp said that he told Clark that they would like service. Clark replied "You can stay or not, but we are not going to serve you."

Clark then went to police headquarters and swore out a complaint. The arrest was made about 10:20 a.m.

No disorder was reported by anyone. Schopp complimented the police on the "eminently fair" treatment the CORE group received.

CORE responded to the arrests with massive testing of ten other discriminatory restaurants in Columbia. Schopp reports: "Some places have been visited eight or ten times by polite but insistent groups of two or three CORE people, each of which left when asked. The implication must be clear that we shall be back, perhaps with a sit-in."

CORE Members Charged With Trespassing

Columbia, Mo. — Municipal Judge Carl Wheaton took under advisement a case charging five members of CORE with trespassing at Clark's Luncheonette.

Judge Wheaton said: "This is certainly a case of first instance in Missouri, and maybe in the United States. I am going to deliberate slowly in this basic case."

The trial involved two University of Missouri faculty members and three students who staged a CORE sponsored sit-in on December 10. The owner, Fred Clark, signed two separate complaints leading to the arrests.

Waive Jury Trial

All the defendants waived the right to a jury trial in the packed courtroom. Defense attorney Charles R. Oldham, CORE National Chairman, cited a St. Louis Court of Appeals definition of trespassing which says that there must be willful damage before there is trespassing.

Clark testified that there was "no physical damage to my restaurant, their (the defendants') demeanor was normal for customers of a restaurant and my main complaint was serving an interracial group."

City Attorney Nickolaus attempted to show that even though there was no physical damage, there was still real damage which would support a charge of trespassing. "This is a matter of criminal trespass. It was a well-planned action."

In addition to questioning charge that a trespass had actually been committed, Oldham, in his closing argument, questioned the right of the state to uphold private acts of discrimination.

Judge Wheaton asked for written briefs to be submitted by both attorneys within 15 days. His decision will then follow.

Mo. Judge Ponders Over Lunch Counter Sit-Ins

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Municipal Judge Carl Wheaton took under advisement a case charging five members of CORE with trespassing at Clark's Luncheonette.

Judge Wheaton said: "This is certainly a case of first instance in Missouri, and maybe in the U.S. I am going to deliberate slowly in this basic case."

The trial involved two University of Missouri faculty members and three students who staged a CORE sponsored sit-in on Dec. 10. The owner, Fred Clark, signed two separate complaints leading to the arrests.

WAIVE JURY TRIAL

All the defendants waived the right to a jury trial in the packed courtroom. Def. Atty. Charles R. Oldham, CORE national chairman, cited a St. Louis Court of Appeals definition of trespassing which says that there must be willful damage before there is trespassing.

CRIMINAL TRESPASS

Clark testified that there was "no physical damage to my restaurant, their (the defendants') demeanor was normal for customers of a restaurant and my main comp't was serving an interracial group."

City Atty Nickolaus attempted to show that even though there was no physical damage, there was still real damage which would support a charge of trespassing. "This is a matter of criminal trespass. It was a well-planned action."

In addition to questioning the charge that a trespass had actually been committed, Oldham, in his closing argument, quesioned the right of the state to uphold private acts of discrimination.

Judge Wheaon asked for written briefs to be submitted by both attorneys within 15 days. His decision will then follow.

WANT SALES, OFFICE JOBS . . .

600 Urge Boycott of Stores Refusing to Hire Negroes

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(ANP)—A mass meeting to urge Negroes to stop buying from downtown stores which refused to integrate groups as sales persons and office workers drew 600 here at the Paseo YWCA. Sponsors were the CCSA (Community Committee for Social Action) and the NAACP. All present by voice vote pledged themselves to withhold future business from 12 large department stores including Montgomery Ward and Sears.

Keynote of the session was sounded by the Rev. Arthur Marshall jr., an officer in both groups, who told his listeners: "If Negroes can set up their own stores in Tuskegee, go to jail in Atlanta, in Nashville and all across the South, surely we can stop buying in Kansas City."

The CCSA two years ago picketed five major department stores to gain the right to eat in their restaurant facilities and won their point when a "march" on downtown stores was announced. Three stores gave up their jim crow policy along the line and the march was abandoned. Two others capitulated weeks later.

President of the CCSA is Mrs. Julia Hall, a school teacher. Head of the NAACP is Lee Vertis Swinton, a lawyer.

Both organizations met with heads of the stores and were given a promise that employment of Negroes in better capacities would come in a short time. Passing of seevral weeks and no results is the reason given by the boycott sponsors to take further steps.

38a 1961

MISSOURI

LUNCH COUNTER

Freed In Columbia Sit-In Case

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI)—Five members of the Congress of Racial Equality who staged a sit-in demonstration at a Columbia lunch counter last December were acquitted Friday of criminal trespassing charges.

The verdict was contained in a written opinion handed down by Municipal Judge Carl Wheaton. The five defendants had waived trial by jury.

The group, including two members of the University of Missouri faculty, was charged in connection with a demonstration at Clark's Luncheonette. Owner Fred Clark told police they refused to leave the place until they were served. The arrests came after Clark swore out trespassing complaints.

Judge Wheaton said he based his innocent verdict on an interpretation of the criminal trespassing law.

"Criminal trespassing," he said, "consists not only of entering upon the property of another without authority but also the doing of damage to his property. In this case there was no damage to property."

Wheaton said the constitutional question of the legality or illegality of sit-ins was not relevant to the case.

The five defendants are John D. Schopp, 33, an assistant professor of astronomy; Edward Tomich, 32, a sociology instructor; and university students Malvin Lee West, 22, of Kirkwood; Julia Ann Skinner, 19, of St. Louis; and Carolyn B. Gnojewski, 20, also of St. Lous.

West and Miss Skinner are Negroes.

City Attorney Carl Nickolaus was given 10 days in which to appeal the verdict.

Sitting In Is Not Criminal Trespass Mo. Judge Holds

Columbia, Mo. - Asserting that "a criminal trespass in Missouri" must entail "the doing of some damage to property," Municipal Judge Carl Wheaton has ruled that a peaceful sit-in does not constitute criminal trespass.

In so ruling, he acquitted two University of Missouri faculty members and three students, all members of CORE, who were arrested December 10 for sitting-in at Clark's luncheonette, a central downtown eating place.

The faculty members are John Schopp, assistant professor of astronomy and Edward Tomich, instructor of Sociology. The students are Julia Skinner, Carolyn Gnojewski and Malvin West. The were defended by Charles Oldham of St. Louis, who is CORE' national chairman.

Acknowledging that "damage in a trespass case may consist of loss of business," Judge Wheaton held: "There is no evidence that customers in the restaurant left it because of the presence of the defendants. The complainant testified that, while the defendants were in his restaurant on the date, people would not come in because they figured there was something going on. The appears to be merely a conclusion of the witness with no evidence of possible customers to support it and is not valid proof of the mental processes of those people."

The Columbia CORE group is continuing its campaign to integrate down town eating places.

Max Roach Album Is Boost for 'Sit-Ins'!

(Special to The Courier)

NEW YORK — A jazz record may well provide the nation's sit-in movement with musical impetus in the face of the manner in which it is being welcomed on the market.

"We Insist," an album inspired by drummer Max Roach, has been termed "one of the best jazz sellers to turn up in a long, long while" by Bob Altschuler, general manager of Candid Records.

Mr. Altschuler told The Courier that the disc's brutally frank cover, which depicts three sit-ins at a typical lunch counter scene has been one of the major selling points of the promotion.

He said, "We've been getting good action from this one. We've received an enormous amount of enthusiastic comments from newspapers all over the country."

Mr. Altschuler revealed that CORE (Congress for Racial Equality) and the NAACP have also endorsed the record. In fact, plans are afoot to have CORE mail out at least 25,000 copies of the record all over the country.

■

MR. ROACH is making contacts in an effort to have the performance put on film and hopes to take the entire package which made an auspicious debut in New York City recently on a national tour.

"We Insist," consists of a "Freedom Now Suite" which features the voice of Abbey Iincoln backed by Coleman Hawkins, the Nigerian drummer Michael Olatunji, Walter Benton, Booker Little, Julian Priester, James Schenk, Raymond Mantello, and Tomas DuVall.

One of the highlights of the album is a three-sectioned movement labelled "Prayer, Protest, Peace." Also, one section of the disc is devoted to South Africa with á selection entitled "Tears for Johannesburg."

Basically, "We Insist" is an album of protest music and is bound to have an attraction for jazz-conscious participants in the sit-in movement.

JAZZ FOR SIT-INS

38a 1961

NEW YORK

LUNCH COUNTER

'BEATNIKS' STAGE A 'VILLAGE' SIT-IN

N. Y. Times

More Than 30 Defy an Order by Fire Department to Clear Gaslight Cafe

New York N.Y.

By NAN ROBERTSON

More than thirty Greenwich Village beatniks defied the law yesterday and staged an overnight sit-in andthen shore-in at a Village coffeehouse after it had been ordered closed and evacuated as a fire hazard.

The incident at the Gaslight Poetry Cafe, 116 Macdougal Street, began at about 1 A. M. yesterday when someone telephoned the Fire Department that a blaze had broken out there.

Firemen swarmed into the murky basement premises with axes and flashlights to find poets, patrons and folk singers enjoying themselves.

"Where's the fire?" shouted one of the firemen under Deputy Assistant Chief John J. Browne.

John Mitchell, the cafe's 36-year-old owner, told them there was no fire. Meanwhile Len Chandler, who was singing a Calypso number called "Pay Me My Money Down," strummed his guitar and improvised "Don't be alarmed, it's only a fire drill" for the startled patrons.

The Beat Are Unbeaten

The firefighters then inspected the premises, ordered the cafe cleared and closed and issued Mr. Mitchell three summonses, one for overcrowding. A Fire Department sign listing the Gaslight as an "eminent fire hazard" was tacked on the door.

The bearded proprietor said many patrons had left, some without paying their bills. But Mr. Mitchell, about two dozen friends and a dozen employees refused to go.

In the commotion that followed, the police were called and issued Mr. Mitchell a fourth summons, for not possessing a cabaret license.

The sit-ins stayed until 11:30 A. M. yesterday, when the Fire Department gave the Gaslight permission to reopen because violations had been "abated."

All night long, Mr. Mitchell and friends sang, sipped espresso coffee, played guitars and denounced "fireniks" and policemen. At the height of the trouble the owner said, three patrol wagons pulled up to the Gaslight and the holdouts were threatend with arrest.

As the darkness became dawn, the groggy sit-ins became sleep-ins, dozing fitfully on tables and benches.

The Fire Department said yesterday that seventy-seven persons had been cleared from the Gaslight. The legal capacity, the department said, is seventy persons. Mr. Mitchell contended that only sixty-five were on hand and that the extras must have been curious bystanders who followed firemen into the basement.

Other summonses alleged a labor law violation and holes in the ceiling where a sprinkler system had been installed. The firefighters also said one front door of the Gaslight was locked when they arrived.

LUNCH COUNTER
NCCC STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSN.

38a 1961 NORTH CAROLINA

Rev. Abernathy Urges Intensified Boycotts, Plus More Sit-Ins

The Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

DURHAM, N. C.—An Alabama minister, speaking at North Carolina College, urged continued sit-in demonstrations and intensified economic boycotts as weapons by Southern Negroes in the fight for integration.

Rev. Ralph Abernathy, who succeeded Dr. Martin Luther King as president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, spoke before a mixed audience of students and townspeople on behalf of the NCC Student Government Association.

• "Not only must we sit-in" Abernathy said, "but we must stand-in, wade-in, and kneel-in until we can walk-in as first class American citizens."

The young minister, who is pastor of Montgomery's First Baptist Church, congratulated the NCC students for their demonstrations of the past year. He said, however, that "the struggle must continue, especially in employment where no dent has been made."

• "We must launch a nation-wide program of non-cooperation with the evil system of segregation," Abernathy continued. "We must not spend our money in any store where our dollars are respected and our persons disrespected. We must not spend in places where we cannot earn."

Using as his subject "Building a Democratic Civilization Amidst World Tensions, Frustration, and Fears," the visiting cleric traced the history of racial segregation from the 1850's.

■

IN THE EARLY days, he said, Negroes used "deceptive weapons," speaking what they thought others wanted them to say, and in a manner though to be required of them.

As a result, he continued, the Southern politician came to feel that only a few "agitators" were involved in the integration fight.

• "We must erase this false impression from the mind of the American public. This is the meaning of the sit-ins, which I endorse, approve, and recommend as a weapon in the struggle.

Abernathy was introduced by Lacy Streeter, president of the NCC Student Government Association.

3Pa 1961

NORTH CAROLINA LUNCH COUNTER

Sit-In Pupil Reinstated By School

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Johnson C. Smith University theology student who served 30 days in jail as a result of a sit-in demonstration was reinstated by the school Friday.

College President Dr. Rufus Perry said a board from the theology school "reinstated in good standing" Joseph Charles Jones, 23, who was convicted of breach of peace at Rock Hill, S.C., as the result of sit-in.

Jones was one of 13 Negroes who served 30-day sentences rather than post bond.

Dr. Perry said Jones was enrolled in a "professional" school rather than a graduate school at Johnson C Smith.

Jones did not attend the fall semester but enrolled and attended school one week before his arrest at Rock Hill.

Dr. Perry said Jones was carrying a full 16-hour week college load. "Jones didn't miss much work," Dr. Perry said. "He'll have to make up his back work."

Dr. Perry said Jones received no credit for any work done while serving his sentence in the York County, South Carolina, jail.

Jones' draft board here said last week that Jones passed his physical exam before his arrest and was classified "1-A acceptable." The board said it expected to call Jones either this month or next.

Upholds Right To Discriminate

RALEIGH, N. C. — (ANP) — The right of a restaurant operator to refuse service to Negroes was upheld by the North Carolina Supreme court again last week in cases growing out of last year's lunch counter sit-in demonstrations.

"The rule is well established," said the court, "that an operator of a privately-owned restaurant, privately operated in a privately owned building, has the right to select the clientele he will serve and to make such selection based on color, race, or white people in company with Negroes, if he so desires."

The court upheld the conviction of seven persons at Durham on trespassing charges.

They were arrested during sit-in demonstrations at the S. H. Kress company store last May 6.

The court also upheld the conviction in Union county of Robert Williams, a Negro integrationist leader, on trespass charges resulting from a demonstration at a Monroe drug store last March 11.

Defendants in the Durham case argued that the indictments should be dismissed because the court was employed to enforce racial segregation.

The state court quoted a decision of the U. S. Supreme court in ruling that rights of the defendants under the 14th amendment had not been violated. In that case, the federal court said the amendment's first section applies only to action by a state "and erects no shield against merely private conduct, however discriminatory or wrongful."

Sit-In Case Heads For Supreme Court

Attorneys for seven defendants convicted of trespassing during a sit-in demonstration at Durham asked the State Supreme Court for a stay of execution Tuesday so that the case can be appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court.

The high court granted the stay. Five of the seven had been sentenced to 15-30 days in jail and the other two received suspended sentences.

The seven lost their case in Durham County Superior Court and the State Supreme Court ruled last week that the lower court was correct in its action.

Defendants in the case include: John T. Avent, Callis N. Brown, Shirley Mae Brown, Frank McGill Coleman, John Harris Nelson, Donovan Phillips and Lacy Carrole Streeter.

Sit-In Verdicts Receive Backing Of N. C. Court

(See stories on bakk page)

By GENE ROBERTS JR.

Privately operated restaurants have the right to refuse service to Negroes, the State Supreme Court said Friday in two separate cases.

The high court made the ruling in upholding the trespass conviction of anti-segregation demonstrators sentenced during last year's lunch counter sit-in protests.

"The rule is well established," said the court," that an operator of a privately owned restaurant . . . has the right to select the clientele he will serve and to make such selection based on color, race, or white people in company with Negroes, if he so desires."

This statement was made by the court as it found "no error" in the conviction of five Negro students at North Carolina College and two white Duke University students.

Durham County Superior Court had sentenced the students last May 19 for trespassing at an S. H. Kress & Co. variety store lunch counter in Durham. The lunch counter displayed signs saying "operated for employes and invited guests only."

Union County Case.

The court also ruled that "no error" was made in the conviction in Union County of Negro integrationist leader Robert Williams.

Williams, president of the Union County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored people, was convicted of trespassing at Jones Drug Store in Monroe after he refused to leave the store at the request of the management. He was sentenced to 30 days in jail, suspended upon payment of a $10 fine, court costs and good behavior.

Justice R. Hunt Parker, in writing the court opinion in the Durham case said:

"No statue of North Carolina requires the exclusion of Negroes and of white people in company with Negroes from restaurants and no statute in the State forbids discrimination by the owner of a restaurant. . . ."

Parker added: "The officer of the City of Durham had a right and duty to arrest all seven defendants in the luncheonette department of the Kress store, because all of them were committing misdemeaners (trespassing) in his presence.

"There is no merit to the contention that this constituted State action, denying them rights guaranteed to them by the 14th amendment to the Federal constitution and by Article I, Section 17 of the State constitution."

The justice said the defendants "misconceive the purpose of the judicial processes here. It is to punish defendants for unlawfully and intententionally trespassing upon the land of S. H. Kress and Co. and for unlawful entry thereon, even though it enforces the clear, legal right of racial discrimination of the owner."

In handing down its decision on the Durham case, the State court quoted a decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in ruling that rights of the defendants under the 14th amendment had not been violated. In that case, the federal court had said the amendment's first section applies only to action by a State and erects no shield against merely private conduct, however disciminatory or wrongful."

The constitutional questions presented in the Williams case were the same as those decided in the Durham case, said Parker. But he added that Williams "did not favor us with any discussion as to alleged violation of his rights under the fifth amendment. Unlike the 14th amendment, the fifth has no equal protection clause."

Defendants in the Durham case included Joan Harris Nelson and Frank McGill Coleman of Duke and John Thomas Avent, Shirley Mae Brown, Callis Napolis Brown, Donovan Phillips and Lacy Carrolle Streeter, all of North Carolina College. The sentences ranged from a continued judgment for Miss Nelson and Miss Brown to 15 days for Avent, 20 days for Streeter and 30 days for Coleman, Phillips, and Collis Brown.

The court handed down opinions in 35 cases:

Lane v Drivers Association, Pasquotank new trial.
Lyday v Railway Co., Buncombe, affirmed.
Mattingly v Railroad, Mecklenburg, reversed.
In re Tyson, Edgecombe, reversed.
Benton v Montague, Mecklenburg, as to defendant Montague, reversed; as to defendant company, affirmed.
Clark v Scheld, Caldwell, affirmed.
Boykin v Bennett, Lenoir, reversed.
Power Company v Membership Corporation, Caldwell, error and remanded.
Seaford v Insurance Company, Davie, affirmed.
Baldwin v Cotton Mills, Davidson, affirmed.
Harrell v Harrell, Forsyth, reversed and remanded.
Speas v Ford, Forsyth, affirmed.
State v Williams, Union, no error.
State v Barnes, Wake, assault case, no error; obscenity case, reversed.
Membership Corporation v Light Company, Richmond, error and remanded.
In re annexation ordinances, Wake affirmed.
Arvin v McClintock, Wake, affirmed.
Moody v Moody, Randolph, affirmed.
State v Paschal, Guilford, new trial.
Stanley v Cox, Guilford, affirmed.
Isley v Brown, Guilford, reversed.
Watkins v Murrow, Guilford, modified and affirmed.
Martin v Martin, Cumberland, new trial.
State v Avent et al, Durham, no error.
Gunter v Winders, Durham, reversed.
Schlagel v Schlagel, Durham, affirmed.
Hoyle v Bagby, Durham, reversed.
State v Coleman, Robeson, no error.
State v Hunt, Robeson, reversed.
State v Bullard, Robeson, new trial.
State v Locklear, Robeson, no error.
State v Sealy, Robeson, new trial.
Dixon v Briley, Alamance, error.
Sealey v Insurance Company, Robeson, new trial.
Jackson v Bobbitt, Orange, affirmed.

Negroes Picket Forsyth Store; Cite Job Rights

WINSTON - SALEM (AP) — Four Negroes picketed the downtown S. H. Kress Co. store here Saturday in what they called "a state-wide movement to gain equal employment rights" in the company's stores.

Only said the demonstrations were backed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and would continue "until we get some action."

Only Kress stores were mentioned by the pickets.

"There will be demonstrations in all the larger cities of the state," a spokesman said. "If they don't start today, they will next week."

There were no reports on picketing elsewhere.

T. S. Bayne, manager of the Kress Store at Fourth and Liberty Streets, had no comment.

One of the demonstrators also walked in front of the nearby Center Theater, scene of other picketing movements in the past month.

Don Bradley, who identified himself as leader of the pickets, said Kress had been made the target because "they only employ Negroes in menial jobs."

"We think Negroes should be hired for some of the better jobs in the store, such as sales clerks . . .something better than the floor - sweeping kind of jobs," he said.

Durham Police In Rush Act; Pickets Quiet

DURHAM —(UPI) — Special duty policemen were rushed to two Durham theaters Sunday when a report was received of a "rush on the doors" by colored pickets.

But the pickets who have been walking up and down the streets in front of the Carolina and Center theaters did not attempt to flock into the movie houses.

FOR THE first time, however, the pickets went to the ticket windows and asked for admission. All were denied admission to the all - white facilities.

N. C. Court Says Restaurants Can Keep Out Negroes

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The right of a restaurant operator to refuse service to Negroes was upheld by the North Carolina Supreme Court again Friday in cases growing out of lats year's lunch counter sit-in demonstration.

"The rule is well established," said the court, "that an operator of a privately owned restaurant, privately operated in a privately owned building has the right to select the clientele he will serve and to make such selection based on color, race, or white people in company with Negroes, if he so desires."

The court said this as it found "no error" in the conviction of seven persons at Durham on trespassing charges as the result of sit-in demonstrations at the S. H. Kress & Co. store there last May 6.

The court also found "no error" in the conviction in Union County of a Negro integrationist leader, Robert Williams, on trespass charges resulting from a demonstration at a Monroe drug store last March 11.

Defendants in the Durham case argued that the indictments against them should be dismissed because the court was empowered to enforce racial segregation.

The court said the defendants "misconceive the purpose of the judicial processes here."

"It is to punish defendants for unlawfully and intentionally trespassing upon the lands of S. H. Kress and Co., and for unlawful entry thereon, even though it enforces the clear, legal right of racial discrimination of the owner," the decision held.

The court quoted a decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in ruling that rights of the defendants under the 14th amendment had not been violated. In that case, the federal court said the amendment's first section applies only to action by a state "and erects no shield against merely private conduct, however discriminatory or wrongful."

The court concluded that the defendants "have not shown the violation of any of their rights, or of the rights of any one of them, as guarnateed" by the state and federal constitutions.

The court said the constitutional questions presented in the Monroe case were the same as those decided in the Durham case.

The right of variety stores to enforce segregation at their lunch counters has become something of a moot question in several North Carolina cities because many stores have opened their lunch counters voluntarily to Negroes since last year's demonstrations.

The seven defendants in the Durham case included five Negroes and two whites. The two whites were Joan Harris Nelson and Frank McGill Coleman, both students at Duke University. The five other defendants were John Thomas Avent, Callis Napolis Brown, Shirley Mae Brown, Donovan Phillips and Lacy Carrole Streeter, all students at North Carolina College in Durham.

Coleman, Phillips and Callis Brown received 30-day sentences when they were tried in Superior Court in Durham. Streeter got 20 days, and Avent 15. Miss Nelson and Miss Brown received a continued judgment.

Williams, president of the Union County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was accused of leading a group of Negro teenagers in a sit-in demonstration at a Monroe drug store. He was sentenced to 30 days, suspended upon payment of a $10 fine, court costs and good behavior.

Abernathy Urges More Sit-Ins

DURHAM, N. C. — An Alabama minister, speaking at North Carolina college last week, urged continued sit-in demonstrations and intensified economic boycotts as weapons by Southern Negroes in the fight for integration.

Rev. Ralph Abernathy, who succeeded Dr. Martin Luther King as president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, spoke before a mixed audience of students and townspeople on behalf of the NCC Student Government Association.

'WALK-IN'

"Not only must we sit-in," Abernothy said, "but we must stand-in, wade-in, and kneel-in until we can walk-in as first class American citizens."

The young minister, who is pastor of Montgomery's First Baptist church congratulated the NCC students for their demonstrations of the past year. He said, however, that "the struggle must continue, especially in employment where no dent has been made."

"We must launch a nationwide program of non-cooperation with the evil system of segregation," Abernathy continued. "We must not spend our money in any store where our dollars are respected and our persons disrespected. We must not spend in places where we cannot earn."

6 Negroes Convicted At Greenville

GREENVILLE (AP)—Six Negro youths were found guilty Friday of violation of the trespass-after-notice law and were sentenced following a jury trial in Greenville Recorder's Court.

A six - man jury, which included one Negro man, found the three boys and girls guilty on charges which resulted from a sit-in demonstration at Grant's on N. Main Street Feb. 9.

Fined $100 or 30 days in jail by City Recorder John V. Jester were: Earle Peters, 16, Alfred Odell Leamon, 16, Jimmy N. Moore, 19, Kathleen Duncan, 17, Robbie Jean Young, 17, and Charity Ozell Jones, 17.

Attorney for the six, Donald Sampson, informed the court he would appeal.

Grant's manager, G. W. Hite, told the court he turned off the lunch counter lights, roped off the area and announced twice that the counter was closed after the six made their afternoon appearance.

He said the group refused to leave. City Patrolman W. R. Berry said he placed the six under arrest when they failed to comply with the request of the manager.

The jury trial started at 9:30 a.m. Friday and the case went to the jury just before the luncheon recess. Returning, the jurymen deliberated less than 15 minutes before returning their verdict of guilty.

Hundreds Join Fight To Break Barriers

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. — (ANP) — Instead of dying out, the sit-in movement is preading out.

Not only is the movement more effective and the number of people involved greater, but the area of protest has broadened.

The demonstrations, at first directed at lunch counters, have spread out to include theatres, libraries, playgrounds, and many other activities restricted by race.

Just how far the "ins" have gone or can go was pointed out here recently by Rev. Elton B. Cox, of High Point, national field secretary of the youth division of the NAACP.

"There are many things we can do," he said. Among them were:

SIT-INS: Continue them where lunch counters have not been desegregated.

STAND-INS: Protest against movie theaters.

WADE-INS: Go to public tax-supported beaches.

SWIM-INS: Go to public tax-supported swimming pools.

"PRAY-INS"

Pray-ins: "Prove to man that God created man free. As long as we take segregation they will dish it out. As a minister of God, (he is pastor of High Point's Pilgrim Congregational church) — I don't believe that we can live in segregated homes, go to segregated churches, be buried in segregated cemeteries, then live happily ever after in an integrated heaven . . . I am mad as hell at segregation."

VOTE-INS: Every college student over 21 should register and vote.

DRIVE-INS: Go to roadside snack bars and seek service. "A Negro cannot get a decent meal on the road in this state."

WATCH-INS: Pull up to drive-in theaters; park; stay there; "go to jail if necessary."

MOTOR-INS: Stop at motels. There is no place for you to sleep on the road.

APPLY-INS: Seek non-traditional jobs. "Don't be satisfied with Negro jobs. Confront the man. Let him know segregation is wrong."

WALK-INS: Walk into every tax-supported institution from a library to an art gallery.

BUY-INS: Buy homes in neighborhoods of your choice. "Live wherever you want to live."

STUDY-INS: Apply to colleges and universities that teach subjects you want to study. "Don't limit yourself to a Negro college."

PLAY-INS: Let your children play in all tax-supported playgrounds where they want to play.

BURY-INS: Use all tax-supported graveyards.

38a 1961

OKLAHOMA

LUNCH COUNTER
DESEGREGATED

'Longest sitdown' ends in victory

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., John A. Brown's so the largest department store here, ended segregation this week, thus bringing to a victorious close the nation's longest single sit-in campaign.

Successful NAACP youth thereby ended bias in the lunchroom, soda fountains and restrooms of the giant store which covers a block and a half.

The Negro youth group started its drive to integrate the store through a series of conferences in May of 1957. Just organized, it had 14 members at the time.

When talks failed, the NAACP youth began active sit-ins in August of 1958 and continued, without letup.

The council's membership jumped to 3,000.

It was not unusual for as many as 1,500 youngsters to be involved in sit-ins and picket lines throughout the city.

The NAACP youth council launched a "witholding of patronage campaign" against Brown's in September, 1960.

Although it got off to a slow start, an estimated 78 per cent of the colored population was participating when the store's owner, Frank Wade, capitiulated on June 23.

All told, 117 stores have been integrated throughout the city by NAACP youth since inception of the sit-ins in 1958.

38a 1961

OKLAHOMA

LUNCH COUNTER

The Oklahoma City Sit-Ins

By JEAN JOHNSON

In 1957, the Negroes of Oklahoma City started asking themselves the following questions:

If I can go downtown and shop and spend my money in a store, why can't I take that very same dollar and eat in that very same store that I shop in? Is it because I am black? Is it because my skin is a different color and my hair is a different texture? Am I a part of the public? Why discriminate against me? I have been educated in the schools of Oklahoma and I know I am a citizen. I had nothing to do with my color. I was designed by God and He makes no inferior people. I can't change my color and I don't want to. I just want the rights that every other citizen has—no more, no less. I'm tired of promises. I want my rights now!

In 1957, one little Negro child went down town to eat. She was immediately refused service and was told to be patient and wait. Things would eventually work out. "But I want to eat now," she said.

"You cannot have any food now. I'll put yours in a sack and you can walk up and down the streets and eat it," the manager said. "You see, the good white people will stop eating here if I let you eat here, but I am not like my customers. Some of my best friends are Negroes. But business is business, you know. Go home and we will eventually work out something."

The Negro child went home, wrote letters, called, prayed and waited for fifteen long months, and in August of 1958, this Negro child and others decided to wait in a different way. This time in front of the whole world. Thus the Sit-Ins started, and in 1960, the parents decided to get into the picture.

"If I can't eat in the same store that I shop in, because I am a Negro, then I'll take my little money somewhere else. I am not going to finance my own embarassment."

After 72 years the Negroes started spending their money in places where they could shop in dignity, and protested daily against the injustice that exists in the downtown area. The Negroes walk up and down the streets with posters, saying, "Don't Buy 2nd Class Citizenship With 1st Class Dollars," "Jim Crow Has Got to Go." They began to pray and sing. "Go Down Moses, way down in Egypt land, tell old Pharoah to let my people go," and Freedom became the key word—Thanksgiving, Freedom; Christmas, Freedom; Easter, Freedom; All Veterans Day, Freedom!

Thousands of people of all races and religions joined the Freedom cry and asked for freedom, but the restaurant owners said "No!" Whites joined the Freedom line and helped the Negro to carry the cross of America.

On Jan. 14, 1961, a group of Negroes and whites marched downtown to the Cravens Building, where the Anna Maude's Cafeteria is located. They couldn't enter the building and they lined up and softly hummed hymns and patriotoic songs, and because of this a Catholic priest, three women, a college girl, two college boys and two high school boys were placed i na paddy wagon and arrested.

The jails, cold water, hot water will not stop the Sit-Ins. The Sit-Ins will not stop until the doors are opened in downtown Oklahoma City.

Delay Granted in Sit-in Trial of 8 Cityans

The Black Dispatch
Okla. City, Okla.
Fri. 1-27-61

Trial for eight cityans charged with disorderly conduct in the January 14th sit-in demonstration at the entrance to Anni Maude cafeteria in the Cravens building, was postphoned for two weeks by Municipal Judge Hillis Sanford.

The Wednesday delay was granted upon request of Carmon C. Harris, Cravens Building attorney, and over strong objections of E. Melvin Porter, NAACP local head and counsel for the eight defendants.

Harris said his clients asked for the continuance in hopes of a peaceful settlement and Porter argued that postponement of the case would not further serve justice, adding that his clients wanted the matter disposed of "here and now."

Visit City Hall

Following the Wednesday hearing, the defendants along with about 40 supporters sought an audience with Mayor Norick at city hall. Finding the mayor out, the group converged on Norick's printing plant where Glend Phillips, secretary, told them Norick had left for California on business.

A member of the group stated that they were told prior to their visit to the plant during a telephone conversation to his office that Norick would be leaving the city for California on a 12 noon flight. However, he added, they were told on their arrival around mid-morning that he had already agone.

Defendants in the case are: Mrs. Clara Luper, 1819 N. E. Park Pl; Mrs. Ella Floyd, 1735 N. E. 14th; Freddy Lee Edwards, 414 N. Laird; Willie Johnson, 2101 Page; Ed Stone, Stephen Edward Wilson, Paula Deen, all Oklahoma City university students; and Mrs. Lu Ann Atkins.

Charges against the Rev. Robert G. McDole, assistant pastor of Corpus Christi Catholic church who was also charged in the Jan. 14th demonstration, were dismissed in an earlier hearing by Judge Sanford who said the priest was "On a frolic of his own and his superiors have far more jurisdiction than I."

All nine were charged with creating a disturbance by singing and by blocking the normal flow of traffic through the Cravens building lobby.

Continue Sit-ins

Despite the arrests, demonstrators converged on Anna Maude cafeteria last Saturday in stronger numbers following a morning meeting at Calvary Baptist church, 2nd and Walnut. Present in the Saturday group were those who had been arrested the previous Saturday, besides other city minister and the Rev. I. Burleigh of Guthrie, and the Rev. Shields of Norman.

One Negro demonstrator, Earl Temple, city funeral home director, succeeded in gaining entrance to the cafeteria due to his fair complexion. Other than the penetration into the cafeteria by Temple and some twenty whites who had entered earlier for the purpose of occupying seats, a spokesman for the group said this demonstration was conducted exactly like the one of a week earlier.

Why I Sit-In

MISS BARBARA POSEY

The Black Dispatch
Okla. City, Okla.
Fri. 2-3-61

"I sit-in because I am able in a non-violent way to remind America of her undemocratic behavior. And as a young person in America, I am willing to sacrifice for the great American dream of liberty, justice and equality."

"I sit-in because I have the backings of freedom-loving people everywhere and the assurance of the ages that God still lives and Justice will finally prevail."

50 Picket In Oklahoma City

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.
Fri. 4-7-61

OKLAHOMA CITY, (UPI) — About 50 young racial demonstrators, singing the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," picketed in front of a downtown Oklahoma City department store on April 1.

Ten of the demonstrators were whites.

The picketers, walking back and forth in front of the John A. Brown Co., carried signs which read, "He died to make men free."

The demonstration was to protest whites-only facilities in a lunch room in the basement of the store.

38a 1961

OKLAHOMA

OKLAHOMA CITY- REV. ROBERT McDOLE
CATHOLIC PRIEST

SQUAT- IN- LUNCH COUNTER

The Herald Courier (AP Wirephoto)

Priest Hauled Off To Jail In Oklahoma City

Oklahoma City police haul the Rev. Robert McDole, Roman Catholic priest, to a waiting paddy wagon during a "squat-in" demonstration by anti-segregationists. Approximately 50 white and Negro demonstrators sat around the entrance to a downtown cafeteria after Negroes in the group were refused admission. When the squatters ignored requests to leave police arrested the priest and 13 other adults on charges of disorderly conduct.

Eight Face Okla. Sit-In Charge

The Defender
Chicago, Ill.
2-11-61
P. 12

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Eight adults will appear in court here next week on disorderly conduct charges growing out of their arrests for participating in protest demonstrations against a cafeteria denying service to Negro patrons.

Included is Clara Luper, leader of the demonstration and advisor of the Oklahoma City NAACP Youth council which has conducted a continuous sit-in campaign since 1958. To date it has resulted in 116 varied eating establishments opening their facilities to Negroes.

Charges against Father Robert G. McDole, a white Roman Catholic priest, one of the leaders in the integration movement, were dropped at an earlier Municipal Court hearing.

Judge Hillis Sanford, in dismissing the charge, said that Father McDole was "on a frolic of his own, and his superiors have far more jurisdiction than I However, Bishop Reed, Father McDole's superior, immediately issued a statement backing the priest.

The seven others slated to appear in court include Mrs. Ella L. Floyd, Freddy Lee Edwards, Willie Johnson, Ed Stone, Stephen Edward Wilson, Paula Deen and Mrs. Lu Ann Atkins.

Also participating in the demonstration were 23 youths who followed the adults to jail and sang songs of freedom.

Area Bishop Backs Priest of Sit-in Case

The Black Dispatch
Oklahoma City, Okla.
Fri. 1-20-61 P. 1

Though a Catholic priest's participation in a Saturday sit-in demonstration which resulted in disorderly conduct charges was described as a "frolic" by Municipal Court Judge Hillis Sanford, Most Rev. Victor J. Reed, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Oklahoma City and Tulsa, strongly defended the priest's action in a lengthy statement released yesterday (Wednesday).

Father Robert G. McDole, assistant pastor at Corpus Christi Catholic church, was arrested Saturday along with eight other cityans who were conducting a sit-in demonstration near the entrance of Anna Maude cafeteria in the Cravens building. All adult leaders of a group of about 23 youths were accused of creating a disturbance by singing and by blocking the normal flow of traffic through the building lobby.

Judge Sanford dismissed charges against Father McDole, stating, "There will be no testimony in the case on the assumption that the defendant was on a frolic of his own and his superiors have far more jurisdiction than I."

Segregationists Picket Protestors In Norman, Okla.

The News and Courier
Charleston, S.C.
2-13-61 P. 12

NORMAN, Okla (AP) — Anti-segregation pickets found themselves surrounded by opposition pickets in front of a Norman store Saturday.

The first 15 to 20 pickets, a few Negroes accompanied by a large group of whites, marched outside the John A. Brown Department Store in protest against the policy of the firm's main store in Oklaho Camity. The Oklahoma City store has refused to serve Negroes in its luncheonette.

Shortly after the anti-segregation group arrived, they found themselves being picketed by 10 to 12 persons, some carrying signs reading: "'NAACP Unfair" and "Unfair to Fair Business."

An estimated 200 onlookers jammed the sidewalks in the area, across the street from an entrance to the University of Oklahoma campus.

The pickets walked over Ku Klux Klan signs painted on the sidewalk Friday night.

The Oklahoma City chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has been conducting sit-in demonstrations in the state's capital city for months.

Sit-Ins Refused Food; Take Seat On Floor

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
2-11-61 P. 5

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla — An intetrracial group numbering 62 staged a sit-down demonstration at John A. Brown Company.

The police, fire department and other city officials were called. However, no arrests were made. It was reported that if arrests had been made, "each demonstrator would have had to be carried bodily to jail."

The group consisted of tag.....demonstrations .... ..... Mrs Clara Luper's NAACP youth group and others, adults and ministers of both races.

It was reported that the the demonstrations began at the John A. Brown company store and upon their requests they were refused service and the group "sat on the floor." After sitting on the floor for a period of 4-hours and 15 minutes, the demonstrators went to the Forum Cafeteria. They were allowed to help themselves cafeteria style. Upon attempting to pay for the food on their trays, the management refused pay. Nevertheless, the entire group ate the food upon their trays.

Oklahoma City Negroes Demonstrate

The News and

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP) —Demonstrators for racially mixed eating facilities marched, formed a motorcade and prayed here Saturday but made no effort to test a freshly issued court order.

Courier

A 17-car motorcade, headed by a hearse, moved in funeral fashion through the downtown area while marchers passed in front of a department store which bans Negroes from its restaurant.

The marchers—mostly Negroes—hummed hymns. The motorcade carried signs which read "Help Bury Jim Crow," "Segregation is only skin deep." The vehicles were trimmed with black crepe paper.

At one point the march halted, and demonstrators kneeled and prayed.

E. Melvin Porter, president of the Oklahoma City chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, warned the group not to block entrances or aisles at any of the establishments.

Judge Glen O. Morris Thursday issued a temporary restraining order barring demonstrators from congregating in the Cravens Buildings at the entrance to a cafeteria.

The order was issued after demonstrations last Saturday which resulted in the arrest of 13 persons on charges of disorderly conduct.

A hearing on the court order is slated March 28—the day after preliminary hearings for the eight whites and five Negroes arrested last Saturday.

By contrast, this Saturday's demonstration was quiet.

Demonstrators moved into the John A. Brown department store and kneeled in front of the restaurant area.

The Rev. William G. Spearman, a Presbyterian minister, led the group in "The Lord's Prayer" inside the store.

Shortly before the demonstrators left the store they were joined by a group of doctors headed by Dr. Louis West, head of the University of Oklahoma Medical Center's department of psychiatry.

Two Priests Join Sit-Ins

The Montgomery Advertiser

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) —Negro sit-in demonstrators were joined Saturday by two Catholic priests.

Montgomery, Ala.

A group, including 13 white persons, stopped at a restaurant and then continued to a downtown department store which has declined to serve Negroes in its luncheonette.

3-26-61

The priests are the Rev. Edward Jeep and the Rev. William Skeehan, both of Oklahoma City.

Another Catholic priest, the Rev. Robert G. McDole, took part in past demonstrations, but recently, at his own request, was transferred to Ponca City, Okla.

A hearing against 13 demonstrators, including Father McDole, was set previously for next Monday. They are charged with disorderly conduct after they squatted in the lobby of a downtown building two weeks ago. A cafeteria in the biulding refuses to permit Negroes in its dining room.

There Is No Violence, Yet, But . . .

Journal & Guide P. 14
Norfolk, Va., Sat 11-21-61

Sit-Ins Prick Conscience Of South African Whites

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The sit-in technique revived last year by a group of colored college students is being used in several African countries to break down racial barriers. This article, taken from "Contact" a paper published in Capetown, S. Africa, tells of the public reaction to these demonstrations.)

CAPETOWN, S. Africa — (ANP) — So far, the anti-apartheid cafe "sit-ins" that a group of Cape Town Liberals are conducting have happily not been visited with the fire-hoses, clubbing, Black Marias, fist-blows and spittle that made the lunch - counter sit-ins in the Southern states so heroic — and so triumphant.

At two I have witnessed there has been scarcely a stir from the surrounding tea-sippers and bun - eaters, though as the campaign develops this may change. If it does, these people will not be provoked by assault: they will not squeal at leagal punish-ments. They are steadfast people.

MOST WHITES do not hate Coloured here, and there are not enough Aficans (an eighth of Cape Town's 800,000 people) to produce the fear-crazed atmosphere of White Durban or the Rand.

Most Whites do not fear the "Coloured" vote here, but they may be roused by this far more radical claim: social oneness. Many whites can bear the thought of non-whites next to them on the voters' roll,, but even the Progressives advocate restrictive [illegible]nts on title deeds, to spare them the final "disaster" of non - white neighbors.

POLITICAL "new deal" talk and the superficial inter-racial calm may look as if they favour the sit - ins.

But these Liberals are probing, and if they strike a raw nerve in the white's racial consciousness, the reflex may be to their cost. In the long run it will be to South Africa's gain.

AS JIM CROW began to die a lingering death in the Southern states, the Dixiecrats turned nastier than ever.

Do you remember the twisted faces of the white school children in the Little Rock news-photos? Then last March four very young Negro students walked quietly up to a lunch-counter. . .

THE PEOPLE at sit-ins in South Africa are neither very young, nor students, nor are they of one race or another.

So far they are mostly Liberals, who therefore call themselves South Africans, admitting to no racial classification (as I heard them tell the policemen taking their names at Caledon Square charge - office).

13 Negroes Convicted At Sumter

The News and Courier
Charleston, S.C.
Fri. 3-3-61

188 Hymn-Singing Negro Youths Arrested For March On Capitol

BY THE ASSSOCIATED PRESSS

Hymn-singing Negro students from a number of South Carolina cities marched on the state house at Columbia Thursday protesting what one student described as "the indignity and inhumanity of segregation."

Police broke up the demonstration and arrested 188 Negroes—including 65 women — one white youth and an official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. They were charged with breach of the peace and bonds set at $50 each.

One student, identified as Betty Jean Wideman, 18, of Anderson, S.C., fainted and was taken to a hospital. Reports were that she was not seriously ill.

About 150 white persons watched the demonstrators. There were no violent incidents.

The students met at the nearby Zion Baptist church for about an hour and then began walking toward the state house in groups ranging in number from 12 to about 17. This was in keeping with requests of city officials.

At the Capitol, the first group was met by Harry Walker, legal aide to Gov. Ernest F. Hollings. Walker told them they could walk around the state house like anybody else, but said demonstrations would not be tolerated.

One of the arrested Negro youths, David Carter of Benedict College, urged the students to enter the state house grounds.

"We are protesting the indignity and inhumanity of segregation," he called out. "Do you want to go to jail for your rights?" The response was a chorused, "Yes."

The group advanced and arrests were made. Other groups singing the hymn "We Are Not Afraid" moved in and wholesale arrests followed.

Carter said the marching students were from Columbia, Charleston, Greenville, Spartanburg, Florence and Orangeburg.

The white youth was identified as Frederick E. Hart, 17, a [illegible]rsity of South Carolina student, a native of Atlanta and son of Frederick W. Hart of Washington D.C. The NAACP official was the Rev. I. DeQuincey Newman, a field secretary.

Late Thursday night, 31 Negroes were freed on bond of $50 each, posted by E. E. Riley, dean of students at Benedict College.

In Sumter, S.C., 13 Negroes were convicted in City Recorder's Court on charges stemming from antisegregation demonstrations involving mass marches and sit-ins during recent weeks. About 65 arrests were made.

Alma Gregg of Washingtonville, N.Y., a music instructor at nearby Morris College, testified she was grabbed by the hair "and jerked in the air and thrown in a squad car" on Feb. 15, the day about 250 students converged on the downtown area. She said she was not with the students.

Lt. Leon Dollard of the State Law Enforcement Division acknowledged "we had a struggle getting her into the car," but denied excessive roughness. Miss Gregg was convicted of resisting arrest but was found innocent of parading without a permit.

Nine Negroes were convicted of parading without a permit and three others of breach of the peace. Each defendant was sentenced to a $100 fine or 30 days in jail on each charge. All were released under appeal bonds of $200 each.

In Chattanooga, nine Negro stand-in demonstrators were arrested on disorderly conduct charges when, police said, they blocked a sidewalk. The youths rode to jail singing "Onward Christian Soldiers."

At Atlanta, charges of violating Georgia's antitrespass law were filed against 26 Negro college students. They were among more than 80 arrested during sit-in demonstrations last month.

The Alabama Supreme Court at Montgomery refused to review the case of 14 Negroes sentenced to jail for an integration attempt on a Birmingham bus two years ago.

(AP Wirephoto)

YOUNG NEGRO DEMONSTRATORS MARCH TOWARD STATE HOUSE

A University Of South Carolina Student Walked With Them

189 ARE ARRESTED IN RACIAL PROTEST

The N.Y. Times

Negroes March on the State House at Columbia, S. C.—White Youth Is Seized

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 2 (AP)—Negro students from a number of South Carolina cities marched on the state house here today, protesting segregation.

The police broke up the demonstration and arrested 188 Negroes, including sixty-five women, and one white youth. All were charged with a breach of the peace and bonds of $50 each were ordered. 3-3-61

About 150 white persons watched the demonstrators. There was no violence.

The students met at the Zion Baptist Church for about an hour and then began walking toward the State House in groups of twelve to seventeen. This was in keeping with requests of city officials.

Met by Governor's Aide

At the Capitol, the first group was met by Harry Walker, legal aide to Gov. Ernest F. Hollings. Mr. Walker told them they could walk around the State House, but he said demonstrations would not be tolerated.

One of the Negro youths, David Carter of Benedict College, urged the students to enter the State House grounds.

"We are protesting the indignity and inhumanity of segregation," he called out. "Do you want to go to jail for your rights?" The response was a chorused "Yes."

The group advanced and arrests were made. Other groups singing a hymn moved in and other arrests followed.

Other Incidents

Mr. Carter said the marching students were from Columbia, Charleston, Greenville, Spartanburg, Florence and Orangeburg, S. C. The white youth was identified as Frederick E. Hart, 17, a student at the University of South Carolina and a native of Atlanta.

Meanwhile, at Tallahassee, Fla., the police broke up a brief sit-in demonstration by Negroes at a white lunch counter.

At Lynchburg, Va., six jailed Negro students again refused to

S. C. Jails 189 For Parading

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 3-11-61
pg 1

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Court hearings for 189 students and adults arrested March 3 for marching on the State House grounds are due to begin on Friday of this week.

The defendants include 186 college, and university students and two officials of the NAACP.

There were 85 female and 104 male students. They were from Benedict College, Claflin College South Carolina Sate A. and M. College, the University of South Carolina and high schools in Charleston, Florence, Spartanburg, Greenville and Camden.

The last of the group was released on bail of $50 Friday, or a total of $9,450.

ALL WERE ARRESTED by city, county and state officers and crammed into the city and county jails and later charged with demonstrating on the State House grounds.

The arresting officers were under direction of Harry Walker, legal aide to the governor, who was wearing a lieutenant's badge of the State Law Enforcement Agency.

The major function of this agency since the start of the sitdown demonstrations has been to enforce segregation laws throughout the state.

* * *

THE GOVERNOR'S aide met the students as they arrived at the entrance of the State House grounds.

He told Charles McDew of Orangeburg, one of a group of 15 students, that walking around the grounds would be "a breach of the peace."

The students listened, asked to be permitted to pass and walked on the State House grounds.

As other groups of students arrived, Walker repeated that they could not march around the grounds.

He also told them they could not sing, "as singing also would be a demonstration."

* * *

"YOU DO NOT have the right to demonstrate on this property," he declared.

When arriving groups failed to heed his instructions, Walker ordered their arrest.

Assisting Walker was Irving G. McNayr, city manager.

The students were carried to jail in SLED automobiles and police squad cars.

Arranged before Magistrate Frank Powell, all were charged with "breach of the peace."

The two NAACP officials are the Rev. I. Dequincy Newman, NAACP field secretary, and the Rev. B. J. Glover, president of the Charleston NAACP.

About one of every 10 students carried placards. One of the signs read: "You may jail our bodies, but not our souls."

eat while awaiting a hearing on anti-tresspass charges in a sit-in demonstration. They began the hunger strike Tuesday because they said they were not allowed textbooks.

At Atlanta, charges of violating Georgia's anti-tresspass law were filed against twenty-six Negro collegians. They were among more than eighty arrested during sit-in demonstrations last month.

The Alabama Supreme Court at Montgomery refused to review the case of fourteen Negroes sentenced to jail for an integration attempt on a Birmingham bus two years ago.

In Sumter, S. C., three Negro students were convicted on breach-of-the-peace charges. They were sentenced to thirty days in jail or fines of $100 each. They appealed and appeal bonds were set at $200 each.

N. A. A. C. P. Protests

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, protested the arrest of the South Carolina demonstrators yesterday in a telegram to Governor Hollings.

24 Demonstrators Given Sentences

COLUMBIA (AP) — Twenty-four Negro anti-segregation demonstrators were sentenced here Wednesday to jail terms of 30 days or $100 fines.

Appeals bonds were set at $200 each.

Thirteen were found guilty of violating ordinances against blocking sidewalks and 11 of trespass in lunch counters.

24 Sit-Inners Fined

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Twenty-four Negro students were convicted Wednesday in cases stemming from lunch counter sit-in demonstrations. They were sentenced to 30 days in jail or $100 fines.

SOUTH CARCLINA

LUNCH COUNTER- FINES, CONVICTIONS
ACQUITTALS

Three Pickets Fined in S. C.

ROCK HILL, S. C.—Three persons drew fines in city court following arrests Feb. 2 while they picket in front of a Rock Hill drug store.

They were: Dr. Cecil A. Ivory, wheel-chair bound Presbyterian pastor who is president of the Rock Hill NAACP branch, Paul David Deitrich, white Washington, D. C. youth, and George A. Hackley of Rockville, Md.

3 Girls Acquitted, Mate Sit-In Convicted

ROCK HILL, S. C. — Three girls, all members of Friendship College CORE, were acquitted in Rock Hill Recorder's Court on breach of the peace charges growing out of a picket line demonstration.

Willie Massey, who had just completed a 30-day gang term for sitting-in, was convicted and fined $[illegible] and 30 days. Jacqueline Harry, another CORE member fined $30 and 30 days.

600 S.C. Negroes Rally, Seek Bob Kennedy Visit

Chicago Defender Chicago Ill. LA Sent. 25-March 3-61 p1

ROCK HILL, S. C. — (UPI) — President Kennedy was reminded of Negro voting strength in South Carolina and Attorney General Robert Kennedy was urged to come here and observe the "trials and obstacles" facing the Negro population.

Approximately 600 Negroes adopted resolutions for the White House at a mass meeting following a pilgrimage to the York County Prison Farm where 11 Negro sit-in demonstrators are serving 30-day terms.

Local Negro leaders put through a vote to ban further pilgrimages to the prison farm despite some opposition. The ban was a "gesture of good will" to state police who had to contend with a mammoth traffic jam.

More than 100 officers — brown-clad state troopers with help from Rock Hill and county authorities — stopped a caravan of more than 300 Negroes who came to the camp intent on demonstrating to protest the arrest of the "Rock Hill eleven."

SET 10 CAR RATE

Negro Leader James McCain and J. B. Strom, chief of the State Law Enforcement Division, negotiated an arrangement to permit the pilgrimage Negroes to enter the prison compound 10 cars at a time. They were allowed to visit for five minutes with the imprisoned sit-inners.

Earlier Sunday, small groups of Negroes successfully integrated three Rock Hill churches — Two Presbyterian and one Lutheran — but were turned away from the Main street Methodist church.

Negroes adopted a resolution asking U. S. Attorney General Robert Kennedy or his representative to come to Rock Hill "to witness trials and obstacles to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness of a vast section of the South Carolina population."

The Negroes emphasized in their action that President Kennedy's platform endorsed the sit-in movement. They claimed this stand "caused the mass of South Carolina Negroes to change their traditionally Republican vote and contribute materially to the Democratic victory in the state" last November.

Man Stabbed In Carolina Store Sit-in

The Washington Post Washington, D.C.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 6 (AP)—A leader of Negro sit-down demonstrations in Columbia was stabbed in the side today by a stocky white man.

Tues. 3-7-61 p2

Lenny Glover, 24-year-old Negro theology student from Benedict College, was taken to the Good Samaritan-Waverly Hospital, where attendants said he was not seriously hurt.

Glover said he and David Carter, another Benedict Theology student who has been leading sit-ins and other anti-segregation demonstrations here, were sitting at the lunch counter in Woolworth's variety store about noon today.

Glover said Carter left to make a telephone call and a stockily-built white man came up to the counter and asked, "Are you having any fun?"

Glover said the man stabbed him in the lower left side with a 3- or 4-inch knife. The assailant escaped.

The Negro youth said he did not get a good look at his assailant.

Man Stabs Negro At Lunch Counter

The News Herald Charleston, S.C.

Tues. 3-7-61

COLUMBIA (AP) — A Negro college student stabbed at a white lunch counter here Monday is in critical condition.

p. 1

His doctor said an exploratory operation revealed some vital organs were punctured, and there was severe loss of blood.

The white man who plunged the knife into the student at Woolworth's disappeared into the downtown crowd and was an object of an immediate and intensive police search.

The Negro youth, Lennie Glover of Benedict College, was slated for an exploratory operation to determine the seriousness of the wound.

The Adah, Pa., student was taken to Good Samaritan-Waverly Hospital, where Dr. C. O. Spann said determination of the youth's condition depended upon the exploratory operation.

Assistant Police Chief Shep A. Griffith said a search was launched for Glover's assailant in the crowded downtown section a few minutes after the knifing.

Glover was with another Benedict College ministerial student David Carter, at the time of the attack.

Carter is free on bond of $50 under a charge of breach of the peace stemming from a Negro march on the Capitol here Thursday. Griffith said Glover was not among the 190 arrested in the aftermath of that anti-segregation demonstration.

Glover told police he and Carter had gone to Silver's variety store to sit at the lunch counter and ask for service. They were refused.

He said that after sitting there for a short time, they went to Woolworth's and sat at the lunch counter there. A white man approached and asked Glover: "Are you having any fun?"

Glover said he did not reply.

Carter left to make a telephone call, and the man walked up to Glover and stabbed him between the ribs.

Police were called immediately and Glover was taken to the hospital.

Negro Cut As Sit-In Badly Hurt

The Atlanta Constitution Atlanta Ga.

COLUMBIA (AP)—A Negro college student stabbed at a white lunch counter here Monday is in critical condition.

His doctor said an exploratory operation revealed some vital organs were punctured and there was severe loss of blood.

p. 12

The white man who plunged the knife into the student at Woolworth's disappeared into the downtown crowd, and was an object of an intensive police search.

Tues. 3-7-61

Police identified the Negro student as Lennie Glover of Adah, Pa. He was taken to Waverley-Good Samaritan Hospital.

Police gave this account of the stabbing:

Glover and another Benedict student, David Carter, who is free under bond on a breach of peace charge stemming from a march on the State House Thursday, went to Silver's store and took a seat at the lunch counter. They were not served.

After waiting there for a while they went to Woolworth's. There a white man approached Glover and asked him: "Are you having any fun?" Glover said he did not reply.

Carter left to make a telephone call, and the white man stabbed Glover in the ribs, police said, and disappeared into the crowd.

Sitdowners protest police brutality

The Afro American Baltimore, Md.

SUMTER, S.C. — "We are very disturbed over the brutal treatment some of the students are receiving as a result of their sitdown demonstrations."

Sat. 3-4-61

This declaration was made Saturday by the Rev. F. C. James, director of Social Action for the African Methodist Episcopal Church, and pastor of the local Mount Pisgah of the same denomination.

The minister, who is also chairman of the Sumter County Christian Action Committee, pointed out that two young women who were among 64 arrested, last week, had to be hospitalized as a result of the treatment they received when arrested.

* * *

THEY ARE Miss Alma Gregg, Morris College music teacher, and Miss Mae Francis Moultrie, senior at the same institution.

Both had been released from the hospital on Saturday but the minister said Miss Gregg still complained of severe pain about the neck and shoulders.

The students, all of Morris College, were arrested Feb. 21 for protesting segregation at a drug store, a soda shop and a library.

Simultaneous with the arrests, police broke up an attempt of hundreds of students to march on downtown Sumter.

On Saturday 16 of the 64 still remained in jail after refusing to be bailed out. They were 10 girls and 6 boys.

The remaining 48 were bailed out at $100 each.

IN A NUTSHELL

- Crippled minister arrested in Rock Hill, S.C., as authorities seek to crush movement.
- Police tactics protested in Sumter, S.C. as two women sitdowners are hospitalized.
- Six Lynchburg ministers plead with public to not let their going to jail "be in vain."
- Movement in Atlanta switches tactics. Students accept bail.
- "Shopping vacation" move is launched in Louisville, Ky., where groups spends $18,000,000 a year.

IN ADDITION to the support from the Christian Action Committee, the sitdown movement is backed by the County Non-Violent Coordinating Committee and the Congress of Racial Equality.

James T. McCain, field representative for CORE, said police would not permit contact with the students immediately following their arrests so bail would be put up for those who wanted to be released.

McCain and the Rev. Mr. James were members of a group of leaders who protested to the Mayor and the chief of police that the students had been "manhandled."

* * *

IN THIS connection, Miss Gregg said a policeman pulled her hair, twisted her neck, lifted her off the ground and threw her bodily into a squad car.

p. 12.

IN ROCK HILL, S.C., the Rev. C. A. Ivory, president of the local branch of the NAACP, and two other persons are to be tried on Thursday, March 2, on charges of breach of peace.

The minister, pastor of Herman Presbyterian Church, was arrested, Feb. 23, along with two other persons demonstrating against segregation at a mid-town drug store.

Paul Dietrich of Washington, D.C., white, was arrested [illegible] was beaten by seven

...tators. The third ... arrested following the melee was George A. Backley, of Rockville, Md.

The total of persons arrested in Rock Hill for demonstrating against segregation in public places since Jan. 31 now stands at 17.

* * *

... WERE arrested ... on Feb. ... 23.

... convicted to ... 13 chose jail terms rather than pay $100 fines. Two girls are included, students from Fisk University and Spelman College.

A mammoth mass meeting, a reception and two dances are scheduled for March 10 following the release of the 13 now in the York County prison and the county jail.

* * *

IN ...REENVILLE, ..last weeken...1 students were arreste... connection with a demon...ion at a city-owned and ...erated skating rink.

All ...e later released on $100 b...l each, following being charged with violating a city ordinance which forbids assemblage in public parks without special permission from park officials.

Meeting in the city at the time was the southeastern Conference of the NAACP, attended by over 300 delegates.

The meeting adopted a resolution urging withdrawal of buying from firms which refuse to remove racial barriers in both employment and serving the public.

IN WINSTON - Salem, N.C., an unidentified white student from Wake Forrest joined pickets in front of the S. H. Kress dime store.

Asked why he joined the protest demonstration, the student replied: "Because I think the cause is just."

Pickets also marched in front of a mid-town theatre.

They urged that the Center Theatre either desegregate or close its doors to colored altogether.

The picketing at Kress's has been going on for over a week.

Six Released — 18 Pt. Cent.

* * *

AMONG LATER developments in the sustained sitdown demonstrations in Lynchburg, Va., for the past three weeks was the release, Saturday of six students.

They had served 19 days of 30-day terms.

Four of the students were from Randolph - Macon Woman's College and Lynchburg College, both attended by only white students.

The remaining two were from Virginia Theological Seminary and College of Lynchburg.

On Thursday the six ministers sentenced Feb. 22 issued a statement from the Lynchburg jail in which they asked the question:

"We are wondering whether you, as citizens of Lynchburg, are going to let our imprisonment be in vain?"

They further stated "We have suffered. We will suffe... — again — to protest the existence of racial segregation."

The ministers are the Revs. James A. Tucker, Elijah ... Regulus, Lanksford Hankin..., W. G. Roberts, Jon E. Cra...ford, and Ralph Reavis.

ZIn Atlanta, — 18 Century

* * *

IN ATLANTA, the tactic... in the sitdown mover...ent were shifted on last Thursday when the last of 52 students in jail agreed to be released on bail.

Heretofore the students had refused to be bailed out.

A. T. Walden, attorney for the students, said they left jail because they believed they had achieved their purpose.

* * *

TRIAL IS pending for eight doctors arrested Feb. 20 for seeking to be served in the cafeteria of the Biltmore Hotel here. All were released on $100 bail.

They were attending a meeting of the Atlanta Graduate Medical Assembly. The doctors have paid $15 fee to attend.

Developments elsewhere:

HAMPTON, Va. — Trial for 11 Hampton Institute students arrest in a theatre sitdown demonstraion has been set for March 17.

The students were charged with violating the Virginia state law which prohibits mixed seating.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Demonstrations continue at four downtown movie houses where racial segregation is being protested.

LAST WEEK as many as 120 students, including Chinese, Mexican and white, marched in protest. Demonstration also were marked by some of the students being attacked by pro-segregation whites.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Spearheaded by the NAACP, colored residents here have launched a "Shopping vacation" for the Easter season. The NAACP estimates that there are more than 75,000 colored in Lousiville and that they do about $18,000,000 of business annually.

* * *

THEY MOVE is in protest of downtown stores and theatres refusing to end racial segregation in service and employment.

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The local chapter of CORE and seven of its members were named in an injunction suit filed by operators of the Strand Theatre to prevent stand-ins.

The theatre contends that stand-ins "have created a situation of danger and unrest."

Negro Stabbed During Sit-In

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 6 (AP) —A Benedict College student who tried to obtain service at an all-white lunch counter at the Woolworth Store was stabbed today by an unidentified white assailant.

Police identified the Negro student as Lennie Glover. He was taken to Waverly-Good Samaritan Hospital where his condition was not determined immediately. However, officers indicated he was not seriously hurt.

Police gave this account:

Glover and another Benedict student, David Carter, who is free under bond on a breach of peace charge stemming from a March on the state house Thursday, went to Silver's store and took a seat at the lunch counter. They were not served.

After waiting there for a while they went to Woolworth's. There a white man approached Glover and asked him: "Are you having any fun?"

Glover said he did not reply.

Carter left to make a telephone call, and the white man stabbed at Glover between the ribs, police said, and disappeared into the crowd.

Negro on Jury Fining 'Sit-Ins'

GREENVILLE, S. C.—A six-man recorder court jury, including one Negro member, found six high school students guilty of illegal trespassing Friday.

Each was fined $100 or 30 days in jail by City Recorder John V. Jeter. All had been arrested in connection with sit-in protests at the W. T. Grant Company store.

Attorney Donald J. Sampson gave notice of appeal.

'Sit-in' Appeals Heard

ORANGEBURG, S. C. — Appeals from convictions for about 38 S. C. State and Claflin College students, jailed March 15, during street protests against segregation, were argued before Circuit Court Judge J. B. Pruitt.

Fear 'Sit-In' During Civil War Fete

COLUMBIA, S.C.—Jittery less sit-in protests, unscheduled in official agenda, occur during the April 12-19 Centennial observance of the Civil War at Charleston, Rep. George Campsen of that city urgently introduced a bill providing stiffer punishment Wednesday and sought immediate passage.

The bill would provide fines up to $5,000 or imprisonment up to five years in convictions for such activities as sit-ins.

He said he'd withdraw his bill, however, after learning there is statute providing for a $10,000 fine and/or 10 years imprisonment which could be used for the same purpose.

Hits Dr. Frank Graham

S. C. Raps U. N. Official For Favoring 'Sit-Ins'

COLUMBIA, S. C. — The state legislature, in concurrent resolutions, assailed U. N. Mediator Dr. Frank P. Graham for his support to "sit-ins," in an address at state-supported Winthrop College, last Tuesday.

A college for white women, Winthrop is located at Rock Hill, near Friendship Junior College, whose students have waged a "sit-in" battle since February, 1960.

Dr. Graham, former president of the University of North Carolina, said:

"The Southern youth movement in the lawful petitions for the same service for the same price, did not have its democratic origin in Moscow, but in Carpenter's Hall in Philadelphia on the Fourth of July, 1776."

S. C. legislators demanded that the UN official be censured for the statement, and that those responsible for his appearance at Winthrop also be brought on the carpet.

38a 1961

SOUTH CAROLINA

LUNCH COUNTER

Police Arrest 188 Mix Demonstrators

Jackson Daily News
Jackson, Miss.
3-3-61

By United Press International

Police in Columbia, S.C., led a group of 188 chanting, hand-clapping Negroes to jail Thursday for holding a anti-segration demonstration within sight of Gov. Ern Hollings' office.

Demonstrators, most of them students from South Carolina Negro colleges, were arrested after ignoring a warning from Harry Walker, a legal aide to the governor, that state law forbids such protests on state property.

E. E. Riley, dean of students at Benedict College, appeared with $1,550 in bond money and obtained the release from jail of 31 female students from the college.

A white youth, Frederic E. Hart of Falls Church, Va., was arrested with the Negros but denied taking part in the demonstration. Hart, a freshman at the University of South Carolina, admitted he shook hands with some of the demonstrators because he was "in sympathy" with them.

After their arrest, the Negroes were lined up three abreast and marched [illegible] blocks down busy Assembly Street to city and county jails. The demonstrators began chanting and clapping their hands.

The law invoked Thursday was put into effect in 1958 by former Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. to halt a planned rally by evangelist Billy Graham on the State House steps.

City court hearings were set today for nine young Negroes arrested during a theater stand-in in downtown Chattanooga, Tenn. They were charged with blocking the street.

HEARS ARGUMENTS

Federal Judge Frank M. Johnson held a closed session today in Montgomery, Ala., to hear pretrial arguments concerning alleged discrimination against the Negro voters in Bullock County, Ala.

Negroes were served at two Nashville, Tenn., bus station lunch counters Thursday night. A Negro spokesman charged that members of his race were refused service at the counters earlier in the day.

Florida Gov. Farris Bryant gave his approval to a proposed $2.5 million publicity fund aimed at selling the rest of the country on segregation. Bryant said Florida would appropriate $500,000 if four other Southern states match it.

188 Arrested In S. Carolina Negro March

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
3-3-61

By The Associated Press

Hymn-singing Negro students from a number of South Carolina cities marched on the state house at Columbia Thursday protesting what one student described as "the indignity and inhumanity of segregation."

Police broke up the demonstration and arrested 188 Negroes—including 65 women—one white youth and an official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. They were charged with breach of the peace and bonds set at $50 each.

One student, identified as Betty Jean Wideman, 18, of Anderson, S.C., fainted and was taken to a hospital. Reports were that she was not seriously ill.

The white youth was identified as Frederick E. Hart, Washington, D.C. He is a University of South Carolina student and a native of Atlanta, Ga.

About 150 white persons watched the demonstrators. There were no violent incidents.

188 Arrested As Negroes March On Carolina Capitol

The Montgomery Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.
3-3-61

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hymn-singing Negro students from a number of South Carolina cities marched on the state house at Columbia Thursday protesting what one student described as "the indignity and inhumanity of segregation."

Police broke up the demonstration and arrested 188 Negroes—including 65 women — one white youth and an official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. They were charged with breach of the peace and bonds set at $50 each.

One student, identified as Betty Jean Wideman, 18, of Anderson, S.C., fainted and was taken to a hospital. Reports were that she was not seriously ill.

About 150 white persons watched the demonstrators. There were no violent incidents.

One of the arrested Negro youths, David Carter of Benedict College, urged the students to enter the state house grounds.

"We are protesting the indignity and inhumanity of segregation," he called out. "Do you want to go to jail for your rights?" The response was a chorused, "Yes."

The group advanced and arrests were made. Other groups singing the hymn "We Are Not Afraid" moved in and wholesale arrests followed.

The Columbia demonstration occurred on a day marked by a number of other developments including a ruling by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at St. Louis that the Little Rock, Ark., School Board must speed up desegregation of city schools there.

The appeals court, which previously had upheld constitutionality of the Arkansas pupil assignment law, ruled that the school board must make some changes in its application of the act.

At Atlanta, charges of violating Georgia's antitrespass law were filed against 26 Negro college students. They were among more than 80 arrested during sit-in demonstrations last month.

In Sumter, S.C., three Negro students were convicted on breach of the peace charges and sentenced to 30 days in jail or fines of $100 each. They appealed and appeal bonds were set at $200 each. The three were among 65 arrested during antisegregation demonstrations last month.

188 Arrested As Negroes March On Carolina Capitol

The Montgomery Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.
3-3-61

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hymn-singing Negro students from a number of South Carolina cities marched on the state house at Columbia Thursday protesting what one student described as "the indignity and inhumanity of segregation."

Police broke up the demonstration and arrested 188 Negroes—including 65 women — one white youth and an official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. They were charged with breach of the peace and bonds set at $50 each.

One student, identified as Betty Jean Wideman, 18, of Anderson, S.C., fainted and was taken to a hospital. Reports were that she was not seriously ill.

About 150 white persons watched the demonstrators. There were no violent incidents.

One of the arrested Negro youths, David Carter of Benedict College, urged the students to enter the state house grounds.

"We are protesting the indignity and inhumanity of segregation," he called out. "Do you want to go to jail for your rights?" The response was a chorused, "Yes."

The group advanced and arrests were made. Other groups singing the hymn "We Are Not Afraid" moved in and wholesale arrests followed.

The Columbia demonstration occurred on a day marked by a number of other developments including a ruling by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at St. Louis that the Little Rock, Ark., School Board must speed up desegregation of city schools there.

The appeals court, which previously had upheld constitutionality of the Arkansas pupil assignment law, ruled that the school board must make some changes in its application of the act.

At Atlanta, charges of violating Georgia's antitrespass law were filed against 26 Negro college students. They were among more than 80 arrested during sit-in demonstrations last month.

In Sumter, S.C., three Negro students were convicted on breach of the peace charges and sentenced to 30 days in jail or fines of $100 each. They appealed and appeal bonds were set at $200 each. The three were among 65 arrested during antisegregation demonstrations last month.

8 Negroes Convicted In Columbia

The News and Courier
Charleston, S.C.
Wed. 3-8-61

COLUMBIA (AP)— Eight of the 190 students arrested last week in an anti-segregation demonstration at the South Carolina State House were convicted on breach of the peace charges here Tuesday.

In addition, James Edwards, 21, one of the first eight Negroes to face trial, was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor. He was jailed in lieu of $5,000 bond.

Edwards, a Benedict College student from Greenwood County, was the only adult in the first group of students appearing before Magistrate Frank Powell. Another group of eight Negroes will be tried next Monday.

Meanwhile, Frederick E. Hart, 17, of Washington, D. C., white student arrested with the 190 Negroes, has left the University of South Carolina. Officials say he w[illegible]ew of his own volition.

The seven juveniles received $100 fines or sentences of 30 days in jail. Powell ordered that the fines be reduced to $50 if payment is made.

Attorneys for the seven juveniles filed notice of appeal and they were released under $100 appeal bonds. The defense offered no witnesses Tuesday o rebut prosecution witnesses.

Edwards also received a $100 fine or 30-day jail sentence on the breach of the peace charge.

No portion of his fine was suspended and Magistrate Powell additionally signed a warrant charging Edwards with contributing to the delinquency of other demonstrators who are minors.

Contributing to the delinquency of a minor is a felony punishable by a maximum of three years in prison and a $3,000 fine. Breach of the peace is a misdemeanor which can carry a maximum $100 fine or 30 days in jail.

Although no defense testimony was offered, defense attorneys questioned the right of city officers to make arrests on state property.

State and city officers arrested 189 Nego demonstrators and one white student when they paraded in groups of a dozen or more on the State House grounds.

Convicted on breach of the peace charges, in addition to Edwards, were:

Alvester Pate Jr., 19, Benedict College; Pinckney Moseley, 18, Benedict; Melvin Brown Jr., 18, Benedict student from Charleston; Harold Eugene Nimmons, 19, a student at Claflin College in Orangeburg; Willie Boykin Jones, 19, a Benedict student from Augusta, Ga.; William Perkins, 20, a Claflin student from St. Stephen; and Bill Alvin Sullivan, 17, a junior at Sterling High School in Greenville.

Students Jam Cells in Sumter, S. C.

Jailed 'Sit-Ins' Take Up Criminals' Space

(Courier Press Service)

There will hardly be enough room in the South's jails for bona-fide criminals to be lodged if Sumpter, S. C., is any indication, where 65 Negro college students were arrested in one swoop.

A 66th student was in the hospital. Mae Francis Moultrie said she was beaten and shoved to the street when police tried to prevent the students from marching into the business section. All of the students were from Sumter's Morris College.

James McCain, spokesman for the Congress of Racial Equality, said his group would appear to arrange bail, but "I know some of the students don't want bail."

■

MEANWHILE IN York County, S. C. eight CORE members in prison caused National Director James Farmer to wire a protest to President Kennedy.

Farmer said that since Feb. 17 the eight prisoners, including Field Secretary Thomas Gaither, have been in solitary confinement for refusing to stop singing hymns during their morning devotions. The eight were given the choice of solitary or giving up the hymns.

■

IN ATLANTA things continued to happen in "eights." Eight preachers were jailed for sitting in at the Terminal Railroad Station restaurant; eight distinguished physicians and surgeons also were thrown into jail because they insisted on service in the cafeteria of Atlanta's Biltmore Hotel where they were attending a meeting sponsored by the Fulton County Medical Society.

■

IN NEW ORLEANS the sit-in picture took an old twist when a white man, Walter Beck Orr, a seaman from Texarkana, Ark., was arrested for refusing to vacate a "Negro" lunch counter in the F. W. Woolworth Store on Canal St.

After being jailed Orr said he was paroled. He told the Courier before being hustled off to jail a police sergeant asked him, "would you marry one of them?" pointing to a Negro woman. Orr said, "I would hate for you to tell me I couldn't.

■

In Rock Hill, S. C. eight Negro students jailed after a January sit-in demonstration joined in a hunger strike after being thrown into solitary confinement for the third time.

Columbia Fines 137 At 'Sit-In' Hearings

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Fines ranging from $50 to $100 or 30 days in jail were given 137 youths and adults in Magistrate Court, as a total of 190 persons, jailed three weeks before, while marching around the State Capitol Building, were penalized.

Magistrate Frank Powell levied the sentences in an abbreviated session, in which counsel for the state and defense agreed that testimony would be the same as for some 52 tried earlier.

The lone white youth in the group, Freddie E. Hart, 18, who resigned as a student at the University of South Carolina after the arrests, was fined $50 or 30 days in absentia.

■

DEFENSE ATTORNEYS gave verbal notice appeal and the bonds were continued.

The 190 persons were staging a protest against racial segregation at lunch counters and in employment when arrested.

They represented the second largest number of such arrest to occur, the largest occuring a year ago at Orangeburg when 388 S. C. State and Claflin College students were jailed.

The mass sentencing of the 137 is believed the largest number involving thus far in court handling.

Ask S.C. Unit To End Bias

GREENVILLE, S. C.—(ANP) At least 175 persons, the majority of them Negro, packed Greenville City Council Chambers and heard three spokesmen for the NAACP demand an end to segregated lunch counters.

The matter was on the council's agenda at the request of Horace Nash, listed as president of the Youth Council, a unit sanctioned by the NAACP.

Miss Leola Clements, 17, and a senior at Greenville's Sterling High School, addressed the council and the crowed chambers and said her group wanted council to repeal city ordinances which require eating establishments to not seat and serve persons of both races.

She said it was "humiliating" to trade in downtown stores.

Other spokesmen for the group included Mrs. Juanita Carter, who said she is state secretary of the youth organization; Rev. J. S. Hall, who a year ago led an "emancipation march" against Greenville Municipal Airport, and Donald Sampson, attorney who has represented practically all the Negro youths arrested in connection with sit-in demonstrations.

Greenville Mayor J. Kenneth Cass told the group council he would take the request under advisement.

Paid Stool-Pigeons Tip Cops on Sit-Ins

(Special to the Courier)

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Warning to sit-in students!

Have you ever wondered why it was that so many police officers were on the scene when you appeared to make a sit-in? This may be the real answer:

Police got the tip-off from stool-pigeons from your own ranks. It works like this: Police, state and local, find somebody in your group, offers them so much money—usually a weekly salary—and assigns them to "stool-pigeon" back names of leaders, what they say, and of all plans the entire student body adopts.

Some times the stool pigeon may be the trusted voice in meetings; at others, he may be someone who picks details from a roommate, classmate or campus buddy.

■

THE COURIER learned this week of Negro stool pigeons operating at Rock Hill, Columbia, Sumter and Orangeburg.

All get under-the-table pay from police.

Negro Students Stage Sit-In

ROCK HILL S.C. (AP) — Ten Negro college students ignored the warning of South Carolina's chief law enforcement officer Tuesday and carried their anti-segregation demonstration to a white lunch counter. The 10, arrested for trespass, entered jail singing hymns and patriotic songs.

The arrests climaxed a series of almost daily demonstrations by Friendship College students here for several weeks.

Chief J. P. Strom of the State Law Enforcement Division (SLED) met the 15 or 20 demonstrators Tuesday as they arrived on Main Street from the campus. He told them of the provisions of the law against trespass.

The students, 13 of them carrying signs against segregated lunch counter service, continued to McCrory's and Woolworth's variety stores. The Woolworth's lunch counter has been closed for several weeks because of the demonstrations. McCrory's has remained open to white customers and some of the demonstrators took seats there.

Negro Demonstrators Released From Jail

YORK, S.C. (AP)—Four Negro college students, two girls and two young men, were released from jail here Wednesday after serving 30 days on charges growing out of anti-segregation demonstrations at Rock Hill.

Nine others released last week after similar "jail no bail" stands are in New York for appearances. All were convicted of trespass.

The 13 will be honored at a rally in Rock Hill Friday night when James H. Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) will speak.

Released Wednesday were Diane Judith Nash, 22, of Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn.; Ruby Doris Smith, 18, of Spellman College in Atlanta; Charles M. Sherrod, 24, of Surry County, Va., a student at Virginia Union University in Richmond; and Charles C. Jones, 23, of Johnson C. Smith University in his hometown of Charlotte, N.C.

Jones, a leader in sit-ins at Charlotte, was welcomed by about 100 students as he arrrived on the Smith campus. The university administration has not said what action it will take in the case of the young ministerial student, who was absent from the campus for 30 days.

Boycott talked—

Negroes begin push in Carolina

By The Associated Press

The hymn-singing Negro march on the State House at Columbia S. C., marked the start of a major push against segregation barriers in that Deep South state, according to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

But the Rev. I. D. Newman of Columbia, field secretary of the state chapter of the NAACP, said future moves would have to be worked out with other officials of the organization.

At the same time, the NAACP called for an economic boycott of white stores in South Carolina during the Easter shopping season.

In a statement released at a news conference Friday the NAACP also charged that Negroes arrested in the mass march on the Capitol grounds were exposed to a "double standard of justice."

The statement pointed out no arrests were made last Fall when University of South Carolina students demonstrated against cancellation of a political rally for Richard M. Nixon.

A TOTAL OF 189 Negroes and one white youth were arrested on breach of peace charges during Thursday's demonstration. All were released on bond money supplied by the NAACP.

In Louisiana, the school board of St. Helena Parish (county) near the Mississippi border, voted to call an election on whether to close public schools rather than desegregate under federal court order. It was the first Louisiana school board to take such action.

At New Orleans, Shelby M. Jackson, Louisiana education superintendent, told a three-judge federal panel he would comply with court injunctions not to interfere with the operation of New Orleans public schools.

The court dismissed contempt charges against Jackson, Lt. Gov. C. C. Aycock and House Speaker Thomas Jewell after it was informed New Orleans teachers had been paid. The three were cited Dec. 20 for refusing to pay teachers at integrated William Frantz and McDonogh 19 schools.

IN ATLANTA, the Fulton County Grand Jury spoke out against any continuation of Negro sit-in demonstrations.

In term-end presentments the jury said the issue was not segregation or integration but rather concerned "the serious consequences inherent in any flagrant and continued violation of law."

More than 80 Negroes were arrested during sit-ins last month on charges of violating Georgia's anti-trespass law. All now are free on bond pending trial.

At Savannah, Ga., the Rev. Oliver W. Holmes, pastor of the First Congregational Church, became the first Negro appointed to the city's Bacon Park Commission. Negroes have been using the municipal golf course at Bacon Park for some time.

70 Negroes Demonstrate In Columbia

COLUMBIA (AP) — An estimated 70 Negro college students carried anti-segregation signs and staged sit-in demonstrations at white lunch counters in downtown Columbia Wednesday.

Five of them tried to walk past a "no trespassing" sign toward a lunch counter at Eckerd's Drug Store and were promptly arrested and charged with trespassing.

Jailed while attempts were made to raise bonds of $100 each were Benedict College students Joseph B. Bailey, 20, of Greenville; Joan Brailey, 18, of Newark, N. J.; Carolyn Montgomery, 18, of York; Clifford James Rice, 17, of Union, and David Green Jr., 18, of Charleston.

Seven other Benedict students were arrested Tuesday at Eckerd's on identical charges.

The sign-carrying pickets paraded in front of Eckerd's. Their banners carried such slogans as: "There is no color line in heaven," "Liberty or death," and "Down with segregation."

Meanwhile, other groups of the estimated 70 students who came from the direction of the Benedict campus staged sit-ins at four stores with lunch counters.

About 30 were inside Silvers variety store, 12 at S. H. Kress & Co., 15 at Woolworth's, and 3 in H. L. Green Co.

Three pickets were picked up by police and accused of blocking pedestrian traffic on the sidewalks. But at the police station, they were released without charges being filed.

Lunch counters were closed at all stores where the demonstrators took seats. The first students arrievd downtown at about 11 a.m. They returned to the campus at about 3 p.m.

A student leader, David Cater of Benedict College, has said such demonstrations will occur here "indefinitely."

Arrest Negroes En Masse In South Carolina

The Defender

By United Press International

Mass arrests of Negro integration demonstrators continued Tuesday in Sumter and Columbia, S. C., as police rounded up about 80 persons in connection with sit-ins and protest rallies.

At Columbia, a young Negro woman was admitted to a hospital in a state of shock. Negro leaders charged the woman, Mae Frances Moultrie, about 25, was knocked down by a police officer. But hospital officials said x-rays showed no injuries and Dr. L. P. Lee said he believed the woman's ailments were "traumatic and psychological."

At Opelika, Ala., the Justice Department indicated that Macon County, Ala., registrars encouraged white persons to register to vote until passage of the 1957 Civil Rights Act, but called a slowdown in following years.

The government, in a hearing brought after charges were made that Macon registrars discriminated against prospective Negro voters, charged that Negroes were forced to use segregated facilities and go through agonizingly slow procedures in their attempts to register.

Elsewhere, there were these developments:

Four persons, including integration leader Rev. Virgil A. Wood, were arrested during a drugstore sit-in at Lynchburg, Va., bringing to 18 the number of persons arrested recently at the drugstore.

In Biloxi, Miss., Federal Judge Sidney C. Mize said he would begin hearings in the government's beach integration suit on March 20. The government is attempting to integrate Mississippi's Gulf Coast beach on grounds that federal funds were used in work on the facility.

In Tallahassee, Fla., a 16-year-old white boy was arrested when he ripped a sign from the back of a Negro girl who was picketing a 5 and 10 cent store with five other Negro girls. The youth was charged with disorderly conduct.

The interracial Macon (Ga.) Council on Human Relations asked Macon and Bibb County, Ga., officials to begin planning an "orderly transition" from segregation to integration in view of federal court rulings.

In Washington, the Civil Rights Commission announced it will meet next weekend with educators in Williamsburg, Va., to learn of problems which must be met in the desegregation of schools.

At Nashville, Tenn., charges against 27 stand-in demonstrators arrested at a downtown movie house Monday were dropped because the law under which the group was arrested had been repealed.

Other demonstrators continued to stand in at the theaters, stopping only long enough to attend the trial.

Two Whites in Demonstration

89 Student Protestors Freed From S. C. Jails

The Courier

By JOHN H. McCRAY

COLUMBIA, S. C.—The last of 89 persons, two of them adults, were freed on bond of $50 each by 7 P. M., Friday, on charges of breach of the peace after an NAACP-coordinated attempt to march around the South Carolina State Capitol Building.

The group, composed of Benedict, Claflin and South Carolina State students, approximately 25 high schoolers from Charleston, Greenville and other state cities, and one white University of South Carolina student, had made a pilgrimage to the State capital after a noon meeting in Zion Baptist Church Friday.

The Rev. I. Dequincey Newman, State NAACP field secretary, one of the two adults arrested with them, told The Courier at a press conference late Friday that the group had city-issued permission to parade in groups of 15 persons.

City Manager Irvin G. McNyr said, however, that when he gave the permission to Benedict College student leader David Carter, he had the impression that the parade involved only Columbia Sts. He accused Carter of withholding details of the demonstration.

Both sides differ on what actually happened once the marchers, some carrying placards urging an end to racial segregation, reached the capital. Authorities say they allowed the marchers, in groups of 15, to make one circle along walks surrounding the Statehouse.

Rev. Newman, the Rev. Dr. B. J. Glover, president of the Charleston NAACP branch, and the second adult arrested, vigorously denied this.

Rev. Glover and Rev. Newman said that after one group made the tour, officers in the State Highway Patrol, the State law Enforcement Division, the Richland County Sheriff's office and City Police, on orders of Harry Walker, legal secretary to Gov. Ernest F. Hollings, arrested the encourage before most of its members ever got onto the sidewalk rounding the Statehouse.

■

REV. NEWMAN emphasized that the group carefully and deliberately avoid stepping from the walk onto the grassy ground about the Statehouse.

Just the same, officers loaded the students into nine or 10 available cars and then made the others march to jail, a distance of six or seven blocks.

The 89 arrests, second largest in student arrests while protesting racial segregation in the South, during the past year, overflowed both the City and County jails. Rev. Newman said that some of those involved were locked up overnight in the Lexington County Jail, one mile west of Columbia.

■

THE WHITE STUDENT is listed as Frederick E. Hart of Virginia. He was further identified by reporters as a page of the South Carolina Legislature, at a weekly pay rate of $42.50. There was speculation at the Friday press conference that he would be quickly fired.

Should this happen, Rev. Newman said, efforts would be made to re-imburse him on the same schedule by public contributions from South Carolina Negroes.

"We owe him support," Mr. Newman said. Herbert L. Wright, national NAACP Youth secretary, who attended the press conference, indicated his support of aiding Hart. Mrs. Ruby E. Hurtley, NAACP regional secretary, also attended the conference from her Atlanta (Ga.) office.

A second white University of South Carolina student, reportedly on the editorial staff of "The Gamecock," student publication, was also among the marchers. He escaped arrest, however. "The Gamecock" currently features three anti-segregation articles, one likening the state's stand on segregation to an ostrich with his head stuck in the sand.

S. C. Holds 150 Negro Protesters

The Washington Post Washington, D.C.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 2 (AP)—About 150 hymn-singing Negro college youths were arrested here today during anti-segregation demonstrations around the State Capitol.

Some 200 young Negroes met at nearby Zion Baptist Church prior to the march on the State House, then converged on the Capitol in groups of about 12 each.

Harry Walker, legal aid to Gov. Ernest F. Hollings, met the first group and warned that demonstrations would not be permitted. He said they could walk around the State House "like anybody else" if they did so in small groups and kept moving.

When they continued to use the narrow walk immediately adjacent to the State House instead of the public sidewalk as ordered, police began to arrest them for "illegal use of the State House grounds."

The hymn they sang is called "We Are Not Afraid."

Their leader, David Carter of Benedict College, was arrested with the Rev. I. DeQuincey Newman, Field Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Neither marched in the demonstration or entered State House property after being warned off.

Among those arrested was one white youth who identified himself as Frederick E. Hart, an Atlanta native and freshman at the University of South Carolina. He said he had lived in Washington for the past eight years, attended segregated schools in Virginia, and is an NAACP member.

At S.C. Prison Camp

Negro Pilgrimage Blocked

ROCK HILL, S. C. (UPI) — A cordon of law enforcement officers set up an impregnable barricade Sunday to block a Negro pilgrimage to the York County prison farm where 11 sit-in demonstrators are imprisoned.

A force of more than 100 policemen, mainly brown-clad state troopers, circled the prison farm as a caravan of more than 300 Negroes approached the farm.

The Negroes' first efforts to enter the compound were stymied by stern-looking troopers and the caravan of more than 60 cars was forced to circle back and forth along a 10-mile stretch of highway in front of the prison.

Arrangements were finally made between Negro leader James McCain and Chief J. B. Strom of the state Law Enforcement Division, to permit the Negroes to enter the compound 10 cars at a time, pay a five minute visit to the imprisoned sit-inners and then leave.

The Negroes had spread the word Saturday that they would

Admitted

ROCK HILL, S. C. (AP)—Negroes were admitted Sunday to at least three Rock Hill churches which have all-white congregations.

Three Negro kneel-ins were admitted to First Presbyterian Church; six others at Oakland Avenue Presbyterian and an undetermined number at Grace Lutheran.

Prospective kneel-ins also were turned away at West Main Street Baptist Church and the Church of the Nazarene.

Later in the day, some 600 demonstrators appeared at the York County jail and prison camp where several Negroes were imprisoned for law violations during anti-segregation protests.

Before the pilgrimage — and the state prepared to meet them with a startling show of force.

State and local authorities, in a joint statement to the press, said they were of the opinion the proposed pilgrimage "would constitute a security problem and could resolve itself into a serious emergency."

For this reason, said the statement, "no large group of unidentified persons will be allowed to congregate on the premises. The state highway patrol will enforce all traffic laws. Each prisoner will be allowed to have only the number of visitors consistent with security of the prison."

Husky, armed state troopers were standing nearly shoulder-to-shoulder along a 500-foot road that runs from the highway to the main prison camp entrance. Road blocks were set up at all of the entrances and the police waved on all cars that attempted to enter.

Use Cars, Helicopters.

The state troopers were backed by Rock Hill and York County police and agents of the Law Enforcement Division. About 35 patrol cars were employed and two Law Enforcement Division helicopters kept the police force constantly alerted as to the whereabouts of the Negro caravan.

Earlier in the day, small groups of Negroes attempted to integrate four Rock Hill churches and were successful at three. Only the Main Street Methodist Church turned them away. The other three, two Presbyterian and one Lutheran, seated the Negroes for their services. However, one of the Presbyterian churches seated their three Negro visitors in a balcony which has long been used for Negro servants of church members.

Rock Hill has been a racial hot spot since the 11 Negroes were sentenced to 30 days at the prison camp for sit-in demonstrations at lunch counters.

The pilgrimage was followed by a mass meeting at which some 600 Negroes voted to ask U.S. Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy or his representative to come to Rock Hill "to witness trials and obstacles to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness of a vast section of the South Carolina population." The resolution also stated that President Kennedy's platform endorsed the sit-in movement which "caused the mass of South Carolina Negroes to change their traditionally Republican vote and contribute materially to the Democratic victory in the state" in the presidential election.

The mass meeting, over the objections of out-of-state Negro college students, also voted not to conduct further pilgrimages to the prison farm. Local Negro leaders, who urged the action as a "gesture of good will" to state law enforcement officers, said Sunday's pilgrimage had caused traffic tieups and strained the resources of the highway patrol.

Marchers Hit Negro Jailings

By United Press International

More than 100 Negroes marched two abreast down the main street of Rock Hill, S. C., Wednesday in protest against the jailing of 13 Negroes earlier this week for staging anti-segregation demonstrations.

The demonstration apparently was in response to a call by the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) for outsiders to go to Rock Hill to demonstrate.

Nine students from Rock Hill's Friendship Junior College went to the York county prison farm last week to begin serving 30-day jail terms rather than pay $100 fines for trespassing in connection with lunch counter sit-ins.

NO VIOLENCE

The demonstration lasted about one-half hour. There were no arrests and no violence.

The demonstrations Wednesday followed protests on Tuesday in Atlanta, Ga., and Nashville, Tenn., against segregated lunch counters and theaters.

The surprise tactic of showing up announced at movie houses and asking admittance gained at least one Negro girl entry at Nashville on Tuesday before the box office was closed.

Box offices at the four theaters, where the students stood in line, were closed immediately. The fourth continued to sell tickets to white persons.

REFUSE TO LEAVE

In Atlanta, 12 of the 17 Negro students arrested on Tuesday when they refused to leave an all-white cafeteria are in jail charged with violating the State's 1960 antitrespass law. Negro student Lonnie King, a leader of the sit-in activity, posted $100 bond.

At Jackson, Miss., a Negro organization, the Jackson Progressive Voters League, said it would begin a drive on Thursday to register 10,000 Negro voters during the next two months.

A mother says 'these are the hardest things'

ROCK HILL, S.C. — The mother of a six - year-old daughter told the AFRO, last week, that she is stumped by questions her child asked following the arrest of 10 students in the recent sitdown demonstration.

The questions:—

"Mother, why can't we eat in McCrory's? White folk eat there."

The mother, who has considerable knowledge of child psychology, says that while she was fumbling for "a right answer," the child dropped bombshell No. 2.

It was: — "Mother, since they arrest us for sitting in there, are white folk our enemies."

The mother said "these are the hardest things about racial discrimination. You can't answer them without running the risk of damaging your child forever."

State agents get tag No. of auto in Sitdown Caravan

ROCK HILL, S.C.—Agents from the pro-segregation State Law Enforcement Agency were present last Sunday at the York County prison camp where the Rock Hill Nine are imprisoned.

Two of the agents were seen copying the license numbers of automobiles in the Sit-down Caravan.

Asked by the AFRO why they copied the license, they refused to answer. However, both admitted they were SLED agents.

A contingent of SLED agents participated in the arrest of the 10 students at the McCrory five and dime store on Feb. 1. This was unusual, since local police did not request assistance from the State.

100 Protest S.C. Sit-In Jailings

By United Press International

More than 100 Negroes marched two abreast down the main street of Rock Hill, S. C., Wednesday in protest against the jailing of 13 Negroes earlier this week for staging anti-segregation demonstrations.

The demonstration apparently was in response to a call by the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) for outsiders to go to Rock Hill to demonstrate Nine students from Rock Hill's friendship Junior College went to the York County prison farm last week to begin serving 30-day jail terms rather than pay $100 fines for trespassing in connection with lunch counter sit-ins.

The demonstration lasted about one-half hour. There were no arrests and no violence.

In Atlanta, 13 Negroes were arrested Wednesday when they tried for the second straight day to get service at a cafeteria, Sprayberry's. The students maintain that since the cafeteria is located in a federally leased building it should come under federal non-discrimination laws.

The demonstrations Wednesday followed protests Tuesday in Atlanta and Nashville against segregated lunch counters and theaters.

The surprise tactic of showing up unannounced at movie houses and asking admittance gained at least one Negro girl entry at Nashville Tuesday before the box office was closed.

Box offices at the four theaters where the students stood in line were closed immediately. The fourth continued to sell tickets to white persons.

In Atlanta, 12 of the 17 Negro students arrested Tuesday when they refused to leave an all-white cafeteria are in jail charged with violating the state's 1960 anti-trespass law. Negro student leader Lonnie King, who is spokesman for the group coordinating the sit-in activity, posted $100 bond.

SOME OF FEW WHO VISITED JAILED S. C. DEMONSTRATORS.

Angry Whites Cause Delay Of Negro ally

Jackson Daily News
Jackson, Miss.
2-12-61.

Only 35 Students Finally Show Up For Protest

ROCK HILL, S. C. (UPI) — Hundreds of angry whites crowded into downtown Rock Hill Saturday morning to head off an anticipated march on the town by Negroes protesting segregation, but the Negroes delayed their demonstration until police had dispersed the crowd.

The demonstration, when it came, was a far cry from the mass protest that Negro leaders had urged.

Only about 35 Negro students showed up. They contented themselves with parading with signs in front of two five-and-dime stores and drugstore with segregated lunch counters.

Police marched virtually side-by-side with the picketers and kept everyone moving along the sidewalk.

BRIEF FIGHT

The whites, many of them teen-agers, began streaming into town early Saturday and by noon were packed shoulder-to-shoulder along a three block area that comprises the downtown area of this textile center of 30,000 persons.

A number of whites paraded down main street, waving Confederate flags, and there was a brief fist fight between a Negro and a bearded white youth who claimed the Negro had pushed him.

The crowd, estimated at between 2,000 and 2,500, reached its peak about noon and the town took on the appearance of an armed encampment.

KEPT MOVING

City, state and sheriff's patrol cars drifted slowly through the area, and police began breaking up all demonstrations and refusing to let anyone stand still on the sidewalks.

The crowd quickly thinned out thereafter and by the time the Negro demonstrators arrived there was only the normal flow of Saturday afternoon traffic.

Anti-segregation demonstrations have been staged here daily during the past week and integration leaders have urged that Rock Hill be made the next battleground in the fight to break down racial barriers in the South.

Two bus loads of Negroes were reported to have arrived in the early morning from Nashville, Tenn., for the weekend demonstration and Negro famiiles here opened their doors to out-of-town students.

PLANS FOR SUNDAY

The city's Negro leaders announced a schedule of demonstrations for Sunday, consisting of a mass pilgrimage to the York county prison farm where 11 of 14 demonstrators arrested last week are imprisoned.

The Negroes also will congregate Sunday for a mass meeting honoring the parents of the imprisoned demonstrators, the announcement said.

The 11 are serving 30-day sentences for trespassing in connection with lunch counter sit-in demonstrations.

A letter from the prison written by Thomas Gaither, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People field secretary, to local Negro leaders, reported all of the prisoners had been well treated.

Lunch counter fight will be continued

The Afro American
Baltimore Md
2/28/61

By SAMUEL HOSKINS

ROCK HILL, S.C. — "It's no use giving up now."

The girl was talking about the sitdown activities students have carried on for 12 months against lunch counter segregation practiced by local outlets of two variety chain stores — Woolworth and McCrory.

Because of these activities, the lunch counters of both stores are now closed. The space is being used to display artificial flowers.

"We intend to continue our program until they (the stores) serve everybody on a basis of equality," the girl said when asked what it's like to be a "Sitdown fire - baller."

* * *

SHE IS MISS MARGARET LEWIS, 19 - year - old sophomore at Frirendship Junior College.

Miss Lewis, a petite, borwn skinned young woman with a ready smile and a manner of speaking which tumbles her words out one over the other, is five feet, three inches tall and would not weigh over 105 pounds soaking wet.

Last February she was one of 72 students arrested during the first wave of sitdown activity here.

Since that time she has participated in 20 additional demonstrations, and is determined to continue "until something gives."

REMINDED THAT when the sitdowns first hit South Carolina a high state official attributed them to work of "outsiders," Miss Lewis laughed and said she was born in Rock Hill, the youngest of five brothers and five sisters also born here.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Willie A. Lewis, also native who "have not been influenced by outsiders."

She is a graduate of Emmet Scot High School here After finishing Friendship Junior College, she hopes to enroll at Pennsylvania University and qualify as a speech therapist.

Until then, she says, she has a job to finish at the jim-crow lunch counters. She is secretary of the local branch of the NAACP.

* * *

CHARLES TAYLOR JR., 22, a native of New Jersey, also is a Sitdowner. He was among the 10 arrested here last Tuesday and spent a night and part of a day in the city jail and a similar period at the county prison where he was put on a chain gang.

Does he plan to continue his sitdown activities? "You bet I do," he says.

Asked why he asked to be bailed out, the youngster explained that he is enrolled on a scholarship and felt it necessary to keep up with his studies in order to remain in school.

* * *

"STUDENTS SHOULD d what they can to break down the (racial) bars," Taylor declared, vowing "to do all I can to the best of my abili ty."

Taylor is six feet tall and weighs 170 pounds. He is halfback on the football team and hopes to play professional football after graduation.

The Taylor family resides in Rahway, N.J. His father is an employee of General Motors in Clark township and his mother is a union shop stewardress in the Westinghouse plant at Metuchen, N.J.

He has an older brother in the Army.

Sitdowners in solitary, refuse bread and water

The Afro-American
Baltimore Md
3/4/61

ROCK HILL, S.C. — Before I'd be a slave, I'd be dead and in my grave."

This traditional song, sung at a worship service by 11 sitdowners jailed at York County prison camp, was too militant for the guards. When the students refused to change their tune, nine of them were thrown into solitary confinement.

Refusing the bread-and-water diet, the protestors staged a hunger strike.

This action Friday climaxed a week of reported injustice at the camp, according to information from inside the prison.

The 11 students, working together, were forced one day to load 36 truckloads of dirt. At the same time, 27 other prisoners, working as another unit, were only required to load 21 truckloads.

When the students protested over this treatment, one, John A. Gaines, was transferred to the county jail. J. Ed Allen, camp supervisor, said the students then "struck on the job. They just sat there and refused to work when we moved one off the job back to camp."

He said that Gaines made some kind of motion toward one of the prison officials.

After the nine sit-downers were placed in solitary for the religious service, only two were allowed to receive visitors on Sunday afternoon —they were Joseph C. Jones of Charlotte and Charles M. Sherrod of Richmond. They had been convicted of trespassing while staging a demonstration in sympathy with the Friendship Junior College.

Leading the visitors was the Rev. C. A. Ivory, local NAACP president, who is confined to a wheelchair.

The nine students now in solitary confinement are from Rock Hill: Roett L. McCullough, James F. Wells, Clarence H. Graham, Thomas W. Gaither, Willie E. McClod, David Williamson, Mack C. Workman and Willie T. Massey.

A prison camp official told newsmen: "We will let them out when they show us they are ready to go to work and obey orders."

Ugliness of jim-crow is shocking

The Afro-American
Baltimore Md
3/11/61

By FRANK HUNT

ROCK HILL, S.C. — Violence visited the languid little town of Rock Hill, S.C. last weekend.

For the first time in a year of sitdown demonstrations, Rock Hill discarded its mask of indifference to fight the white and colored people marching shoulder to shoulder against segregation. It bared its fangs to show the ugliness of its institutions.

The "nature of the beast" was reflected in the twisted faces of the white hoodlums who again and again attacked Paul Detrich, a white member of the picket line, in front of Goode's Drug Store Saturday while police turned pseudo-concerned faces elsewhere.

It showed the other side of its much vaunted southern womanhood in the convulsed features of an otherwise pretty young housewife who slammed on brakes inches from the line of pickets crossing the street.

It put sneers on the faces and foul language in the mouths of little boys who squirted the Friendship College students with water pistols filled with a filthy liquid, encouraged by the cheers of their oldsters.

But though it was very real, very tangible, and very much to be felt, you could not have detected the intensity of the change in the pleasant little town of Rock Hill unless you were on the picket line.

So you do just that. You join the picket line.

There you are, leaving Friendship Junior College and walking up College Ave., one of a thin line of students embarking on an extra-curricula activity that is something to be marveled at.

You turn up Black St., waving back at the neighbors who peer from doors and windows, watching you; and the grade school kids, who, after a year of observing the daily procession still look on with uncomprehending eyes - shadowed just a little with an unexplained fear.

But you smile. You don't want them to realize the enormity of what you're doing. You don't really understand it yourself, do you?

You quell the small spasm of fear in your own heart, and try to hold still the heavy ball of emotion bouncing about in your stomach.

You don't really believe any thing will happen and your grip on a posture of ease and casualness is locked to the thought, "the only thing to fear is fear itself."

You cross over to Trade St., and proceed past the barber-shop where you get your hair clipped twice a month, past the pool room where you once found time to shoot a game or two, past the tavern which has been declared off-limits to you; you laugh and joke, unconsciously cheered by the sight, smell and sound of familiar things.

And then you cross Main St. or rather, you enter that "other world." Here you are also among familiar things, but it's not quite the same, is it? It's more like the familiarity of the explorer who knows his jungle well, and who manages to survive only as long as he can recognize the danger signs.

Now you're in front of Goode's, one of the drugstores you've been picketing for the past year. Main St. is relatively quiet for a Saturday. But you know it won't be that way for long.

First comes the ducktailed white boys in the tight blue jeans. They'll be the last to leave too. Somehow they always seem to know when the picket line is going to start, and carrion-like, they are always there to hasten the decay of human dignity.

You and your fellow pickets have been confined to marching in a single file within the 15 foot area immediately fronting the store. Not more than ten of you can comfortably pace the area, and it becomes a matter of taking several steps in one direction, turning and retracing your steps.

But in feeling the sensations hidden beneath your carefully controlled expression of calm, you find that boredom is not one of them.

You're an actor, but this isn't Broadway. You're in the lime light of public attention, derogatory, jeering, and abusive perhaps but don't feel too badly, brother. In this show, you're the star.

You're a "sitdowner" now.

When one of the ducktailed toughs snatches Paul's signs again and again, challenging him to fight, you walk down to the corner and get the traffic cop.

You tell him there's a fight going on. After all, you think, that's what he'd getting paid for..to protect us citizens as we exercise our rights.. isn't he?

By the time the local constable gets there, Paul's assailant has disappeared. The cop sees Paul clasping the remains of a placard, so you don't look too foolish.

He tells you that you must point out the individual who committed the act, and you tell him that all you wish to do is to prevent further incidents and possible violence.

This seems to make sense to him, and in about five minutes there are about seven cops stationed in the block. But there's an odd thing about this police action and about the police force in Rock Hill, S.C. They're "blind."

Or maybe they're just color blind.

At least they didn't seem to notice when Paul was assaulted twice within the succeeding 30 minutes by toughs who would run back in the drug store.

And they don't attempt to disperse the bystanders. "Will you gentlemen move back from the sidewalk?" "We can't have you obstructing traffic . . thank you." "Move back from the door, please . . . that's it thanks."

And so the crowd grows. More storeowners stand in their doorways, and more "concerned" citizens stop and stare.

You see quite a few tan faces across the street among the crowd, and you wonder until you realize with a start that the real brunt of the hate is directed at he white pickets.

Its much easier to call such people "communists," and "nigger lovers," than to try to understand.

You want to tell them that your Caucasian friends are not shouldering your cross, but theirs.

You want to tell them that "the white man's burden" is the black man's cross.

But you don't of course. You don't tell them anything. You just keep walking.

So when the cops come up and threaten to arrest you if you don't get off the streets, you don't really mind, even though you resent the peremptory manner in which it is done. And you know that when the cops say "Don't you see all the trouble you're causin," they are purposely attacking the problem of preventing trouble at the wrong source.

"Why dont you disperse the hecklers," you want to shout back.

You want to remind him that your very own Senator Kennedy had supported the sitdown movement when he said that the chief executive, as center of the moral power in the U.S. must "support the right of every American to stand up for his rights, even if on occasion, he must sit down for them."

But then you remember that PRESIDENT Kennedy never said any such thing. So again you remain silent.

EDWARD HAAN of Chicago and Nashville, bearing "No Color Line in Heaven" sign, joins Negro pickets in anti-segregation demonstration in Rock Hill, S. C. Demonstrators protested jailing of 13 Negroes for staging anti-segregation demonstrations. Nine students went to the York County prison farm to begin serving 30-day jail terms rather than pay $100 fines. UPI

Rock Hill students defy pressures

ROCK HILL, S. C. — As of April 1, the third straight month of picketing was begun by Friendship College students here.

During this period, over 20 students and four adults have been arrested. Thirteen of the students, including two girls, served 30-day jail sentences.

Despite the prison terms served, all of the convictions are being appealed.

* * *

THE LATEST convictions were those of the Rev. C. A. Ivory, Paul Dietrich, white, of Washington, D.C., and George A. Hackley, Rockville, Md. These convictions, too, are being appealed.

Judge Billy Hayes found the three guilty of breach of the peace, following an all-day trial on March 23.

The Rev. Ivory, president of the local NAACP, was fined $40 and the other two $65 each. All were given 30-day jail sentences on condition they are not arrested again for sitdown demonstrations.

* * *

THE STATE - WIDE youth rally was held at Friendship College on March 26. Approximately 150 youth delegates attended.

The state motor vehicle division withdrew its revocation of the driving license of the Rev. Ivory and gave him 30 days to equip his automobile with extra apparatus to compensate for his being cripple.

When the license was revoked, the Rev. Ivory charged it was due to his participating in anti-segregation activities.

roes.

At an open-air ceremony speakers praised the students and the parents who stood behind them. Friendship College President James H. Goudlock called the students "martyrs" in the cause of justice and equality.

Thomas Gaither, CORE field secretary and one of the nine released from the road gang, urged "liberal Christian-hearted people to come to the forefront with pressure to work out a peaceful and immediate solution to the problem of segregation in Rock Hill community life."

Robert McCullough, speaking for the Friendship students, said "Segregation is evil. I cannot cooperate with it. If it is necessary, I and my fellow CORE members will return to the picket line and to the road gang to continue the struggle."

It was announced at the rally that the nine would go to New York for a week of radio, television and personal appearances. CORE is the sponsor of the trip.

Praise Sit-In Martyrs

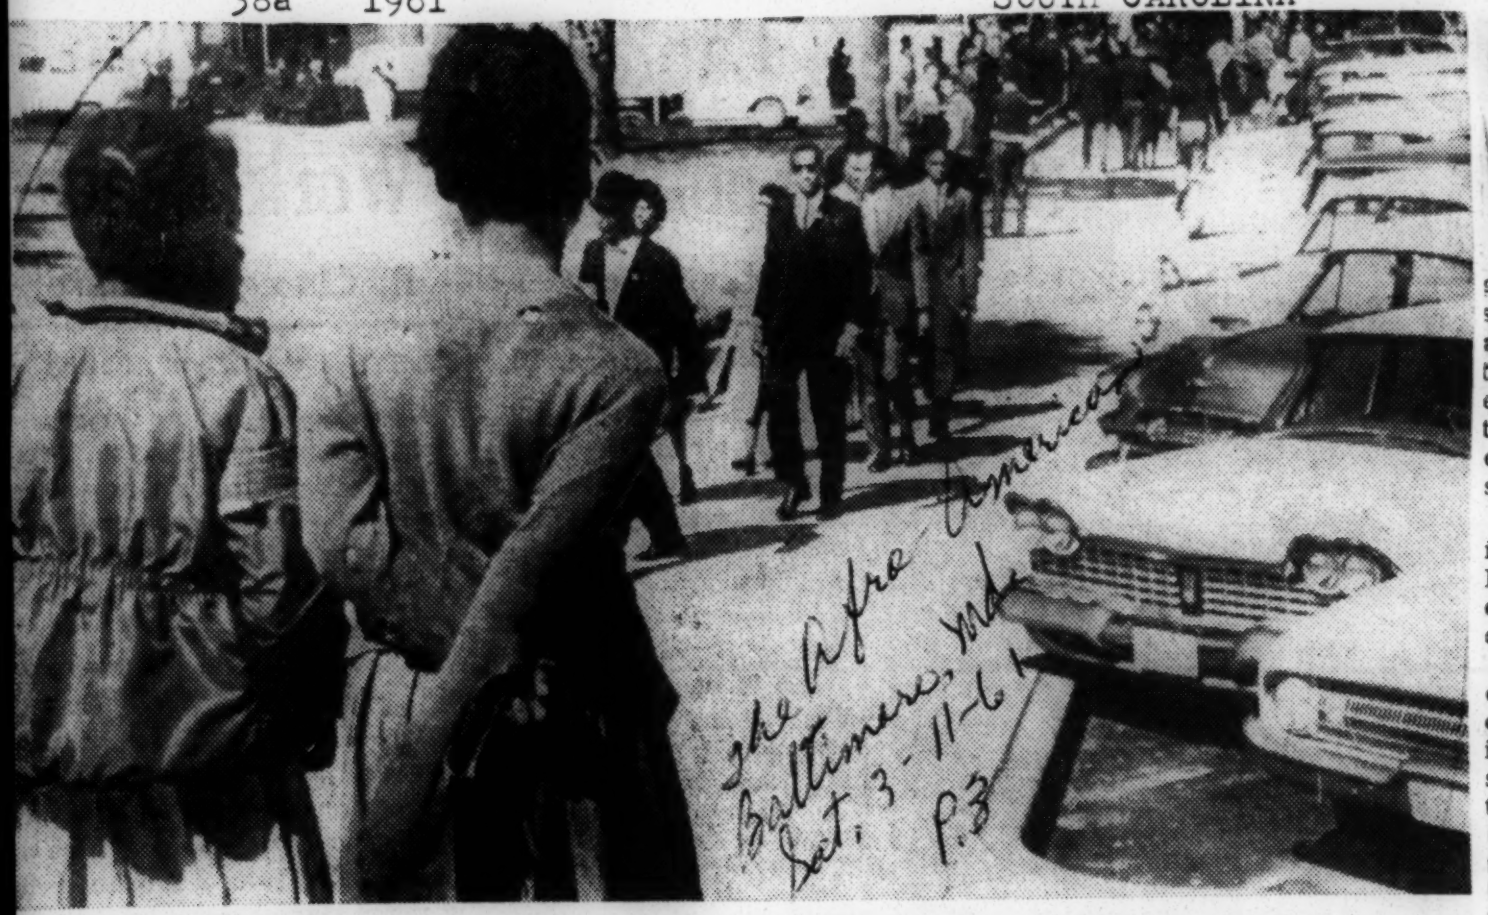
ROCK HILL, S C. — Nine CORE members freed from the York County, S. C., road gang were greeted at Friendship Junior College as returning he-



GETTING AN EYEFUL of the student protests, young girls stand on the Capitol steps at Columbia, South Carolina, Thursday, watching approaching students in a demonstration against segregation. Police later arrested 190 of the students, who were accused of defying orders not to demonstrate on state property. Eighty-five women were among those arrested. One white student from the University of South Carolina was also among them.

S.C. Governor Blocks 'Sit-In' Settlement

By JOHN H. McCRAY

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Though most Main St. merchants are beginning to feel the pinch from the loss of Negro business and are willing to bow to the inevitable, peaceful lunch counter desegregation is being blocked by Gov. Ernest F. Hollings and his conspirators.

Merchants in Greenville, Rock Hill and other cities are pressuring local governments for a solution to the problem. Negroes are also pressuring the same city officials, all of whom are up for reelection soon. These officials, in many cases, owe their offices to the Negro voting factor.

This reporter learned during the week that several city and local public officials have conferred with Governor Hollings. Most have suggested creating a special bi-racial committee and empowering it to get store operators and Negroes together.

However, a reliable city officer told The Courier, "We're in this position: we cannot afford to act contrarily to the Governor's program. We'd be massacred were we to do so. We believe our merchants would quickly desegregate their counters if he (Mr. Hollings) would permit them to. You know, he's supposed to be running for U. S. Senate next year and he wants to maintain the status quo."

Merchants who would desegregate face another threat: the White Citizens Council, which appears to be "calling the shots" of Governor Hollings on this issue. Chief J. P. Strom of the State Law Enforcement Division, Hollings' personally controlled law arm, declared publicly that the White Citizens Council had admirably handled sit-in matters in Rock Hill.

Meanwhile, with more than 800 Negroes and whites arrested for sit-ins during the past 2 to 14 months, Governor Hollings seems either unaware of, or indifferent to, the seethings of merchants, Negroes and local governmental leaders who want "out" but who are kept "in line."

Call Sit-In's State 'Grave'

COLUMBIA, S. C. — A Negro theology student who was stabbed Monday while sitting at a variety store lunch counter reserved by white customers is in "grave" condition, the doctor who performed an emergency operation on him said Tuesday.

"His condition is critical. It is grave. It could be fatal," Dr. C. O. Spann said after operating on Lenny Glover, 24, of Columbia.

Glover, a student at Benedict college here, said he and another Negro integration leader identified as David Carter were sitting at the lunch counter at the F. W. Woolworth store on the city's main street when the stabbing occurred.

Glover said a stocky white man came up behind him, muttered, "Are you having fun?" and then stabbed him in the left side with a small knife.

Hospital officials believed at first that Glover was not badly hurt. It was later revealed, however, that his spleen was injured and had to be removed.

The store manager confirmed that "a scuffle" had taken place at the lunch counter.

police search.

Demonstrators have been attacked before but there have been no known reports of weapons being used. However, Miss Mae F. Moultrie, a student at Morris college, Sumter, S. C., was injured in Sumter recently, when a policeman pushed her face down causing injuries to her chest, legs and head.

Benedict Student Sit-Inner Knifed By White Man

Columbia, S. C.—A Benedict college student, Lennie Glover, was stabbed at a white lunch counter here last week, marking what is apparently the first time a sit-in demonstrator has been injured by a deadly weapon in this state.

The youth's doctor said an exploratory operation revealed some vital organs was punctured, and there was severe loss of blood.

The white man who plunged a knife into the student at a Woolworth's store disappeared into the downtown crowd and was the object of an immediate and intensive

'Sit-Ins' Not Stunts, Ruby Says

COLUMBIA, S. C.—One should not speak of displays such as students continue to make against segregated lunch counters, public libraries, public parks, etc., as "demonstrations."

This is the advice of Mrs. Ruby E. Hurley, Southwestern regional secretary for the NAACP.

Mrs. Hurley told newsmen at a press conference here last Friday that the word "demonstration" doesn't convey the spirit and sense behind these protests. A "demonstration," she said, connotes some sort of show or stunt with the resulting publicity being the end sought.

■

WHAT WE'VE been having for more than a year, the NAACP executive said, are protests against discrimination and prejudice, and we might do full justice to the entire cause by applying the best possible descriptive word—"protest."

The newsmen agreed with her point of view.

Arrest all for march on Capitol

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 4-8-61

SPECIAL TO AFRO

COLUMBIA, S.C.— Notice of appeal has been filed in behalf of 189 persons convicted here on breach of the peace charges growing out of sitdown demonstrations.

The defendants are 187 college and high school students and two officials of the NAACP.

The fourth and final of a series of trials was completed March 27, with the conviction of 13 of the defendants. Fifty-two were convicted in three previous trials.

* * *

ALL OF THE accused were arrested March 2 for marching on the State House grounds.

The students, 85 females and 102 males, were enrolled at Benedict, Claflin, South Carolina A. and M. Colleges and the University of South Carolina.

The arrests were ordered by Harry Walker, legal aide to the governor, as the students paraded on the grounds of the State Capitol.

* * *

ABOUT ONE of every 10 of the students carried placards. One of the signs read: "You may jail our bodies, but not our souls."

The two NAACP officials are the Rev. I. DeQuincy Newman, field secretary, and the Rev. B. J. Glover, local president.

In sentencing the Rev. Newman to pay a fine of $100, or serve 30 days in prison, Magistrate Frank Powell declared: "I have no sympathy for you."

The lone white student among those arrested was Frederick C. Hart, resident of Washington, D.C. He did not appear at the trial, forfeiting $50 bond posted as collateral.

* * *

THE STUDENTS were sentenced according to their ages. Those 21 and over, $100 fines or 30-day prison terms; 17 to 21, $50 fines or 30 days; under 17, $10 fines and five days.

"Seven of the defendants were not present at the trial. However, all but one were represented by attorneys. Lanie Lighty, one of those absent, was called to report to his draft board.

Those under 17 were Brenda Janet Burton, Judith Delores Smith (Absent) Emma Jean Jones, Rebecca Williams, Leonard Lewis McCant, James Kenneth Alford, Katherine Duncan, Horace Nash, Carol Edward Brooks, Jessie Alfreda Lockhart; Joe Louis Robinson, Jimmie Norz Moore, Bernard Haire, Leon Bryant, Robert Lee McBeth, Mary Lou Sullivan, Rae L. Jones, Lucy Davis, Jenny Lou Davis, Myrtle L. Walker, Margaret A. McCray, Loretta Gertrude Bush, Bettie Jean Brown, Gloria Jean Jefferson, Rosalee Hines, Judith Jenkins, Florence Smalls, Betty Jean Capers, Minnie Dewitt, Doris D. Wright, Mary Moris, Rhunett Lindsy, Juanita Hall, Bettie Jean King and Benzer Inabinett.

Barbara Ann Cureton, Sarah Ann Wharton, Dianne Gwendolyn Blassingame and Fredrick Padgett.

Twenty-one or over were Barbara Early, Bettye Jean Mashack, Evelyn L. Robinson, John Land, Bobbie Jeane Giles, Albert Orange, Booket T. McLeod, Matthew Williams, Harold Bradonville, Shellie Stroman, Clarence Missour, John Josiah Campbell, I. DeQuincy Newman, Rupert Hickman, Herbert Lawrance Wilson, Donald Jerome Slaters, Patricia Green, John Fredrick and Mattie Thomas.

Those between 17 and 21 were Amanda Towsend, Novel Nowlin, Louvenia Griggs, Gertrude Evans, Shirley A. Green, Annie Mae Ray, Julius Duke Moses, Janet Louise Black, Juanita Waddell and Justine Simons. Mattie M. Giles, Annette Edwards, Betty Jean Wilson, Mary Doe, Albertine Myrtis Coney, Yvonne J. Goodloe, Barbara Ann Mack, Hallain Sizer, Kate Lewis, Willie Evelyn Grant, Frances Eliza Beth Johnson, Evelyn Bing, Shirley Ann King, and Althia Brown.

* * *

MARIO DAVIS, Sammie Pringle, Clinton Warren Hazard, Robert McTeer, Gwendolyn Watson, Yvonne Redd, Frances McDaniels, Leola Clements, Gertrude Smith, Jeanette Louise Martwell, Mary Elizabethe Ellison, Junious Leverne Reed, James K. Davis, Chonice Mae Drayton, Ottiel Ruth Jarrott, Dorothy Helen Robinson, Mary Louise English, Willie Oma Jamison, Pelicia Yvonne Young, Carrie Mae Kelly and Queen Ester Rush.

Hazel Yvonne Newberry, Betty Jean Lindsey, Sarah Elizabeth McKenzie, Willie Paul Worthy, Robert Ferguson, John Sawyer, Glenn Manning, Kennedy Claflin, Claude E. Moore, John I. Witherspoon, Travis Simon, John Wesley Miller, Mark A. Williams, Classie R. Walker, Robbie Jean Young, Regina Shirley Ann Caldwell, Sophia Pearl Lester, Leverne Durant, Bettye Jean Widemon, and William T. Robinson.

Incomplete

William Theodore Boggs, Henry Earl Thomas, James Edward Coleman, Bernard Nathaniel Riggins, Floyd Alvin Gilmore, McArthur Jake Bishop, Charlie Flemming.

Sit-In Trials Ended

The Herald Tribune
Charleston, S.C.
Tues. 3-28-61

137 Persons Are Convicted At Columbia

P 6-B

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Trials on charges of breach of the peace, arising from a Negro anti-segregation demonstration at the State House, were completed Monday with the conviction of 137 persons.

Frederick C. Hart, white former University of South Carolina student from Washington, D.C., was one of six convicted in absentia.

Hart, arrested after shaking hands and sympathizing with Negro demonstrators, forfeited a $50 bond posted by his father.

In previous trials, 52 demonstrators were convicted and fined sums ranging from $10 to $100. Their convictions and those handed down Monday await appeals. Appeal bonds were set in the amount of $100.

The Rev. I. DeQuincey Newman of Columbia, NAACP official, was in the group of 137 tried Monday. Magistrate Frank Powell, in sentencing him, said, "I have no sympathy for you."

Powell handed down sentences of five days in jail or $10 fines for 13 of the Negroes who were under 17 years of age.

He set fines of $100 or 30 days in jail for 20 Negroes above 21, and issued the same sentence in the other 103 cases, with $50 of each fine suspended.

Defense and prosecution attorneys stipulated that testimony and witnesses in Monday's trials would be the same as in two previous trials in which the other 52 demonstrators had been convicted.

Police arrested 189 persons in the March 2 march on the State House.

38a 1961

SOUTH CAROLINA LUNCH COUNTER

Boycott Set By Negroes At Rock Hill

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — A mass Negro rally voted solidly here Friday night to boycott all stores on Rock Hill's Main Street for a period of 30 days, extending through the Easter shopping season.

The rally, predominantly of adults, also was told that four Negro girls will seek admission to Winthrop College, the South Carolina woman's college, in September.

No details or names were given on the attempt to integrate Winthrop. James Farmer of New York City, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality (Core), said at least four Negroes would apply for admission.

The decision to place an economic boycott on Main Street business houses was adopted by a standing vote of the approximately 400 persons attending.

The boycott is to begin immediately and will include all businesses on the main street. A Negro boycott of the same area has been in effect on Fridays and Saturdays during recent weeks.

The rally, followed by a dance, was staged in honor of 13 students who recently served 30-day jail terms in York County rather than post bond for breach of peace convictions growing out of anti-racial demonstrations.

Road Gang Sit-Ins Released

ROCK HILL, S. C. — Nine CORE members freed from the York County, South Carolina road gang were greeted at Friendship Junior College as returning heroes.

At an open-air ceremony speakers praised the students and the parents who stood behind them. Friendship College President James H Goudlock called the students "martyrs" in the cause of justice and equality.

Rock Hill Officials Prohibit Gatherings

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Officials of this South Carolina industrial city moved Friday to strengthen police efforts to curb violence resulting from racial demonstrations.

Mayor John Hardin, after a two-hour meeting with other municipal officials, announced that all "group concentrations of any sort" would be banned until further notice.

He said, however, that the edict did not mean that no further anti-segregation picketing would be allowed.

"Whenever picketing provokes other groups to gather and causes a buildup of tension that, in the opinion of police, threatens the public peace and good order, we will ask all groups to move in, including the pickets," said Hardin.

He added, "It all boils down to the fact that we will step in more quickly to prevent any violence or disorder. The action of the police will be a matter of judgement of the situation at the moment."

The no-congregation edict "applies to everybody," the mayor said. "We are trying to bring some normalcy back to our city."

In another development, a Washington white man who has particpattd with Negroes in the demonstrations obtained two warrants charging a Rock Hill white man with breach of the peace.

Paul A. Dietrich, 29, claims Clement King, 37, struck him during a demonstration last Saturday and again Thursday when Dietrich was picketing a drug store.

Here is the statement issued after the conference by Hardin:

"All of us were in full agreement that during the past year every effort has been made to enforce the law in a fair and impartial manner, with full recognition of the rights of all citizens and of the need to maintain law and order at all times for all citizens. We also agreed that recent developments in our community and recent increased public tensions require firm action by the city through its Police Department to protect and preserve the public peace for the benefit of all our citizens.

"On my own behalf and in behalf of each member of city council, I appeal to all citizens of all races in this community to recognize their civic responsibility and to cooperate in maintaining law and order in our community and in easing public tensions affecting our community. Unless we join together in this mutual undertaking, the well-being of our community will continue to deteriorate.

"Through our Police Department we must establish a firm policy of preventing continued group concentrations of any sort in our congested areas regardless of their race, color, creed or purpose whenever this threatens the public peace and good order of our community.

"All citizens are urged to cooperate with our Police Department in carrying out this policy or the mutual good of all our citizens."

5 Negro Pickets Defy Police and Are Arrested

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP)—Five Negroes picketing against segregation were arrested here Tuesday when they refused a police order to leave the area.

Police said the five were drawing a large crowd. Police, acting under a recent directive of the Rock Hill City Council, charged the five with breach of peace. The five remained in jail in lieu of payment of $100 bond each.

At Columbia, 75 miles to the south, antisegregation pickets marched on Main Street in front of stores having all-white lunch counters.

They carried signs declaring "If we cook for them, why can't we eat with them?" The young men and women Negro students are from Benedict College. There were no violence or arrests.

Three Acquitted; Two Convicted In Rock Hill Case

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP)—Three Negro girls were found innocent Thursday of breach of peace charges stemming from an anti-segregation demonstration. Two other Negroes were convicted in Recorder's court here.

Found guilty were Willie Thomas Massey, 18, of Rock Hill and Jacqueline Horry, 17, of Mount Pleasant. Massey was fined $100 or 30 days, reduced to $93 and 28 days because he had served two days in jail. Miss Horry was given $30 or 30 days. Both indicated they would appeal. Bond of $200 was set for Thomas and $60 for Miss Horry.

Judge Billy D. Hayes found the three girls innocent when they testified they did not hear police tell them to disband a picket line in downtown Rock Hill on Tuesday. City Council recently adopted an ordinance forbidding picketing which attracts large crowds.

Found innocent were Macie Lee Giles, 19, Sharon; Thelma Davis, 21, Andrews, and Patsy Ann Simpson, 18, North Charleston.

Negro Pastor Arrested In Row At Rock Hill

By The Associated Press

A Negro minister was among three persons arrested at Rock Hill, S. C., yesterday during a disturbance at an antisegregation demonstration in front of a drugstore in the racially tense city near the North Carolina border.

Charged with breach of the peace, police said, were the Rev. C. A. Ivory, pastor of Herman Presbyterian Church and president of the Rock Hill chapter of the N.A.A.C.P.; Paul Dietrich, a white man from Washington, D. C., and George A. Beckley, 26, a Negro from Rockville, Md.

At Columbia, S. C., the State Capital, eight Negro college students staged sit-ins at lunch counters for white persons in the downtown area. No arrests were reported.

In Lynchburg, Va., 16-year-old Negro high-school pupil, Mandaline E. Thompson, was sentenced to 30 days in jail on a charge of violating the State's antitrespass low. She appealed.

TV Cameraman Convicted for Sit-In Pictures

SUMTER, S.C. (AP) — Television cameraman George Carras Thursday was convicted of trespassing for taking pictures while a Negro sit-in demonstration took place here last month.

Carras, of WSOC-TV, Charlotte, received a $100 fine or 30-day jail sentence from Recorder's Court Judge Ramon Schwartz. A trespass charge against Boyce Stradley, a charter pilot who flew Carras to Sumter Feb. 14, was dismissed.

Nine S. C. Sit-In Students Freed From Road Gang

ROCK HILL, S. C.—Nine CORE members freed from the York County, South Carolina, road gang were greeted at Friendship Junior College as returning heroes.

At an open-air ceremony speakers praised the students and the parents who stood behind them. Friendship College President Jas. H. Goudlock called the students "martyrs" in the cause of justice and equality.

Thomas Gaither, CORE field secretary and one of the nine released from the road gang, urged "liberal Christian-hearted people to come to the forefront with pressure to work out a peaceful and immediate solution to the problem of segregation in Rock Hill community life.

Released, jailed students praised

ROCK HILL, S. C. —Approximately 1,250 applauding well - wishers and supporters attended a series of affairs held here March 10 honoring the 13 students who served 30-day jail terms for sitdown demonstrations.

The meetings were a mass rally, a banquet and two dances, one for adults and the other for students.

The 13 students, 11 males and 2 females, appeared as guest of honor at each of the affairs.

Nine of the students were released March 2 and the remaining four on March 8.

* * *

THE NINE WHO are students of Friendship Jr. College here were greeted by Dr. James H. Goudlock, president, as "martyrs in the cause of justice and equality."

Speaking for the nine, Robert McCullough said: "Segregation is evil. I cannot cooperate with it. If it is necessary, I and my fellow CORE members will return to the picket line and to the road gang to continue the struggle."

At the mass meeting a resolution was unanimously adopted calling for a "30 - day buying fast on Main St.," the street where the arrests occurred.

* * *

THE MAIN SPEAKER at the meeting was James Farmer, national chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality.

Farmer hailed the 13 students as being among the front rank fighter for democracy and equality.

"The biggest lie of temporary times is just a lie — that colored people are satisfied with segregation."

Despite attempts by city and state authorities to stifle the picketing of downtown stores by students, the pickets still appear almost daily.

* * *

THE TRIAL of the Rev. C. A. Ivory, president of the local chapter of the NAACP, on last Thursday was postponed indefinitely. He was arrested last month along with two other persons, one white, on charges of inciting to violence.

Fine 19 for Using Library

SUMTER, S. C. + Nineteen Morris College students were convicted on breach of peace charges in Magistrate Court. Magistrate Ramon Schwartz levied fines of $100 each, or 30 days in prison.

Charges against three students were dropped; one other's case was continued. All were arrested Feb. 21 when they entered the public library and requested use of certain volumes.

One, Martin L. Johnson, testified that he had come to the library after the volume he sought for research wasn't to be found in the Negro portion of the public library.

Atty. E. A. Finney made several motions for dismissal of the charges on grounds that the library is supported by public taxes and that applying for services at it does not constitute violation of any laws.

The magistrate ruled, however, that breach of peace could occur on public, as well as private property. The cases have been placed on appeal.

Librarian C. J. Milling testified that all of the students were orderly at the time he summoned city policemen who made the arrests.

38a 1961 SOUTH CAROLINA LUNCH COUNTER

Editor Fears 'We're In For It'

The Afro-Amer. Baltimore, Md
Sat. 2-18-61 p. 1

By SAMUEL HOSKINS
AFRO Staff Correspondent

ROCK HILL, S. C. — "Rip" Wilder, managing editor of the Rock Hill Evening Herald, has a reputation among local residents of being a "good guy."

Like many other good Rock Hillians, Wilder is concerned over the probability that "our town" will become a battle-field of the Sitdown War.

"Rip" voiced his fear when I talked with him, last week, He said: "Of all the places in the world, it has to happen here in Rock Hill."

* * *

MY VISIT with Wilder occurred a couple of hours after the town's young jurist, City Recorder Billy D. Hayes, convicted four out-of-town youth leaders and sent them to prison for 30 days, in lieu of payment of $100 fines.

Two of the convicted youngsters were girls, one of them only 18 years of age.

The previous week Recorder Hayes sent up 10 local students for similar terms.

All 14 were adjudged guilty of trespassing because they sought to purchase food at lunch counters of two local stores, McCrory's and Good's drug store.

"WHERE DO you think it will end?" I asked Wilder, a big, soft-spoken fellow with a pleasant smile and a slight limp on the right side.

He hesitated a long moment, glancing around the city room as if in search of an answer. Finally he said: "I don't know, but it looks like we're in for it." His words dried up into inaudibility.

Then, clamping his teeth until the muscles of his jaws jutted out like rip cords, the managing editor added: "I'm afraid Rock Hill is about to become a battle-field in a test which local people will have very little to do with."

FOURTEEN IN HERE — This is the scene inside York County Prison Camp at Rock Hill, S.C., where 14 students are serving 30 days at hard labor. Their crime: they asked for sandwiches

This was a reference to the fact that the last four students were from out of town (Nashville, Tenn.; Charlotte, N.C.; Atlanta, Ga., and Petersburg, Va.) and the promise of more to come.

BEHIND THIS REFERENCE, too, was an allusion to the Chamber of Commerce image of Rock Hill and the intimation that these "outsiders" are threatening to harm this image by involving this quiet, peaceful community in a sociological and legal struggle not of its own making.

As if thinking out loud, Wilder mused: "Yet, I don't think we can afford to toss out our trespassing laws. If we do, it simply will lead to something else."

For a sadistic moment I was tempted to be mean to this "good guy" and prod him into elaborating on the "something else," but decided against it.

My reason for not pressing the issue was that by "something else" Wilder undoubtedly alluded to such intangibles as "custom," "tradition," "our way of life" and similar cliches which are as false as the Chamber of Commerce image of Rock Hill.

HERE, IN PART, is the image:—

A Piedmont paradise of nine square miles, 60 feet above sea level, with a harmonious and happy population of 30,000.

A modest metropolis steeped in historical romance dating from 1852 when the town got its name from a flint-rock hill workers encountered during the construction of the Charlotte, Columbia and Augusta Railroad.

A "city of industry" where the consumer spending income per household is the highest in the state.

A city of 25 beautiful churches which "testify" to a "well rounded religious life."

* * *

A CITY OF good government which "shines like a beacon."

A city of one of the finest school systems in the state.

A city of excellent medical, cultural and recreational facilities.

This is the Chamber of Commerce image. The creator of the image is Vernon Grant, the artist who painted the deliciously mouth-watering drawing which graces the sides of millions of Rice Krispies' boxes on grocery shelves throughout the U. S. and numerous countries abroad.

Unfortunately, the quality inside the Rock Hill package falls far short of that found inside the Rice Krispies' boxes.

THE TRUTH is Rock Hill is no paradise for the approximately 30 per cent of its population which is colored.

Employment for colored in the industry the Chamber of Commerce boasts of is limited, in the main, to unskilled jobs.

The good government which allegedly "shines like a beacon" does not light up for the non-white element of the population.

The local government has no colored represenation. Only one government sub-division has a colored member—the city planning board.

* * *

THERE ARE only three colored officers on the entire police force, and these are assigned —in the main — to duty in non-white areas.

While seven of the city's 23 schools are allotted to colored, in almost every instance the segregated schools prove again the fallacy of the "separate but equal" theory, quantitatively and qualitatively.

As for the "well rounded religious life" of the community not a single white church congregation has dared to raise its voice in protest to the un-Christian and morally indefensible sitdown convictions and imprisonments.

The dividing line runs through the city's medical, cultural, recreational and public accommodation facilities. And always it's the colored citizens who are left holding the inadquate end of the stick.

IN BRAZEN defiance of both court rulings and interstate commerce regulations, there is a sign over the entrance of one of the two waiting rooms at the railroad station which reads:—

"Colored Interstate Passengers Waiting Room"

There are similar signs at both bus stations of the city.

When colored protested segregated seating on local buses, the city and bus company agreed to discontinue public transportation rather than the jimcrow policy.

* * *

THE CHAMBER of Commerce points with pride to the city's higher education facilities.

"In addition to Winthrope College," the chamber states, "two Negro junior colleges are (located) here."

The boast is deceiving. The chamber fails to point out that the two junior colleges, supported by private church groups, do not adequately meet the higher educational needs of the colored community.

On the other hand, Winthrope College which is supported by public funds (budget $1,653,000) bars colored students on a basis of race.

* * *

THE CHAMBER of Commerce also boasts that Winthrope College, located here in 1895, is a cultural center which enriches the life of the city.

Each year nationally known music personalities, symphonies and operas are presented by the college's music conservatory.

Shortly thereafter the janitor's wife to work with him and recalling an experince of her to watch the performance from backstage. I asked a local matron if colored persons may attend these events. She answered: "I think that answers your question." It did. The man was required to work nights events were held.

* * *

FOLLOWING A gale of humorless laughter, the matron said: "good guys" did. things that the "good guys" relating of this incident did more than answer my question. It explains some of the heretofore unanswered questions about the young-sters in the Sitdown Crusade. The inci-dent ought to know. It explains the letter young

Frank Graham wrote his mother prior to going on the dime store demonstration which resulted in his being sent to the county chaingang.

Frank wrote: "I want you to know that this is something that I really and truly want to do. I just have to. . .We're going (to jail) for the betterment of all colored people."

* * *

VISITING YORK County Prison Camp, Mrs. Mary Gill, 95-year-old great-grandmother of John Gaines, pleaded with the boy to permit himself to be bailed out. Give up this foolish idea," she begged.

"I can't do that grandma," the boy said. "There's more to it than that."

Mrs. Gill cried, but I don't think she was surprised by Gaines' refusal.

Earlier she had told me in the presence of a local school teacher: "I don't want to die for nobody but myself, but then he'd rather die than to go through with what we did."

THOMAS W. GAITHER, who has been arrested several times for sitdown demonstrations, shouted through the prison camp bars to visiting students, saying: "We can't win except by using ourselves as weapons in this struggle for freedom."

Miss Diane J. Nash, the Fisk University student arrested here, voiced a similar dedication from the witness stand.

City Attorney C. W. F. Spenser asked her if it were not true that she came to Rock Hill to be arrested.

She said she did not come to be arrested, but was not surprised that she was.

But I'm willing to be arrested, even sent to prison if it will make things better in Rock Hill and consequently, in the South and the country as a whole," the student declared.

* * *

A BALANCE for benefit of confused "Good guys" everywhere, a few observations are in order.

The Sitdown Crusade (and it's just that) is an assault on codified community irrationality mistakenly labeled custom" and/or "tradition," backed by public police power and compounded by judicial authority.

It is a protest to public law being twisted and distorted to make a criminal action of a mere request for service in a place of public accommodations.

It is a fight against public law being used as an instrument to perpetuate private customs rooted in racial bigotry.

* * *

TO THE EXTENT that these practices occur and are upheld here, Rock Hill is responsible for making of itself a battle ground.

So are all the Rock Hills everywhere in the South.

To say that the Sitdowners are coming is to err. They are here, and always were, and they are not trespassers.

Negroes Keep Up Pressure In Carolina

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — One thousand Negroes from many cities supported the "jail, no bail" stand of 13 imprisoned college students by gathering here Sunday—Emancipator Abraham Lincoln's birthday—for a triple protest against segregation.

A few tried to get into Sunday services at white churches, being admitted to three and turned away from two.

Six hundred then proceeded by motorcade to jails at the York County seat of York, 15 miles away, where the 11 men and two women Negro students have chosen to spend 30 days. They are in their second week of imprisonment rather than post bonds to appeal their convictions of trespassing by refusing to leave the segregated lunch counter of a Rock Hill variety store.

After the motorcade, about 1,000 Negroes gathered for a 2½-hour rally at the new Mt. Olivet African Methodist Episcopal AME Zion Church, here.

PROTEST JAIL SENTENCES — Pickets demonstrate at McCrory's store in NYC protesting jail sentences imposed on nine youths for their sit-in demonstration in a southern store of the company. The youths were sentenced to jail terms in Rock Hill, S.C., for refusing to leave a segregated lunch counter. The pickets, from the Congress of Racial Equality, wear striped prison costumes and carry sledge hammers. CORE said the nine jailed youths were sentenced to labor on a chain gang.

Police Meet Negro Motorcade

Split Up Group Visiting Prison

Rock Hill, S. C., Feb. 12 (AP) —A cordon of law-enforcement officers set up a barricade Sunday to block a Negro pilgrimage to York County Farm, where 11 sit-in demonstrators are imprisoned.

A ring of more than 100 policemen, mainly State Troopers, circled the farm as a caravan of more than 300 Negroes approached.

The Negroes first efforts to enter the compound were stymied by troopers and the caravan of more than 60 cars was forced to circle back and forth along a 10-mile stretch of highway in front of the prison.

5-Minute Visit Allowed

Arrangements were finally made between Negro leader James McCain and Chief J. P. Strom of the State Law Enforcement Division to permit the Negroes to enter the compound 10 cars at a time, pay a 5-minute visit to the imprisoned demonstrators, and leave.

The Negroes had spread the word Saturday that they would stage the pilgrimage—and the State prepared to meet them with a show of force.

State and local authorities said they were of the opinion the proposed pilgrimage "would constitute a security problem and could resolve itself into a serious emergency."

Mass Meeting Follows

The pilgrimage was followed by a mass meeting at which some 600 Negroes voted to ask United States Attorney General Kennedy or his representative to come to Rock Hill "to witness trials and obstacles to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness of a vast section of the South Carolina population."

38a 1961

SOUTH CAROLINA

LUNCH COUNTER

Negroes On Bread, Water, In Solitary In York Jail

The News & Courier Charleston S.C.

Mon. 2-20-61

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP)—A Negro minister disclosed Sunday that eight of the 11 Negro students jailed at York County Prison Camp after being convicted of charges stemming from anti-segregation demonstrations are in solitary confinement.

A ninth student, said the Rev. C. A. Ivory, has been transferred to the York County Jail, where two Negro coeds are imprisoned, also for anti-segregation offenses.

Charles C. Maloney, superintendent of the prison camp, said the eight were placed on bread and water in solitary confinement Friday for sitting down and refusing to obey orders.

"We will let them out," Maloney continued, "when they show us they are ready to go to work and obey orders."

The Rev. Mr. Ivory, who is president of the Rock Hill chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said that visitors were permitted Sunday at the prison camp for only Joseph Charles Jones and Charles Melvin Sherrod. Jones, of Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte, N.C., and Sherrod, of Virginia Union University in Richmond, were convicted of trespassing during a sympathy demonstration for the nine Friendship College students jailed at the camp for an earlier demonstration.

The minister said that John Alexander Gaines of Rock Hill had been transferred from the prison camp to the York County jail for making some type of motion toward a prison official. He said the eight students began a fast in protest against the transfer of Gaines and in protest against what they termed overwork.

The minister said he was told that on one day, the 11 students working as one gang, loaded 36 truckloads of dirt while 27 other prisoners, working in another detail, loaded only 21 trucks.

J. Ed Allen, supervisor of the prison camp, declined to comment on the reason for Gaines' removal.

But Allen said the eight "struck on the job. They just sat down and refused to work when we moved one (Gaines) off the job back to camp."

When they were returned to the camp, Allen continued, "they began a hunger strike."

The eight are: Robert Lewis McCullough, James Frank Wells, Clarence H. Graham, Thomas Walter Gaither, Willie Edward McCleod, David Williamson, Mack Cartier Workman and Willie Thomas Massey. All are from Friendship College at Rock Hill and they chose to serve 30 days in prison rather than post $100 appeal bond each on their conviction of trespassing at a white lunch counter. They are due to be released March 2.

Jones, Sherrod and the two coeds in jail—Diane Judith Nash of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., and Ruby Doris Smith of Spelman College, Atlanta, Ga.—are due to be released March 8.

Meanwhile, a white man and a Negro newspaper reporter from Washington chose to stay in jail at Rock Hill Sunday awaiting their trial for breach of the peace during a sympathy demonstration Saturday.

8 in Sit-ins Put In Solitary

The Atlanta Constitution

ROCK HILL, S. C. (AP)—Eight of 11 Negro students jailed at York County Prison Camp after recent antisegregation demonstrations are in solitary confinement.

This was confirmed Sunday by prison camp Superintendent Charles C. Maloney, who said the eight were placed on bread and water in solitary confinement Friday for sitting down and refusing to obey orders.

Mon. 2-20-61

"We will let them out when they show us they are ready to go to work and obey orders," Maloney said.

Says Sit-Ins Given Solitary For Singing

Atlanta Daily World

By United Press International

A national Negro leader wired Kennedy Monday that eight Negro inmates of a South Carolina prison camp were thrown into solitary confinement for "singing hymns." The charge was sharply denied by prison officials.

"We put them in solitary when they threw down their shovels and quit work Friday," said J. Ed Allen, superintendent of the York County prison camp at Rock Hill, S. C.

James Farmer of New York, national director of Congress of Racial Equality CORE, told Kennedy in his telegram the Negroes were penalized for singing hymns during morning devotions, "this interference with the personal and religious freedom of these young Americans piles one illegality on another," he said.

Allen said the group received solitary confinement originally "for their interference with the rights of others.

"During the night of Feb. 14 and the following morning they started caterwauling and set up such a disturbance that other prisoners couldn't sleep," he said.

Allen said the Negroes, serving 30-day terms for staging sit-in demonstrations at segregated lunch counters, had drawn solitary confinement since Friday for refusing to join prison work gangs.

Arrests Made In Sit-Ins

The News & Courier Charleston, S.C.

3 Are Held In Rock Hill; Columbia Hit

Fri. 2-24-61

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three arrests in Rock Hill marked anti-segregation sit-in demonstrations in South Carolina Thursday.

A handful of Negro college students staged sit-ins at white lunch counters in downtown Columbia.

At Rock Hill, the three arrested declined to post $100 bonds each on cahrges on breach of the peace. They were arrested in front of a drug store.

They were the Rev. C. A. Ivory Negro minister and head of the Rock Hill Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Paul Dietrich, 29, a white man from Washington, active in integration work there, and George A. Beckley, 26, a Negro, of Rockville, Md.

Thirteen young Negroes, most of them college students, already are serving time at Rock Hill in previous demonstrations.

The Columbia sit-ins marked the third day in a row of such demonstrations at the state capital. There were five arrests of students in Columbia Wednesday on trespass charges, and seven Tuesday. All are free on bond.

A march of Morris College students at Sumter Tuesday marked a heavy demonstration there. Sixty-five arrests were made. Bonds of $100 were posted.

Eight Demonstrators Enjoy Meal In Jail

The News & Courier

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Eight Negro demonstrators in a disciplinary cell at the York County Prison Camp accepted and ate second helpings Monday of the full meal given every third day to prisoners on bread and water.

Prison Superintendent Charles C. Maloney disclosed that it was the second tour of disciplinary confinement for the eight, the first for a "sing-in" refusal to work and the second for a sit-down refusal.

It was learned that some of the Negroes previously identified as students after their arrests for sit-in demonstrations hardly qualified as students. At least two are employes of oragnizations seeking racial goals.

All told, 11 young Negro men chose confinment, "Jail - No Bail," at the prison camp rather than post appeals bonds of $100 on their convictions of trespassing at white lunch counters in downtown Rock Hill. Of the 11, one has been transferred to the York County Jail, two were on the camp sick list and eight are in the disciplinary cell.

In addition, two Negro coeds, also convicted of trespassing, are confined in the York County Prison.

Prison authorities said that the eight showed no indication Monday of giving up their sit-down protest against what they termed overwork and the transfer of one of their companions, John Alexander Gaines, to the jail.

They will be released, Maloney has said, "when they show us they are ready to go to work and obey orders."

York County Supervisor J. Ed Allen said the eight consumed second helpings of the meal offered them Monday: cabbage, peas, beans, bread and meat. Bread-and-water prisoners get a full meal every third day and this was the third day of their disciplinary confinement. The eight are in one cell, rather than in solitary cells.

Meanwhile, three men arrested on breach of the peace charges after a scuffle Saturday following a "sympathy" demonstration for the jailed students withdrew the charges they had brought against each other. In Rock Hill Recorder's Court, Paul David Dietrich, 29, white, of Washington and Franklyn Hunt, 21, Negro reporter for the Baltimore Afro-American, of Washington, dropped their charges against George Morgan, 22, of Rock Hill. Morgan, a white spectator at the demonstration, in turn, dropped the charges he had filed against Dietrich and Hunt.

The Congress on Racial Equality (CORE), in New York, telegraphed President Kennedy protesting the disciplinary action against the Negroes in the prison camp and identifying one of them as a full-time field secretary for CORE.

2 Area Men, Pastor Held In Race Case

The Washington Post

ROCK HILL, S. C., Feb. 23 (AP)—A Negro minister and two other persons were arrested here today and charged with breach of the peace during an anti-segregation demonstration.

They were identified as Rev. C. A. Ivory, a local Presbyterian minister; Paul Dietrich, 29, of 2928 Porter st., Washington, and George A. Hackley, 26, of Rockville, Md.

The three were demonstrating in front of a drug store when they were arrested. They were jailed in lieu of $100 bond each. This makes a total of 16 persons, including two girls, imprisoned after demonstrations here this month.

Demonstrating Negroes Stage Anti-Segregation March In Rain at Greenville, S. C.

Refuse To Obey Orders

Convicted Students In Solitary Confinement at Rock Hill, S. C.

By JOHN H. McCRAY

ROCK HILL, S. C.—An estimated 1,500 persons met and marched in protest of the imprisonment of 13 Negro students in York County.

Later, some 300 others marched against arrests of three students and two white newsman in Sumter. Another 200 made sit-ins of Columbia, Thursday.

About 1,000 of those in Rock Hill met in Mt. Olivet AME Zion Church, and heard Atty. F. A. Finney Jr., charge that officers had arrested ten male students "within 18 seconds" after they entered McCrorey's Variety Store and put nine of them on the chain-gang.

It was the first anniversary of Rock Hill sit-ins. Some 500 others formed a motorcade to the county's stockade for brief visits in groups of ten with the jailed students. Some 100 state and county officers were on hand for the occasion.

■

SOME 50 students using a bus from Nashville, Tenn., made sit-ins in the Rock Hill bus terminal. None were arrested. They made the test while preparing to leave Rock Hill, which they'd visited for the nation-wide rally.

At Sumter, police arrested three Morris College students as they attempted sit-ins on Main St.

Two Charlotte, N. C. white men, one George Carras, 36, a WSOC-TV news cameraman, the other, a chartered pilot hired to fly him to Sumter, Boyce Stradley, 46, were also jailed. All five were charged with disorderly conduct and held under $100 bond for magistrate's court.

The students were: Herman K. Harris, Lancaster, S. C.; Ivor G. Moore, Bronx, N. Y., and Eddie Drummond, Greenville, S. C.

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP)—A Negro minister disclosed Sunday that eight of the 11 Negro students jailed at York County Prison Camp after being convicted of charges stemming from anti-segregation demonstrations are in solitary confinement.

A ninth student, said the Rev. C. A. Ivory, has been transferred to the York County Jail, where two Negro coeds are imprisoned, also for anti-segregation offenses.

Charles C. Maloney, superintendent of the prison camp, said the eight were placed on bread and water in solitary confinement Friday for sitting down and refusing to obey orders.

"We will let them out," Maloney continued, "when they show us they are ready to go to work and obey orders."

The Rev. Mr. Ivory, who is president of the Rock Hill chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said that visitors were permitted Sunday at the prison camp for only Joseph Charles Jones and Charles Melvin Sherrod. Jones, of Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte, N.C., and Sherrod, of Virginia Union University in Richmond, were convicted of trespassing during a sympathy demonstration for the nine Friendship College students jailed at the camp for an earlier demonstration.

The minister said that John Alexander Gaines of Rock Hill had been transferred from the prison camp to the York County jail for making some type of motion toward a prison official. He said the eight students began a fast in protest against the transfer of Gaines and in protest against what they termed overwork.

The minister said he was told that on one day, the 11 students working as one gang, loaded 36 truckloads of dirt while 27 other prisoners, working in another detail, loaded only 21 trucks.

J. Ed Allen, supervisor of the prison camp, declined to comment on the reason for Gaines' removal.

Refused To Work.

But Allen said the eight "struck on the job. They just sat down and refused to work when we moved one (Gaines) off the job back to camp."

When they were returned to the camp, Allen continued, "they began a hunger strike."

The eight are Charles Taylor of Rahway, N.J., and these Rock Hill area students: Robert Lewis McCullough, James Frank Wells, Clarence H. Graham, Thomas Walter Gaither, Willie Edward McCleod, David Williamson, Mack Cartier Workman and Willie Thomas Massey. All are from Friendship College at Rock Hill and they chose to serve 30 days in prison rather than post $100 appeal bond each on their conviction of trespassing at a white lunch counter. They are due to be released March 2.

Jones, Sherrod and the two coeds in jail—Diane Judith Nash of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., and Ruby Doris Smith of Spelman College, Atlanta, Ga.—are due to be released March 8.

Meanwhile, a white man and a Negro newspaper reporter from Washington chose to stay in jail at Rock Hill Sunday awaiting their trial for breach of the peace during a sympathy demonstraton Saturday.

Paul David Dietrich, 29, the white man, and Franklyn Hunt, 21, Negro reporter for the Baltimore Afro-American, chose the "Jail-No Bail" policy of other demonstrators for racial equality in the South. They did not post the $100 bond set for each.

A white sectator, also charged with breach of the peace after a brief fist fight Saturday, George Morgan, 22, of Rock Hill, was free under $100 bond.

2,000 March In Protest Of Jailings

4 more college stud

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

30 days in Rock Hil

By SAMUEL HOSKINS

ROCK HILL, S.C. — Four college students, including two coeds, from as many states on Tuesday were sentenced to prison terms after being arrested here Monday when they sought service at a drug store lunch counter.

Convicted on charges of trespassing, the students refused to post bail pending appeal of the conviction and were sent to county prisons where they began serving 30-day terms.

The students are Misses Diane J. Nash, Fisk University; and Ruby D. Jones, Spelman College; Joseph C. Jones, Johnson C. Smith University, and Melvin M. Sherrod, Virginia Union University.

The Rev. Mr. Sherrod is a theological student from Richmond, Virginia, and one of the two students who led the eventally successful demonstrations in Richmond last Spring.

* * *

THEY WERE adjudged guilty of violating the state trespassing law following a two - hour hearing before Judge Billy Hayes.

Defense Counsel was Ernest A. Finney of Sumter, S.C., who argued the constitutional rights of the students are being violated when public police power is used to enforce private discrimination.

In convicting the students, Judge Hayes upheld the contention of City Attorney C. W. F. Spencer, who prosecuted the case, that the four were guilty of trespassing when they refused to leave the lunch counter when asked to do so by the owner, Dr. Faye Good.

* * *

DR. GOOD was one of the three witnesses who testified. The other were Miss Nash, a student leader in the sitdown movement, and the arresting officer.

The store owner admitted on cross - examination that he asked the four to leave the lunch counter because colored are not served in the store's eating facilities.

Among spectators at the trial were Mrs. Ella Baker of Atlanta, an adviser of the Students Non - Violent Coordinating Committee; Miss Connie Curry, Philadelphia, representing the students' group; James T. McCain, Sumter, CORE field secretary; and the Rev. C. A. Ivory, president of the Rock Hill NAACP.

* * *

FOLLOWING THE trial, Mrs. Baker said the decision to come to Rock Hill was made by the students at a regional meeting held last week in Atlanta.

"This is their way of supporting the 10 Friendship College students arrested last week at the local McCrory five and dime store."

Mrs. Baker also stated that other students may make similar decisions. If this should occur, she declared, Rock Hill may become the focal point of a southwide student protest against segregated lunch counters.

* * *

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, the two male students were transferred to the York County Prison Camp and the two girls to the County Prison for Women here in the city.

Expressing the sentiment of a large segment of the local population, the Rev. R. G. Toatley, Sunday School Missionary for Fairfield-McClelland Presbyteria, termed the conviction and sentencing "another miscarriage of justice."

36 Negroes Are Convicted In March On State House

The News and Courier
Charleston, S.C.

COLUMBIA (AP) — Thirty-six Negroes, including a minister and a 24-year-old student who was knifed by a white man, were convicted here Thursday on breach of the peace charges.

The trials of all including the injured student, Lennie Glover of Adah, Pa., stemmed from an anti-segregation march on the State House March 2. Glover attends Benedict College here.

He is still in Good Samaritan-Waverly Hospital, recovering from surgical removal of his spleen, necessitated by the knifing. His assailant has not been captured. The knifing occurred several days after the big demonstration while Glover and another student were attempting to obtain service at an all-white lunch counter at Woolworth's.

The minister convicted along with Glover was the Rev. Benjamin Glover, no relation, of Charleston. Both were given fines of $100 or 30 days in jail.

Rev. Glover is president of the Charleston Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The Glovers were among 10 adults who received the maximum sentence permitted by Magistrate Frank Powell.

Eight Negroes under 17 years old received minimum sentences of five days in jail or a $10 fine.

Thirteen Negro students over 17 but under 21 received the $100 or 30-day sentence, but Powell suspended half the fine if $50 of it is paid.

The three Negro defense attorneys immediately announced their intentions to appeal and all 36 defendants were released under $100 appeal bonds.

Powell told the eight defendants under 17:

"I have given considerable thought to young people who violate the law. The court takes notice of the fact that you are not just minors but are really just children.

"I just hope when you become a man you won't use children to fight your battles as you have been used."

He also warned them that if they should appear before him in the future their age would not be a consideration for a reduced sentence.

The magistrate then told the eight adults:

"For you I have absolutely no sympathy because each of you is a grown man. You used children to the point where they now have a police record. You've got children to fight your battle and my battle."

Powell fixed March 27 as the date for the trial of the remaining 137 persons, including one white youth, arrested in the State House demonstration. Sixteen were convicted in two previous trials.

Pickets walked outside the Richland County Courthouse as the trials were being held.

Four pickets walked quietly outside, bearing signs reading "We want justice" and "Government without justice is unconstitutional."

The prosecution put on the same witnesses it has used in previous trials — Columbia City Manager Irving G. McNayr and various law officers.

In previous trials March 7 and 13, 16 students were convicted. They gave notice of appeals. Police arrested 189 Negroes and one white youth in the big State House march.

McNayr related how the students were told as they approached the State House in downtown Columbia that they could enter the grounds as "ordinary citizens," but no demonstrations would be allowed.

He said leaders of various sections of the Negro group acknowledged that the purpose of the march was to demonstrate against segregation.

The city manager said he asked the leader of the group, ministerial student David Carter of Benedict College, to urge them to disperse.

Said McNayr, "Carter used the occasion to harangue them, using a religious type chant to arouse them to fever pitch. They began shouting, became boisterous, stamped their feet and sang loudly to the point where a dangerous situation existed."

McNayr said he then told police to begin making arrests.

Some of the youths sang a hymn entitled "We Are Not Afraid" as they returned to statehouse property after being ordered off and warned reëntry would mean arrest.

Leader Exhorts Group

Their leader, David Carter of Benedict college, exhorted the students in small groups.

He asked rhetorically, "Do you want to be free?" He also called out to them, "Do you want to go to jail for your rights?"

Carter told the sthdents, "We are protesting the indignities and inhumanity of segregation."

Carter was arrested with the Rev. I. DeQuincef Newman, field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Neither marched in the demonstration or entered statehouse property after being warned off. It was not known what charge was filed against them.

Taken to Station

The arrested students were taken to the police station in cars or were marched the four blocks in groups by police.

At the jail, Carter told 116 of the arrested youths they were arrested unjustly.

Irving G. McNayr, Columbia city manager, told the youths they were arrested only after being warned that this would happen if they continued to demonstrate. He noted that this warning was issued last year and repeated prior to the arresting of each group.

Asks About Whites

Carter asked why clusters of white persons were not arrested. He said McNayr and Gov. Hollings both said any such gatherings would result in arrests.

About 150 white persons watched the demonstration. Among those arrested was one white youth who identified himself as Frederick E. Hart, an Atlanta native and freshman at the University of South Carolina. He said he lived in Washington for the last eight years and attended segregated schools inplied, "I just joined."

SEIZE NEGROES FOR MARCHING ON STATEHOUSE

Chicago Daily Tribune
Chicago, Ill.

150 Students Arrested in Columbia, S. C.

Columbia, S. C., March 2 (AP)—About 150 hymn-singing Negro college students were arrested here today during anti-segregation demonstrations around the state capitol.

About 200 Negroes met in the nearby Zion Baptist church prior to the march, then converged on the capitol in groups of about 12 each.

Harry Walker, legal aid to Gov. Ernest F. Hollings, met the first group and warned that demonstrations would not be permitted.

Asked to Keep Moving

He said they could walk around the statehouse like anybody else if they did so in small groups and kept moving.

When they continued to use the narrow walk immediately adjacent to the statehouse instead of the public sidewalk as ordered, police began to make arrests.

Walker said the charge would be illegal use of the statehouse grounds.

NAACP pledges aid in S.C. crisis

COLUMBIA, S. C.—NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins this week pledged the "full resources" of the Association to its South Carolina state conference.

Mass arrests (192), the stabbing of an NAACP student leader during a sit-in, exorbitant bonds and unusual legal charges have made it plain that this state is becoming a civil rights storm center.

Mr. Wilkins told J. Arthur Brown, state conference president and David Carter, NAACP youth leader, that "South Carolina's unwarranted arrest of peaceful demonstrators once more gives world "round documentation to painful indignities visited on its colored citizens."

CARTER WAS arrested and placed under $50,000 bond, which was later reduced to $3,000, NAACP youth leader James Edwards Jr., was placed under $5,000 bond, later reduced to $2,500.

"Not only is the amount of bond uprecedented for cases of this kind, but the local authorities have introduced a new legal theory in order to thwart demonstrations," Mr. Wilkins said.

"They have charged Carter and Edwards with contributing to the delinquency of a minor," Mr. Wilkins added.

In Washington, the director of the NAACP Washington Bureau, Clarence Mitchell, conferred with Justice Department officials on the new threat to civil liberties in South Carolina.

Columbia sitdowners defy pressure

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Despite mass arrests, alleged police brutality, court convictions and the stabbing of a student, sitdown demonstrations continue here.

The stabbing victim, Lenny Glover, pre-theology student at Benedict College, is reported improving following an emergency operation.

Stabbed March 6 by an "unknown" white assailant, Glover was treated by Dr. C. O. Spann, who said the knife wound could have been fatal.

The stabbing occurred four days after police arrest 189 students for marching on the capitol grounds.

* * *

TWO YOUNG WOMEN arrested at the time charged they were manhandled by police. One was hospitalized.

The cases of 21 students arrested on various charges resulting from the sitdown demonstrations are being appealed, defense counsel Lincoln G. Jenkins Jr. told the AFRO.

Associated with Attorney Jenkins in the cases are Donald J. Sampson of Greenville, S.C., and Matthew J. Perry, both members of the law firm of Jenkins, Sampson and Perry.

The students were tried Wednesday before Magistrate Frank Powell. Eight accused of demonstrating in violation of a state law were fined $100 or 30 days in jail.

* * *

THIRTEEN ARRESTED Feb. 22 on charges of obstructing traffic on the sidewalk were fined $100 or 30 days in jail.

The maximum fine which may be levied under the anti-sidewalk blocking ordinance is $10.

All of the convictions are being appealed.

Two students of 21 years of age also are charged with contributing to the delinquency of minors. They were said to have been the leaders in the sitdown demonstrations in which a number of minors participated.

The two accused students are James Edwards Jr. and David Carter, both students at Benedict.

BAIL FOR Edwards originally was set at $5,000, but later reduced to $2,500. Bail for Carter is $3,000.

Excepting the stabbed youth, trials for the other defendants are scheduled to be held this week, with groups of 8 to 16 being tried together.

Protest Spreading In South

Students Opposing Every Form Of Race Segregation

By United Press International

Police in Columbia, S. C. led a group of 188 chanting, hand clapping students to jail Thursday for holding an anti-segregation demonstration within sight of Gov. Ernest Hollings, office. One white youth and an NAACP official were also arrested.

Demonstrators, most of them students from South Carolina colleges, were arrested after ignoring a warning from Harry Walker, a legal aide to the governor, that state law forbids such protests on state property.

E. E. RILEY, dean of students at Benedict College, appeared with $1,550 in bond money and obtained the release from jail of 31 female students from the college.

A white youth, Frederick E. Hart of Falls Church, Va., was arrested with the colored marchers, but denied taking part in the demonstration. Hart, a freshman at the University of South Carolina, admitted he shook hands with some of the demonstrators because he was "in sympathy" with them.

The NAACP official arrested was the Rev. I. DeQuincey Newman, a field secretary.

AFTER THEIR arrest, the students were lined up three abreast and marched 10 blocks down busy Assembly street to city and county jails. The demonstrators began chanting and clapping their hands.

The law invoked Thursday was put into effect in 1958 by former Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. to halt a planned rally by evangelist Billy Graham on the State House steps.

CITY COURT hearings were set for nine youths arrested during a theater stand-in in downtown Chattanogga, Tenn. They were charged with blocking the street.

Federal Judge Frank M. Johnson held a closed session Friday in Montgomery, Ala., to hear pre-trial arguments concerning alleged discrimination against the colored voters in Bullock county, Ala.

NEGROES were served at two Nashville, Tenn., bus station lunch counters Thursday night. A spokesman charged that members of his race were refused service at the counters earlier in the day.

Florida Gov. Farris Bryant gave his approval, to a proposed $2.5 million publicity fund aimed at selling the rest of the country on segregation. Bryant said Florida would appropriate 500,000 of four other southern states match it.

MEANWHILE, sentiment in favor of mass action against all forms of segregation has been spreading throughout the South. One of the arrested youths was David Carter of Benedict College at Columbia,, S. C. He said the marching students were from Columbia, Charleston, Greenville, Spartanburg, Florence and Orangeburg, S. C.

Tallahassee, Fla., police broke up a brief sit-in demonstration by students at a white lunch counter.

At Lynchburg, Va., six jailed colored students refused again to eat while awaiting a hearing on anti trespass charges in a sit-in demonstration. They began the hunger strike Tuesday because they said they were not allowed textbooks.

AT ATLANTA, charges of violating Georgia's anti-trespass law were filed against 26 college students. They were among more than 80 arrested during sit-in demonstrations last month.

The Alabama Supreme Court at Montgomery refused to review the case of 14 Negroes sentenced to jail for an integration attempt on a Birmingham bus two years ago.

8 Students End Solitary Confinement In S.C. Prison

The Louisiana Weekly

New Orleans La.

Feb 25 1961

ROCK HILL, S. C. -- Solitary confinement with only "bread and water" was given to eight of 11 Negro students jailed at York County prison camp last Friday following their "sit down and refusal to obey orders" in the camp last week.

BULLETIN

Tuesday the students abandoned the bread and water diet and returned to their work assignments.

Supt. Charles C. Maloney confirmed the report that the eight students were put in solitary after last week's demonstration in the prison camp.

Maloney delcared "We will let them out when they show us they are ready to go to work and obey orders."

The eight students placed in solitary confinement included: Charles Taylor of Rahway, N. J., and Rock Hill area students: Robert Lewis McCullough, James Frank Wells, Clarence H. Graham, Thomas Walter Gaither, Willie Edward McCleod, David Williamson, Mack Cartier Workman and Willie Thomas Massey.

The eight in solitary confinement, along with Joseph Charles Jones, Melvin Sherrod and John Alexander Gaines chose to serve 30 days in prison rather than post $100 appeal bonds each on their conviction of trespassing at a white lunch counter. They are due to be released March 2.

The eight students were placed in solitary confinement following their protest against the transfer of Gaines and in protest against what they termed "overwork."

According to Rev. C. A. Ivory, president of the Rock Hill chapter of the NAACP, who said "has been in jail several times in jail several times herself" brought greetings from the Negroes still behind bars. Miss Sullivan said the students are being well treated, and "are getting fat and look healthy." She added, "They are determined to stay in jail if necessary to win equal rights at lunch counters and restaurants.

Johnson, pastor of Mount Calvary Baptist Church said "even Georgia's most notorious race baiter, Roy Harris, paid tribute to the jailed sit-in demonstrators when he said "these students have guts."

visited Sherrod and Jones on Sunday, he was told that on one day the 11 students working as one gang, loaded 36 truckloads of dirt while 27 other priseners working in another detail, loaded only 21 trucks.

J. Ed. Allen, supervisor of the prison camp pointed out that the eight "struck on the job. They just sat down and refused to work when we moved one Gaines - off the job back to camp."

According to Allen, when they returned to camp, "they began a hunger strike."

In the meantime, hundreds of Negroes in Atlanta, warned not to gather around the county jail, staged a foot-stomping church prayer meeting instead last Sunday in sympathy for the jailed sit-in demonstrators.

Speaking before the church gathering, Rev. William Holmes Borders called the state anti-trespass law under which 80 Negro students were arrested recently, "unconstitutional, undemocratic and unchristian."

Another speaker, the Rev. B. Joseph Johnson, who was released on bail after the series of sit-ins last week and the week before, declared "The current philosophy of the Southern white man is to keep the Negro down."

Borders later stated "After the Negro grows the food in the field, harvests it, prepares it and serves it, some white folk want to sit down and eat it all by themselves."

I'd be ashamed to look that white and act that black, he added.

During the meeting, it was revealed that 78 students are still in jail, refusing to post bond. According to Herschelle Sullivan, Spellman College student, who Borders, pastor of the Wheat Street Baptist Church

CORE WAS THERE — James T. McCain, field secretary of the Congress of Racial Equality, talks with Thomas Gaither, former Friendship College student, during prison visiting hours. Gaither also is a CORE field worker in South Carolina.

The Louisiana Weekly

New Orleans La.

Feb 25 1961

8 Jailed Sit-in Students Are Placed in Solitary

By the Associated Press

Eight Negro students jailed in a Rock Hill, S. C., sit-in demonstration have been placed on bread and water in solitary confinement for what prison officials called a sit-down and refusal to work.

Charles C. Maloney, superintendent of the York County prison camp near Rock Hill, said, "We will let them out when they show us they are ready to go to work and obey orders."

Mr. Maloney confirmed yesterday the students from Friendshop College at Rock Hill had been in solitary since Friday. They were among 11 jailed recently when they refused to post $100 bail each pending appeal on conviction of trespass during a variety store sit-in.

Sent to County Jail

The Rev. C. A. Ivory, president of the York County Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said one student was transferred to the York County Jail for making a motion toward a prison official. The others began a fast and also protested what they called overwork.

J. Ed. Allen, supervisor of the prison camp, said the eight "struck on the job. They just sat down and refused to work when we moved one off the job back to camp." He declined comment on the reason for the removal.

Washingtonians Named

A white man and a Negro, both from Washington, D. C., remained in jail over the weekend at Rock Hill after arrest on breach of the peace charges during a brief scuffle at a Saturday demonstration. Both chose the "jail, no bail" of other demonstrators for racial equality in the South.

The two from Washingtoon are Paul David Dietrich, 29, white, and Franklin Hunt, 21, Negro reporter for the Baltimore Afro-American.

Mr. Ivory said Mr. Dietrich and Mr. Hunt were members of the Washington chapter of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee. He said they were accompanied to Rock Hill by two other members, one a Negro man and one a white woman, Joan Trumpower.

At Greenville, S. C., 11 young Negroes, four of them women, faced trial for assembling in a city park Saturday without a permit in an unsuccessful attempt to get into a skating rink for white persons.

In another development at Greenville, Southeastern regional NAACP leaders completed a four-day meeting by calling on Negroes to stop buying from those who don't give them equal job opportunities.

In addition, Clarence Mitchell, Washington director, told the closing session the NAACP is considering whether to establish a $10 million fund through private and group contributions to meet the economic challenges of discrimination.

In Atlanta, hundreds of adult Negroes staged a rally in the Wheat Street Baptist Church in support of about 78 students arrested in sit-in demonstrations. The students are remaining in jail rather than post bond.

The meeting originally was scheduled to be held around the county jail, but was shifted to the church when city officials said it might upset prisoners.

In South Carolina Jail

Chicago Girl Feels Freedom as 'Sit-In'

By TED WATSON
(Chicago Courier Editor)

CHICAGO—Arrested within a minute and a half after arriving on the scene of the Good Drug store in downtown York, S. C., to participate in a "sit-in" gesture, pretty Diane Judith Nash, a student of Fisk University, has concluded that she has been "denied the dignity of being a person."

This revelation was evidenced as she and her friends from Charlotte, N. C., pondered over their fate in the Rock Hill City jail after being charged with "trespassing."

Miss Nash, who keeps in constant contact with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Baker of Chicago, expounded upon what would be termed by many as a harrowing experience in the land of "freedom", in a letter to her parents.

On Sunday, Feb. 5, Miss Nash was present at a meeting of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee where she learned of 10 students being arrested in Rock Hill, S. C., in a "sit-in" demonstration.

BURDENED with the feeling that these students should not sacrifice alone while fighting for the rights of the race as a whole, she asked herself, "I wonder when this society will mature to the point of ceasing to treat students petitioning for the same things everyone else has, as criminals."

She opined that if a race member can absorb the humiliation and all allied problems of bias, and deal with it, yet emerge with a real love for white and Negro and a concern for everyone's best interest, the coveted answer to the complex equation will be achieved.

AMAZING is the fact that Miss Nash says: "I'm very content and I feel freer than you can imagine," despite having been sentenced to 30 days in prison or a $100 fine with an attached appeal of $200, as were the others.

In a lighter vein, Miss Nash comments on the "excellent" menu served at the prison where she has been confined with Ruby Smith from Spellman College and five other women.

DIANE NASH
. . . contented

She said: "For dinner last night and every night we have buttermilk and cornbread. Not terribly appetizing but clean and edible. For breakfast we had black coffee, a piece of salty meat and thick syrup. Lunch was good. Corn niblets, string beans and biscuits."

300 Negroes Demonstrate In Sumter; 5 Are Arrested

The News and Courier
Charleston S.C.

SUMTER, S.C. (AP) — Negro demonstrators and police scuffled on Sumter's main street Wednesday before a parade of 300 anti-segregationists was disbanded.

The Negro students stormed on the Morris College campus about six blocks from the heart of Sumter's business district and then began their march to town using sidewalks on both sides of the street.

Police Chief E. E. McIntosh advised the students over a loud speaker to disband and return to their campus. Several of the students in the vanguard ignored the advice and police moved forward to arrest them.

Robert Berryhill, reporter for the Sumter Item, said he saw no blows struck, but that police were forced to wrestle the five, including a female teacher from the college, into waiting patrol cars.

The demonstration heightened tension in this city of 20,000 which had its second serious demonstration within two days. Three Morris College students were arrested during sit-in demonstrations Tuesday. A television cameraman who filmed the bodily ejection of two of the demonstrators from a drug store, and his charter pilot were charged with breach of the peace and will face trial Monday.

Morris College, a four-year Baptist-supported school, is located on U.S. 15, six blocks from town. The students formed for their march shortly after noon, but had moved only two blocks when Chief McIntosh advised them to return.

Several in the front ranks refused the warning, but with the arrest of those in the front, the others disbanded.

Arrested were Clifford Grady Sumner of Waycross, Ga., charged with breach of the peace; David Rayon Jr. of Marion, charged with breach of the peace; Joshua Prieleau of Russellville, charged with breach of the peace and resisting arrest; Abraham Kennedy of Sumter, charged with breach of the peace; and Alma Gregg of Washingtonville, N.Y., charged with breach of the peace and resisting arrest. Bond was set at $100 for each charge.

Officers said Sumner had been arrested previously in a lunch counter sit-in. Miss Gregg was described as a young teacher at the college.

A. F. Finney, a Sumter Negro lawyer, posted bond for Miss Gregg. Bond for the others was expected to be posted later Wednesday.

This is contrary to recent practices of Negro demonstrators who have a "jail, no bail" slogan and remain in jail by choice rather than post bond.

Trial for the three arrested Tuesday and the five arrested today was set for 2:30 p.m. Feb. 21. The two white men arrested Tuesday will be tried Feb. 20.

George Carras, camerman for station WSOC-TV in Charlotte, N. C., said his station was tipped by telephone of Tuesday's demonstration. Carras and his pilot were arrested when they photographed the demonstration.

Berryhill said there were television cameramen on hand Wednesday who apparently had been tipped to the demonstration.

Seven other Negro students, from Benedict College, were arrested in a demonstration at Columbia, S. C.

One of several white teen-agers who snatched anti-segregation signs from Negro pickets at Tallahassee, Fla., was taken into custody by a juvenile officer. He was released on indefinite probation.

At Opelika, Ala., the United States Justice Department sought to prove in a Federal court trial that Negroes were systematically kept from voting in Macon County. The county has a ratio of six Negro residents to each white person, but registered white voters outnumber Negro voters 2 to 1.

Minister Arrested

In Atlanta, a Negro minister was arrested for refusing to leave a railroad station restaurant for white persons. At Nashville, Tenn., twenty-seven college students—including one white girl—won dismissal on a technicality after their arrest for a theatre demonstration.

In the Sumter demonstrations, Negro leaders charged that a Negro girl had been knocked down by a policeman and injured. But a doctor who examined her said he had found no evidence of any injury. The girl was identified as Mae Frances Moultrie, 24 years of, of Atlanta.

Forty young Negroes took part in three lunch-counter sit-ins during the demonstration in Columbia. A student leader said anti-segregation protests there would continue indefinitely.

At Rock Hill, S. C., eight Negroes jailed in earlier demonstrations were taken off their bread-and-water diet in solitary confinement after they agreed to return to work in the York County prison camp.

At Lynchburg, Va., four Negroes were arrested and charged with trespassing after a sit-in demonstration at a drug store lunch counter. Among the four was the Rev. Virgil Wood, 29, pastor of a Baptist church.

The pickets in the Tallahassee incident were identified as students from Florida A. and M. University for Negroes. The white youths took away their signs, bearing such slogans as "Don't Shop Here," and ripped them apart.

DOZENS ARRESTED IN NEGRO PROTEST

The N.Y. Times

Sumter, S. C., Police Seize Student Marchers—Other Sit-In Efforts Balked

New York N.Y.
Feb 23 1961

SUMTER, S. C., Feb. 21 (AP) —Dozens of Negro students, singing hymns, were jailed today for protesting segregation in a drug store, soda shop and library in this community.

"I'm not sure how many we have," a police sergeant said after about fifty demonstrators had been arrested for breach of the peace. "They're still bringing them in."

Some of those arrested were among hundreds of students from Morris College who had tried to march on downtown Sumter.

AFTER MASS SEGREGATION PROTEST

The Montgomery Advertiser

Dozens Of Negro Students Jailed

Montgomery Ala.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dozens of Negro students, singing hymns, went to jail Tuesday for protesting segregation in a drug store, soda shop and city library in Sumter, S. C.

"I'm not sure how many we have," a police sergeant said after about 50 demonstrators had been arrested for breach of the peace. "They're still bringing them in."

Feb 22-61

Some of those arrested were among hundreds of students from Morris College who tried to march on downtown Sumter.

Seven other Negro students, from Benedict College, were arrested in a demonstration at Columbia, S. C., and one of several white teen-agers who snatched antisegregation signs from Negro pickets at Tallahassee, Fla., was taken in custody by a juvenile officer. The white boy was released on indefinite probation.

MINISTER ARRESTED

A Negro minister was arrested for refusing to leave a railroad station restaurant for white people in Atlanta and at Nashville, Tenn., 27 college students—including one white girl—won dismissal on a technicality after their arrest for a theater stand-in demonstration.

In the Sumter demonstrations, Negro leaders charged that a Negro girl was knocked down by a policeman and injured, but a doctor who examined her said he found no evidence of any injury. The girl was identified as Mae Frances Moultrie, 24, of Atlanta.

Forty young Negroes took part in three lunch counter sit-ins during the Columbia demonstration. A student leader said antisegregation protests there would continue indefinitely.

At Rock Hill, S. C., eight Negroes jailed in earlier demonstrations were taken off their bread and water diet in solitary confinement after agreeing to return to work in the York County prison camp.

At Lynchburg, Va., four Negroes were arrested and charged with trespassing after a sit-in demonstration at a drug store lunch counter. Among the four was the Rev. Virgil Wood, 29, pastor of a Baptist church.

"We are in sympathy with the student movement and want the world to know that the students are morally right," the ministers said in a prepared statement.

The jailed students passed up an opportunity to post bond, declaring that they intend to remain behind bars to dramatize their cause.

On Tuesday five Negro high school seniors completed the first step toward seeking admission to Georgia Tech, bringing to nine the number of Negroes who have announced intentions to try to register at the segregated engineering school.

Fight On Dixie Bias Continues

Chicago Defender
Chicago Ill.
Feb 25-Mar 3 1961

By United Press International

An estimated 300 Negro students attempted a mass march on downtown Sumter, S. C., to protest racial segregation Wednesday, but were turned back by police and several Negroes were arrested.

In Atlanta, eight Negro ministers were arrested for saging a sit-in demonstration and joined 76 student demonstrators aldeady behind bars.

Students from Morris college at Sumter gathered on the campus about noon and started the five-block route to the heart of the city. Police let them go about two blocks but they stopped them and arrested several.

Sumter has been the scene of numerous sit-in demonstrations in the past year, mostly by Morris students.

The eight arrested in Atlanta were taken in when they refused to leave a railroad station restaurant.

Along Racial Front

More Arrests In S. C.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fourteen persons were arrested in South Carolina Saturday as new anti-segregation demonstrations broke out in Rock Hill and Greenville. One of the demonstrations ended in a brief fist fight between pickets and spectators.

The fight occurred at Rock Hill, scene of many recent demonstrations, after police broke up a picket line of four Negro men, a white man and a white woman, four of them from Washington, D.C.

Officers arrested the white male picket and one of his Negro companions, identified as a reporter from a Baltimore Negro newspaper, and a white spectator on charges of breach of the peace.

At Greenville.

At Greenville, 11 Negro students were jailed briefly then released under $100 bond each after demonstrating at a roller skating rink in city - owned Cleveland public park. They were charged with violating a city ordinance which forbids assemblege in public parks without special permission of park officials.

The students went to jail shouting, "Freedom! Freedom!' Freedom!"

At the time of their arrest, some 300 Southern leaders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People were meeting at Greenville to plan further thrusts at the racial barrier.

Booked for breach of the peace at Rock Hill were demonstrators Paul David Dietrich, 29, white, Washington and Franklyn Hunt, 21, Negro, also of Washington, on charges filed by George Morgan, 22, of Rock Hill. Dietrich and Hunt also charged Morgan with breach of the peace. They were placed under bond of $100 each.

Police Chief W. S. Rhodes identified Hunt as a reporter for the Baltimore Afro-American.

The demonstrators marched in front of the Good and Tollison-Neal drug stores, sites of earlier anti-segregation protests.

Deitrich carried a sign which said, "Not food, but freedom."

The white woman, who identified herself as Joan Timpower of Washington, an employe of the Department of Agriculture, bore a sign referring to the jailing of Negro demonstrators at Rock Hill 10 days ago.

300 Negroes March; 5 Seized in Scuffle

SUMTER, S. C., Feb. 15 (AP) — About 300 Negro college students marched on downtown Sumter in an antisegregation demonstration today. Five of them scuffled with police, who turned back the marchers.

The five students from Morris College here were arrested and charged with breach of the peace. Reporters said the scuffling was restricted to pushing.

Arrested were Clifford G. Sumner, 21, of Waycross, Ga.; David Rayon Jr., 20, Marion; Joshua Prieleau, 21, Russellville; Alma Gregg, 26, Washingtonville, N. Y., and Abraham Kennedy, 29, of Sumter.

The 300 students marched for two blocks before being met by police, who advised them over a public address system to disband. The five leading the column continued marching and were arrested. The others disbanded and returned to the college campus.

The demonstration came on the heels of the arrest yesterday of three Negroes who were participating in lunch-counter sit-ins.

'Turkish' Children Gain Entry to White Schools

SUMTER, S. C., Feb. 15 (AP) —The Sumter County School Board announced today that segregated "Turkish" children will be admitted to white schools in the fall of 1961.

Superintendent Hugh Stoddard said the Board acted Jan. 31 on requests by Turkish parents for transfers of their children to white schools. He said the Board voted to transfer all 36 of the children and notification was sent out quietly Tuesday.

The Turks apparently are descendents of Turkish sailors who came to South Carolina during the 1700s. Most of them are olive skinned and have dark hair. The children attended the Dalzell Elementary School, for Turkish children only, but were enrolled in white schools upon reaching junior high school.

Demonstrating Negroes Jailed At Atlanta, Sumter

Sumter, S.C., Feb. 15 (AP) — An estimated 300 Negro students attempted a mass march on downtown Sumter to protest racial segregation today but were turned back by police. Several Negroes were arrested.

In Atlanta, eight Negro ministers were arrested for staging a sit-in demonstration. They joined 76 student demonstrators already behind bars.

Negro students from Morris College at Sumter gathered on the campus about noon and started the five-block route to the heart of the city. Police stopped them after two blocks.

Sumter has been the scene of numerous sit - in demonstrations in the past year, mostly by Morris students.

The eight ministers were arrested for sitdown demonstrations at downtown stores.

S.C. exonerates three

SUMTER, S. C. — The conviction of 19 college students who were arrested for going to the public library are being appealed, defense counsel Ernest A. Finney has announced.

Tried before Recorder Ramon Schwartz, the students, all enrolled at Morris College, were sentenced to 30 days in jail or fines of $100 each.

For the first time in the states history, however, three sitdowners were exonerated of trespassing charges.

They were Misses Clara Prilou and Eva McGill and John Singleterry.

The 19 convicted were among the 23 arrested at the library Feb. 21. Charges against three were dropped and the case of another continued.

CHARGES AGAINST the students were filed by C. J. Milling, library director.

Milling admitted under cross - examination that the library is supported by tax funds, that library rules are not posted and colored were not notified the library is segregated.

On the same day the students were arrested in the library, 44 others were arrested for sitdown demonstrations at downtown stores.

38a 1961

SOUTH CAROLINA

REV. C.A. IVORY
ROCK HILL, S.C. - LUNCH COUNTER

Crippled minister gets police warning

The Afro-American
Baltimore Md

By
STAFF CORRESPONDENT

ROCK HILL, S.C. — A minister who has been told by the best medical authorities in the country that he will never walk again was threatened, last Saturday, with arrest for his role in sitdown activities here.

The Rev. C. A. Ivory, pastor of Herman Presbyterian Church and president of the local branch of the NAACP, was told by Police W. S. Rhodes that if violence occurs in connection with the demonstrations he would be arrested.

The minister told the AFRO that his reply to the police chief was "I don't think you will do that. If violence occurs we will not be responsible for it."

The Rev. Mr. Ivory picketed from his wheelchair, Thursday, when he and three other ministers joined students in midtown demonstrations.

The other ministers were the Revs. J. C. Tate, Iday Watson, W. R. Jones and R. G. Coatley.

The demonstrations have occurred daily since the arrest of 10 Friendship College students on Jan 31.

* * *

FOLLOWING the arrest of four out-of-town students for sitdown demonstrations on Feb. 6, the police chief stated he intended to uphold the trespass law.

"We will enforce the law we have as we have," he declared.

Four Friendship College students reported that they were threatened by a man with a gun inside the Good drug store. This store was where the four out-of-town students were refused service at the lunch counter because of their race and color.

"I can refuse to serve anyone I want to. I own and operate the business," he told the court.

A group of four students, last week, attempted to be served at the lunch counter in Tollison-Neal drug store.

They were ordered out, but not arrested.

* * *

A NEW DEVELOPMENT to the protest movement occurred on Friday when 19 Friendship students went to state support Winthrope College in an effort to obtain enrollment applications.

Headed by Miss Allidease James, the students were met at the gate, which had been chained shut. They were told by police officers that they would not be permitted to enter because "This is private property."

The Rev. Ivory, who also was present in his wheelchair, was denied admittance. He protested that the school is a public institution since it is supported by state funds.

10 Students Arrested In S. C. Sit-In

The News
Raleigh, N.C.
Sat 2-4-61
Page 1

ROCK HILL, S. C. (AP)—Ten Negro college students ignored the warning of South Carolina's chief law enforcement officer Tuesday and carried their anti-segregation demonstration to a white lunch counter. The 10, arrested for trespass, entered jail singing hymns and patriotic songs.

The arrests climaxed a series of almost daily demonstrations by Friendship College students here for several weeks.

Chief J. P. Strom of the State Law Enforcement Division met the 15 or 20 demonstrators as they arrived on Main Street from the campus. He told them of the provisions of the law against trespass.

The students, 13 of them carrying signs against segregated lunch counter service, continued to McCrory's and Woolworth's variety stores. The Woolworth's lunch counter has been closed for several weeks because of the demonstrations, McCrory's has remained open to white customers and some of the demonstrators took seats there.

McCrory's Manager H. C. Whiteaker, in the presence of officers, asked the students to leave. When they did not, SLED agents assisted city police in arresting the 10 Negro males.

At police headquarters, nine of the 10 were first booked for investigation — a technical procedure that enables police to hold suspects for a time without formal charge. Later, the 10 were charged with trespass and placed under $100 bond apiece.

They were still in jail three hours after the arrests.

Five Negro coeds did not take seats and were not arrested.

There was no immediate indication of why Chief Strom and a group of his agents were present for the demonstration. SLED, however, does not generally enter into the affairs of a city's police work unless invited.

Police identified the defendants as Charles Edward Taylor, Rahway, N. J.; James Frank Wells, who gave his address only as Friendship College; and these students from Rock Hill; Clarence Hener Graham, Thomas Walter Gaither, Willie Edward McCelon, David Wilkinson, Robert Lewis McCullough, Mack Cartier Workman, Willie Thomas Massey and John Alexander Gaines.

10 Negroes Sent To Prison Farm

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Fri 2-3-61
Page 13

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP)—Ten Negro college students convicted in connection with a lunch counter sit-in were sent to a prison farm Thursday when they failed to post their appeal bonds.

The Friendship Junior College students were convicted Tuesday of trespassing at McCrory's lunch counter. They were sentenced to 30 days in jail or $100 fines each.

The students appealed, but when they failed to post an appeal bond of $200 each they were sent to the York County Prison Farm.

The 10 were among a group that marched into Rock Hill Tuesday. They were stopped by J. P. Strom, head of the State Law Enforcement Division, who advised them not to attempt a sit-in.

The group continued to the variety store and were arrested when they failed to heed the manager's warning to leave.

The store, which had been the scene of almost daily demonstrations for several weeks, closed its lunch counter Thursday. Woolworth's, which is next door, closed its lunch counter several days ago.

Negroes March In Chapel Hill

The Raleigh Observer
Raleigh, N.C.
Mon 2-13-61
Page 3

CHAPEL HILL—A procession of 60 Negroes marched from the First Baptist Church here Sunday down Franklin Street and converged on the Town Hall singing hymns.

A brief prayer meeting asking for an end to segregation in movie houses and other public places was held in front of the Town Hall.

The march was undertaken in observance of Brotherhood Sunday and in support of picketing conducted during the past week at the two downtown theatres here.

Police escorted the group down one side of Franklin Street and up the other, stopping traffic to aid the march. There were no incidents and only a few spectators watched.

Dixie Negroes Stage Rally in Rock Hill

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Mon 2-13-61
Page 1, 12

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP)—Negroes from across the South gathered here on the anniversary of Lincoln's birth and staged protests against segregation Sunday.

They conducted kneel-ins at three white churches and were turned away from two others, they proceeded by motorcade to the York County Prison near York to hearten Negro students imprisoned for law violations during anti-segregation activity, and they held a mass rally.

The activity was an effort to focus attention on segregation. Rock Hill was chosen, apparently, because 13 Negro students are serving jail sentences, by choice, rather than post appeal bonds for trespassing at white lunch counters.

State and county officials took some of the steam out of the demonstration by meeting the Negroes as they arrived at the prison camp and also at the county jail, laying down a set of ground rules and declaring in a prepared statement:

"The security of the county jail and county prison will be maintained."

Authorities permitted only a few of the group to visit the 11 male students imprisoned at the camp and the two co-eds in the county jail.

Earlier, Negroes had been admitted to the worship services at three white churches—First Presbyterian, Grace Lutheran and Oakland Avenue Presbyterian — in Rock Hill, but were turned away from two others, the West Main Baptist and the Church of the Nazarene.

1,000 AT RALLY

Following the prison motorcade, about 1,000 Negroes gathered for a 2½-hour mass rally in Rock Hill at the new Mt. Olivet AME Zion Church. Ernest A. Finney Jr., a Negr attorney from Sumter, who represented the jailed students, told the rally:

"The Negro can fully realize his true self only when he becomes fully integrated into America's economic, social, intellectual and political life."

The rally was read a letter from the two imprisoned co-eds, Diane Judith Nash of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., and Ruby Doris Smith of Spelman College, Atlanta.

GROUP FROM ATLANTA

"We don't feel confined," the girls wrote. "We fell more free here than when we're depressed by discrimination."

Among the Negroes participating in the day's activities were delegations from Atlanta, Nashville and Charlotte and from several South Carolina locations, including Orangeburg and Sumter.

The Negroes began to disperse for the return home after the mass meeting.

Rock Hill 9 visited by caravan

The Afro-Am.
Baltimore, Md
Sat 2-11-61
Page 1

By SAMUEL HOSKINS
AFRO Staff Correspondent

ROCK HILL, S.C. — Adding a new twist to the student sitdown movement, a sitdown caravan journeyed to the York County prison camp on Sunday afternoon carrying visitors to give moral support to the Rock Hill nine.

The Rock Hill nine are the nine Friendship College students who are serving 30-day terms resulting from conviction last week on trespassing charges growing out of a sitdown demonstration in the local McCrory five and dime store.

The caravan transported the parents and relatives of the defendants to the prison, as well as hundreds of fellow students, friends and well wishers.

* * *

THE GROUP left the college campus at 2 p.m. The demonstration was directed by the Rev. C. A. Ivory, president of the Rock Hill NAACP and a group of ministerial and civic leaders.

All of the parents, including two ministers, expressed approval of the sitdown demonstration.

The lone relative who disapproved of the action is the 95-year-old grandmother of one of the jailed youngsters.

The mother of one of the youngsters, Mrs. Clarence H. Graham, 416 Bynum Ave., revealed a touching letter her son wrote prior to his arrest.

THE LETTER follows:

"Dear Mom and Dad:—

"By the time you read this, I suppose you both will be upset and probably angry, but I hope not. I couldn't tell you this morning I wanted to, but just didn't know how.

"I want you to know that this is something that I really and truly want to do. I just have to. I want you both to be proud of me, not angry. Try to understand that what I'm doing is right. It's not like going to jail for a crime like stealing, killing, etc. but we're going for the betterment of all colored people.

"You must realize it's time. I made some decisions for myself now. After all, I'm almost grown and I do want you both to try and understand this is something that I've thought about ver seriously.

"Really, I just couldn't be at ease with the rest of my friends and classmates up there and my knowing I should be there too. So try to see things my way and give us, the younger generation, a chance to prove ourselves, please. And most of all, don't worry. Pray for us."

The letter was signed "Your son, Clarence."

Whites Leave; Negroes March On Rock Hill

The Atlanta Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Sun 2-12-61
Page 13

ROCK HILL, S.C., Feb. 11 (UPI)—Hundreds of angry whites crowded into downtown Rock Hill Saturday to head off an anticipated march on the town by Negroes protesting segregation, but the Negroes delayed their demonstration until police had dispersed the crowd.

Only about 35 Negro students showed up. They paraded with signs in front of two five-and-dime stores and a drugstore with segregated lunch counters.

Police marched virtually side by side with the picketers and kept everyone moving along the sidewalks.

The whites, many of them teenagers, began streaming into town early and by noon were packed shoulder to shoulder along a three-block area that comprises the downtown area of this textile center of 30,000 persons.

A number of whites paraded down main street, waving Confederate flags, and there was a brief fist fight between a Negro and a bearded white youth who claimed the Negro had pushed him.

* * *

THE CROWD, estimated at between 2,000 and 2,500, reached its peak about noon.

City, state and sheriff's patrol cars drifted slowly through the area, and police began breaking up all demonstrations and refused to let anyone stand still on the sidewalks.

The crowd quickly thinned out thereafter and by the time the Negro demonstrators arrived there was only the normal flow of Saturday afternoon traffic.

Anti-segregation demonstrations have been staged here daily during the past week and integration leaders have urged that Rock Hill be made the next battleground in the fight to break down racial barriers in the South.

* * *

THE CITY'S Negro leaders announced a schedule of demonstrations for Sunday, consisting of a mass pilgrimage to the York County prison farm where 11 of 14 demonstrators arrested last week are imprisoned.

The Negroes also will congregate Sunday for a mass meeting honoring the parents of the imprisoned demonstrators, the announcement said.

3 Negroes Say Police Hit Them

SUMTER, S.C. (UPI) — Three Negro students released on bond Thursday after spending the night in jail in connection with a segregation demonstration charged they were slugged by police officers.

One of the three—Clifford Sumner, 21, of Waycross, Ga. — claimed he was slugged so hard in the stomach he required medical attention.

All three said they had no bruises or other marks to show for the beatings and all said they did not know the names or the badge numbers of the officers that slugged them.

Sumner said a police officer hit him with his fist as the student was being put into a police car Wednesday. The three were among five Negroes arrested in connection with an attempted mass march through downtown Sumner by some 300 Negroes, mostly Morris College students.

Two students who claimed they were beaten by policemen are Joshua Prioleau, 21, a Morris College sophomore from Russellville, S.C., and David Rayon Jr., 22, a student from Marion, S.C.

At Rock Hill, S. C.:

Mass Segregation Protest

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — A mass protest against segregation was staged here Wednesday by 150 Negroes and a white man. The demonstration came on the heels of a call by a Negro group to make Rock Hill a focal point in its desegregation attempts.

The orderly demonstration was staged in front of two variety stores, Woolworth's and McCrory's, both of which have closed their lunch counters, and Good's Drug Store, another frequent target of demonstrations.

The white man identified himself as Edward Haan of Nashville, Tenn., a recent graduate of Vanderbilt University. He said he now is associated with an Atlanta racial movement.

Fourteen Negroes have been arrested here within a week as a result of lunch counter demonstrations. All but one refused to post bond or pay fines. Eleven men are serving time at the York County prison farm and two women are serving time in York County jail at York.

The Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) with headquarters in Atlanta has issued a call for Negro students throughout the South to come to Rock Hill, stage sit-ins, go to jail if arrested and refuse to post bond.

Of this "Jail, no bail" drive by the Negroes, Rock Hill Mayor John A. Hardin said the city will "enforce the law as advised by our attorneys and interpreted by the courts, treating everyone alike."

Chaingang terms for students hit

By SAMUEL HOSKINS
AFRO Staff Writer

ROCK HILL S.C. — "It's a sin and a shame for them to send those boys out here. They didn't have to do it."

This was how a prison-hardened trusty at York County Prison Camp reacted to the nine Friendship College students and a former student being sentenced to 30 days at the penal institution. The man had tears in his eyes.

The prisoner, a long-termer, made the statement to this AFRO reporter last Thursday noon in the presence of Dr. James Gouldlouge, college president, when we went to the institution in an effort to talk with the students.

We were not permitted to see them as visitors are allowed only on Sundays.

* * *

THE 10 WERE convicted Wednesday on charges of trespassing and fined $100 each or 30 days in prison.

Following the pattern established in other sitdown cases, the students decided to spend the time in jail rather than pay fines.

Instead of being confined to the jail in Rock Hill, they were sent to the county prison, 14 miles south of here, where they were put on work gangs.

They are Robert McCollough, Frank H. Graham, Mark C. Workman, Willie E. McCleod, David Williamson, Willie T. Massey, John Gaines, all of Rock Hill; James F. Wells, Mill Village, S.C., and Charles Taylor, Rahway, N.J. The tenth person was the former student, Thomas W. Gaither.

THE DEFENSE COUNSEL Ernest A. Finney, attorney of Sumter, S.C., contended in court that the students were arrested within 18 seconds after they had been asked by the manager to leave a McCrory five and dime store.

The lawyer also told the court that the arrests were in violation of the students' constitutional rights and that the state laws upon which the arrests were made were discriminatorily applied.

After City Recorder Billy D. Hayes, who was acting as judge, convicted the students and sentenced them, Finney filed notice of appeal. Appeal bond was placed at $200 each.

* * *

AFTER SPENDING a night in the city jail, a night at the prison camp and part of a day on a chain gang, one of the students, Taylor, asked that bond be posted for his release.

The bail money was posted by the Rev. C. A. Ivory, rector of Herman Presbyterian Church and president of the Rock Hill NAACP.

Following his release, Taylor, an honor student, told the AFRO, that he intended to continue in the demonstrations.

"Sooner or later, we're going to end racial segregation in public places," he said, adding: "But we're going to keep at it."

Taylor also said he was composing a letter, on behalf of the jailed students, to the President to help them.

Taylor said that jail and prison officials treated them polite, but that conditions within the institutions were bad.

THE CITY JAIL, he said, is without mattresses, or any type of bedding. "We slept on steel," he stated.

The youngster declared that physical conditions at the prison camp were not as bad as at the jail, but the food was horrible.

The menu for the day he was there was recalled as follows:

Breakfast, grits, eggs, coffee; Lunch, black-eyed peas, redbeans, cornbread, tea.

Taylor reported that the other students sent word that they were determined to "stick it out." He said all they asked was that fellow students visit them when permitted, that people support the sitdown movement.

Allen University Group Denies Part In Sit-Ins

COLUMBIA (AP) — Allen University's Student Committee on Human Rights declared Friday that it had not taken part in Thursday's sit-in demonstrations involving about 150 Negro college students.

Those who staged the demonstration were Benedict College students led by David Carter, a Benedict student.

Simon Bouie, president of the Student Committee on Human Rights at Allen, said Friday that some news media had incorrectly reported that Allen students were in the demonstration.

He said the Allen student group he heads "provided leadership for the first student sit-in in Columbia last year," and continues its "deep interest in the problem attacked through sit-ins."

But he added that Allen students feel such demonstrations should be "conceived, planned and led by students in the immediate community."

Bouie added that Allen students "deplore the lack of leadership our students have received thus far from Columbia Negro adults, none of whom has yet had the courage to fight this battle they urge us young people to fight."

Injured By Police

Sumter, S.C.—Mae Frances Moultrie, Morris College CORE leader, sips liquids through straw in Community Hospital in Sumter. Miss Moultrie was injured by police during CORE demonstration on February 21. She has been unable to raise her head since. The photo was smuggled out of the hospital. Core photo

Negro Youths Went to Jail as Protest

9 Sit-Ins Tell of 30 Days on a Road Gang

Nine young Negroes, who last month served thirty-day jail terms on a South Carolina road gang, agreed yesterday they gladly would go back to the gang if doing so hurried the end of the "segregation evil."

The young men deliberately chose to work on the gang rather than pay the $100 fines levied against them for sitting at a lunch counter for whites in Rock Hill, S. C.

John A. Gaines, one of the nine, said of his internment at the York County Prison Farm that he had "felt proud to be behind bars."

8 Are Students

Robert McCullough, eighteen, another member of the group, said the jail sentence had strengthened his conviction "human suffering can promote social change."

The group told of their hardships yesterday in the offices of the Congress of Racial Equality, 38 Park Row. Of the nine who accepted imprisonment, eight are students at Friendship Junior College in Rock Hill. The ninth, Thomas Gaither, is a CORE secretary.

All had been charged with trespassing at a McCrory's department store lunch counter. Mr. Gaither said the police "roughed them up" while arresting them.

Put in Solitary

Later ,in the stockade at the prison, they began singing hymns. Prison officials, Mr. Gaither said. told them to "cut out that racket." They refused and consequently were placed in solitary confinement for half a day.

James Wells, another of the students, said he and his "colleagues" were again placed in solitary confinement, this time for three days, when they laid down their shovels on the road as a protest against the days, when they laid down their shovels on the road as a protest against hte disappearance of Mr. Gaines.

Mr. Gaines had been taken to the New York County Jail. His comrades, not informed of the reasons for his removal, were concerned for his safety. They said they were not treated roughly at the prison farm, although Willie Massey, another student, described the life there as being "generally unpleasant."

Books Taken Away

Mr. Wells said the guards took books away from the boys on the ground that "this is a prison, not a school . . . you came here to be punished, not to study."

The young men got out of jail Thursday and came to New York over the week end to address congregations of various churches and to speak on several radio programs.

The lunch counters of all chain stores in Rock Hill, Mr. Gaither said, are presently closed. The counter in Woolworth's, which the group also picketed before their arrest, is now given over to the sale of artificial flowers.

38a 1961

ATTY. GEN. ROBERT KENNEDY

SOUTH CAROLINA

LUNCH COUNTER

300 Visit Chain Gang

Journal & Guide

Robert Kennedy Urged To Check SC Negroes' Plight

Norfolk Va.

Sat. 2-18-61

ROCK HILL, S. C.—(UPI)—Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy has been urged to come to South Carolina to observe the "trials and obstacles" facing the Negro population.

Approximately 600 Negroes adopted resolutions for the White House at a Mass meeting Sunday following a pilgrimage to the York cunty Prison farm where 11 sit - in demonstrators are serving 30 - day terms.

LOCAL COLORED leaders put through a vote to ban further pilgrimages to the prison farm despite some oppostion. The ban was a "gesture of good will" to state police who had to contend with a mammoth traffic jam.

More than 100 officers — brown -clad state troopers with help from Rock Hill and county authorities — stopped a caravan of more than 300 colored citizens who came to the camp to protest the arrest of the "Rock Hill eleven."

A COLORED leader, James McCain, and J. B. Strom, chief of the State Law Enforcement Division, negotiated an arrangement to permit the pilgrimage to enter the prison compound 10 cars at a time. They were allowed to visit for five minutes with the imprisoned sit - inners.

Earlier Sunday, small groups of successfully desegregated three Rock Hill churches - two Presbyterian and one Lutheran but were turned away from the Main Street Mthhodist Church.

FOUR CHOOSE JAIL IN CAROLINA SIT-IN

The N.Y. Times

Refuse to Pay Fine of $100 —Join Others in Prison in a New Movement

New York

By CLAUDE SITTON

Special to The New York Times.

ROCK HILL, S. C., Feb. 7— Four regional leaders in the student anti-segregation movement chose today to go to jail rather than pay fines on trespassing convictions. 2-8-61

The Negroes were arrested here yesterday after having refused to leave seats at a drug-store lunch counter when requested to do so by the manager. They did not post bond and spent the night in jail.

The two women and two men pleaded not guilty at a hearing this morning in Municipal Court. Recorder Billy D. Hayes found them guilty and ordered them to pay $100 fines or serve thirty days in the York County jails.

All four said they would join nine local Negro students sent to jail last week on similar charges stemming from a sit-in at a variety store. The men will serve their terms at the county prison farm and the two women will be lodged in the county jail.

P 154

Other Southern students are expected to join the movement to go to jail rather than pay fines here. The Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, a group of representatives from local college organizations, called for this action in a statement issued yesterday at Atlanta. The movement is being referred to as "jail-ins."

A highly placed source said that the committee would probably ask students to come here in groups and that it might be more than a week before the first of them arrived.

The four committee leaders convicted today were Joseph Charles Jones, 23 years old, of Johnson C. Smith University in near-by Charlotte, N. C.; Charles Melvin Sherrod, 23, of Virginia-Union University, Richmond; Diane Judith Nash, 22, of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., and Ruby Doris Smith, 18, of Spelman College in Atlanta.

All four have been arrested in other cities for taking part in sit-in demonstrations. All but Miss Nash, who is from Chicago, are Southerners. The two men are theology students.

PARADE FOR RIGHTS

The Commercial Appeal

Negroes Protest Jailing 13 Demonstrators

By United Press International

Negroes marching two abreast paraded through downtown Rock Hill, S. C., yesterday to protest the jailing of 13 lunch counter demonstrators and police in Atlanta arrested 20 Negroes at two white eating places.

Memphis, Tenn.

More than 100 persons took part in the demonstrations at Rock Hill. Student leader Edward King of Atlanta has urged that the South Carolina city be made the next battleground in the fight for integration.

The Atlanta sit-ins were the second such protests in Georgia's capital city in as many days. Yesterday's targets were a cafeteria and a downtown grill. Seventeen were taken into custody Tuesday and 12 of them were charged under the state's new anti-trespass law and jailed.

Rockhill Center Of Integration Push

2-7-61

Atlanta World-Telegram

United Press International

ROCK HILL, S. C., Feb. 7.— Southern Negro students campaigning against lunch counter and movie house segregation are aiming their weapons at this textile mill city.

Gene Sherrod

New York Herald Tribune

2-8-61

A total of 13 Negroes have been arrested on trespassing charges for refusing to leave the segregated lunch counter of a drug store here.

P 13

Four were arrested yesterday. Nine were arrested last week and are serving 30-day prison sentences at the York County Prison Farm.

Riot Averted As Negro Sit-Ins Hit S. C. Town

The Defender

Chicago, Ill.

By CHARLES WALTER

ROCK HILL, S. C. — (UPI) — Hundreds of angry whites crowded into downtown Rock Hill Saturday to head off an anticipated march of the town by Negroes protesting segregation, but the Negroes delayed their demonstration until police had dispersed the crowd.

The demonstration, when it came, was a far cry from the mass protest that Negro leaders had urged.

Only about 35 Negro students showed up. They contented themselves with parading with signs in front of two five-and-dimes stores and a drugstore with segregated lunch counters.

Police marched virtually side-by-side with the picketers and kept everyone moving along the sidewalks.

The whites, many of them teenagers, began streaming into town early Saturday and by noon were packed shoulder-to-shoulder along a three black area that comprises the downtown area of this textile center of 30,000 persons.

A number of whites paraded down main street, waving confederate flags, and there was a brief fist fight between a Negro and a bearded white youth who claimed the Negro hda pushed him.

The crowd, estimated at between 2,000 and 2,500 reached its peak about noon and the town took on the appearance of an armed encampment.

City, state and shefiff's patrol cars drifted slowly through the area, and police began breaking up all demonstrations and refusing to let anyone stand still on the sidewalks.

The crowd quickly thinned out thereafter and by the time the Negro demonstrators arrived there was only the normal flow of Saturday afternoon traffic.

One sign carried by a Negro student head: "Prisoners released in Russia, students jailed in Rock Hill."

Anti-segregation demonstrations have been staged here daily during the past week and integration leaders have urged that Rock Hill be made the next battleground in the fight to break down racial barriers in the south.

Two busloads of Negroes were reported to have arrived in the early morning from Nashville, Tenn., for the weekend domonstration and Negro families here opened their doors to out-of-town students.

One merchant said he hadn't seen so many people in the town, situated about 27 miles south of Charlotte, N. C., on the North Carolina-South Carolina line, since the Christmas rush.

A car parked along main street bore a banner reading: "There may not be any color line in heaven but there is in good old Rock Hill." This was in answer to the integration slogan that "There is no color line in heaven."

The city's Negro leaders announced a schedule of demonstrations for Sunday, consisting of a mass pilgrimage to the York County prison farm where 11 of 14 demonstrators arrested last week are imprisoned.

The Negroes also congregated Sunday for a mass meeting honoring the parents of the imprisoned demonstrators, the announcement said.

A national television network camera crew (CBS) was reportedly turned away from York County prison farm when it attempted to secure interviews sith the imprisoned Negroes. The 11 are serving 30-day sentences for trespassing in connection with lunch counter sitin demonstrations.

A letter from the prison written by Thomas Gaither, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People field secretary, to local Negro leaders, reported all of the prisoners had been well treated.

College president supports students

The Afro-American

Baltimore, Md.

Special To AFRO

ROCK HILL, S.C. —When desegregated public facilities come to South Carolina, part of the credit will be due Friendship Junior College, an institution sponsored by Baptist Churches of two South Carolina counties.

Feb 2 1961

The president of the college is Dr. James A. Goudlock, who says of the sitdown movement: The students are doing what they ought to do."

Regarding the position of the college, Dr. Goudlock says: "The school isn't sponsoring the demonstrations, but the school isn't taking any steps to curb the action."

* * *

HE HAS BEEN president of the institution for approximately 23 years.

While the faculty has taken no official position regarding he demonstrations. Dr. Groudlock feels that most of the teachers are sympathetic toward the students' program.

Friendship College was founded in 1891 by the Rev. M. P. Hall, and was known as Friendship Normal and Industrial Institute. There were only 11 charter students.

* * *

THE INITIAL purpose was to train teachers and ministers. In 1906, the school was chartered as Friendship Normal and Industrial College. In 1935, it was reorganized as a junior college.

The school is operated by a convention of 72 churches in Chester and York counties, with the income supplemented by private donations.

It also receives support from the general board of the Baptist Denomination of South Carolina and the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Approximately 175 stu-

Sit-In Problem Solution Is Proposed

ROCK HILL (Special) — The Citizens Council here has been told that the answer to the sit-in problem is to fire all Negro employes aiding the demonstrators.

Some 450 council members at a rally Monday night were also given credit for preventing "an extremely serious race riot" Saturday.

Farley Smith, retiring executive secretary of the State Association of Citizens Councils, commended the organization for the restraint it succeeded in organizing over the weekend among citizens of the community.

An outbreak of racial agitation began several weeks ago, with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announcing that Rock Hill would be the focal point for such demonstrations.

The NAACP and other integrationist groups Sunday organized a motorcade to the prison farm at York, where nine demonstrators are being held. They went to jail, refusing to post bonds or pay fines.

Also appearing at the York County rally was the Rev. L. B. McCord of Manning, who is the newly named Citizens Councils' executive, succeeding Mr. Smith, of Lynchburg.

The advice to fire all Negroes connected with the sit-ins and other demonstrations and boycotts came from Morrison Shaw of Rock Hill, president of the Council.

Mr. Smith told the group that before accepting the invitation to come to speak in Rock Hill he had called State Law Enforcement Division Chief J. P. Strom to determine whether his presence in the city would disrupt efforts to keep the peace.

"Strom assured me that it was all right for me to come to Rock Hill and said, 'We have a very bad situation here and we could never have coped with it if it had not been for the Citizens Council of Rock Hill.'"

Chief Strom was in Rock Hill at the time dealing with the sit-in demonstration Saturday which threatened to touch off violence.

The usual Saturday crowd had been swelled by many people of both races from outside the community.

Mr. McCord asked the group: "When will we wake up to the fact that we are fighting a war? Unless we have conviction and courage to stand up for that conviction, we are going to lose. There is no place for neutrality. Segregation is either right or wrong. A great many preachers do not have the courage to say what they believe.

"Segregation is morally right and theologically right," said the man who was introduced to the group as "a Presbyterian preacher who preaches in a segregated church."

This was in reference to the attendance of some Negroes at several white churches in this community Sunday.

Mr. McCord quoted J. Edgar Hoover as saying the Communists are picking out the pulpit to accomplish their ends and they are making considerable headway. "Why should the pulpit be shaking at the knees at a time like this?" he asked.

Mr. Shaw then introduced Mr. Smith, saying, "He came up here before, the day we had pistols on our hips and blood in our eyes, and I'm sometimes sorry that he came. I wonder if we couldn't have straightened it out right then."

Mr. Smith came to Rock Hill last year and calmed down an integration crisis arising over sit-ins.

Mr. Smith opened his remarks by denying that there was any friction in the State Citizen's Council, then told the group that "they were leading the fight for a free America. These young Negroes coming from outside are not young Americans, standing up for American rights. They are disciples of Martin Luther King.

"I do not know why they have made Rock Hill the focal point for their agitation, but I do know that if you give one inch, they will run over you.

"The question is whether our laws are going to be trodden under by trained lawbreakers. That's what they are, and if you give in, the entire country will suffer. If you turn and run, they will stomp you to death."

Mr. Smith then criticized the ministers who lead in the integration struggle, saying, "Any minister who leads a sit-in, kneel-in wade-in, or any other kind of an 'in' is a sinner before God.

"How a minister can lead people to break the last commandment I do not understand. That last commandment is 'Thou shalt not covet,' and when they are leading these people in these kinds of acts, they are teaching them to covet."

Commending Council members for their restraint in recent days, Mr. Smith said that they were responsible for maintaining order and averting a riot.

"That is the debt these mealy-mouthed cowards who are afraid to stand and be counted owe to you."

The local chapter president, Mr. Shaw, also added his commendations.

"These Negro organizations don't care if you kill every Negro in Rock Hill, so long as they get their picture taken and publicity in the New York papers. We don't want to give them that kind of publicity. That's why we have been working as we have."

He urged the members of the Council to be active in PTA and "get those teachers out of South Carolina" who are teaching integration.

He criticized some local organization for sponsoring a high school dance at which a Negro band was playing and ended by saying, "We have merchants up town who are like jellyfish. They have taken their tags off the water coolers in the last two weeks because they don't want these outside Negroes to see them."

300 citizens visit prison camp to encourage Friendship Nine

By SAMUEL HOSKINS

ROCK HILL, S.C. — For the greater part of two hours Sunday afternoon, I had a ringside seat to the dramatic and emotional intensity of approximately 300 concerned citizens literally storming a prison camp.

The even twas the historic sitdown caravan's visit to the York County Prison Camp, 14 miles south of here, where nine students (The Rock Hill Nine) are serving 30-day terms for demonstrating at the lunch counter of a McCrory Five and Dime Store.

The 300 visitors included parents and relatives of the imprisoned youngsters, as well as most of the town's leading ministers, and teachrs, plus a number of high school and college students, friends and well wishers.

The mile-long caravan of 53 automobiles left from the campus of Friendship College shortly after 2 p.m. and arrived at the prison camp about 25 minutes later.

The caravan was organized and led by the Rev. C. A. Ivory, pastor of historic Herman Presbyterian Church. The ministers, and teachers, plus walk, was pushed into the prison in his wheel-chair.

Another visitor who entered the prison in a wheel chair was Mrs. Mary Gill, 95-year-old great - grandmother of one of the sit-down prisoners, John A. Gaines, 18, freshman at Friendship college. She was weeping as she was pushed through the prison gate.

* * *

NONE OF the others cried. Although some later admitted they were "On the verge of booing."

Mrs. Clarence H. Graham, mother of Clarence Jr., asked him if he would permit bail to be posted for his release.

The son's answer was "I can't do that, mother. We have to see this thing through."

Clarence wrote his mother a letter prior to his arrest, explaining why the students chose to serve the prison term, in event they were arrested and convicted.

"We're going (to prison) for the betterment of all colored people," he wrote.

Admitted inside the prison with the others, I asked the leader of the group, Thomas W. Gaither, 18, if he had a message for the people on the outside.

"Tell them," he shouted through the bars, "to support the sitdown movement. If they do this, then we'll know we were not sent to prison in vain."

Gaither, whose father, mother, a brother and a sister were among the visitors, made a special appeal to South Carolina students to participate in sitdown demonstrations and, if arrested, to go to jail rather than pay fines.

"Money won't win for us," he said. "The most important instruments we have in this fight are ourselves."

Also among the visitors was James T. McCain, field secretary of the Congress of Racial Equality. "We're here to do what we can to support the students," McCain declared.

Following the visit, a number of the parents attended a tea in their honor at Friendship College.

Mrs. Doris G. Lee, who sponsored the gathering, said the purpose was to "get the parents acquainted with each other."

38a 1961

TENNESSEE

LUNCH COUNTER- SIT-IN TORCHLIGHT FREEDOM MARCH

Negroes Hold 'Torchlight' Freedom Walk

MEMPHIS (AP) — About 150 Negroes staged what they termed a "Torchlight Freedom March" along downtown sidewalks Thursday night, backed up by lunch counter sit-ins.

The torches were small lanterns or flashlights. Some of the marchers — protesting racial segregation — were children of about 8 to 12 years of age.

They walked single file along the crowded sidewalks, wearing or carrying signs urging Negroes to boycott stores with segregated facilities and handing out leaflets.

A large drugstore closed down completely when several Negroes took seats at the restaurant booths and lunch counter. Two Negroes were arrested when they snapped photographs despite the manager's objection.

STORE REOPENS

The store later reopened but Manager M. G. Wester said the restaurant section would remain closed for the night.

In these affairs, police policy is that arrests will only be made in cases where management will press charges — except in extraordinary cases.

Wester swore warrants of disorderly conduct against the men who snapped pictures. They were booked as E. C. Withers, 39, a professional photographer, and G. E. Hardin, 27, unemployed, both of Memphis.

It was the fourth "Freedom March" organized by the Memphis chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. There have been no incidents at any of them.

Capt. J. W. Slaughter said the marches were carefully plotted, with sit-in personnel moving either just ahead or just behind the column.

Thursday, as in the other demonstrations, police emergency squad was standing by watchfully.

Lane Students Renew Sit-In Demonstrations

(Courier Press Service)

JACKSON, Tenn. — Despite what they call a lack of proper police protection in student demonstrations in this city, students of Lane College renewed their sit-ins immediately after resuming classes after the holidays. A massive protest took place last Wednesday at two downtown stores—Woolworth's and McClellan's.

■

BOTH STORES CLOSED their lunch counters, which had been opened the day before after being closed during two weeks of holiday shopping. There were no incidents, such as took place prior to the holidays when Negro students demonstrated.

In city court, a white man and a Negro picket were both fined $25 each on charges of assault and battery. The white man admitted hitting the Negro with a walking stick. He said the Negro bumped into him. Mass arrests of Negro students took place here before the holidays. The students say the police made no efforts to protect them from white molesters.

INSTITUTE SPEAKER—The Rev. James Lawson, (right), leader of Nashville, Tenn., sit-in demonstrations talks informally with a group prior to last night's Institute of Religion. With him here (left to right) are Q. W. Lindsey, member of the Institute Committee; the Rev. S. Collins Kilbourne, pastor of The United Church, and Dr. Grady Davis, pastor of the Oberlin Road Baptist Church and member of the Shaw University faculty.

Sit-In Move Is Discussed At Institute

Desegregation is proceeding in Nashville, Tenn., but a push to speed the process there will begin this week, the Rev. James Lawson said in an interview here Monday.

The Rev. Mr. Lawson, leader of Nashville's sit-in movement last spring, spoke Monday night at the Institute of Religion, sponsored by the United Church. "The Sit-Ins: The Effect Abroad," was his topic.

Because of his participation in the sit-in movement, Lawson was expelled from the divinity school at Vanderbilt University. He was later reinstated but by that time he had entered Boston University where he ultimately got his degree. He is now pastor of Scott Chapel Methodist Church in Shelbyville, Tenn.

Hard Core of Opposition.

"There is still a hard core of stores that refuse to negotiate with us," he said during the interview. "We expect to start another drive this week."

Reporting on the Nashville scene, he continued, "We have had a number of people hired in downtown Nashville as clerks and cashiers. Some rest rooms signs have been voluntarily removed. Courtesy is now evident in some stores.

"Recently, the president of our group had a phone call from the owner of two big supermarkets. He said he wanted to hire two Negroes and train them as cashiers, and he did."

Speaking of the non-violent racial struggle in the South in his address to the Institute, Lawson said that people everywhere look upon it as a major opportunity for the renewal of western democracy and Christianity.

Lawson said the sit-ins attempt to apply Christian love, integrity and decency to the problem of desegregation.

He suggested that non-violence is "an invitation to dialogue between persons, a moment of trying to encounter people with the reality of racial alienation and separation."

"Every man, woman and child has a role to play," he said. "It is mass action and mass commitment."

ouster of the Rev. Robert Lawson, a Negro student in the divinity school.

THE REV. LAWSON, who later completed his studies at Boston University, was let out because of his connection with Negro sit-in demonstrations here.

Twelve faculty members, including Nelson, resigned in connection with the ouster, virtually depleting the faculty staff. However, with the exception of Nelson and one member who had already accepted another job, all withdrew their resignations.

Dr. Finch earned degrees at Hampden Sydney College, Va., the Biblical Seminary in New York, Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va., Drew University in Madison, N.J., and also studied at Oxford University in England and the University of Zurich in Switzerland.

Dean Named After Sit-in Row at Vandy

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 4 (AP)—Dr. William C. Finch, president of Southwestern University, Georgetown, Texas, will become dean of the Vanderbilt University Divinity School here, it was announced Saturday.

Chancellor Harvie Branscomb of Vanderbilt said Dr. Finch will take over the position next September. Dr. Finch, 51, a Methodist minister, has served 12 years as president of Southwestern.

He succeeds Dr. J. Robert Nelson who resigned last summer climaxing a controversy over the

Whites rough up Negroes in Nashville

By The Associated Press

A Negro minister was roughed up as white youths used force in attempting to break up theater stand-ins by Nashville Negro students.

The number of demonstrators seeking entrance to four downtown, all-white theaters grew to 120 last night as Negroes were joined by Chinese and Mexican boys and several white coeds.

This group was attacked by the white youths in the same manner as the previous night. The police had dispersed the mob of white youths, but they gathered again to beat and kick the demonstrators as they headed for their church meeting place.

THREE DEMONSTRATORS were treated for minor injuries. The minister manhandled by the white boys was the Rev. Metz Collins of the United Presbyterian Church.

Police made no arrests in either of the Nashville affrays.

Elsewhere in the South, Negro students in Columbia, S. C., picketed at the state capitol and in front of a drug store where five Benedict College students had been arrested and charged with trespassing for attempting to enter despite a "No trespassing" sign.

In Sumter, S. C., where police arrested 65 Negroes Tuesday during a mass march and numerous sit-ins, a meeting was held to discuss the demonstrations and charges of police brutality in handling them.

CITY OFFICIALS and 16 Negro leaders discussed these items, but no word was released on the outcome of the talks.

Five children named as plaintiffs in a suit seeking to integrate schools in Jacksonville and Duval County, Fla., have withdrawn from the federal court case. Attorneys for the Negro children said their parents pulled them out because of reprisals.

However, state's attorneys maintained the parents withdrew their children because they did not live in the county.

Nine children remain as plaintiffs, so the suit will proceed.

Institute of Religion

The News and Observer
Raleigh, N. C.

Sit-In Leader to Speak Here

Dec. 1, 1960

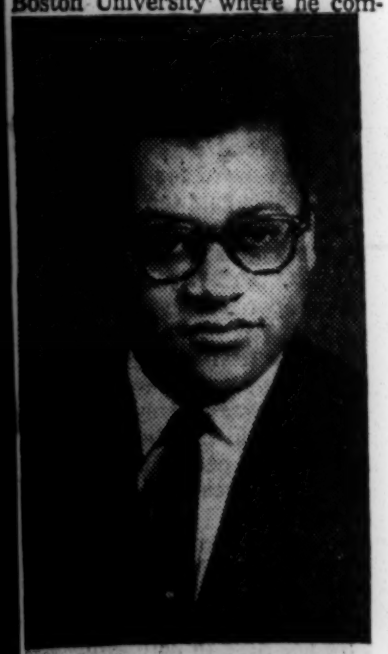
The Rev. James Lawson, leader of the sit-in movement in Nashville, Tenn., will speak here at the Institute of Religion at The United Church Monday night at 8 p.m. "The Sit-Ins: Their Effect Abroad" will be his topic.

Lawson's address will consider an aspect of the institute theme, "The Face of America." He is expected to emphasize the significance of the sit-in movement as seen by people in Africa and in other countries.

The Tennessee minister has first-hand knowledge of how the powers of non-violence have transformed human relations in India and Africa. He is also concerned with the impression segregation policies in the United States make upon people in other lands.

Lawson was expelled from the theological school at Vanderbilt University last year for his part in training students in the technique of non-violence, as well as his active participation in the sit-in movement. The faculty of the divinity school resigned in protest.

Later, Lawson was reinstated but by that time he had entered Boston University where he completed work for his divinity degree. He is now pastor of Scott Chapel Methodist Church in Shelbyville, Tenn.



THE REV. JAMES LAWSON.

At 6 p.m. Monday there will be a fellowship dinner at the Church. Sessions of the four classes will follow at 7 p.m.

Superior Court Judge William T. Hatch will speak at the class dealing with the adult offender in our society. His topic will be, "Trial Procedures: Probation or Incarceration."

College students at Shaw, Meredith, St. Augustine's and State colleges will discuss: "Education: Can Separate School Facilities Be Equal?"

Class Speaker.

W. L. Kedrick and Dr. P. F. Brooking will speak at the class concerned with "The Responsibilities of Organized Labor in Our Society." Kedrick is vice-president and general manager of the Tungsten Manufacturing Corporation in Henderson. Brooking is a member of the Meredith College faculty. The two will discuss: "Management's views on Organized Labor."

Speakers at the class concerned with the traditional values in Modern Life in India and the United States will be Dr. Keith F. McKean and Triloke Khosla. Dr. McKean is a member of the faculty at State College. Khosla, a native of Bombay, India, is a graduate student at State. Their topic will be, "Social Values."

Dallas Lunchrooms To Remove Racial Bans In Mid-August

DALLAS — (ANP) — A definite date for ending segregation at lunch counters in downtown Dallas stores was announced last week. The date, when 45 of the principal firms involved have agreed to remove racial bans from their food service departments, is mid - August.

The pledge of desegregation came during the week and following a stormy period of confusion among various groups of Negro organizations.

Sam Bloom, spokesman for the number of downtown stores, assured a meeting of Negro civic leaders, including members of the 7-man committee, that the stores will definitely drop the racial barriers at their lunch counters by the middle of August — which is 45 days away.

The 7-man committee, chosen from various Negro organizations, has been in conference with its white counterpart during the past 18 months. Purpose of the bi-racial group has been to work out plans for "peaceful" integration of Dallas facilities.

A suggestion that no publicity be given to the changeover was made but rejected by news media representatives attending the conference Purpose of the secrecy, it was pointed out, would be to preevnt any violence during the crucial period of the integrating proces.

Dallas Shows How It Can Be Done!

The Afro American

L.7

DALLAS, Texas — Integration came to downtown Dallas restaurants and cafeterias Wednesday without fanfare and without incident.

Let 8-5-61

A total of 159 members of the colored community ate in 36 previously all-white establishments located in every important department store in Dallas, including the world-famous Nieman-Marcus Zodiac Room.

The Dallas Citizens Council, an organization of the city's white business leaders, arranged the integration step. Later the council reported that only four or five calls of protest had been received.

Baltimore Md.

THE EATING places that were integrated reported only three complaints from white customers.

The Dallas Citizens Council is not to be confused with White Citizens Councils and similar racist groups which are regarded as ineffectual in Dallas.

The Dallas council planned and carried out Wednesday's integration step in order to soften the impact of court-ordered desegregation of schools at the first-grade level in September.

A statement by the Citizens Council said:

"We thought this (integration) should be an adult experience before it is a child experience. If adults couldn't handle it well, we wouldn't expect the children to do so."

The 159 persons who took part in the integration move were business and professional men, clergymen and their wives from the colored community.

A. Mayfield Smith, a member of the group, said:

"The experience was a very happy one and without anxiety for those who took part. We were served with extreme courtesy."

New "Sit-In" Demonstrations Strike In Dallas

DALLAS — A group of Southern Methodist University students has demonstrated against an off-campus drug store, for its refusal to serve two fellow students, who are Negroes, at the lunch counter.

On Saturday evening, January 7, Carroll Brown and Earl Allen, SMU theological students, went to the University Drug Store, across from SMU on Hillcrest, to get a Coke. The manager requested the Negro, Earl Allen, to leave. They left and returned with a larger group and sat in.

The closest thing to trouble at the drug store was that the store owner, C. R. Bright, attempted to break the demonstration up by spraying insecticide over and around the students. None of the approximately 60 students would move. They remained until Bright closed the store. He reopened all the departments of the store, except the lunch counter, within an hour.

The demonstrators then returned with protest signs and picketed the store until closing time. The signs called for a student boycott of the pharmacy. An SMU student explained his views, saying:

"This is not a bunch of college students on a lark. It goes deeper than that. It's a religious thing, a person-to-person experience, and in my opinion an international one. Our whole American system cries out against discrimination and prejudice of this type."

On Monday afternoon, in another sit-in movement, the Rev H. Rhett James led five Dallas Negro citizens into the dining area of Titche-Goettinger, a leading Dallas department store, for service; and upon refusal they sat in until closing time.

The group was refused entrance on Tuesday by the store, when store personnel roped the dining area off, as Negroes approached the area. At press-time Wednesday the Rev James told The Dallas Express that the group would stand in front of the ropes on Wednesday, if the ropes are there to block their entrance.

Atty Durham Urges Action In Eliminating Jim Crow In Stores

Atty W. J. Durham, a member of a seven-man committee, serving to bring about better race relations, voiced his disappointment in the break down between the committees, in connection with desegregation of lunch counters and other public facilities, Sunday afternoon, while submitting his report.

Atty Durham told an audience of approximately 1000 at the St John Baptist Church, the agreement the two committees had broken down, and called for a vigorous sit-in demonstration, and boycott of four Dallas Stores—Sanger's Titches - Goettinger's, H. L. Green and S. H. Kress company.

Mr Durham, who was noticeably emotional, told of his disappointment in the position taken by Mayor R. L. Thornton would not recommend the desegregation practices at the State Fair of Texas, and that the Mayor insulted the Negro race when he asked him to tell his people to be patient.

Mr Durham then made a strong appeal to the citizens to discontinue trading with stores mentioned, and asked for a salt and pepper army to march on the downtown stores that practice bias.

Dr Caesar Clark, chairman of the Education Action Committee, of the Dallas Citizen's Committee, stressed the request of Atty Durham, stating, "the battle-line has been drawn, and we must arise to the occasion, and continue our fight for the duration."

Dr Clark and Atty Durham were speaking at the mass meeting, commemorating Citizen's Day. The meeting was under the leadership of the Dallas Branch National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; The Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, and the Citizen's Committee.

Mrs Earldean Robbins, coordinator of the Poll Tax Campaign, and Dr E. C. Estell, president of the Ministers Alliance, and Citizen's Committee, presided over the meeting.

Methodist Students Endure Spray

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A group of 60 Southern Methodist University students sat through an insecticide spray at a drug store lunchcounter Monday after two Negroes were refused service.

The group, which included two Negro theological students, refused to leave and C. R. Bright, owner of the University Pharmacy, called in a fumigation service. Coughing and holding handkerchiefs over their faces, the students remained at the counter as the insecticide was sprayed. They did not leave until Bright closed the store.

When all departments of the store except the lunchcounter were reopened, the students, including about 25 white women students, picketed the pharmacy.

Students Sit-In At Dallas Store

DALLAS, Tex. — On Saturday evening, Jan. 7, Carol Brown and Earl Allen, Perkins Theological Students went to the University Drug Store to get a coke. The manager requested the Negro students to leave. They left and returned in 20 minutes with some 25 sympathizers and sat in until 10 p.m.

On Monday, Jan. 9, some 60 students returned to the University Drug Store and continued their sit-ins in protest to the segregated policies.

These students are committed to end segregation on the University "Drag." These stores receive their main support from the Southern Methodist University campus.

This movement is a student movement, sponsored and coordinated by students from the various graduate schools and the undergraduate school.

They have received protection from the Sheriff of Dallas and the Chief of Police of Highland Park. The Committee on Appeal for Human Rights, Rev. H. Rhett James, chairman, aids the students in their goals of desegregation.

New Law Aims at 'Sit-Ins'

The Pittsburgh

DALLAS, Tex. — The City Council here last week passed an ordinance apparently aimed at both sit-in demonstrators and at mobs opposing school integration.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The new law prohibits congregating or loitering when forbidden by policemen and calls for a $200 maximum fine for violators.

Jan. 2-11-64

Police Chief Jess Curry said there is no connection between the ordinance and a recent sit-in at a drugstore where white and Negro students of Southern Methodist University sought lunch counter service.

However, City Manager Elgin Crull said the need of a new ordinance was pointed up by a police story on handling the mobs opposing school integration in Little Rock and New Orleans.

Dallas public schools are under orders to integrate this fall.

48 Sit-Ins Jailed In Houston

The Defender

Chicago, Ill

March (4-10) 61

HOUSTON, Tex. — (UPI) — Forty-eight Negro college students were arrested and jailed on loitering charges in the second attempt within 24 hours to integrate the cafeteria at Houston's union railway station.

A leader of the group, Eldrewey J. Stearns, 27-year-old student at Texas Southern university, said the 48 youths planned to stay in jail over the weekend. They were charged with loitering.

Stearns was among a group of 14 young Negroes who were released on $10 bond each after similar charges were filed against them in an incident Friday.

The group, including 26 women and 22 men—all of whom said they were students at Texas Southern university—went to the cafeteria and demanded to be served.

The operator, James D. Burleson, called police when the group refused to leave. When police arrived they gave the students the option of leaving or being arrested. The students declined to leave and were driven to the city jail.

Friday, the group of 14 spent about eight hours in jail. Stearns said none of 'hem went to sleep, but stayed awake and "listened to a chorus of drunks and bums."

The bond releasing the youths was posted by the Houston Medical Forum. Stearns commented then, concerning the railway station incident, that "everybody in the cafeteria accepted us except the manager."

Many Questions Unanswered As Integration Ordered

The Informer
Houston, Sept

HOUSTON — Tuesday 1[illegible] Progressive Youth Association (PYA) sit-ins threw the city hall into turmoil and excitement, when they appeared to be served in the cafeteria at the police station and were refusd. The cafeteria, claiming to be leased for city employees, had a record of not serving Negro policemen and this shortcoming did more to agitate the mayor and his assistants than the sit-ins did directly.

After a number of excited and rushed conferences, Mayor Lewis Cutrer announced that the cafeteria in the police station would serve all employees, regardless of race.

This announcement followed a meeting between the mayor Police Chief Carl Shuptrine, Inspector of Public Buildings Francis R. Deering; Sgt W. A. Evans, president of the Houston Police Officers Assn; City Attorney Richard Burks; and Wallace Gee, operator of the cafeteria.

But later on Tuesday Assistant Police Chief George Seber is reported as saying that he knew of no efforts of Negro policemen attempting to be served in the cafeteria, and expected none to make such attempts. This was interpreted by most Negroes as a covert threat against Negro policemen who would dare to leave the kitchen where they are now served, and make attempts to sit in the cafeteria proper.

Assistant Chief Seber's statement seemingly went straight in opposition to the order of Mayor Cutrer; that the cafeteria must serve all members of the police department. The kitchen isn't the cafeteria. There is a total of 87 Negro employees in connection with the police department.

A question remains as to whether or not Negro employees of the police department have been voluntarily eating in the kitchen of the cafeteria, instead of eating in the main room with the other employees of the city. Another question is why there is an advantage to the Negroes to eat in the kitchen, or for the cafeteria to set up special arrangements for the Negroes to eat in the kitchen, rather than let them take the normal tables and benches in the cafeteria?

Are any white employees required to eat in the kitchen? How does it happen that all of the Negroes, who want food, eat in the kitchen in this city-owned cafeteria? Does the mayor's order mean that he will see to it that Negroes are permitted to eat in the cafeteria proper as do other employees?

The PYA made another attempt to open the cafeteria in the city hall Wednesday, and were again refused.

They went from there to the Continental Bus Company, where they were served. Mr Stearnes, president of the PYA, said that the students would keep pushing the issue at the cafeteria of the city hall.

At Kennedy's Retreat

Virginia Lunch Counters Are Desegregated Quietly

MIDDLEBURG, Va. (AP) — President Kennedy learned Sunday through a prayer at Mass of the quiet racial integration, of three Middleburg lunch counters. And the President himself figured unknowingly in the event.

Negroes were served for the first time Saturday at two of the counters. Had they been refused service, town authorities said, they had planned sit-in demonstrations timed to coincide with Kennedy's presence in town, and reportedly were ready to picket at the church services the President attended.

Was Arbitrator.

It was the President's pastor, the Rev. Albert F. Pereira, who served as arbitrator between Negro spokesmen and proprietors of a sandwich shop and two drug stores with lunch counters. Father Pereira mentioned the settlement in his prayer Sunday and in the church bulletin.

While the President and Mrs. Kennedy listened with bowed heads, the priest read a carefully worded prayer that said: "Eastertide is a time for joy, joy in our unity by baptism in Christ. Hence it is so appropriate that we rejoice today that the first bridge of understanding between the races has been crossed gracefully.

"We should like publicly to thank the ministers, the officials, the drug store owners and operators for their cooperation—the fine Negro leadership for its patience and understanding in amicably working out the first phase of broadening the association and communication between the races.

"Further, we should like to solicit your prayers at Mass today, your active support from now on, out of love for the risen Christ, in a program of more communication, of more sharing, of more granting of rights to the Negroes of our community and country so that they may become truly first-class citizens both in what they receive as well as in what they give."

Protestant ministers in Middleburg also announced the integration move in sermons Sunday.

Father Pereira told reporters Kennedy knew nothing of the three weeks of maneuvering and negotiating that preceded the agreement to integrate the lunch counters or of the outcome of the arbitration.

Some Middleburg residents say the town was chosen by Washington Negroes for an integration attempt because the President has a retreat just outside. They feel the integrationists reasoned that Middleburg merchants would be reluctant to embarrass the chief executive by provoking sit-in demonstrations or picketing at the Communtiy Center which is used for Catholic services.

This is the background as Father Pereira sketched it: Two Negroe students from Howard University in Washington were refused service at the Tally Ho Pharmacy lunch counter about three weeks ago. They asked William Jackson, Negro contractor and local representative of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, to organize sit-in demonstrations.

Jackson preferred mediation, and consulted with John Eisenhard, editor of the Fauquier Democrat at nearby Warrenton, Va. The editor proposed that Father Periera be asked to try for a settlement. Father Pereira served a Negro parish and school in Portsmouth, Va., for seven years. The pastor consulted with the three Middleburg Protestant ministers, the mayor, chamber of commerce officials and others, and with the operators of the lunch counters.

The result: Two Middleburg Negroes were served Saturday.

A town of about 800, Middleburg is about one-third Negro, Father Pereira said.

Father Pereira's Middleburg congregation has two Negro members, a mother and daughter. His parish is at Leesburg, Va., but he also says Masses every Sunday at Purcellville and Middleburg.

The services here are held in the yellow stucco Community Center on the main street because there is no Roman Catholic church in the town.

The President and First Lady drove into town from their estate a mile and a half to the south through a light drizzle.

The chief executive said he will return to Washington Monday morning.

Integration Story Related In Prayer

Kennedy Learns Of Racial Agreement At Mass

MIDDLEBURG, Va., April 9. — (AP) — President Kennedy learned through a prayer at Mass Sunday of the quiet racial integration of three Middleburg lunch counters. And the President himself figured unknowingly in the event.

Negroes were served for the first time Saturday at two of the counters. Had they been refused service, town authorities said, they had planned sit-in demonstrations timed to coincide with Kennedy's presence in town, and reportedly were ready to picket at the church services the President attended.

It was the President's pastor, the Rev. Albert F. Pereira, who served as arbitrator between Negro spokesmen and proprietors of a sandwich shop and two drug stores with lunch counters. Father Pereira mentioned the settlement in his prayed Sunday and in the church bulletin.

While the President and Mrs. Kennedy listened with bowed heads, the priest read a carefully worded prayer that said:

"Eastertide is a time for joy, joy in our unity by baptism in Christ. Hence it is so appropriate that we rejoice today that the first bridge of understanding between the races has been crossed gracefully.

"We should like publicly to thank the ministers, the officials, the drug store owners and operators for their co-operation — the fine Negro leadership for its patience and understanding in amicably working out the first phase of broadening the association and communication between the races . . ."

Father Pereira told reporters Kennedy knew nothing of the three weeks of maneuvering and negotiating that preceded the agreement to integrate the lunch counters or of the outcome of the arbitration.

MIDDLEBURG, VIRGINIA

LUNCH COUNTER- DESEGREGATED

(PRESIDENT KENNEDY)

Kennedy's Pastor Plays Role in Desegregation

By Constance Feeley
Staff Reporter

A story of quiet, peaceful racial desegregation was unfolded to President Kennedy as he sat with his head bowed at Mass yesterday

The President's pastor, the Rev. Albert Pereira, read a carefully worded prayer that disclosed three lunch counters in Middleburg, Va., had dropped their racial barriers.

The President himself figured unknowingly in the event.

Here is what happened, according to Father Pereira:

About three weeks ago, two Negro students from Howard University were refused service at the Tally Ho Pharmacy lunch counter. They asked William Jackson, Negro contractor and local representative of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, to organize sit-in demonstrations.

Jackson preferred mediation and asked Father Pereira, who had once served a Negro parish to help. The priest consulted with the three Middleburg Protestant ministers, the Mayor, other leaders, and the owners of the lunch counters at the Tally Ho, the Middleburg Pharmacy and Anderson's Sandwich Shop.

The result: desegregation in a Middleburg eating place for the first time in history. On Saturday, two Negroes were served at the Tally Ho.

Had they refused, town authorities said, the Negroes planned sit-in demonstrations timed to coincide with the President's presence in town and reportedly were prepared to picket at the church services he attended.

Some Middleburg residents said the town was chosen by Washington Negroes for a desegregation effort because the Chief Executive has a country home nearby. They feel the Negroes thought Middleburg businessmen would be reluctant to embarrass the President provoking demonstrations at the community center used for Catholic services.

Father Pereira did not go into detail in his prayer before the President yesterday. He simply asked the congregation to "rejoice . . . that the first bridge of understanding between the races has been crossed gracefully." The details were supplied to reporters later.

The priest said Mr. Kennedy knew nothing of the three weeks of negotiating that led to the agreement.

Father Pereira singled out for special praise the three Protestant ministers who "helped me a lot and told me whom to see." Mayor Edwin C. Reamer was kept informed of his activities, he said.

Mr. Kennedy, resting up after three days of conferences with British Prime Minister Macmillan, returns to Washington today.

In Middleburg, Va.—

Kennedy is unknowing lever in mixing deal

BY DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

MIDDLEBURG, Va., April 10—(AP)—President Kennedy learned at mass of the integration of three lunch counters in this town in the Virginia hunt country.

Apparently, the first word the president had was the announcement at mass yesterday "that the first bridge of understanding between the races has been crossed gracefully."

But the local white citizenry attributed the change at least indirectly to Kennedy.

The reasoning was that Negroes made Middleburg a special target of successful efforts to obtain service at lunch counters because the president is a part-time resident. He has taken an estate here.

UNVERIFIED TALK circulated among the Negro population that Kennedy took some sort of direct steps to break the color line at eating places after Negroes on the household staff at his estate, Glen Ora, had been refused service at the Coach Stop Restaurant.

The owner of the restaurant, Louis C. Dimos, denied this. In fact, he said, he didn't believe there were any Negroes on the Glen Ora staff.

But Dimos did tell newsmen that "a very importnant person in the government came to talk to my wife yesterday." He declined to identify the indentify the individual.

Kennedy was unavailable for comment on all this. He spent the week-end here and returned to Washington this morning.

TWO YOUNG Middleburg Negroes tested the new policy of integrated dining Saturday and found it worked. A sandwich shop and two drug stores had agreed to put it into effect.

Middleburg authorities said that in the event service was refused, Negroes had planned sit-in demonstrations and perhaps picketing at church services—timed to mesh with Kennedy's week-end visit.

The change in customs and policies involved two weeks of dickering, with the Rev. Albert F. Pereira, who offers mass at Middleburg, serving ar arbitrator.

"This," he said in a church bulletin yesterday, "is a milestone in the belief in American equality and of Christian understanding and love."

And with the president and Mrs. Kennedy listening with bowed heads, he voiced public thanks to the three Protestant ministers of Middleburg, town officials, drug store owners and Negro leaders for "amicably working out the first phase of broadening the association and communication between the races."

Plan To Avert Embarrassing JFK Revealed

Action Of Pries Prevents Sit-Ins At Middleburg

MIDDLEBURG, Va., April 9 (AP) — President Kennedy learned through a prayer at mass today of the quiet racial integration, of three Middleburg lunch counters. And the President himself figured unknowingly in the event.

Negroes were served for the first time yesterday at two of the counters. Had they been refused service, town authorities said they had planned sit-in demonstrations timed to coincide with Kennedy's presence in town, and reportedly were ready to picket at the church services the President attended.

It was the President's pastor, the Rev. Albert F. Pereira, who served as arbitrator between Negro spokesmen and proprietors of a sandwich shop and two drug stores with lunch counters. Father Pereira mentioned the settlement in his prayer today and in the church bulletin.

Prayer Discloses Action

While the President and Mrs. Kennedy listened with bowed heads, the priest read a carefully worded prayer that said:

"Eastertide is a time for joy, joy in our unity by baptism in Christ. Hence it is so appropriate that we rejoice today that the first bridge of understanding between the races has been crossed gracefully.

"We should like publicly to thank the ministers, the officials, the drug store owners and operators for their co-operation—the fine Negro leadership for its patience and understanding in amicably working out the first phase of broadening the association and communication between the races."

President In Dark

Father Pereira told reporters Kennedy knew nothing of the three weeks of maneuvering and negotiating that preceded the agreement to integrate the lunch counters or of the outcome of the arbitration.

"I wouldn't have dared tell him anything about it," he said.

Some Middleburg residents say the town was chosen by Washington Negroes for an integration attempt because the President has a retreat just outside. They feel the integrationists reasoned that Middleburg merchants would be reluctant to embarrass the chief executive by provoking sit-in demonstrations or picketing at the community center which is used for Catholic services.

Pair Turned Down

This is the background as Father Pereira sketched it:

Two Negro students from Howard University in Washington were refused service at the Tally HO Pharmacy lunch - counter about three weeks ago. They asked William Jackson, Negro contractor and local representative of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, to organize sit-in demonstrations.

Jackson preferred mediation, and consulted John Eisenhard, editor of the Fauquier Democrat at nearby Warrenton, Va. The editor proposed that Father Periera be asked to try for a settlement. Father Pereira served a Negro parish and school in Portsmouth, Va., for seven years. The pastor consulted with the three Middleburg Protestant ministers, the mayor, Chamber of Commerce officials and others, and with the operators of the lunch counters.

The result: Two Middleburg Negroes were served yesterday.

Eating Places End Bias During Kennedy Visit

By HELEN THOMAS

MIDDLEBURG, Va. — (UPI) — Sit -in demonstrations scheduled during President Kennedy's week-end visit here were averted by community leaders through desegregation of three eating places, it was disclosed Sunday.

The President knew nothing of either the racial problem or its quiet solution until he attended church services, where the Rev. Albert F. Pereira publicly praised local officials and businessmen for their efforts.

Pereira thanked the community for "gracefully crossing the first bridge of understanding between the races." He called the desegregation of two drug stores and a sandwich shop a "milestone for Negroes" in this Virginia hunt - country village.

Town officials said Pereira himself played a key role in persuading owners of the establishments to begin serving Negroes. The racial bars were first lowered Saturday.

